Mr. Mansfield, on the same side, argued that Mr. Wilkes was clearly intitled to be admitted to bail, under this statute. The convictions can not at this time be proceeded upon; as the sentence of outlawry is standing out against him. He has done all that is in his power to do. He appears in court, and submits to the laws of his country. He has shewn errors of weight, in the outlawry; and has used all methods to obtain a writ of error to be allowed; and prays to be admitted to bail by the court, as he must have been by the sheriff, if he had been taken upon a capias utlagatum.

Mr. Davenport, on the same side, spoke to the same effect.

Mr. Attorney-general explained the fact, and the reason of his declining to grant the fiat for a writ of error. He said, that upon the application made to him on the part of the defendant, he directed an attendance: which was accordingly had. That he thought the errors specified to him, to be a sufficient foundation for a fiat, in case the party had been in custody: but he could not find any precedent for an attorney-general's granting a fiat when the party was not in custody. The writ of error was not tendered to him, he said, till last night: and the court was to sit, this morning. He was ready to listen to any method that could have been shewn to be proper: but none was proposed. He added, that he thought Mr. Wilkes could not be intitled to his writ of error, till he should be in custody. He observed, that this was not an outlawry for non-appearance; but an outlawry upon and after conviction.

* It was printed in the public papers of the next Day, 21st of April 1768.

* That case was an outlawry for non appearance, I have a note of it, of my own taking. And there is a report of it in Fortescue's Abridgement and another in 5 Mod. 177. very bad in the 1st edition, but much mended in the late edition of that book.

Lord Mansfield. — Here are two motions made, upon the defendant's appearing personally in court: one, for committing him; the other, for bailing him.

I am of opinion against both these motions.

He ought to be brought in regularly, upon a return of the capias by the sheriff. I have no doubt but that we might take notice of him, upon his voluntary appearance as the person outlawed; and commit or bail him: but we are not absolutely bound to do it, without some reason to excuse the going out of the regular course.

If the defendant could shew that the attorney-general refused to take him up and bring him into court, in order to prevent his having this advantage; or if the attorney-general had in fact used all methods to take him up, and he had concealed himself and absconded, and afterwards had come in thus voluntarily, in order to surprise; upon either of these, or any other extraordinary ground, we should be bound to interpose, and overlook the impropriety of the defendant's coming, instead of being brought, into court.

But the real cause of this irregularity is the strongest argument why we should not give way to a new mode, liable to misconstruction, and carrying a bad appearance. It is notorious, that the defendant has appeared very publicly: why was he not apprehended?

The outlawry must certainly be disposed of, before you can come at any thing else: the judgment upon the convictions can not, at present, be proceeded upon.

I could wish this gentleman had been better advised than to have come thus prematurely, with a written speech, to justify the crimes of which he stands convicted; and to arraign an order made by me.

I am very happy in having this opportunity of explaining my conduct in making the amendment that has been mentioned. If I was wrong, I should think it more honourable to acknowledge and rectify any error that I should have committed, than to justify and defend it. The application to me was, to amend the word "purport" into "tenor." Mr. Hughes, the clerk in court for the defendant, agreed it to be amendable. I recollected a case of the like kind, of an amendment of an information just before trial: and, looking for it, I found a collection of such cases. After reading one or two, Mr. Philips, attorney and agent for the defendant, was perfectly satisfied, and desired me not to give myself any further trouble; but said "he could not consent to it." I said, "I did not want a consent." I thought myself bound to order the amendment; and did so. I had made some such orders before; and I have made several such orders since; even in quo warranto informations. In this case, it made no alteration in the defendant's defence. His counsel never objected to it, nor took any notice of it. I think it right and usual, and as of course: not but that I am open to conviction, and ready to hear what can be said to shew that it was wrong.

Mr. justice Yates. — If this amendment was wrong, it will still be open to the consideration of the court; although the proper opportunity of objecting to it was at the trial. In the case of the king against Charlesworth, an information for forging a warrant of attorney 'to acknowledge satisfaction upon a judgment' was amended, without costs (the prosecutor having been admitted a pauper), and without giving the defendant leave to plead de novo. 2 Stra. 871.

As to the two present opposite motions, one for committing, the other for bailing the defendant; the same answer serves for both: 'the court can take no notice of any thing but what comes judicially before them.' We can not take cognizance of this matter, in the method in which it now comes before us: we can not take judicial notice 'that this is the person convicted or outlawed.' Mr. Brown's case in Dyer 192. is clear and strong, as to the outlawry. And as to committing him upon the convictions, that can't be done whilst the outlawry is subsisting: the outlawry must first be disposed of, before we proceed upon the convictions. The judgment of outlawry suspends all proceedings upon them. The judgments on the convictions would probably be fine and imprisonment. But it would be manifest oppression to set a fine upon him, when all his effects stand forfeited to the king already: and he is already liable to imprisonment upon the outlawry; from which he can never be freed whilst that stands in force. There cannot be two different judgments for the same offence: there cannot be judgment of outlawry; and judgment for the misdemeanour likewise. In the case of the king and queen against Tipple, 1 W. and M. Salk. 494. the defendant was outlawed upon an information for a misdemeanour, and fined 500*l*. It was moved, on his behalf, that he could not be fined upon the outlawry; because, in misdemeanour, the outlawry does not enure as a conviction for the offence, (as it does in cases of treason and felony), but as a conviction of the contempt for not answering; which contempt is punished by the forfeiture of his goods and chattels: and if he might be fined now, he must be fined again, upon the principal judgment. And the first was held to be irregular: for, the outlawry in these cases is not a conviction; as appears by Fleta 42. 'Quamvis quis pro contumacia et fuga utlagetur, non propter hoc convictus est de facto principali.' And there is a case in Bro. Abr. title 'Utlagary,' pl. 26. where a man was outlawed of felony, and taken by a capias utlagatum, and detained in the King's Bench; and divers bills were brought against him in custody of the Marshal: and the court would not suffer it. For, his body lands and goods are the king's; and therefore the plaintiff can not have the effect of his suit against him before the outlawry; but if he obtains a pardon, the plaintiff shall be answered. If the defendant in the present case had come in by process, his identity would have appeared. If he had come in by record, he might have applied to be bailed, either upon the statute of 4, 5 W. and M. c. 18. (if that statute can be shewn to be applicable to an outlawry on a misdemeanour), or under the plenary power of the court upon the circumstances of his case. But that statute seems only applicable to civil cases. I mention this, only for the consideration of the counsel, when it shall come before the court. By the 5th section, the sheriff may 'take security of the defendant taken upon a capias utlagatum, in cases where bail is required, in double the sum for which bail is required.' But how can the sheriff, under the directions of this statute, take bail in double the sum, in a criminal case? How can the sheriff know what the fine will be? Or why should the sum of the fine be doubled? The statute seems to relate only to civil cases, and to mean 'double the debt.'

The defendant ought, in my opinion, to have come hither in a regular way: but as the matter now stands, upon this voluntary appearance, without return of process or any matter of record whatsoever, the court can neither commit him nor bail him.

Mr. justice Aston. — I think there is but one question: and I shall keep to that. It is, 'whether he shall be committed.' The attorney-general prays us to commit a man as an outlaw, against whom he himself would not issue process of outlawry; though there does not appear to be any particular circumstances to prevent his issuing such process. The officers of the crown might have exercised their power by proper process: and then he would have been in custody. But they have not chosen to do so: and he remains as much at his liberty, as he was before he came into court. The motion to commit him seems unnecessary: and I shall not, at present, take notice of any other question; he not being at all in custody.

Mr. justice Willes. — There has been, for some time, a judgment of outlawry against the defendant, who is not an absconding person. The attorney-general has not thought proper to issue process against him upon it. And now he comes into court gratis, voluntarily, not by any return of process, or any matter of record. We can not take any notice at all of him; nor can we know, judicially, 'that he is the man.' I don't see why the attorney-general should demand of the court to commit the defendant upon this outlawry, when he himself has long suffered him to go at large; without any attempt to take him up, or even issuing process against him.

Nothing was taken by either of the two motions; namely, the attorney-general's, 'that the defendant might be committed;' or his own counsel's, 'that he might be bailed.'

On Wednesday the 27th of April 1768, (a week after the former transaction,) Mr. Wilkes having this morning surrendered himself to the sheriff of Middlesex upon a capias utlagatum which had been since the last motion issued against him, and being now in the sheriff's custody, was brought into court by the said sheriff, upon the return of a habeas corpus directed to him for that purpose. In the mean time, Mr. Attorney-general had granted his fiat for a writ of error: which he did immediately upon receiving an assurance that Mr. Wilkes was in actual custody upon the capias utlagatum. The return to the habeas corpus being read in court, it appeared that the defendant was charged with two outlawries; viz. one on each conviction for the respective misdemeanours before mentioned. A writ of error in each cause was delivered into court.

The outlawries, the writs of error, and the assignment of errors, were exactly alike in both causes: it will therefore be sufficient to specify only one of each sort.

The material part of the outlawry, on which the question turned, was this. The sheriff returned the writ of exigent executed and indorsed as follows: — 'By virtue of this writ to me directed, at my county court held at the house known by the sign of the Three Tuns in Brook street near Holborn in the county of Middlesex, the 12th day of July in the fourth year of the reign of our present sovereign lord George the third now king of Great Britain, &c. the within named John Wilkes was the first time exacted, and did not appear.' It goes on in the same manner, till the quinto exactus; viz. 'at my county court held at the same place the 9th day of August in the year aforesaid, the said John Wilkes was a second time exacted, and did not appear:' and so, in the same words, only changing the days, to the 5th inclusive. Therefore by the judgment of Edward Umfreville, esq; and Thomas Philips, gent. his majesty's coroners of the county of Middlesex, the said John Wilkes, according to the laws and customs of this realm, is outlawed.

The writ of error was verbatim as follows: — Of Easter Term 1768, 8 G. III. Our lord the king hath sent to his justices appointed to hold pleas before him his writ closed in these words (that is to say) George the third by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland king, defender of the faith, &c. To our justices appointed to hold pleas before us greeting. Forasmuch as in the record and process, as also in the publication of an outlawry against John Wilkes late of Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, esq; on a certain information against the said John Wilkes, for printing and publishing a certain libel or composition, intitled An Essay on Woman; whereof the said John Wilkes is impeached, and thereupon by a jury of the county is convicted, as it is said; manifest error hath intervened, to the great damage of the said John Wilkes, as by his complaint we are informed: We, willing that the said error (if any be) be duly amended, and full and speedy justice done to the said John Wilkes in this behalf, do command you, that if the said outlawry be returned turned before us as hath been said; then inspecting the said record and process, you cause further to be done therein for annulling the said outlawry as of right, and according to the law and custom of England, shall be meet to be done. Witness ourself at Westminster, the twenty-seventh day of April, in the eighth year of our reign.

I suspect this word 'not' to be an error of the press; and that it should be 'and'.

Assignment of error.

And hereupon the said John Wilkes comes in his proper person, and says, that in the record and process, and also in the publication of the aforesaid outlawry, there is manifest error in this, that there is no sufficient information filed or exhibited against the said John Wilkes, whereon to ground the process of the outlawry aforesaid: by reason whereof, the said outlawry is void and of no effect or force whatsoever. There is also error in this, that no public proclamation whatsoever is mentioned to have been made at any open county court, or at any general quarter-sessions of the peace whatsoever, or at the door of any parish church where the said John Wilkes was an inhabitant, according to the exigency of the said writ of capias cum proclamatione: therefore in that, there is manifest error. There is also error in this, that it is not shewn, nor does it appear by the return of the sheriff of Middlesex, that the sheriff of Middlesex did cause to be exacted the said John Wilkes in the said county of Middlesex, from county court to county court, until he was outlawed according to the law and custom of England, as the said sheriff by the said writ of exigent is commanded; and that it is not shewn nor does it appear by the return of the sheriff of Middlesex, that the said John Wilkes was a first, second, third, fourth and fifth time exacted at the county court of the county of Middlesex, as by the law of the land he ought to have been before he was outlawed: therefore in that, there is manifest error.---There is also error in this, that in the record and process aforesaid, and in the publication of the outlawry aforesaid, it is no where expressly shewn that the place called Brook-street (if any such there be) where the several county courts are supposed to have been held, at which the said John Wilkes is said to have been exacted, is in the county of Middlesex, or in any or what other county. Therefore in that, there is manifest error. There is also error in this, that it does not appear that any judgment of outlawry was given or pronounced against the said John Wilkes; or, if any such judgment was given or pronounced, in what form the same was so given or pronounced; as it ought to have done, in order that the legality and propriety of the said judgment might have been seen and examined: but in the record and process aforesaid, and in the publication of the outlawry aforesaid, reference and relation only are had to some judgment not shewn or expressed, but supposed to have been before given against the said John Wilkes. Therefore in that, there is manifest error. Wherefore the said John Wilkes prays that the outlawry aforesaid, for the errors aforesaid, and other errors appearing in the record and process aforesaid, may be reversed and held for nothing; and that he may be restored to the common law, and to all which he hath lost by occasion of the outlawry aforesaid, &c.---And William De Grey, esq; now attorney-general of our present sovereign lord the king, present here in court in his proper person, having heard the matters aforesaid above assigned for error, for our said lord the king saith, that neither in the record and process aforesaid, nor in the publication of the aforesaid outlawry, is there any error: and he prays that the court of our said lord the king now here may proceed to the examination as well of the record and process aforesaid, as of the matters aforesaid above assigned for error; and that the outlawry aforesaid may in all things be affirmed.

Joinder in error.

Lord Mansfield.---Let the writs of error be allowed.

His lordship then asked the attorney-general, 'to what prison he prayed that the defendant might be committed.'

Mr. Attorney-General answered---'To the Marshal.'

Lord Mansfield.---Let him be committed to the Marshal.

Mr. serjeant Glynn moved, that he might be admitted to bail, on 4. Vide § 4. 5 W. & M. c. 18. * which, he said, extended to cases of misdemeanour. He was supported by Mr. Recorder of London, Mr. Mansfield, and Mr. Davenport.

They urged the spirit, scope and design of this statute, as well as the words of it, as arguments to prove that it extended to misdemeanours; and that the preamble and enacting part of it do, both of them, apply to Mr. Wilkes's case: and they said, that even if the words were doubtful, the construction of them ought to be such as would be most favourable to liberty. But these words are express; they include all causes, except treason and felony. 'For the more easy and speedy reversing of outlawries in the court of King's Bench, be it enacted, that no person or persons whatsoever, who are or shall be outlawed in the said court, for any cause, matter or thing whatsoever, (treason and felony only excepted), shall be compelled to come in person into, or appear in person in the said court, to reverse such outlawry; but shall or may appear by attorney and reverse the same, except where special bail shall be ordered by the said court.' Cases of misdemeanour are within the same mischief as civil cases; and it extends to outlawries after conviction of misdemeanours, as well as to outlawries upon mesne process. If the question should take a long time in discussing, the defendant may be actually punished by an imprisonment upon the outlawry, though it should be at last reversed; or still more unjustly, in case it should afterwards appear that no punishment ought to be inflicted upon the convictions themselves. In civil cases, a pardon is of course, upon paying the debts and costs: but a defendant outlawed upon mesne process for a misdemeanour has no such opportunity of getting rid of the outlawry. He ought to have an opportunity of putting himself in a condition of being amenable to the justice of his country. Though some of the expressions in this statute may seem more applicable to civil cases, yet there are general words sufficient to take in criminal misdemeanours. They mentioned sir John Read's case, and that of Matthias Earbury in 1723.

Mr. Attorney-General (Mr. De Grey), sir Fletcher Norton, and Mr. Morton, on the other side, argued that this statute relates only to civil cases; and not to criminal misdemeanours. The expressions of it relate to civil property. It can relate only to such cases where a defendant can appear by attorney. The preamble * says, 'Whereas divers persons are prosecuted in the said court of King's Bench, to outlawries for debts, trespasses, or other misdemeanours; and there is no reversing such outlawries but by the personal appearance of the persons outlawed: so that the persons arrested upon such outlawries, if poor, lie in prison till their deaths; but if able, it costs them very dear, to reverse the same outlawries.' The former of these words relate to property: the latter, to actions for malicious prosecutions and such like. The whole relates only to civil suits. And as to Earbury's case, they said it was neither a direct determination, nor any authority in the present case.

Serjeant Glynn replied, that 'trespasses' include all other actions not arising ex contractu: and 'misdemeanours' must mean offences. 'All causes, matters, and things,' certainly include criminal offences and misdemeanours. And the statute speaks of outlawries in general. It is not reasonable, that the defendant should undergo the penalty of a contempt for withdrawing from justice, when the very validity of the outlawry itself is in question. And Earbury's case, though it was not an outlawry after conviction (as this is), yet clearly proves 'that this act does relate to misdemeanours:' for, the judges were all of that opinion.

Lord Mansfield.---God forbid that the defendant should not be allowed the benefit of every advantage he is intitled to by law!

It is to be considered, how he is in custody.

After conviction, if he had been present in court, he might have been committed: if not present, he might have been taken by a capias.

It is, indeed, in the discretion of the court, to bail a person so circumstanced.

But discretion, when applied to a court of justice, means sound discretion guided by law. It must be governed by rule, not by humour: it must not be arbitrary, vague, and fanciful; but legal and regular.

This defendant was not present, when convicted. He afterwards withdrew from justice, and was outlawed: and a capias utlagatum has now issued; and he is in custody upon it.

If a person convicted be taken upon a capias pro fine, he is liable to be committed, unless the prosecutor consents to his being bailed. This is the common course of proceeding: though it is usual to admit to bail, upon the prosecutor's consenting to it. In the case of the journeymen Taylors, and again in that of the Weavers, the defendants were by consent bailed, and by consent were not to appear till called upon. But I do not remember any case where such a person has been bailed without consent. When a person so convicted is committed, such commitment shall be taken into consideration by the court when they come to pronounce their sentence upon him, and shall go as part of his punishment.

Here, the defendant is in custody under the conviction: for, he is in custody upon the capias utlagatum, which issued upon his conviction.

Now, whatever doubts there may be about what is within the act of parliament of the 4 & 5 W. & M. c. 18. it is most certain that a person convicted of a misdemeanour is not within it; because his case is not a bailable case. Nothing therefore can be clearer, than that such a person is not within an act of parliament that relates only to bailable cases. This act relates to cases where no special bail is required, and to cases where special bail is required: and the sheriff is directed * Vide § 5. what to do in either case. Where the case is bailable, the defendant is to be discharged upon the security-bond. But even in civil actions, he could not be bailed, where he was not bailable: he is only to be put into the same condition as if he had not been outlawed at all. If the outlawry was after judgment in debt, or any other civil action, and the defendant was not bailable before the outlawry, the act did not make such defendant bailable, who was not so before the outlawry. I am clear, that this case is not within the act.

Mr. justice Yates was also clear in the same opinion. It is said, 'that misdemeanours of all kinds are within the words of this act, as well as within the scope and meaning of it.' But misdemeanours are here * connected with debts and trespasses; which are descriptions of civil actions: and so may the word 'misdemeanour' be. This act might, in the general words of the preamble, have a view to actions of conspiracy, deceit, or popular actions upon penal statutes; (on which an outlawry was given by 21 Ja. I. c. 4.) And taking the whole of the act together, there can be no doubt about it: for, it must be construed of those cases where the clauses of the act are practicable; which, in the present case, they are not. A conviction in a criminal case can not be within this act. The sheriff is directed by it, 'to take security of the person outlawed, in the penalty of double the sum for which special bail is required.' But the sheriff cannot take bail of a person after his being convicted of a crime. The sheriff cannot form his own idea of the offence, or settle a sum wherein he should take the bail of such a person: nor can he require bail in double the fine, or any thing more than what the fine shall be fixed at; which is uncertain and future. The concluding words of the security-bond, 'and to do and perform such things as shall be required by the said court,' mean putting in bail to a new action, pleading within a limited time, putting the plaintiff in the same condition, and such like matters. And it should be considered, how the law stood in civil cases, before this act of parliament; and that no bail could then be taken on a capias utlagatum. Vide 13 C. 2. stat. II. c. 2. § 4.

What I have been saying, may throw some light upon this act of parliament. But I confine my opinion to its being an outlawry after conviction in in a criminal case: which can not be a case within this act of parliament.

If a defendant is taken upon a capias pro fine (or pro redemptione), it is an execution; and no sheriff can take bail of him: it is a favour, if the court does it. By 5 E. III. c. 12. no pardon for an outlawry shall be granted, till the chancellor is certified that the plaintiff is satisfied of his damages. In a criminal case, if the party be convicted, and a capias ad satisfaciendum issues, and he is taken upon it, he is in execution, to make satisfaction; and the sheriff can never foretel, before the court have given the final judgment, what that satisfaction is to be, on which he should admit the defendant to bail, on the capias utlagatum: he has nothing to direct himself by. No clause of this act can be put in execution, on an outlawry upon a conviction in a criminal case. Therefore I am of opinion, that the present case is not within it.

Mr. justice Aston.---I am of the same opinion. I think this act of parliament relates only to civil actions: this is evidently the true spirit of it. It cannot be imagined, that the act can mean to allow of a defendant's appearing by attorney, in cases where the defendant is obliged to appear personally, and can not appear by attorney at all: neither can it extend to taking bail in cases not bailable. But surely it can not extend to cases of criminal misdemeanours, after conviction; because in such cases, a defendant is not intitled to be bailed at all. Outlawries after conviction are very different from the case of outlawries for non-appearance upon mesne process. After conviction, there is no case where it has been holden that the defendant has a right to be admitted to bail. In an outlawry after conviction for misdemeanour, no sheriff could take bail: and consequently this act could not have any such case in view, or be meant to extend to it.

Mr. justice Willes.---It is clear that the defendant has no right to demand being admitted to bail. This is an outlawry after conviction. If it should be granted that he is intitled to be bailed upon the outlawry, yet as he stands convicted of the crime, he must be committed upon the conviction. This statute is indeed as obscure a one as any in the statute-book: it is difficult to ascertain its true meaning. Therefore I do not chuse to give any direct opinion about its extent; unless it should become absolutely necessary for me to do so. As the present case arises upon an outlawry after conviction, it is clearly not a case within this act of parliament. In treason and felony, outlawries were convictions of the fact: and therefore they are particularly excepted out of this act. But outlawries in cases of misdemeanour are not convictions of the fact: yet after actual conviction of a misdemeanour, the defendant is not intitled to bail; whether he be or be not outlawed. Even in a civil action, a person outlawed after judgment could not have a pardon, till payment of the debt. In the present case, it would be merely nugatory, to discharge the defendant upon giving bail to prosecute his writ of error upon the outlawry, when we must immediately commit him upon the conviction. How can the sheriff know, at the time of the defendant's being taken upon the capias utlagatum, whether the court will at all admit of special bail, or not? Or if they should, how shall the sheriff know in what sum it shall be? Or, if he should be fined, what will be the amount of his fine? Clearly, an outlawry after conviction of a misdemeanour is not within this act; whatever else may be within it.

The court having thus declared their unanimous opinion, 'that Mr. Wilkes, under his present circumstances of standing convicted of a criminal misdemeanour, had no right to demand being admitted to bail, under this act of parliament;'

His counsel moved that he might be bailed, upon the foot of the general discretion which the court would exercise, of bailing or committing a person convicted of a misdemeanour, according to the particular circumstances of his case: which they alleged to be sufficient, in this gentleman's case, to induce the court to permit him to remain at large, under proper bail. Public justice was not intended, they said, nor at all likely to be evaded. He had always been amenable to justice: he now surrendered voluntarily. Indeed, little care had ever been taken to apprehend him. He always appeared publicly upon the hustings, both in London and Middlesex; and he is member of parliament for the latter county.

Lord Mansfield.---I have said, 'that I knew no case where a person convicted of a misdemeanour has been admitted to bail without consent of the prosecutor.' If any gentleman knows any such case, I should be glad to be informed of it: I know of none. We can not therefore do it, if the attorney-general does not consent. For, we must act alike in all cases of like nature: and what we do now, ought to be agreeable to former precedents, and will become a precedent in future cases of a like kind.

The court declining to bail him without the consent of the attorney-general as prosecuting for the crown, he was committed to the Marshal.

His counsel then moved for a rule to bring him up to-morrow, to assign errors. Which was granted.

There were two rules. The former was this. 'The defendant being brought here into court, in custody of the sheriff of the county of Middlesex, by virtue of a writ of capias utlagatum; it is ordered, upon the motion of Mr. Attorney-general, that the said defendant be now committed to the custody of the Marshal of the Marshalsea of this court, to be by him kept in safe custody until he shall be from thence discharged by due course of law. And the said defendant now here in court producing a writ of error, and praying oyer of the record, it is ordered by this court, that the said writ of error be allowed. On the motion of Mr. Attorney-general.'

The other rule, 'that the Marshal or his deputy bring the defendant up to-morrow, to assign errors,' was a distinct rule; and was taken up on the motion of one of the defendant's counsel.

On Wednesday the 4th of May, 1768, (a week after making the last mentioned rule), the defendant having assigned errors upon the record of the outlawry, and the crown having joined in error; (all which was, by consent on both sides, privately transacted between the agents; without actually bringing Mr. Wilkes into court;)

Mr. Davenport moved to make the joinder in error a concilium: and Saturday next was agreed upon as the day on which it was to be argued.

Accordingly, on Saturday the 7th of May, 1768, it was argued by serjeant Glynn on the part of the defendant, and Mr. Thurlow on the part of the crown. It was very well argued on both sides: but it would draw this report out into an insufferable length, if the particulars of it should be here inserted.

The great and capital error that the serjeant insisted upon, was the insufficiency of the return in not shewing that the defendant had been five times exacted from county-court to county-court, till he was outlawed, as the law directs, and the writ requires. He argued that this ought to appear certainly and precisely upon the sheriff's return; that outlawries are odious; and that the court will intend nothing in support of so cruel a proceeding, but, on the contrary, listen to the least objection of error in it. And here, the first exaction does not appear to have been made in the county of Middlesex; nor any of the subsequent ones; which are said to have been at the same place with the first. The words 'near Holborn,' in the county of Middlesex, do not import its being in the county. Besides, the time and place of the second, third, fourth and fifth exactions ought to have been particularly specified and described; and not by reference only to the first. Moreover, the sheriff ought to have stated the proclamations explicitly and particularly, and the particular manner and circumstances of them. He also made a question, 'Whether an outlawry lies upon an information.' And he concluded with an objection to the information, as not being properly exhibited; being exhibited by his majesty's solicitor-general, without taking any notice of the vacancy of the office of attorney-general: whereas the attorney-general is the known and proper officer of the crown for this purpose; and the solicitor-general has no such right.

He cited a great number of cases and precedents, in support of his objections.

Mr. Thurlow defended the regularity of the whole proceeding, by reason, argument, and practice: and he also cited a great number of cases and precedents, to support his arguments and allegations.

To which Mr. serjeant Glynn having replied; and the counsel for the defendant having declared, 'that they did not desire a second argument;'

The court said, that the very great number and variety of authorities and precedents that had been produced and very ably urged on both sides, deserved and would require their mature consideration; and directed copies of the records cited on both sides to be laid before them; or at least one copy of each record, which they would deliver over from one to another.

On Saturday the 14th of May, 1768, (a week after the before-mentioned argument,) after lord Mansfield and Mr. justice Yates were gone;

Mr. Davenport moved for a rule to bring the defendant up on Monday, in order to be bailed: but he had no affidavit of any particular circumstances to induce the court to grant such a rule.

Mr. justice Aston did not see, he said, how the court could bail him, without any particular circumstances being laid before them, when they had already and so lately determined, after a full hearing of counsel on both sides, 'that he was in execution upon the outlawry after conviction of misdemeanours, and was not admissible to bail.' He would not therefore, after two of the four judges were gone away, make such a rule as was prayed: but Mr. Davenport might move it again, if he pleased, on Monday morning at the sitting of the court; and that would allow time enough for the defendant's being brought up the same day, to be bailed, if the court should think it a reasonable motion.

Mr. justice Willes was of the same sentiments with Mr. justice Aston; and agreed to Mr. Davenport's having leave to move it at the sitting of the court on Monday.

Upon Monday the 16th of May 1768, the court being then full,

Mr. Davenport accordingly renewed his motion. He could only urge, that there were but two grounds of imprisonment: one, for security; the other, for punishment. The former failed in the present case; because Mr. Wilkes had always voluntarily surrendered: the latter failed, because it was premature; for, the case was not yet ripe for judgment upon the conviction; and the validity of the outlawry was at present doubtful.

Mr. Davenport, upon being asked by lord Mansfield, 'Whether he had given notice to the attorney-general of this motion,' owned that he had not.

Lord Mansfield.---However, it cannot prevail; because the defendant is in custody after conviction: which is a custody in execution. It is not a custody for security only; but goes in part of the punishment, and will be taken into consideration, upon the final judgment: and so we told you before. It was so in Lookup's case, and in the case of a Welch clergyman.

A defendant in execution upon an outlawry after conviction of a misdemeanour, in crown prosecutions, can not be admitted to bail without the consent of the attorney-general.

If the court had been of opinion, upon the last argument, to reverse the outlawry, yet the defendant must have continued in custody upon the conviction.

Errors

Errors upon outlawries have seldom been solemnly argued. This writ of error has been solemnly and exceedingly well argued; and the matter deserves to be seriously considered. What is determined upon solemn argument establishes the law, and makes a precedent for future cases: which is not the case of questions agreed by consent of parties, or never litigated. This will be a precedent.

The court, in all cases (without regarding who is the particular defendant), leans to the reversal of outlawries; because the punishment of the outlawry is often greater than the punishment of the offence itself. Here, the defendant had the merit of coming in voluntarily; not being brought in by process and in custody. But the court can not make errors; nor reverse for errors which do not exist, or which they can not see: they must be satisfied, that there are errors. If the court had been satisfied on any one error assigned, they would have reversed the outlawry for that error. We did, several of us, when we came into court, seem to think that the want of proclamations was a flaw: but my brother Yates doubted 'Whether proclamations were at all necessary in such a proceeding as this.' I wish that the precedents and acts of parliament may be looked into, to see 'whether process of outlawry will lie upon informations for misdemeanours;' as well as to see 'whether proclamations are necessary or not, upon process of outlawry after convictions for misdemeanours.' I desire that the counsel will apply themselves to search into this point, 'Whether process of outlawry will at all lie upon informations for misdemeanours.' And, as many precedents have been already cited and produced, I desire also that the precedents may be left with us, for our perusal and consideration.

Mr. justice Yates.---I should have thought that what was said by the court upon the former argument, would have been sufficient to have spared the present motion. The matter was then largely and very well argued; and the court explained their sentiments very fully at that time: their opinion was, 'that the defendant being in execution, he could not be bailed, without consent of the attorney-general on the part of the crown.' To bail him upon the mere assignment of errors, would be prejudging upon the errors: it would presuppose 'that they were fatal.' He is at present in execution; and can not be taken out of execution, without consent of the attorney-general on behalf of the crown.

But since this matter is again brought upon the tapis, it gives me an opportunity of suggesting my own doubts. If proclamations are necessary, I should think this return to be clearly bad: but if proclamations are not necessary, it is then immaterial when, or where, or how they were made. As to what has been said about the expression, 'at my county-courts,' not being determinate, because he might be sheriff of two counties --- there are two authorities which either were not mentioned at the bar, or at least were not fully stated. One of them is 1 Ventris 108. where an outlawry was reversed, for that the proclamations were returned to be 'ad comitatum meum tent. apud such a place in comp. prædict.' and not said, 'pro comitatu.' for, anciently one sheriff had two or three counties, and might hold the court in one county for another. The other of these cases is in 2 Roll's Reports 52. Robert Alder's case; who was outlawed for murder: and it was moved for error, that the sheriff returned, 'ad comitatum meum tentum apud D. in le county de Northumberland;' and did not say, 'Comitat. meum Northumbrie tentum, &c.' And this was holden to be error, by the court; according to the case in 6 H. IV. where it is returned, 'ad com. meum Somerset tentum.' And therefore it was holden erroneous: for, one may be sheriff of Surrey and Sussex, and also of Huntingdonshire and Cambridgeshire. But this is not possible in the case of the sheriff of Middlesex. The sheriffs of London have been immemorially the sheriff of Middlesex: therefore he could not have two counties. But I should always incline to favour errors assigned in outlawry; because it is more just and right, that judgment should be given upon the conviction for the offence. Therefore, my doubt being against the errors assigned, I should be unwilling that more regard should be paid to it, than it shall appear strictly to deserve: and I would not have proposed it, if I had not thought it incumbent upon me to communicate it, since it has occurred to me, and seems to me to have more weight than perhaps it might appear to others to have.

But my lord's doubt is a very material one---'Whether the offence charged in the information is such a crime as will warrant an outlawry.'

The 18 Ed. III. Stat. 1. c. 1. * has negative words in it, in the printed edition of the statutes; though it is said not to be so in the parliament-roll. At common-law, outlawry lies only for treason and felony, as I apprehend. Therefore the court will be glad of hearing the arguments at the bar, to assist their inquiry in this doubt.

Mr. justice Aston.---The opinion of the world ought not to weigh at all with the court in forming their opinion upon the validity of the errors assigned upon this outlawry. If one flat decisive objection had clearly appeared, the court would have immediately given their opinion, upon the first argument. I was not satisfied, myself, that the minor objections had sufficient force in them; and as to the greater ones, the counsel for the defendant seemed to me to be too sanguine and too much attached to their own opinions, when they declined the offer of a further argument, when the court wished to be further informed by hearing it argued again. But this doubt which my lord has mentioned, 'Whether process of outlawry will lie for the crimes charged in these informations,' is a very material one, and ought to be well considered. It may be necessary to look into Braden and other books; and the statutes of 18 E. III. St. 1. c. 1. and St. 2. c. 5. and 1 E. I. c. 20. and a case in the year-book of 35 H. VI. f. 6. pl. 9. 'that process of outlawry did not lie; because the action was not for a tort supposed to be done vi et armis.' It may be a doubt, 'Whether process of outlawry lies on informations of this kind, for offences which though expressed to be done vi et armis, are not really 'done with actual force.' The 18 Ed. III. Stat. 2. c. 5. says, 'that no exigent shall go, where a man is indicted of trespass, if it be not against the peace, or of things contained in 18 E. III. Stat. 1.' And though the words, 'nemy des autres,' are not to be found in the parliament-roll, yet they are in several manuscript copies. These things deserve to be maturely considered.

It is proper also to inquire into the practice and precedents; and to see whether they have been uniform and concomitant. Trespasses in parks may be effectually done, without actual force.

The court will not keep back their opinion, without having sufficient ground for doubting, and a necessity of taking time to satisfy their doubts; on the other hand, they will not give their opinions over-hastily and prematurely, merely to gratify the humours or passions of mankind.

Mr. justice Willes concurred that the defendant was not bailable; being in execution upon the outlawry after conviction. He thought, with Mr. justice Aston, that the defendant's counsel were in the wrong when they declined a second argument, which might have given the court further light. He expressed his inclination towards the reversal of outlawries, on account of the severity of the judgment upon them, which sometimes exceeded what would be the punishment upon the conviction itself.

For the reasons above particularized, Mr. Davenport took nothing by this motion.

On Wednesday the 8th of June 1768, (being the sixth day of Trinity term, 8 G. III.) Mr. Attorney-general and other counsel for the crown were further heard. But the counsel for the defendant rested their case upon the former argument.

Lord Mansfield expressed himself to the following effect.

Great pains have been taken, and great searches have been made, since the last argument; not only (as I see now) by Mr. Attorney-general and those he has employed, but by some of us; I say, 'some of us,' because I cannot, with truth, assume the merit to myself: the load of other business which lay upon me, made it impossible. But from the able assistance of those who have taken the trouble to make searches and to collect materials, I think I am now thoroughly master of a subject which I am not at all ashamed to say I knew very little of before: and I never give a judicial opinion upon any point, until I think I am master of every material argument and authority relative to it. It is not only a justice due to the crown and the party, in every criminal cause where doubts arise, to weigh well the grounds and reasons of the judgment; but it is of great consequence, to explain them with accuracy and precision, in open court; especially if the questions be of a general tendency, and upon topics never before fully considered and settled; that the criminal law of the land may be certain and known.

Outlawry is a very important part of that law. Yet it is no wonder, that the forms and method of proceeding are so little attended to, and so little understood: for, this is perhaps the first occasion where any question of law, upon a writ of error to reverse an outlawry in a criminal case, ever underwent a serious litigation.

Outlawry in civil actions is considered as in the nature of civil process, to compel an appearance to the suit; or, if after judgment, to procure satisfaction. The forfeiture, though nominally to the king, yet in truth goes to the plaintiff, towards payment of his demand. If the outlaw appears, pays all the costs, puts in sufficient bail, and does every thing he can to put the plaintiff in as good a condition as he would have been in originally; or if, after judgment, the outlaw pays the debt and costs; the court reverses the outlawry upon motion, without any writ of error. The form of the reversal always is, 'For the errors assigned and other errors appearing upon the record:' although there is, in truth, no error at all.

Flight, in criminal cases, is itself a crime. If an innocent man flies for treason or felony, he forfeits all his goods and chattels. Outlawry, in a capital case, is as a conviction for the crime: and many men who never were tried have been executed upon the outlawry.

In misdemeanours, outlawry is generally a more severe punishment than would be inflicted for the crime of which the outlaw stands accused or convicted. It is a forfeiture of his goods and chattels, and all the profits of his real estate; and perpetual imprisonment, with many incapacities. If it is erroneous, it cannot be reversed without a writ of error.

Till the third of queen Ann, a writ of error in any criminal case was held to be merely ex gratia. Lord-keeper lays it down * 'that a writ of error in a criminal matter was ex gratia regis, in all cases;' and said †, 'He had a collection of several cases out of the old books of the law, that were given him by lord chief justice Hales, which shew that writs of error in criminal cases are not grantable ex debito iustitiæ, but ex gratia regis: and in such a case, a man ought to make application to the king; and he will then refer it to his counsel; and if they certify that there is error, the king will not deny a writ of error.' It never was granted, except when the king, from justice, where there really was error, or from favour, though there was no error, was willing the outlawry should be reversed. After a writ of error granted, the attorney-general never made any opposition: because, either he had certified 'there was error,' and then he could not argue against his own certificate; or the crown meant to shew favour, and then he had orders 'not to oppose.' The king, who alone was concerned as the prosecutor, and who had the absolute power of pardon, being willing that the outlawry should be reversed, this court reversed upon very slight and trivial objections, which could not have prevailed, if any opposition had been made, or if the precedent had been of consequence. The form of reversal, 'for the errors assigned and other errors appearing upon record,' delivered the court from the necessity of specifying any; and they might think themselves well warranted to reverse, upon the tacit or express consent of the king, where he alone was concerned to oppose; though there

* Vid. also Stat. 2. c. 5.

* 1 Vernon 170. Crawle v. Crawle. † Vid. 1 Vern. 175. in the Rioters case.

there really was no error at all: and, as the king had the power to refuse a writ of error, the precedent was of no consequence.

But in the third of queen Ann*, ten of the judges were of opinion, 'that in all cases under treason and felony, a writ of error was not merely of grace; but ought to be granted.' Price and Smith were of a contrary opinion, 'that a writ of error was of grace only, in all criminal cases.' The ten did not mean 'that it was a writ of course; but that, where there was probable error, it ought not to be denied.' It cannot issue now, without a fiat from the attorney-general; who always examines whether it be sought merely for delay, or upon a probable error.

In the case of the king against Earbury, † the opinion of the court was taken, before the attorney-general granted his fiat for a writ of error. In the present case, the attorney-general refused his fiat, while the defendant was out of custody.

This opinion in the third of queen Ann has made a great alteration as to outlawries in criminal cases under treason and felony. In a misdemeanour, if there be probable cause, it ought not to be denied. This court would order the attorney-general to grant his fiat. But be the error ever so manifest in treason or felony, the king's pleasure to deny the writ is conclusive. Lord Muskerry, the son and heir of the earl of Glancarty, petitioned for a writ of error, to reverse his father's outlawry, because his father was a prisoner in the Tower of London during the whole time of the proceedings against him. The fact was verified beyond doubt, by entries from the books of the Tower, and by the affidavit of the duchess of Marlborough. The late lord chief justice Willes, then attorney-general, reported the writ to be merely of grace: and, upon political reasons, it was absolutely refused; and the outlawry stands.

A writ of error being as a matter of right, where there is error in the outlawry; since the third of queen Ann, in all crimes under treason and felony, 'What is an error?' became an important question: which was of no consequence, before. Since that time, this court has not given way to trivial objections, though admitted by the attorney-general. In 1708, lord Griffin was brought into this court upon an outlawry for high treason: and upon the prayer of the solicitor-general, (there being then no attorney-general,) a rule was made for his execution. He was reprieved, from time to time, till his death. His grandson and heir, from the grace and favour of king George the first, obtained a writ of error. Sir Philip Yorke, then attorney-general, came into court, and said he had a sign manual, 'to confess the errors and consent to the reversal.' The court told him, 'His confessing an error in law would not do: they must judge it to be an error; and their judgment would be a precedent. But the plaintiff in error might assign an error in fact; which, by proper authority, he might confess.' Accordingly, the plaintiff assigned an error in fact, viz. 'that the place of his grandfather's residence was in the county of Northampton; whereas he had been outlawed in London.' The attorney-general confessed the fact: whereupon, the outlawry was reversed §. Since the third of queen Ann, no question of law has been litigated, upon a writ of error to reverse an outlawry; no criminal outlawry has been reversed upon a trivial objection: no case, since that time, has been found, of either kind.

Outlawry is an essential part of the criminal law. The rules and method of proceeding are wisely calculated to prevent ignorance and surprize. The consequences are made severe, because the offence is heinous; and it imports the state, that no man should fly from the laws and justice of his country. This court is bound to pronounce the law as they think it is; always leaning to the favourable side, where they doubt: for, so says the law. It is as much a breach of duty to reverse a good, as it would be to affirm a bad outlawry. The mischief goes farther than an unrighteous sentence in the particular case. For, to reverse without an error, is to abolish that part of the law. And therefore serjeant Glynn admitted that criminal outlawries were not to be reversed of course: an error must be found.

In a matter where the consequence may be so penal to the defendant in this particular case; where the grounds of the judgment must be so important to a very essential part of the criminal law, never before brought adversely in question; and therefore lying under great obscurity and confusion; I feel myself extremely obliged (and I think the publick obliged) to those who, in the short time taken for consideration, have searched the subject to the bottom. From the materials with which I have been furnished, I think myself sufficiently instructed, to form an opinion: and I will declare the grounds and reasons of that opinion which I have formed, to this great and numerous audience, with as much accuracy and precision as I can, to prevent misapprehension.

There are two sorts of error which have been assigned and argued.

1st. The first sort are errors which give rise to questions of law, and to real arguments.

2^d. The second are criticisms upon words and syllables in the return.

Of the first sort, two are assigned.

That there is no sufficient information filed or exhibited against the defendant, whereon to ground the process of outlawry.

That no public proclamation whatsoever is mentioned to have been made at any open court, or at any general quarter-sessions of the peace whatsoever; or at the doors of any parish church where the said defendant was an inhabitant; according to the exigency of the said writ of capias cum proclamatione.

Under the first error assigned, three objections have been made.

1st. That the information is by the solicitor-general, and not the attorney-general.

2^d. That an outlawry does not lie upon an information.

3^d. That though it may lie upon an information, yet it does not lie for a misdemeanour as is prosecuted in either of these cases.

1st. The information is by the solicitor-general.

Vol. XI.

If this objection is founded, it will equally hold upon a motion in arrest of judgment. But, I believe, none of us, from the beginning, ever entertained the least doubt concerning it. An information for a misdemeanour is the king's suit. The title of the cause is, 'The king against the defendant: the oath, at the trial, to the jurors and the witnesses, is 'between the king and the defendant.' As a subject sues by attorney, so does the king; with a little variation of form, from decency: instead of saying, 'The king sues by ---,' it is said, 'sues for the king; and yet, 'Coram domino rege venit * dominus rex per attornatum suum, et inde producit seclam,' was held to be good. (Hale chief justice said, it was but an unmannerly way of declaring for the king). The attorney is answerable, if he acts without authority; and upon complaint by the party whose name he has falsely used, the court would punish him, and set aside the proceedings: but while the principal avows him, neither the adverse party nor the court can dispute his authority. The coroner of this court prosecutes informations for the king, as his attorney. The form of the proclamation at criminal trials is a strong proof that anciently the king's serjeant might prosecute for the king. When there did not exist such an officer as solicitor-general, the king's serjeant or his attorney, or other that would sue for the king, should be received to aver against the testimony of the parties imprisonment, where the outlawry was pronounced at the king's suit †. There are many entries in Rastal ‡, which shew that at the common law others than the attorney-general have sued for the king; or, in other words, the king has sued by others as his attorneys. Serjeant Glynn cited a manuscript treatise concerning the Star-Chamber; of which Mr. Filmer has a copy: the original is in the Museum §. The author's name is preserved in a note written in this present-book, at the beginning, by the lord keeper Finch, as follows:—'This treatise was compiled by William Hudson of Gray's-Inn, esq; one very much practiced and of great experience in the Star-Chamber, and my very affectionate friend. His son and heir, Mr. Christopher Hudson, (whose hand-writing this book is,) after his father's death, gave it to me. 19 December 1635. J. Finch.'

The whole passage should be taken together; and is in these words:—'It remaineth that I shall, in the next place, treat of the king's ordinary suits: which are of two sorts;—either by his attorney, informing of himself, or by other mens relations, and by the king's almoner; the one being in criminal causes, the other in civil. For the king's attorney, I have known it much questioned, Whether any other of the king's counsel may not inform for the king, as well as the attorney-general. And it is true, that in Easter term, 8 H. VIII. it is ordered that the king's solicitor shall not prosecute any further the merchants of the Stilhard, till it were otherwise ordered by the council: and the same term, the solicitor was commanded to sue out process against some which acquitted one Blase of a rape. So that it seemeth, that others of the king's counsel did prosecute causes for the king, as well as the king's attorney. But in 1 & 2 James the first, it was resolved by the court, that it belongeth to the place of the attorney. And serjeant Heale, the king's serjeant, putting in a bill against sir John Lyson, was denied that privilege. For, if a bill be put in by the king's counsel as for the king, there are no costs to be paid to the defendant, nor fees for the prosecution: but in this case, serjeant Heale's bill was dismissed with 30^l. costs; it continuing in prosecution not above two terms.' It is astonishing how any other law-officer of the king could claim, as an official right, to be the king's attorney in all suits which he should think fit to bring in the king's name. The very constitution of an attorney-general is decisive against it. He might stop every suit brought by another. And therefore the council did very right, as between the king's law-officers, to overrule serjeant Heale: but they did not mean, that the king himself, for special reasons, might not appoint another to act as his attorney. In that reign, afterwards, Yelverton was suspended, and the solicitor appointed to act. Suppose the attorney-general personally the defendant: there must be another to sue for the king. Suppose the attorney-general out of the realm; or under a disability from sickness: suppose the office of attorney-general vacant. When it is, the business (which cannot stand still) must devolve upon another of the king's counsel: and there is nothing so certain, as that the whole business and authority of the attorney devolves upon the solicitor-general. I am satisfied, that if the matter was traced, the two precedents in Easter term, 8 Henry VIII. mentioned by Mr. Hudson, were during the vacancy of the attorney's office. It is impossible the council could, in the same term, order the solicitor-general to stop one public prosecution and commence another, if there had been an attorney-general. As far back as the memory of the vacancies of the attorney's office has led to a search, precedents have been found of informations filed by the solicitor-general, in Chancery, and on the law-side of the Exchequer. In this court, the information against the earl of Devonshire † was prosecuted by the solicitor-general: and though the enormity of the fine set, and the revocation of government which immediately followed, made this case the subject of much animadversion and just censure; 'the solicitor-general having prosecuted,' was never objected. There are precedents of replying, demurring, taking issue, praying judgment or award of execution, by the solicitor-general, during the vacancy of the other office. We all know, from our own experience, that upon every vacancy which we remember of the attorney's place, his office has been executed by the solicitor-general. But it is said, 'The information ought to have suggested that the office of attorney was vacant.' Many of the precedents do not suggest it: and there can be no occasion. The attorney-general is a great officer of the law and of this court. The court take notice when the office is vacant; and by whom it is filled, when full. They give credit to the solicitor-general, when he sues as attorney for the king, that he has authority. He does it at his peril. In this case, before the defendant pleaded, the solicitor-general was made attorney, and in that

* Lev. 28.
† Kable 2:7.
‡ Hist. & Enter.
§ 55. 6.

† Vid. 5. Ed.
3. c. 13.
‡ Title Debt.
1920 pl. 4.
Title Escheat
214 b pl. 3.
Title Quare
impedit, 5976
pl. 1.
§ Harleian Catalogue,
No. 1226.
vol. 1.

* Fol. 84.
and 25.

Fo. 85.

† 3 Jac. 2.

capacity brought into court the information he had filed as solicitor. If an objection could lie to his authority as solicitor, the only question would be, 'From what time the information should be considered as commenced: from the filing by the solicitor; or the bringing into court by the attorney.' And that could be of no consequence, but in respect of the time when the defendant ought to plead. But he has pleaded to the information brought in by the attorney-general; and been tried. In every light and in every view, this objection is groundless: nothing has been offered to support it; but serjeant Heale's case. Upon so plain a point, I certainly should not have said so much, but that the objection also goes in arrest of judgment, and therefore may be argued again. The counsel are apprized of my reasons: and if they should think their objection tenable, I am open to conviction.

Second objection under the first error assigned---'That an outlawry does not lie upon an information.'

The counsel for the defendant supported this objection, two ways. First, they said, The books were silent on this head: and the statute of additions mentions only that 'in original writs of personal actions, appeals, and indictments, in which the exigent shall be awarded, &c. &c.' But an information is not therein mentioned. Secondly, They said, that from the nature of the process in an information, the exigent was not awardable. For, the proceeding by information in this court is similar to the Star-Chamber precedents: and in such proceedings, they did not award a capias, but a subpoena.

That here, the antecedent process is by summons of attachment, not by capias: and consequently, if there is no capias to introduce the process of exigent, it can not lie in this case. Serjeant Glynn admitted, as a point beyond all doubt, 'that informations of this kind were competent, in this court, at the common-law.' No lawyer ever doubted of it: no lawyer would seriously argue against it. So that Sir Bartholomew Shower had no opportunity to deliver the argument he has printed †. Informations here neither derive their being, nor the form of proceeding upon them, from the Star-Chamber; but from the common-law of the land, and the usage and practice of this court where they are exhibited. Although informations are not mentioned in the statute of additions, yet the same requisites of certainty and precision must be in an information, as in an indictment ‡. Presentment is not mentioned in this statute.

And yet, on a presentment before the coroner, 'that French was felo de se,' (which was certified into the King's Bench,) and that certain of French's goods were in the possession of J. S. process issued against J. S. until he was outlawed. And upon error brought for that there was not any addition given to the said J. S. in the presentment upon which he was outlawed, it was at first doubted 'whether upon that presentment process of outlawry did lie:' and I, clerk of the Crown-office, said to the court, 'that such process in such case did lie: and that he could shew five hundred precedents of it.' And, secondly, it was moved, 'if this outlawry ought to be reversed for default of addition.' But it was agreed by the whole court, that as to this purpose, the presentment should be accounted in law as an indictment §. To an information in nature of a quo warranto, to shew by what authority the defendant claimed to be a burgess of Grampound, the defendant pleaded in abatement, for want of proper addition; the information styling him

'labourer,' whereas he was clothier; and this plea was moved to be set aside, on the ground, 'that an addition was not necessary.' The court refused to set it aside on that ground: but they found another, the want of a proper affidavit to verify the plea ||. There seems as good ground to say, upon the foot of precedents and construction of the statute of additions, 'that process of outlawry lies, and addition is requisite in an information,' as in the presentment in French's case. As to the other argument from the nature of the process---there was no authority or precedent cited or produced, to prove the assertion. On the contrary, there are many precedents where the process was by capias; and the exigent followed: some, as in the present case; though most are before conviction. But 'that a capias does lie, in process upon these informations,' I take to be as old as their existence. If not, how could there have been such a number of outlawries upon informations; and some, of ancient date? All these records are so many authorities to support this process; which are not, after so great a length of unquestioned usage, to be now impeached ¶. And it is observable on the 18 Edw. III. c. 1. that it not only clearly relates to a proceeding before judgment; but it gives the exigent, if the party is not brought in on an attachment or distress. However, there is no need to resort to that kind of reasoning; when usage supports the capias, in the present case, as the common process upon these occasions.

Third objection under the first error assigned---'That outlawry does not lie, from the nature of the offence.'

This objection was slightly touched by Mr. serjeant Glynn; but struck us, at first, as a point fit to be considered: and I mentioned to the bar, that it might be proper to look into it. The doubt was, 'whether the offence charged in either of these informations was such as rendered the person accused of such crime liable to the process of outlawry, either at common-law, or by any statute. In Coke Littleton 128 b. it is said, 'that in the reign of king Alfred, and till a good while after the Conquest, no man could be outlawed but for felony; the punishment whereof was death: but after, in Bracton's time and somewhat before, process of outlawry was ordained to lie in all actions that were quare vi et armis, which Bracton calls Delicta, for there the king shall have a fine.' The 18 Edw. III. c. 1. declares the cases and offences for which the exigent shall be awarded, if the party cannot be found or brought in by attachment or distress; and not against any other. Also, the 18 Ed. III. c. 2. c. 3. says, 'No exigent shall from henceforth go out, where a man is indicted of trespass, unless it be against the peace, or of things which be contained in the declaration made in that case at the last parliament.' But upon full consideration, I am very well satisfied that the counsel for the defendant judged right in laying no stress upon this objection. The offences laid in these informations, and the proceedings upon them, are at the common-law. The statutes giving process of outlawry in certain cases, and restricting its issuing in others but under certain circumstances, do not affect the present question: the process is warranted, in the present case, by the common-law, or not at all. Actual force or violence does not appear to be the criterion upon which the process of outlawry was founded. The greatness of the crime, and the severity of the punishment, seem to be the material circumstances originally attended to, in founding this process; according to the passage I have just cited from Coke, as to the earliest times: for, felony does not imply or convey the idea of actual outrage; grand larceny being in its definition, as well as practice, different. And Hawkins confirms this notion, by saying, 'that this process probably lay for all crimes of a † higher nature than trespass vi et armis.' The extension of this process is supposed by lord Coke, in the passage I quoted, (and what he says, is repeated, without examination, by a variety of authors); to have been somewhat before Bracton's time. The establishing that period, for a supposed ordinance concerning outlawries, strongly authenticates the testimony of that contemporary writer, touching the cases in which, and under what circumstances this process lay. Lord Coke saw, that it was impossible to say, 'that outlawry did not lie for any crime under felony:' universal practice shewed the contrary. So he supposes a positive statute made about Bracton's time. There does not appear any particular ordinance for extending this process: and there is no authority for the supposition. But Bracton (who wrote in the reign of Henry the III.) says ‡, 'that it lay in omni transgressionem quæ sit contra pacem,' and afterwards, 'pro omni transgressionem, licet minimâ, ubi quis ad pacem domini regis vocatus, venire recusaverit, et hoc propter contumaciam.' That this necessary ingredient, 'contra pacem,' did not mean positive force in the committing of the offence, appears from the reason given why it lay for felony, 2 Ro. Abr. 805. 'Outlawry lay for felony; because it was contra pacem.' For, that could not mean (as I have already said) more than its being an offence in its nature against the laws of society, and a disturbance of that good order and government which keeps a state in unity and peace. The crime of larceny, in its very nature, is secret and fraudulent, unless it be done with open violence; and then it is distinguished by the aggravated name of robbery. Besides, in the case of writs quare vi et armis, (in which cases this process is given,) it is acknowledged to be on account of the supposed, not the actual force. And so is the same place in 2 Ro. Abr. 805, and the 35 H. VI. (a) and (b) and many other books. In fact, therefore, it appears from Bracton, 'that every offence committed against the peace' subjected the delinquent to the process of 'outlawry.' And the cases shew, that the peace of the king is broke by disorders without force. And indeed some of the greatest crimes are without force. If force was the criterion on which this process of exigent was founded at common-law, why was that process given by the § first statute of Edward the third, in the case of riots, &c.? Or what occasion had there been for the || subsequent statute of Edward the third to say---'From henceforth, it shall not issue in trespass, unless it is against the peace,' if the practice had not been, upon indictments, though not § alledged, for process of exigent to issue? And that seems to be the true reason of the last restrictive statute. I do not find it ever was denied, but that upon a presentment or indictment for the king, process of outlawry lay ¶ and so it is expressly said to be agreed, in Brooke, title 'exigent,' which cites 8 H. VI. §. But a number of outlawries have been found, in crimes laid to be contra pacem, without vi et armis, and which could not be committed with force; and this error never assigned: which, alone, is decisive. I think, Mr. Attorney-general produced one as far back as the fifth of Edward the fourth.

The second error assigned is as to the proclamations.

The return says---'I have caused public proclamation to be made, in manner and form as I am within command.' This is certainly too loose: the proclamations are not sufficiently set out, for the court to judge whether they were properly made or not. I thought this error fatal. But Mr. Thurlow satisfied me, 'that it was unnecessary to make any proclamation at all.' The statutes which require proclamations do not extend to this case: and they are not required by the common-law. Indeed, this error was in a manner dropped and given up by serjeant Glynn, upon his reply: he did not contend, 'that they were necessary.' The present record drawn in the Crown-Office and settled by the king's counsel, shews under what obscurity and perplexity this matter lies: the result of ignorance in the practitioners; and productive of a shameful confusion in the precedents of the office. They have not distinguished between civil and criminal outlawries: they have not distinguished between the manner of proceeding to outlaw in criminal cases, before and after conviction. All is jumbled together: whatever is required in any case, they have applied to all. Circumstances are unnecessarily required, and defectively returned, because former mistakes are copied as precedents, without examination. But, as the proclamations, in this case, were nugatory and superfluous, the imperfection of the return is of no consequence: it is no error.

Of the second sort of errors, critical and verbal, two are assigned: which were argued.

1st. For that it is not shewn, nor does it appear by the return of the sheriff of Middlesex, 'that the defendant was a first, second, third, fourth, and fifth time exacted at the county court of the county of Middlesex; as, by the law of the land, he ought to have been, before he was outlawed. Under this error thus assigned, two objections were made: as to the first inaction; and as to the subsequent.

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First,

First, As to the first.---The return is by two men, sheriff of Middlesex: 'At my county-court, held, &c.' So that two men, making one officer, that is, sheriff of the county of Middlesex, say, 'At my court held in the county of Middlesex.' To raise a doubt, it is necessary to go out of the record, into history and law. We know from thence, that the same man might be sheriff of two counties. Till the thirteenth of Elizabeth, one person was sheriff of Somerset and Dorsetshire; and so of Suffex and Surry; of Oxford and Berks; of Nottingham and Leicestershire: and to this day, the same person is sheriff of Cambridge and Huntingdonshire. Such a sheriff might by law hold in either, the county-court of the other. 6 H. VII. 15 b In the case of the sheriff of Somerset, who was then also sheriff of Dorsetshire, 'my court in the county of Somerset' was adjudged uncertain. 11 H. VII. 10 a, in a like case, Rede Fairfax and Hussey inclined to think it certain enough; and adjourned the consideration. But here it is impossible to raise a doubt. Unless the sheriff of Middlesex may hold the court of another county in Middlesex, 'At my county-court,' can only be the county-court of Middlesex. Two men, sheriff of Middlesex, never were nor could be sheriff of any other county. The error is not assigned, for want of any technical form of words; but 'that it is not shewn,' nor 'does it appear by the return:' whereas I am of opinion it is shewn, and does appear by the return, that the county-court was of Middlesex, and could not possibly be the court of any other county.

Secondly---As to the subsequent exactions---The objection is, 'that it is not shewn, nor does it appear, where the court was held, at which he was exacted.' The return, having specified the place where the court was held, at which he was first exacted, states severally the subsequent exactions, 'at my court held at the same place.' So that the whole doubt is, whether the same place includes the description of the place referred to: which can not be a doubt, in any language of the world. For, in truth, the doubt can be no other than 'whether the same place means the same place, that is, the place before described.'

Second critical error. The only other error assigned and argued, is--- 'It is no where expressly shewn, that the place called Brook-street, where the several county-courts are supposed to have been held, is in the county of Middlesex.' The return says---'At the house known by the sign of the Three Tuns in Brook-street, near Holborn, in the county of Middlesex.' The counsel for the defendant contend, that the true construction ought to be, to apply 'in the county of Middlesex,' to Holborn, and not to Brook-street; and so make a stop, at Brook-street. It is impossible for me to doubt whether 'near Holborn,' is not part of the description of Brook-street. It could be added for no other reason: it could answer no end, to say, 'near Holborn,' but as part of the name or description of this Brook-street, in contradistinction to some other Brook-street. It is immaterial, what county Holborn is in: but the sheriff was bound to shew that Brook-street was in Middlesex. There is no law in this: it is a question of construction. All men can judge of it; and would treat with contempt the judgment of this sovereign court, if it could be founded upon so pitiful a prevarication. It is not permitted to me to say 'I doubt of the construction,' unless I do doubt; how much sorer I may wish that this outlawry should not stand. I am of opinion, that, according to the letter, sense, and grammatical construction of the sentence, the court was held in 'Brook-street near Holborn;' and that 'Brook-street near Holborn' lies in the county of Middlesex: and I am persuaded, there is no man who can think otherwise.

These are the errors which have been objected: and this the manner and form in which they are assigned. For the reasons I have given, I can not allow any of them. It was our duty, as well as our inclination, sedulously to consider whether upon any other ground, or in any other light, we could find an informality which we might allow with satisfaction to our own minds, and avow to the world.

But here, let me pause---

It is fit to take some notice of the various terrors hung out; the numerous crowds which have attended and now attend in and about the Hall, out of all reach of hearing what passes in court; and the tumults which, in other places, have shamefully insulted all order and government. Audacious addresses in print dictate to us, from those they call the people, the judgment to be given now, and afterwards upon the conviction. Reasons of policy are urged, from danger to the kingdom, by commotions and general confusion.

Give me leave to take the opportunity of this great and respectable audience, to let the whole world know, all such attempts are vain. Unless we have been able to find an error which will bear us out, to reverse the outlawry; it must be affirmed. The constitution does not allow reasons of state to influence our judgments: God forbid it should! We must not regard political consequences, how formidable soever they might be: if rebellion was the certain consequence, we are bound to say, 'Fiat justitia, ruat cælum.' The constitution trusts the king with reasons of state and policy; he may stop prosecutions; he may pardon offences; it is his, to judge whether the law or the criminal should yield. We have no election. None of us encouraged or approved the commission of either of the crimes of which the defendant is convicted: none of us had any hand in his being prosecuted. As to myself, I took no part (in another place,) in the addresses for that prosecution. We did not advise or assist the defendant to fly from justice: it was his own act; and he must take the consequences. None of us have been consulted or had any thing to do with the present prosecution. It is not in our power to stop it: it was not in our power to bring it on. We can not pardon. We are to say, what we take the law to be: if we do not speak our real opinions, we prevaricate with God and our own consciences.

I pass over many anonymous letters I have received. Those in print are public; and some of them have been brought judicially before the court. Whoever the writers are, they take the wrong way. I will do my duty, without. What am I to fear? That mandax infamia from the press, which daily coins false facts and false motives? The lies of calumny carry no terror to me. I trust, that my temper of mind, and the colour and conduct of my life, have given me a suit of armour against these arrows. If, during this king's reign, I have ever supported his government, and assisted his measures; I have done it without any other reward, than the consciousness of doing what I thought right. If I have ever opposed, I have done it upon the points themselves; without mixing in party or faction, and without any collateral views. I honour the king; and respect the people: but, many things acquired by the favour of either, are, in my account, objects not worth ambition. I wish popularity; but, it is that popularity which follows; not that which is run after. It is that popularity which, sooner or later, never fails to do justice to the pursuit of noble ends, by noble means. I will not do that which my conscience tells me is wrong, upon this occasion; to gain the huzzas of thousands, or the daily praise of all the papers which come from the press: I will not avoid doing what I think is right; though it should draw on me the whole artillery of libels; all that falsehood and malice can invent, or the credulity of a deluded populace can swallow. I can say, with a great magistrate, upon an occasion and under circumstances not unlike, 'Ego hoc animo semper fui, ut invidiam virtute partam, gloriam, non invidiam, putarem.'

The threats go further than abuse: personal violence is denounced. I do not believe it: it is not the genius of the worst men of this country, in the worst of times. But I have set my mind at rest. The last end that can happen to any man; never comes too soon, if he falls in support of the law and liberty of his country (for, liberty is synonymous to law and government). Such a shock, too, might be productive of public good: it might awake the better part of the kingdom out of that lethargy which seems to have benumbed them; and bring the mad part back to their senses; as men intoxicated are sometimes stunned into sobriety.

Once for all, let it be understood, 'that no endeavours of this kind will influence any man who at present sits here.' If they had any effect, it would be contrary to their intent: leaning against their impression, might give a bias the other way. But I hope, and I know; that I have fortitude enough to resist even that weakness. No libels; no threats; nothing that has happened, nothing that can happen, will weigh a feather against allowing the defendant, upon this and every other question, not only the whole advantage he is entitled to from substantial law and justice; but every benefit from the most critical nicety of form, which any other defendant could claim under the like objection. The only effect I feel, is an anxiety to be able to explain the grounds upon which we proceed; so as to satisfy all mankind, 'that a flaw of form given way to in this case, could not have been got over in any other.'

From the precedents we have seen, it appears, that a series of judgments have required a technical form of words, in the description of the county-court at which an outlaw is exacted: that after the words 'at my county-court,' should be added the name of the county; and after the word 'b. l. d.' should be added---'for the county of ---' (naming it). Whereas here, the sheriff says, 'at my county court,' without adding---'of Middlesex;' and he says---'held at the house, &c.' without adding the words, 'for the county of Middlesex,' after the word 'held.'

As to the first expression, the cases begin as far back as the seventh of James the first. As to the second expression, they begin about the 18th of Charles the second.

If we are compelled by authority, to look upon either expression as technically necessary, it is sufficient upon this occasion; because, here, both are wanting.

If an outlawry be returned in this manner---'Ad com. meum tent. apud Cicestriam in comitatu Suffex, &c.' it is erroneous; because it is not said 'ad com. meum Suffex tentum, &c.' Alder was outlawed for murder; and it was moved for error; that the sheriff returned---'ad com. meum tentum apud D. in the county of Northumberland;' and did not say, 'ad com. meum Northumbriae tentum, &c.' and this was holden to be error. Among the errors for which, the reporter says, the outlawry was reversed, the second is---not said 'Suffolciae;' after 'com. meum;' and this, he says, had been a common exception. Three copies have been left with us, from the records: and they are, 'ad com. meum § Middlesex tent. &c.' agreeable to the judgments I have mentioned. Winnington assigned error of outlawry: and one, said to be allowed, was, 'that the court is said to be held at the county of Hereford;' and doth not say---'for the county.' An outlawry was reversed, because said---'ad com. meum, &c.' and not said 'pro comitatu.' This term, several outlawries were reversed, for want of 'pro com.' or 'nec eorum aliquis,' or 'per judicium coronatorum.' One who was outlawed for the murder of sir Edmundbury Godfrey, now brought a writ of error in his hand to the bar; praying, 'that it might be read and allowed.' The outlawry was reversed. Among the errors assigned, one was, 'that it did not appear the court was held pro comitatu.' The other was clearly a fatal objection. After stating the case, sir Bartholomew Shower says---'she brings a writ of error, to reverse the outlawry: and the error which I assigned 'ore tenus,' was the usual fault, in not saying the county-court was held pro comitatu.' The outlawry was reversed. § This is a very strong authority, to shew that in the third of W. & M. it was settled, that the words pro comitatu were technically necessary. A record of an outlawry has been found, agreeable to this form, established as necessary; and says---'ad com. meum tent. pro com. Middlesex, apud le Cheshire-chefe in Grays-inn-lane in com. predict.' No case, report, or record has been found, since the third of queen Ann, which can be of any use, either way, upon this point, or any of the errors assigned.

The authorities I have stated stand, to this day, uncontradicted. They are many; and have prevailed above a century. I think, they begun against law and reason. The former authorities were § P. 7 Jac.

a. Ro. Abr.
802. Whit-ing's Case.
† Mich. 16
Jac. Alder's
Case, a Roll's
Reports 52.
† Tr. 13 C. 2.
1 Keble 50.
† Rex v.
Sickamore,
§ Rex v.
Hallett, H. 22,
23, C. 2. 10.
tulo 16. Rex
v. Preston, H.
22, 23 C. 2.
rotulo 17. Rex
v. Vernatt.
H. 1. 2. 2.
rotulo 9.
† M. 2 C. 2.
Rex v. Tufton, a Keble
128.
§ H. 22, 23.
C. 2. 1 Vent.
168. anonymous.
† E. 31 Car.
2. a Shower
60.
† H. 1 J. 2.
3 Mod. 89.
anonymous.
(S. C. 24. Rex
v. Vernatt.
left with us
from the record.
§ M. 1 W. 2.
M. 1 Show.
309. Rex v.
Lady Onby
alias Truster.
† Tr. 9 W. 3.
1697. rotulo
1. Rex 4.
Bull.

were otherwise: the precedent in Dalton is otherwise. There is no reason for requiring these words: there is sufficient certainty, without them. It is impossible to doubt, upon this record, but that the county-court at which the defendant was exacted, was the court of and held for the county of Middlesex. But, this is a criminal case, highly penal. Outlaws have had the benefit of this exception, for a great length of time. Can we refuse it to the defendant? We can not: though I am clearly of opinion, 'there was not a colour originally, to hold these words to be necessary.'

The objection to the blunder between the peace 'of the now,' and 'the late king,' after conviction, has not much more solidity in it: yet the house of lords thought themselves bound by precedents. And so must we, had the flaw been discovered before judgment. I can not say, 'that it does not appear upon this record, that the court was of and held for the county of Middlesex:' because I am clearly of opinion, 'that, most manifestly, it does.' But I can say, that a series of authorities, unimpeached and uncontradicted, from the 7th of James I. as to one expression, and from the 18th of Charles II. as to the other, have said 'such words are formally necessary.' I can say, that such authority, though begun without law reason or common sense, ought to avail the defendant. It would be dangerous, to say that any exception allowed so long, should now be over-ruled. The exception certainly would not have prevailed, had it been opposed at first: but, before the third of queen Ann, there being no opposition after a writ of error was granted, the court considered the crown as consenting to the reversal upon any pretence, how slight soever. Though that is not the case now, the necessity of the form of words must not be canvassed; since it has been so often adjudged necessary. The officers of the crown are in fault, for not attending to the form prescribed, and copying the precedent of the king v. Bell.

There can no mischief or uncertainty arise from this determination: because, it being once known 'what form of words is necessary,' it is easy to follow it. But great suspicion and uncertainty must follow, from this court's allowing a formal exception one day, and disallowing it another.

I beg to be understood, that I ground my opinion singly upon the authority of the cases adjudged; which, as they are on the favourable side, in a criminal case highly penal, I think ought not to be departed from: and therefore I am bound to say that, for want of these technical words, the outlawry ought to be reversed.

The other three judges spoke seriatim. But, as their arguments tended to support and illustrate the same doctrine which his lordship had laid down; and as they did not differ, in any part, from the opinion given by his lordship; I omit, for the sake of brevity, reporting particularly what they said.

A rule was accordingly made (in each cause) 'that the outlawry be reversed.'

On the same 8th of June 1768,

Rules were made, for the prosecutor to shew cause (upon Tuesday then next) why the judgment should not be arrested; and why the verdict should not be set aside.

And also a rule for now remanding the defendant to the custody of the Marshal, and for bringing him into court again upon Tuesday next.

Accordingly, on Tuesday the 14th of June 1768, the two following points were argued, very strenuously and very copiously on both sides: namely, 'whether the informations could be exhibited by the solicitor-general,' and 'whether the amendment could be made by a single judge out of court, in the manner before specified.' The former was objected to, as a ground for arresting the judgment: the latter, as a ground for a new trial.

Lord Mansfield, as to the motion in arrest of judgment, adhered to the opinion he had before given, 'that the informations were well exhibited by the solicitor-general.'

As to the motion for a new trial on account of the amendment, he declared his satisfaction at the motion's having been made, and the matter so fully discussed and understood.

Matters of practice, he observed, are not to be known from books. What passes at a judge's chambers is matter of tradition: it rests in memory. In cases of this kind, judges must inquire of their officers. This is done in court, every day, when the practice is disputed or doubted. It is in its nature official. The officers are better acquainted with it, than the judges. For his own part, neither his education, nor his walk in life before he came into this court, ever led him into any knowledge of the practice of orders made by judges in the vacation. The making this order for the amendment appeared to him to be right, and to be a matter of course. It came to him as a matter of course, and recommended as such from a gentleman of great experience, who (he knew) would as soon have cut off his right hand, as have deceived him by representing this as a thing of course, when it was not so. Accordingly, he issued a summons, 'to shew cause why the amendment should not be made.' A summons always issues, before a judge makes an order. A summons, therefore, went out, of course. Upon the attendance, his lordship asked Mr. Hughes (an old and experienced officer), the defendant's clerk in court, 'whether there was any doubt but that this was amendable.' He, very rightly, and as was his duty, admitted 'that it was amendable, and that he could not say otherwise.' His lordship then took down a book in which were entered some cases where informations were amended by a judge's order, just before trial; and after reading one or two, Mr. Philip, the defendant's attorney, desired him not to give himself any further trouble. Mr. Philip said indeed, 'that he could not consent to it.' But he did not object to it, nor contradict it; nor was it objected to, at the trial. The counsel saw that there could be no objection made to the order.

Mr. justice Blackstone, in his third volume*, gives the rise and history of amendments, very shortly and in few words. He shews how it stood, before the reign of Edward I. in whose time, (probably about his 13th year) Britton's treatise was published, in the king's name and by the king's authority: which seems intended to give a check to the unwarrantable practices of some judges who had made false entries on the rolls, to cover their own misbehaviour. And about the 18th year of his reign, almost all the judges, even the most able and upright, were prosecuted by him; and some of them very heavily fined; and one of the causes assigned for it, was erasing and altering records: particularly, sir Ralph Hengham was fined 800 marks at least, (some say 7000.) for altering, out of mere compassion, a fine set upon a very poor man, from 13s. 4d. to 6s. 8d. Upon this, the judges grew so strict, that after inrollment they would not amend their judgments, even to set them right. They were so alarmed by this severity, that through a fear of being said to do wrong, they hesitated at doing that which was right; and because criminal and clandestine alterations, to make a record speak a falsity, were forbidden, they conceived that they might not judicially and publicly amend it, to make it agreeable to truth. But declarations and pleas might always be amended at any time; it was only inrollments that were prohibited by Britton. There never was any distinction (as to amendments at the common law) between criminal and civil causes; that is, before the 8 H. VI. of Jeofails. The judges adhered to such strictness, that justice was entangled in the net of form. The legislature was therefore forced to interpose; and no less than twelve statutes of amendment were made, to remedy these opprobrious niceties.

The fundamental question here is, 'whether an information may be amended, at common law, at the desire of the crown, after plea pleaded.'

Numberless precedents are produced, from the time of queen Elizabeth, and all through the reigns of James I. and Charles I. and many side-bar rules, which shew that it was of course: for, if it were not of course, it would have been moved in court, as every thing not of course is.

So long ago as 6 W. III. lord chief justice Holt treats it as a known thing, a thing of course. 1 Salk. 47. The king against Harris. A motion was made, to amend an information for perjury; and opposed, because the defendant had pleaded. Et per Holt chief justice 'as to amendment after plea pleaded, there is no great matter in that. After a record has been sealed up, I have known it amended, even just as it was going to be tried.' In 12 W. III. * Sir Bartholomew Shower moved to amend an information of forgery, in ten places: and, though opposed, the motion was granted, because it made no alteration of the fact; and that, without costs or imparlance. In the case of the king against Charlesworth, 2 Stra. 871. the information was for forging a warrant of attorney to acknowledge satisfaction upon a judgment of Easter term: and, after issue joined, the record appearing to be of Hilary term, the information was amended, without costs (the prosecutor having been admitted a pauper), and without giving the defendant leave to plead de novo. And Hil. 10. Ann. the queen against Simmonds was there cited: where the title of an act set forth in an information was amended. And there is no authority to the contrary. There can be no doubt therefore of its being amendable; upon the authority of a series of precedents, without any objection, and all these printed cases uncontradicted.

And why should it not be amended? If it had not been amended, the attorney-general would have dropped this information, if he thought there was a slip in it; and have brought another. And this would have been more inconvenient to the defendant, and have harassed him more: he would have no benefit, and more vexation. This amendment avoids delays, and saves expences: it saves the defendant the expence of bringing his witnesses up again. The attorney-general pays no costs. The defendant never asked leave to plead again, or to have the trial put off: nor was there any cause for it. The defence was not at all varied. The substance of the charge was not at all altered: it remained the very same. The true merits of the cause stood the very same. There is no difference at all, but that the prosecutor must prove more. The nature of the paper was the same: every objection was equally open to the defendant, and he had the further advantage of any verbal slip in setting out the libel upon the record.

But it is objected, 'that it could not be done out of court.'

Answer. It might be done by the court: it might be done at the side-bar. And a great deal that may be done in court, is done by judges at chambers, in term-time: in vacation, a great deal more is done by them at chambers; because it can be done no where else. Most of the precedents of amendments before trial are in the vacation. Lord chief justice Lee amended a record of an information, sent up from York; the mistake being there discovered during the assizes: and the record so amended was returned, and immediately tried. I am obliged to a gentleman at the bar, who sent me a case of the king against King, 19th of March 1746, where Mr. justice Foster ordered the word 'division' to be struck out, and 'parish' to be inserted; though it was strenuously opposed, and the defendant must have been acquitted, if it had stood unamended. Mr. justice Foster had applied himself particularly to the crown-law; was a strict adherer to legal forms; and had more experience in business proper to be done out of court, than any other judge.

Whether it was a necessary amendment, or not, I give no opinion, nor form any.

There

There is a great difference between amending indictments, and amending informations. Indictments are found upon the oaths of a jury; and ought only to be amended by themselves: but informations are as declarations in the king's suit. An officer of the crown has the right of framing them originally; and may, with leave, amend, in like manner as any plaintiff may do. If the amendment can give occasion to a new defence, the defendant has leave to change his plea: if it can make no alteration as to the defence, he don't want it. In this case, the defendant could not possibly plead any other plea.

I am fully satisfied, that none of the defendant's counsel or agents ever thought there was the least colour of objection to the order for amendment: but, long after the trial, it occurred to others, that by calling it 'an alteration of the record,' instead of 'an order to amend the information' they who derive all their knowledge and law from libels in the news-papers, might be bewildered and misled.

Mr. justice Yates took notice of a difference which there seemed to him to be, between the attorney-general and the master of the crown-office: the attorney-general is the officer of the king; the master of the crown-office, the officer of the public. Informations exhibited by the king's attorney-general are considered as the king's own prosecutions, and are called 'declarations for the king:' therefore no costs are paid upon them. In the other informations, costs are often payable.

He said, he was greatly confirmed in his opinion, upon the case now before the court, and had the greater reason to think it a right one, as his brother Glynn had not, by all his arguments, been able to shake it.

He agreed that the statute-power of amending does not extend to criminal proceedings: but in common-law amendments, there is no difference between criminal and civil proceedings. And he cited, and repeated (in part) the case of the queen against Turchin, in 6 Mod.

263 to 287.† He cited also, to the same purport, the case of Bondfield qui tam &c. v. Milner, in this court, M. 1 G. III.

† Vide 6. Mod. 274. 282, 283.

The question therefore turns upon what is a common-law amendment. Many cases have been cited, of common-law amendments. But there is one, which has not been mentioned: it is the king against Goffe, in 1 Lev. 189. It was moved to amend an information of perjury. And it was ruled, that they should give notice of the things to be amended, to the defendant; and he to shew cause why it should not be amended: for, the court said, 'it might be amended.' The case of the king against Charlesworth was a very strong one: for, the defendant must have been acquitted; and yet that amendment was made without payment of costs, and without liberty to plead de novo.

Indictments, being upon oath, can not be amended. But informations may be amended; because they are declarations for the king. 2 Viner 394. Title 'amendment and Jeofails,' pl. 12. 12 Mod. 229. The king against Lewis. 6 Mod. 281. 1 Stra. 185. Rex v. Nixon.

It is clear, therefore, that informations may be amended, at common-law.

As to their being amended by a judge at chambers---it is, most certainly, the practice. Non constat 'when it begun;' but it seems to have been exercised time out of mind; and that the business of the court could not be done without it. The business done at chambers is the most irksome part of the office of a judge: but it is greatly for the benefit of the subject, and tends to the advancement and expedition of justice. It arises from the overflowing of the business of the court; which can not be all transacted in court. The order of a judge is subject to an appeal to the court: but if acquiesced under, it is as valid as any act of the court. It is common, to apply to the court, 'to discharge a judge's order:' but the very course of applying to the court, 'to discharge the order of a judge, made at chambers,' supports the proceeding; and shews that the order is valid as to its effect, if it be not discharged. Indeed, if it becomes necessary to enforce it by attachment, there must be a motion 'to make it a rule of court.' The validity of a judge's order can be impeached only two ways: either by appealing to the court, to set it aside; or, if made in vacation, by applying in the next term, to set aside the proceedings that have been had under it. Now, this order was made in vacation. The defendant might have declined going to trial, and might have moved, in the next term, 'to set aside the verdict.' But he acquiesced, and went to trial.

The materiality of this amendment is not in any degree equal to many of those that were made in the cases that have been cited. The defence was, indeed, made easier thereby: for, the word 'tenor' imports a literal copy. It could not vary the nature of the defence: the proof lay upon the crown. If the defendant had had any objection to the alteration, he should have made no defence at the trial: that would have been a consistent conduct. But as he did make a defence, he has acquiesced in it. And yet, if he had made no defence at the trial, the verdict nevertheless would have stood: for, it could not have been set aside, unless the order was a bad one; which it now clearly appears, 'that it was not.' Therefore it ought to be supported by the court.

This is a motion for a new trial, after a series of proceedings upon it. The court have indeed spontaneously relaxed their own rule, in order to give an opportunity of having this matter fully and fairly argued and considered: which I am glad of; but I hope, it will not be made a precedent.

Mr. justice Aston---I entirely concur with my lord and my brother Yates, in discharging these rules. I think, the importance of this case does not consist in the nature of it; but in the noise and clamour that it has occasioned, and the misrepresentations that have been thrown out to the public, of the conduct of the judges in the course of the proceedings in it; who have been very unjustly charged with being induced to it by partial motives.

VOL. XI.

In the case of the queen and Norton, reported in lord Fortescue's Reports 232, the court agreed that it is a general rule, 'to amend informations at any time, even just before trial:' but then it must not make the information different. And, to be sure, it ought not: for, it would make a different defence. In the case of Ross and Symour, 10 Mod. 88. it is said, 'that statutes of amendment extend only to pleadings of record; and that pleadings, while in paper, are amendable by common-law; and that it is a motion that the court can not refuse: but they may refuse it, if the party desiring it refuse to pay costs, or the amendment desired should amount to a new plea.' And as to the practice, it was almost of course, where the amendment made no alteration in the defence. Where it altered the defence, then it was upon terms. There is nothing that I ever looked upon as so plain.

Then as to doing it at chambers---the practice of the court has been always so. The business done at chambers is become an immense load upon the judges, and is exceedingly troublesome to them: but it is the practice, the custom of the court; and therefore, the law of the land. And what has been done by the judge at chambers, in the present case, has been rightly done: if it had not, I should have had no scruple in overturning it. But here is not the least colour for that: the order is justified by a vast number of precedents. I am glad, that it has been thus fully discussed; to convince the great number of persons that I see attending here, that judges have acted in this case, as they do in all others; and that there is no sort of ground for the scandalous intimations that have been indutritiously propagated, of their having been influenced by partial or improper motives.

Mr. justice Willes concurred in both points.

He declared himself to be clearly of opinion, that during the vacancy of the office of the king's attorney-general (which was the present case), the power of the attorney-general devolves upon the solicitor-general for the time being. Consequently, this information was regularly and properly exhibited.

As to the order for the amendment of the information---he held it to be justified by an uninterrupted series of precedents, from the time of W. III. at least. And as the order was right, he saw no ground for the obloquy that had been thrown upon the noble person who made it. It makes no alteration in the charge: it makes no alteration in the defence. No objection was made to it: no advantage was taken of it. It was acquiesced in: and the cause went on to trial. It is authorized by several cases, and by a great number of precedents for many years backward. He grounded his opinion, he said, upon the chain and series of precedents for near a century past.

He concurred therefore with his lordship and his brothers, that both rules be discharged.

The court unanimously ordered both these rules to be discharged.

Serjeant Glynn thereupon moved, that the present proceedings might be entered upon record, that the defendant might have opportunity of applying to another jurisdiction.

The court told him, they could not go out of the usual and ordinary method and course of proceeding: every thing must be done in this case, in the same manner as in all other proceedings of the like kind.

Mr. Attorney-general then moved for lord Mansfield's report of the evidence (the causes having been tried before his lordship, at nisi prius):

Whereupon, after the records of the convictions had been read, Lord Mansfield reported the evidence in each cause.

The attorney-general and the serjeant made their respective observations upon the evidence reported.

Mr. Wilkes then applied for the sentence of the court.

The court told him, it was necessary to take some time to consider of it: the constant course is so. They promised to do it without delay; and to give Mr. Wilkes notice, when they were ready: but, at present, they had not had the least conference together about the punishment; nor could they, without great impropriety, have had any, before they had heard all the arguments.

Serjeant Glynn then hinted at his client's being bailed in the mean time.

But the court told him, he knew that could not be.

The defendant was remanded to the custody of the Marshal.

On Friday the 17th of June 1768,

The court declared their intention of giving final judgment to-morrow; and ordered that the defendant should be brought up accordingly.

On Saturday the 18th of June 1768,

Mr. justice Yates (as second judge) pronounced the sentence of the court in each cause; viz.

On the information for the North Briton, No. 45. a fine of 500*l.* and imprisonment for ten calendar months, and till the fine be paid: on the other information, 500*l.* fine; and imprisonment for twelve calendar months after the expiration of the former ten; and to find security for his good behaviour for seven years, himself in 1000*l.* and two sureties sureties in 500*l.* each; and to be remanded, till the fine should be paid and such security given.

Mr. Wilkes desired, that his former imprisonment might be considered in the punishment now inflicted upon him.

The court assured him 'that it had been so; and that they had fully considered all circumstances, both for him and against him.

Serjeant Glynn then desired, that Mr. Wilkes might have the benefit of a writ of error to the house of lords.

Lord Mansfield answered, that this court could not give any particular directions about that matter: he must apply to the attorney-general. And he added, that if Mr. Attorney-general would take his advice, he should grant it the moment it was applied for.

Mr. Attorney-general said, he certainly should grant it immediately.

Mr. Wilkes then desired, that it might be put into such a method, as that he might have the advantage of objecting, in the house of lords, to the alterations made in the record by lord Mansfield at his lordship's own house.

Lord Mansfield told him, that the court could not alter the law.

Mr. Wilkes replied, that he did not wish the law to be altered.

Lord Mansfield.---It is impossible to alter it in any particular case: the same course must be taken in this case as is usual in others of the like kind. The defendant's counsel would advise him, his lordship said, what were the proper steps for him to take, in order to have the opinion of the house of lords.

The defendant was remanded.

The rules were drawn up in these words—

† (18th June 1768.)

Middlesex, the king against John Wilkes, Esq.

† Saturday next after fifteen days from the day of the Holy Trinity, in the eighth year of king George the third.

The defendant being brought here into court in custody of the Marshal of the Marshalsea of this court, by virtue of a rule of this court, and being convicted of certain trespasses contempts and grand misdemeanours, in printing and publishing a seditious and scandalous libel, intituled 'the North Briton, No. 45.' whereof he is impeached, it is ordered that he the said defendant, for his offences aforesaid, do pay a fine to our sovereign lord the king, of five hundred pounds of lawful money of Great Britain: and it is further ordered, that he the said defendant be imprisoned in the custody of the said Marshal for the space of ten calendar months now next ensuing. And it is lastly ordered, that the said defendant be now remanded to the custody of the said Marshal, to be by him kept in safe custody, in execution of the judgment aforesaid, and until he shall have paid the said fine.

On the motion of Mr. Attorney-general.

By the court.

The same against the same.

The defendant being brought here into court, in custody of the Marshal of the Marshalsea of this court, by virtue of a rule of this court; and being convicted of certain trespasses contempts and grand misdemeanours, in printing and publishing an obscene and impious libel, intituled 'An Essay on Woman,' and other impious libels in the information in that behalf specified, whereof he is impeached; and having also been convicted of certain other trespasses contempts and misdemeanours, for printing and publishing a certain other libel, intituled 'the North Briton, No. 45.' for which he hath this day been sentenced, and ordered by this court to pay a fine of five hundred pounds, and to be imprisoned in the custody of the said Marshal for the space of ten calendar months; it is now ordered by this court, that the said defendant, for his trespasses contempts and misdemeanours first abovementioned, in printing and publishing the said obscene and impious libels, do pay a further fine to our sovereign lord the king, of five hundred pounds of lawful money of Great Britain; and that the said defendant be further imprisoned in the custody of the said Marshal, for the space of twelve calendar months, to be computed from and after the determination of his aforesaid imprisonment for printing and publishing the said other libel intituled 'the North Briton, No. 45.' And it is further ordered, that he the said defendant shall give security for his good behaviour for the space of seven years, to be computed from and after the end and expiration of the said twelve calendar months to be computed as aforesaid; to wit, himself, the said defendant, in the sum of one thousand pounds, with two sufficient sureties, in five hundred pounds each. And it is lastly ordered, that he the said defendant be now remanded to the custody of the said Marshal, to be by him kept in safe custody, in execution of this judgment, and until he shall have paid the said fine and given such security as aforesaid.

On the motion of Mr. Attorney-general.

By the court.

Afterwards, a writ of error was brought, returnable in parliament, upon each judgment: and both judgments were affirmed, as follows—

Die Lunæ 16^o January 1769.

Counsel having been fully heard to argue the errors assigned in these causes, the following questions were put to the judges—

'Whether an information filed by the king's solicitor-general, during the vacancy of the office of the king's attorney-general, is good in law.'

'Whether, in such a case, it is necessary in point of law, to aver upon the record, that the attorney-general's office was vacant.'

Upon the second record—

'Whether a judgment of imprisonment against a defendant, to commence from and after the determination of an imprisonment to which he was before sentenced for another offence, is good in law.'

Whereupon the lord chief justice of the court of Common Pleas, having conferred with the rest of the judges present, delivered their unanimous opinion upon the said questions, with their reasons.

To the first question—that an information filed &c. is good in law.

To the second—that in such a case, it is not necessary.

To the third—that a judgment of imprisonment &c. is good in law.

Then ordered and adjudged that the judgments of the court of King's Bench be affirmed.

On Wednesday the 7th of February 1770,

Mr. Davenport moved that the defendant might be brought up, either into court within this term, or before a judge at chambers after the end of it, to enter into the recognizance required of him by the abovementioned rule of court: for, his imprisonment will end upon a day which does not fall within any term; namely, upon Easter Tuesday next.

The court told him, they had thought of this already; and they conceived the best method would be, to make a rule for his entering into the recognizance before the Marshal, or some other justice of the peace for the county of Surrey.

And accordingly, they ordered such a rule to be drawn up: which was done, in these words—

Ordered, that at the expiration of the imprisonment of the defendant, by virtue of the judgment of this court pronounced against him in this cause on Saturday next after fifteen days from the day of the Holy Trinity in the eighth year of the reign of his present majesty, the security required by the said judgment to be given by him the said defendant for his good behaviour for the space of seven years, to wit, himself the said defendant in the sum of 1000*l.* with two sufficient sureties in 500*l.* each, may be taken by and before any justice of the peace of and for the county of Surrey.

No. VI. The Case of Brads Crosby, Esq. Lord-Mayor of London, on a Commitment by the House of Commons. Court of Common-Pleas, Easter Term, 11 Geo. III. 1771.

[This case is from Mr. Serjeant Wilson's Reports, 3 Will. 188. The history of the transaction of which this case was a branch, with the proceedings of the house of commons, the reader may possess himself of, by resorting to the Annual Register for 1771, and Mr. Almon's Debates of the commons in the same year. Upon refusal of the court of Common-Pleas to discharge the Lord-Mayor, the court of Exchequer was moved for a habeas corpus; and the case was argued by counsel on a like return to that court: but the application there also failed of success, and the Lord-Mayor was remanded.]

THE lieutenant of the Tower of London was commanded to have before the justices of the bench here, the body of Brads Crosby, esq. lord-mayor of London, by him detained in the king's prison, in the Tower of London, by whatsoever name he was called, together with the day, and cause of his caption and detention, on Monday next, after three weeks from Easter-day; that the said justices seeing the cause, might do that which of right, and according to the law and custom of England, ought to be done; and further, to do and receive what the same justices here should then consider in that behalf. And now here, at this day, (to wit) Monday * next, after three weeks from Easter-day, in this term cometh the said Brads Crosby, in his proper person, under the custody of Charles Rainsford, esq. deputy-lieutenant of the Tower of London, brought to the bar here; and the said deputy-lieutenant then here returneth, that before the coming of the said writ, (to wit) on the 27th day of March last, the said Brads Crosby was committed to the Tower of London, by virtue of a certain warrant under the hand of Mr. Fletcher Norton, knight, speaker of the house of commons, which follows in these words: "Whereas the house of commons have this day adjudged, that Brads Crosby, esq. lord-mayor of London, a member of this house, having signed a warrant for the commitment of the messenger of the house, for having executed the warrant of the speaker, issued under the order of the house, and held the said messenger to bail, is guilty of a breach of privilege of the house; and whereas the said house hath this day ordered, that the said Brads Crosby, esq. lord-mayor of London, and a member of this house, be for his said offence committed to the Tower of London: these are therefore to require you to receive into your custody the body of the said Brads Crosby, esq. and to keep him safely during the pleasure of the said house, for which this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand, the twenty-fifth day of March, one thousand seven hundred and seventy one." And that this was the cause of the caption and detention of the said Brads Crosby in the prison aforesaid; the body of which said Brads Crosby he hath here ready, as by the said writ he was commanded, &c. Whereupon, the premises being seen, and fully examined and understood by the justices here, it seemeth to the said justices here, that the aforesaid cause of commitment of the said Brads Crosby, esq. to the king's prison of the Tower of London aforesaid, in the return above specified, is good and sufficient in law to detain the said Brads Crosby, esq. in the prison aforesaid: therefore the said Brads Crosby, Esq. is by the court here remanded to the Tower of London, &c.

Serjeants Glynn and Jephson argued, that it appeared by the return of this habeas corpus, that the cause of commitment of the lord-mayor to the Tower of London was insufficient in law for the detention of him there; and therefore this court ought to discharge him out of the custody of the lieutenant of the Tower of London.

Here follows the substance of serjeant Glynn's argument, after the writ and return were filed.

Serjeant Glynn.—The question now before the court, is, whether it does not appear by the return of this writ, that the lord-mayor ought to be discharged; and it is a very important and constitutional question indeed.

The return states, that the imprisonment of his lordship is by virtue of a certain warrant under the hand of Mr. Fletcher Norton, knight, speaker of the house of commons, reciting, that whereas the house had adjudged, that his lordship having signed a warrant for the commitment of a messenger of the house, for having executed the warrant of the speaker, issued under the order of the house, and held that messenger to bail, is guilty of a breach of privilege of the house; and also reciting, that the house had ordered, that his lordship, a member of the house, should for his said offence be committed. So that it appears what that breach of privilege is.

When any person is brought to this bar by the king's writ of habeas corpus, the judges must look into, see and consider the cause of his detention, and are bound to do that which of right, and according to the law and custom of England, ought to be done.

Acts done by the highest authority are subject to the inquiry of the courts in Westminster-hall; whose jurisdiction extends not only to inquire into, controul and correct the acts of inferior, but also of co-ordinate and superior powers.

A breach of privilege of the house of commons is stated, and also in what manner, and by what fact their privilege was broken; therefore this court must determine, whether the fact charged is by law a contempt or breach of privilege. When it is returned, that a person was committed by any other court in this Hall, for a contempt generally, without specifying the fact or nature of the contempt, this court cannot inquire into the matter, but must remand the prisoner. Every court of justice of record in the Hall, must necessarily have absolute power to enforce obedience to their own orders, or justice could not possibly be administered to the king's subjects. The house of commons is not a court of justice of record, for it cannot administer an oath: it has a certain limited jurisdiction; and this court must judge, whether it has not transgressed, and gone beyond the bounds of its jurisdiction, and must pronounce upon it. If the king doth exercise any power which is not conformable to law, this court will remedy it. The old writ de homine replegiando did not comprehend the mandates of the king; but the habeas corpus extends to them, and to all acts of power not conformable to law. If the court of Chancery, which is a superior court in civil causes, should exceed its jurisdiction, and interfere by injunction in criminal cases, the inferior court would determine against the court of Chancery, and would discharge any one from imprisonment whom that court should commit for disobedience to such injunction.

This court must inquire, whether the house of commons has not exceeded its lawful jurisdiction. The lord-mayor is charged with a contempt. The question is, whether he is guilty of a contempt; that is to say, whether the fact charged upon him amounts by law to a contempt. The house of commons makes an order for committing a printer, and that order expresses who shall take him into custody, namely, the serjeant, or deputy serjeant at arms of the house. The printer is taken into custody by a messenger, within the city of London; he complains to the lord-mayor; who examines into his complaint, proceeds judicially, and according to law; and after such examination, according to the best of his judgment, is of opinion, that the warrant of Mr. Fletcher Norton does not justify the taking the printer into custody by a messenger of the house, in the city of London. How does this interfere with the lawful jurisdiction of the house of commons; and how does it exceed the lawful jurisdiction of the lord-mayor, within the city of London? The jurisdiction of the house must be limited to some particular objects: the claim of an unlimited power in this country is absurd, and destroys itself. In the great question, in Ashby and White, about the Aylsbury men, we find, that in a conference between the lords and commons, it was agreed, that the commons cannot, by any vote or resolution of their own, assume or acquire any new jurisdiction or privilege. Here is a warrant under the hand of Mr. Fletcher Norton, speaker. Sir Fletcher Norton has no personal authority to commit whom he pleases. The speaker, as such, has no official authority. Whatever authority he can have, must be merely as the instrument of the house of commons: his act can be valid only by the order of the house. But that the warrant is made contrary to the order of the house, appears to this court by the return of the habeas corpus; consequently, the speaker having no authority of his own, and the warrant being contrary to the order, the same is invalid. The messenger executed the warrant in the city: the speaker had no authority to empower him to execute it in the city of London. The house of commons have not an unlimited jurisdiction; the lord-mayor was therefore obliged to examine, whether the act of power exerted by them within the city, was within their jurisdiction. The printer had been charged with printing the speeches of some members of the house, for which he was ordered to be taken into custody. The lord-mayor thought the house of commons had no right to order the printer to be taken into custody by their messenger in the city of London, and that the printer ought not to be committed for the act with which he was charged. There is nothing to be pretended in favour of this proceeding of the house of commons, but their assumed transcendent power. Now it would totally destroy all the benefit, and the very end of the habeas corpus, if the transcendency of any power whatever could blind the eyes of a court of justice, and prevent their inquiry into its acts. Such a decision by judges sworn to administer faithfully the laws, would be fatal to every thing that is worth preserving in our boasted constitution, and would leave the unhappy subjects of this country in a state much worse than a state of savage nature. The great chief justice Holt was clearly of opinion, and held it for good law, that if it appeared upon the face of the return of a habeas corpus, that what the house of commons called a contempt, was not by law a contempt, the person committed for it must be discharged; that the privileges of the house of commons are part of the law of the land, and therefore the courts here must take notice of them incidentally; and though this was the opinion of a single judge against three others, yet it was agreed to and supported by the house of lords, who, in those days, remembered that they were the hereditary guardians of the people. Again—Holt held, that the order of the house of commons forbidding any one to seek or pursue a legal remedy remedy against their orders, was illegal and naught; and boldly said so: and accordingly he was of opinion, that the persons committed for contempt of that order ought to have been discharged; though the three other judges were of a contrary opinion; and the persons were remanded to Newgate. Upon petition to the queen, a writ of error was allowed, and brought; and before it was argued, the parliament for good reasons was dissolved: but I will venture to say, if it had been argued, there would have been judgment given by the house of lords according to Holt's opinion. If the lex et consuetudo parliamenti, of which we hear so much and know so little, be indeed a part of the law of the land, the judges are bound to take notice of it, and to decide upon it, as they do upon every other part of the law. It has been said, that lord chief justice Holt was single in his opinion; nevertheless, I may venture to say, that his opinion, in the judgment of every honest and unprejudiced mind, will not be found light in the scale, against that of the three other judges. He was single: but he had truth and integrity with him, as well as the strongest arguments on his side, which the conference with the lords demonstrated; arguments which have never yet been, and which cannot now be answered. The other three judges differing in opinion from him, there was a writ of error (as I said before) granted, returnable in parliament; and if the temper of the times would have permitted it to have been proceeded in, and the parliament had not been then dissolved, it may easily be collected, from the arguments above referred to, that it would have had from the lords a most solemn and just decision.

a Ld. Raym.
93.

Lord chief justice De Grey.—Brother Glyn, that writ of error, you mention, was never brought before the lords.

Serjeant Glyn.—It is true, my lord, it was never brought directly in question before them; because doubts were started, whether it was a writ of right, or of favour, which might be refused by the particular officer. This occasioned a petition to the queen, who in answer to the petition said, she was come to a resolution to grant a writ of error, because she was desirous to have the matter of law settled, for the good of her subjects: but unhappily for us, the particular circumstances of those times prevented it; and the parliament was dissolved.

Lord chief justice De Grey.—In all cases, except treason and felony, I think a writ of error is grantable of right. The two houses addressed the queen for different purposes. The lords said, it was time enough to decide upon the writ of error, when it came before them.

Serjeant Glyn.—My lord, it is for that reason I said, I collect it from other arguments which make it very reasonable to suppose, that the subject would have had satisfaction and redress from the decision of the house of lords.

The question at present is, whether this court has not power to examine into the jurisdiction of the house of commons? I submit it, with deference to the court, that you have lawful power to enquire, whether the house of commons had any jurisdiction in this case, and that their privileges are not to be supposed so transcendent and mystical, as to exclude all enquiry. My lord, I deny that the mayor's act is a breach of privilege of the house of commons. The lord-mayor was in full possession of jurisdiction in the case; he was obliged to decide upon the question before him; he was obliged to form an opinion upon a case within his jurisdiction. Shall his opinion be adjudged a contempt? Is this the law of the land; that when different courts, having jurisdiction of the same nature, differ in their decisions, they are guilty of contempts one against the other, and may be punished for such contempts? It is no contempt in me, a private man, to have an opinion different from the greatest authorities in this kingdom. It was the lord-mayor's opinion upon the case before him; he was bound by his oath to act pursuant to that opinion; it was his bounden duty to act accordingly: he would have been perjured, if, out of respect for any persons, he had not obeyed the call of his conscience. It was no crime for him to entertain the opinion. Entertaining it, he was bound to declare it, and it was his duty to act in consequence of it. The conscientious act of a magistrate, within the limits of his jurisdiction, can never be a contempt, or punishable. Unless a magistrate acts wrong from corrupt motives, he cannot be punished. But suppose for a moment, the lord-mayor did not act from his opinion, but from some corrupt motive, it is not the house of commons, but a jury, that must judge of it. The duty of a magistrate differs widely from that of an officer. From the latter, a full and ready obedience is required to be paid to the orders of the court whose officer and minister he is; and such orders, rightly pursued and executed by him, are his sufficient justification: but the magistrate is bound by his oath, and has an opinion and judgment of his own which he must follow; and he is answerable to the law, and cannot be justified for the breach of his oath and the law, by any order or resolution of the greatest authority.

Your lordships are now called upon to say, whether the lord-mayor of London, in a case where he had indisputable jurisdiction, acting by his opinion, and according to his oath, is guilty of a contempt of the house of commons, and can by law be imprisoned.

Serjeant Jephson.—My lords, as I shall not have an opportunity of answering any argument from the bench, nor can possibly know the objections your lordships may have to discharging the lord-mayor out of custody, I shall endeavour to anticipate and answer such objections against discharging him, as occur to me, and may possibly be made by the court.

The question is, whether sufficient cause appears to the court upon the return of this writ, to imprison the lord-mayor? If no legal cause appears for detaining him in custody, he must be discharged.

I shall consider the nature, the return, and the consequence of the writ of habeas corpus. It is a prerogative writ of right, to inquire into the cause of the imprisonment of any of the king's subjects. If a legal cause of detention doth not appear upon the return of the writ, the subject must be discharged, and set at liberty: therefore, if a legal cause does not appear upon the return of this writ, the lord-mayor must be discharged out of custody. This position cannot be denied.

It appears from the cases of William Thicknesse, 4 Instr. 434. Sir William Chauncy, 12 Rep. 83. and from Bushe's case, Vaugh. 135. &c. that the cause of imprisonment ought to be as specifically returned to those who judge upon the writ of habeas corpus, as it did to those who first committed the party. Again, Bethell's Case, 1 Salk. 348. where the commitment is not to the legal and immediate officer, it is naught.

Again, Search's case, 1 Leon. 70, where the queen had taken a person into her protection, who, notwithstanding, was arrested, and the person arresting committed, and on a habeas corpus was discharged. See again Doctor Aphons's case, 2 Bull. 259. where the return was bad, no cause being therein shewed; also Thomas Barkham's case, Cro. Car. 507. the like case, ibid. 579. 1 Roll. Rep. 192. 218. Apsey's case, and Ruswell's case, ibid. 245. Codde's case. The determination in all the cases the same: if the legal charge is not returned, the person must be discharged. The court must judge of the cause of commitment returned: If not, why should the writ command the return of the cause? The cause is returned, that the court may judge, whether the person is intitled to his liberty, or not. It is no objection in this case, to say, that the house of commons having a power to commit, therefore this court must not judge of the cause of commitment returned; for this would prove too much; because it would go to every other court having jurisdiction to commit. Suppose the court of King's Bench, which is equal, and perhaps superior in some respect to this court, should commit a person; and the person committed should be brought here by habeas corpus; this court would certainly take notice, and inquire into the cause returned; and if this court thought it not a sufficient cause, would discharge the person; otherwise, how would the end of bringing the writ of habeas corpus be answered?

It is no objection in this case, to say, that the court cannot examine the cause as stated in the return, because the court would then determine upon the privileges of the house of commons: the court must, and doth frequently determine upon the privileges of parliament, when they come incidentally before them. See the earl of Banbury's case, 2 Ld. Raym. 1247. Salk. 512. 2 Str. 987. 8. This court made no sort of hesitation to determine in Wilkes's case, upon the privilege of parliament. 2 Will. 151. Why then should they not now enter into this question, touching the privilege of parliament? In lord Shaftesbury's and Mr. Murray's case, the returns were general, for contempts of the house, without stating the particular facts; but the facts of the supposed contempt in this case appear, which we contend cannot by any legal construction amount to a contempt, and therefore that the lord-mayor must be discharged. The house of commons having determined it to be a contempt, does not alter the case: a fact does not become a contempt by being recited to be such. The court must consider, whether the warrant for my lord-mayor's commitment is the warrant of the speaker as speaker of the house of commons, as sir Fletcher Norton may act in a double capacity.

Lord chief justice De Grey.—Sir Fletcher Norton signs himself speaker.

Serjeant Jephson.—His signing himself speaker will not help the warrant, if the cause is not sufficient; and the court may rather suppose the mistake committed by sir Fletcher Norton in his private capacity, than by the house of commons. Suppose some future speaker, of some future house of commons, should recite in his warrant, that the house of commons had adjudged it a breach of privilege, and contempt, to sue out a statute of bankrupt against one of their members, which by act of parliament any one is permitted to do; and should in consequence commit a person for such legal act: if the person was brought by writ of habeas corpus before this court, would not the court take cognizance of the commitment? Would they not determine it no breach of privilege? Are acts of parliament of less force than such a recital in a speaker's warrant? Suppose a person is committed by a similar warrant, for proceeding according to act of parliament against a member of the house in an action of debt; shall he have no remedy from the law, which led him into the supposed transgression? Suppose a justice of peace should commit a member of the house of commons for treason, felony, or breach of the peace, and the speaker's warrant should recite it to be a contempt; will this court say, they can take no cognizance of such a commitment by the house of commons? Suppose all the officers of this court should be recited in the speaker's warrant to be in contempt, for executing the process of this court, will this court give no remedy; and must this and every other court of justice be annihilated, whenever the speaker's warrant declares all its officers in contempt? How is it possible to distinguish the present case from those I have mentioned, if you must not examine the cause returned, but say it is sufficient if a contempt is charged? Serjeant Hawkins, in his 2 vol. 110. gives us clear enough his thoughts upon this subject. He says there, (among other things) that if a subject should be committed by either of the houses of parliament, it cannot be imagined that the law, which favours nothing more than the liberty of the subject, should give us a remedy against commitments by the king himself, appearing to be illegal, and give us no manner of redress against a commitment by our fellow-subjects, equally appearing to be unwarranted.

I think I have now sufficiently cleared this case from all the objections that can be brought against its being inquired into. The question therefore is, whether on the return there appears sufficient cause of detention? Three causes are mentioned, and all urged as breaches of privilege. 1. For discharging a printer; 2. for having signed a warrant for the commitment of the messenger; and, 3. for holding him to bail.

To make the lord-mayor guilty of the first supposed contempt, it ought surely to appear to the court, that Miller the printer was in the legal legal custody of the messenger. Now, Miller never was in the legal custody of the messenger; for the warrant to take up Miller was directed to the serjeant at arms of the house of commons, or his deputy, and not to the messenger; so that Miller was in the illegal custody of the messenger, therefore the lord-mayor did right.—Miller was ordered into the custody of the serjeant at arms, or his deputy; but the contrary appears upon the return, in the recital of the order: for that intimates, that he was taken into custody by the messenger, by virtue of the warrant of the speaker of the house, issued under the order of the house. Miller was taken into custody by the messenger in the city of London, neither the serjeant at arms or his deputy being present. The messenger, I say, was guilty of false imprisonment, having no warrant directed to himself, nor acting in aid and assistance of the serjeant at arms, or his deputy, to whom the warrant to take up Miller was directed, for neither of them were present; so that if an action of false imprisonment was to be brought against the messenger, he could not justify what he has done: and if he cannot justify in an action of false imprisonment, how could he justify before the lord-mayor? As for the other supposed contempt, of signing a warrant against the messenger, and holding him to bail; the messenger had been guilty of an assault and false imprisonment, in taking Miller the printer into custody, in the city of London, without any legal warrant or authority: what contempt is it to sign a warrant against the messenger?

Gould, justice.—The messenger was committed for having executed a warrant of the speaker.

Serjeant Jephson.—That does not appear; your lordships cannot know that; for the return only says, for signing a warrant against the messenger. For these reasons, I pray the lord-mayor may be discharged out of the custody of the lieutenant of the Tower of London.

Lord chief justice De Grey.—If either myself, or any of my brothers on the bench, had any doubt in this case, we should certainly have taken some time to consider, before we had given our opinions; but the case seems so very clear to us all, that we have no reason for delay.

The writ by which the lord-mayor is now brought before us, is a habeas corpus at common law, for it is not signed per statum. It is called a prerogative writ for the king; or a remedial writ: and this writ was properly advised by the counsel for his lordship, because all the judges (including Holt) agreed, that such a writ as the present case required, is not within the statute. This is a writ by which the subject has a right of remedy to be discharged out of custody, if he hath been committed, and is detained contrary to law; therefore the court must consider, whether the authority committing, is a legal authority. If the commitment is made by those who have authority to commit, this court cannot discharge or bail the party committed; nor can this court admit to bail, one charged or committed in execution. Whether the authority committing the lord-mayor, is a legal authority or not, must be adjudged by the return of the writ now before the court. The return states the commitment to be by the house of commons, for a breach of privilege, which is also stated in the return; and this breach of privilege or contempt is, as the counsel has truly described it, threefold; discharging a printer in custody of a messenger by order of the house of commons; signing a warrant for the commitment of the messenger, and holding him to bail; that is, treating a messenger of the house of commons as acting criminally in the execution of the orders of that house. In order to see whether that house has authority to commit, see Co. 4 Inst. 23. Such an assembly must certainly have such authority; and it is legal, because necessary. Lord Coke says they have a judicial power; each member has a judicial seat in the house: he speaks of matters of judicature of the house of commons, 4 Inst. 23. The house of commons, without doubt, have power to commit persons examined at their bar touching elections, when they prevaricate or speak falsely; so they have for breaches of privilege; so they have in many other cases. Thomas Long gave the mayor of Westbury 4*l.* to be elected a burgess: he was elected, and the mayor was fined and imprisoned, and Long removed. Arthur Hall, a member, was sent to the Tower, for publishing the conferences of the house. 4 Inst. 23. This power of committing must be inherent in the house of commons, from the very nature of its institution, and therefore is part of the law of the land. They certainly always could commit in many cases. In matters of elections, they can commit sheriffs, mayors, officers, witnesses, &c. and it is now agreed that they can commit generally for all contempts. All contempts are either punishable in the court contemned, or in some higher court. Now the parliament has no superior court; therefore the contempts against either house can only be punished by themselves. The stat. 1 Jac. I. cap. 13 sect. 3, sufficiently proves that they have power to punish: it is in these words: viz. 'Provided always, that this act, or any thing therein contained, shall not extend to the diminishing of any punishment to be hereafter by censure in parliament inflicted upon any person which hereafter shall make, or procure to be made, any such arrest as is afore-said.' So that it is most clear, the legislature have recognized this power of the house of commons. In the case of the Aylesbury men, the counsel admitted, lord chief justice Holt owned, and the house of lords acknowledged, that the house of commons had power to commit for contempt and breach of privilege. Indeed, it seems, they must have power to commit for any crime, because they have power to impeach for any crime. When the house of commons adjudge any thing to be a contempt, or a breach of privilege, their adjudication is a conviction, and their commitment in consequence, is execution; and no court can discharge or bail a person that is in execution by the judgment of any other court. The house of commons therefore having an authority to commit, and that commitment being an execution, the question is, what can this court do? It can do nothing when a person is in execution by the judgment of a court having a competent jurisdiction: in such case, this court is not a court of appeal.

It is objected, 1. That the house of commons are mistaken, for that they have not this power, this authority; 2. That supposing they have, yet in this case they have not used it rightly and properly; and 3. That the execution of their orders was irregular. In order to judge, I will consider the practice of the courts in common and ordinary cases. I do not find any case where the courts have taken cognizance of such execution, or of commitments of this kind: there is no precedent of Westminster-hall interfering in such a case. In fir J. Paston's case, 13 Rep. there is a case cited from the year-book, where it is held that every court shall determine of the privilege of that court: besides, the rule is, that the court of remedy must judge by the same as the court which commits. Now this court cannot take cognizance of a commitment by the house of commons, because it cannot judge by the same law; for the law by which the commons judge of their privileges is unknown to us. If the court of Common-Pleas should commit a person for a contempt, the court of King's-Bench would not inquire into the legality or particular cause of commitment, if a contempt was returned; yet in some cases the court of King's-Bench is a court of inquiry, but in this case is only co-ordinate with this court. In the case of Chambers, Cro. Car. 168. Chambers was brought up by habeas corpus out of the Fleet; and it was returned, that he was committed by virtue of a decree in the Star-Chamber, by reason of certain words he used at the council-table, &c. for which he was censured to be committed to the Fleet, till he made his submission at the council-table, and paid a fine of 2000*l.* and at the bar he prayed to be delivered, because the sentence was not warranted by any law or statute: for the statute 3 Hen. VII. which is the foundation of the court of Star-Chamber, doth not give them any authority to punish for words only. But all the court informed him, that the court of Star-Chamber was not erected by the stat. 3 Hen. VII. but was a court many years before, and one of the most high and honourable courts of justice; and to deliver one who was committed by the decree of one of the courts of justice, was not the usage of this court; and therefore he was remanded. The courts of B. R. or C. B. never discharged any person committed for contempt, in not answering in the court of Chancery, if the return was for a contempt. If the Admiralty court commits for a contempt, or one be taken up and committed on an excommunicato capiends, this court never discharges the persons committed. Formerly, when many abuses were committed, and the people could not obtain a remedy, the subject was not contented with the ancient habeas corpus, but did not complain of the courts for refusing them what they could not by law grant them: instead of that, they sought redress by petition to the throne. In chief justice Wilmot's time, a person was brought by habeas corpus before this court, who had been committed by the court of Chancery of Durham. That court being competent, and having jurisdiction, the man was not discharged, but recommitted. How then can we do any thing in the present case, when the law by which the lord-mayor is committed, is different from the law by which he seeks to be relieved? He is committed by the law of parliament, and yet he would have redress from the common law. The law of parliament is only known to parliament-men, by experience in the house. Lord Coke says, every man looks for it, but few can find it. The house of commons only know how to act within their own limits. We are not a court of appeal. We do not know certainly the jurisdiction of the house of commons. We cannot judge of the laws and privileges of the house, because we have no knowledge of those laws and privileges. We cannot judge of the contempts thereof: we cannot judge of the punishment thereof.

I wish we had some code of the law of parliament; but till we have such a code, it is impossible we should be able to judge of it. Perhaps a contempt in the house of commons, in the Chancery, in this court, and in the court of Durham, may be very different; therefore we cannot judge of it, but every court must be sole judge of its own contempts. Besides, as the court cannot go out of the return of this writ, how can we enquire into the truth of the fact, as to the nature of the contempt? We have no means of trying whether the lord-mayor did right or wrong. This court cannot summon a jury to try the matter. We cannot examine into the fact. Here are no parties in litigation before the court. We cannot call in any body. We cannot hear any witnesses, or depositions of witnesses. We cannot issue any process. We are even now hearing ex parte, and without any counsel on the contrary side. Again, if we could determine upon the contempts of any other court, so might the other courts of Westminster-Hall; and what confusion would then ensue! none of us knowing the law by which persons are committed by the house of commons. If three persons were committed for the same breach of privilege, and applied severally to different courts, one court perhaps would bail, another court discharge, a third re-commit.

Two objections have been made, which I own have great weight; because they hold forth, if pursued to all possible cases, consequences of most important mischief. 1st, It is said, that if the rights and privileges of parliament are legal rights, for that very reason the court must take notice of them, because they are legal. And 2^{dy}, If the law of parliament is part of the law of the land, the judges must take cognizance of one part of the law of the land, as well as of the other. But these objections will not prevail. There are two sorts of privileges which ought never to be confounded; personal privilege, and the privilege belonging to the whole collective body of that assembly. For instance, it is the privilege of every individual member, not to be arrested. If he was arrested, before the stat. 12 & 13 W. III. the method in Westminster-Hall was, to discharge him by writ of privilege under the great seal, which was in the nature of a superfedeas to the proceedings; and as soon as it came into the court of B. R. and was pleaded there, then it became a record, and the pleading concluded, si curia domini regis placitum prædictum cognoscere velit aut debeat. The stat. 11 & 12 W. III. has altered this, and there is now no occasion to plead the privilege of a member of parliament.

2^{Stran.} 985. Holiday & al' versus colonel Pitt. There is a great great difference between matters of privilege coming incidentally before the court, and being the point itself directly before the court. In the first case, the court will take notice of them, because it is necessary, in order to prevent a failure of justice. As in lord Banbury's case, where the court of King's-Bench determined against the determination of the house of lords: but in that case they considered the legality and validity of the letters patent, without regarding the other right of a seat in the house of lords, with which the court did not concern themselves. The counsel at the bar have not cited one case where any court of this Hall ever determined a matter of privilege which did not come incidentally before them. If a question is to be determined in this court touching a descent, whereby property is to be determined, and which depends upon legitimacy; that is, whether the father and mother were married lawfully; this court must determine by the bishop's certificate. But in some cases, where legitimacy of marriage does not come in question, but cohabitation only for a great length of time, which is evidence of a marriage, comes in question, this court will determine according to the verdict of a jury, although the courts of Westminster-Hall go by a different rule from the spiritual courts. But the present case differs much from those which the court will determine; because it does not come incidentally before us, but is brought before us directly, and is the whole point in question; and to determine it, we must supersede the judgment and determination of the house of commons, and a commitment in execution of that judgment.

Another objection has been made, which likewise holds out to us, if pursued in all its possible cases, some dreadful consequences; and that is, the abuses which may be made by jurisdictions from which there is no appeal, and for which abuses there is no remedy: but this is unavoidable; and it is better to leave some courts to the obligation of their oaths. In the case of a commitment by this court or the King's-Bench, there is no appeal. Suppose the court of B. R. sets an excessive fine upon a man for a misdemeanour, there is no remedy, no appeal to any other court. We must depend upon the discretion of some courts. A man not long ago was sentenced to stand in the pillory, by this court of Common-Pleas, for a contempt. Some may think this very hard, to be done without a trial by jury; but it is necessary. Suppose the courts should abuse their jurisdiction, there can be no remedy for this: it would be a public grievance; and redress must be sought from the legislature. The laws can never be a prohibition to the houses of parliament; because, by law, there is nothing superior to them. Suppose they also, as well as the courts of law, should abuse the powers which the constitution has given them, there is no redress; it would be a public grievance. The constitution has provided checks to prevent its happening; it must be left at large; it was wise to leave it at large: some persons, some courts, must be trusted with discretionary powers; and though it is possible, it is in the highest degree improbable, that such abuses should ever happen; and the very supposal is answered by serjeant Hawkins, in the place cited at the bar. As for the case of the Chancery committing for crimes, that is a different thing, because the Chancery has no criminal jurisdiction; but if that court commits for contempts, the persons committed will not be discharged by any other court. Many authorities may be drawn from the reign of Charles, but those were in times of contest. At present, when the house of commons commits for contempt, it is very necessary to state what is the particular breach of privilege; but it would be a sufficient return, to state the breach of privilege generally. This doctrine is fortified by the opinion of all the judges, in the case of lord Shaftesbury, and I never heard this decision complained of till 1704. Though they were times of heat, the judges could have no motive in their decision, but a regard to the laws. The houses disputed about jurisdiction, but the judges were not concerned in the dispute. As for the present case, I am perfectly satisfied, that if lord Holt himself were to have determined it, the lord-mayor would be remanded. In the case of Mr. Murray, the judges could not hesitate concerning the contempt by a man who refused to receive his sentence in a proper posture. All the judges agreed, that he must be remanded, because he was committed by a court having competent jurisdiction. Courts of justice have no cognizance of the acts of the houses of parliament, because they belong ad aliud examen. I have the most perfect satisfaction in my own mind in that determination. Sir Martin Wright, who felt a generous and distinguished warmth for the liberty of the subject; Mr. justice Denison, who was so free from connections and ambition of every kind; and Mr. justice Foster, who may be truly called the magna charta of liberty of persons, as well as fortunes; all these revered judges concurred in this point: I am therefore clearly and with full satisfaction of opinion, that the lord-mayor must be remanded.

Gould, justice.—I entirely concur in opinion with my lord chief justice, that this court hath no cognizance of contempts or breach of privilege of the house of commons: they are the only judges of their own privileges; and that they may be properly called judges, appears in 4 Inst. 47. where my lord Coke says, an alien cannot be elected of the parliament, because such a person can hold no place of judicature. Much stress has been laid upon an objection, that the warrant of the speaker is not conformable to the order of the house; and yet no such thing appears upon the return, as has been pretended. The order says, that the lord-mayor shall be taken into the custody of the serjeant or his deputy; it does not say, by the serjeant or his deputy. This court cannot know the nature and power of the proceedings of the house of commons: it is founded on a different law: the lex et consuetudo parliamenti is known to parliament-men only. Trewynnae's case, Dier 59, 60. When matters of privilege come incidentally before the court, it is obliged to determine them to prevent a failure of justice. It is true this court did, in the instance alluded to by the counsel at the bar, determine upon the privilege of parliament in the case of a libel; but then that privilege was promulged and known; it existed in records and law-books, and was allowed by parliament itself. But even in that case, we now know that we were mistaken; for the house of commons have since determined, that privilege does not extend to matters of libel. The cases produced respecting the High Commission Court, &c. are not to the present purpose, because those courts had not a legal authority. The resolution of the house of commons is an adjudication, and every court must judge of its own contempts.

Blackstone, justice.—I concur in opinion, that we cannot discharge the lord-mayor. The present case is of great importance, because the liberty of the subject is materially concerned. The house of commons is a supreme court, and they are judges of their own privileges and contempts, more especially with respect to their own members. Here is a member committed in execution by the judgment of his own house. All courts, by which I mean to include the two houses of parliament, and the courts of Westminster-Hall, can have no controul in matters of contempt. The sole adjudication of contempts, and the punishment thereof, in any manner, belongs exclusively, and without interfering, to each respective court. Infinite confusion and disorder would follow, if courts could by writ of habeas corpus examine and determine the contempts of others. This power to commit results from the first principles of justice; for if they have power to decide, they ought to have power to punish. No other court shall scan the judgment of a superior court, or the principal seat of justice. As I said before, it would occasion the utmost confusion, if every court of this Hall should have power to examine the commitments of the other courts of the Hall for contempts; so that the judgment and commitment of each respective court, as to contempts, must be final, and without controul. It is a confidence that may, with perfect safety and security, be reposed in the judges, and the houses of parliament. The legislature since the Revolution (see 9 & 10 W. III. c. 15.) have created many new contempts. The objections which are brought of abusive consequences prove too much, because they are applicable to all courts of dernier resort: et ab abusu ad usum non valet consequentia, is a maxim of law as well as of logic. General convenience must always outweigh partial inconvenience. Even supposing (which, in my conscience, I am far from supposing) that in the present case the house has abused its power, I know, and am sure, that the house of commons are both able and well inclined to do justice. How preposterous is the present murmur and complaint! The house of commons have this power only in common with all the courts of Westminster-Hall: and if any persons may be safely trusted with this power, they must surely be the commons, who are chosen by the people; for their privileges and powers are the privileges and powers of the people. There is a great fallacy in my brother Glyn's whole argument, when he makes the question to be, whether the house have acted according to their rights or not? Can any good man think of involving the judges in a contest with either house of parliament, or with one another? And yet this manner of putting the question would produce such a contest. The house of commons is the only judge of its own proceedings. Holt differed from the other judges in this point; but we must be governed by the eleven, and not by the single one. It is a right inherent in all supreme courts. The house of commons have always exercised it. Little nice objections of particular words and forms, and ceremonies of execution, are not to be regarded in the acts of the house of commons. It is our duty to presume the orders of that house, and their execution, are according to law. The habeas corpus in Murray's case was at common law. I concur intirely with my lord chief justice.

Nares, justice.—I shall ever entertain a most anxious concern for whatever regards the liberty of the subject. I have not the vanity to think I can add any thing to the weight of the arguments used by my lord chief justice and my brothers. I have attended with the utmost industry to every case and argument that has been produced, and most heartily and readily concur with my lord chief justice and my brothers.

The lord-mayor was remanded to the Tower.

Wilkes's case, 2 Will. son 151.

No. VII. The Case of James Sommerfett, a Negro, on a Habeas Corpus, King's Bench, 1771 and 1772.

[The following case was first printed by the editor of this volume of State Trials soon after the court's determination. It is here given from the second edition, which was published in the year 1775, being the same as the first, except in a slight alteration of one of the notes.]

[In Mr. Loft's Reports, there is a note of the arguments of all the counsel, and the judgment of the court as delivered by lord Mansfield; to which the editor begs leave to refer the Reader.]

ON the third of December 1771, affidavits were made by Thomas Walklin, Elizabeth Cade, and John Marlow, that James Sommerfett, a negro, was confined in irons on board a ship called the Ann and Mary, John Knowles commander, lying in the Thames, and bound for Jamaica; and lord Mansfield, on an application supported by these affidavits, allowed a writ of habeas corpus, directed to Mr. Knowles, and requiring him to return the body of Sommerfett before his lordship, with the cause of detainer.

Mr. Knowles on the 9th of December produced the body of Sommerfett before lord Mansfield, and returned for cause of detainer, that Sommerfett was the negro slave of Charles Stuart, esq. who had delivered Sommerfett into Mr. Knowles's custody, in order to carry him to Jamaica, and there sell him as a slave. Affidavits were also made by Mr. Stuart and two other gentlemen, to prove that Mr. Stuart had purchased Sommerfett as a slave in Virginia, and had afterwards brought him into England, where he left his master's service; and that his refusing to return, was the occasion of his being carried on board Mr. Knowles's ship.

Lord Mansfield chusing to refer the matter to the determination of the court of King's Bench, Sommerfett with sureties was bound in a recognizance for his appearance there on the second day of the next Hilary term; and his lordship allowed till that day for settling the form of the return to the habeas corpus. Accordingly on that day Sommerfett appeared in the court of King's Bench, and then the following return was read:

I John Knowles, commander of the vessel called the Ann and Mary in the writ hereunto annexed, do most humbly certify and return to our present most serene sovereign the king; that at the time herein after-mentioned of bringing the said James Sommerfett from Africa, and long before, there were, and from thence hitherto there have been, and still are great numbers of negro slaves in Africa; and that during all the time aforesaid there hath been, and still is a trade, carried on by his majesty's subjects, from Africa to his majesty's colonies or plantations of Virginia and Jamaica in America, and other colonies and plantations belonging to his majesty in America, for the necessary supplying of the aforesaid colonies and plantations with negro slaves; and that negro slaves, brought in the course of the said trade from Africa to Virginia and Jamaica aforesaid, and the said other colonies and plantations in America, by the laws of Virginia and Jamaica aforesaid and the said other colonies and plantations in America, during all the time aforesaid, have been, and are saleable and sold as goods and chattels, and upon the sale thereof have become and been, and are the slaves and property of the purchasers thereof, and have been, and are saleable and sold by the proprietors thereof as goods and chattels. And I do further certify and return to our said lord the king, that James Sommerfett, in the said writ hereunto annexed named, is a negro, and a native of Africa; and that the said James Sommerfett, long before the coming of the said writ to me, to wit on the tenth day of March in the year of our Lord was a negro slave in Africa aforesaid, and afterwards, to wit on the same day and year last aforesaid, being such negro slave, was brought in the course of the said trade as a negro slave from Africa aforesaid to Virginia aforesaid, to be there sold; and afterwards, to wit on the first day of August in the year last aforesaid, the said James Sommerfett, being and continuing such negro slave, was sold in Virginia aforesaid to one Charles Stuart, esq. who then was an inhabitant of Virginia aforesaid; and that the said James Sommerfett thereupon then and there became, and was the negro slave and property of the said Charles Stuart, and hath not at any time since been manumitted, enfranchised, set free, or discharged; and that the said James Sommerfett, so being the negro slave and property of him the said Charles Stuart, and the said Charles Stuart having occasion to transact certain affairs and business of him the said Charles Stuart in this kingdom, he the said Charles Stuart, before the coming of the said writ to me, to wit on the first day of October in the year of our Lord 1769, departed from America aforesaid, on a voyage for this kingdom, for the purpose of transacting his aforesaid affairs and business, and with an intention to return to America, as soon as the said affairs and business of him the said Charles Stuart in this kingdom should be transacted; and afterwards, to wit on the tenth day of November in the same year, arrived in this kingdom, to wit in London, that is to say, in the parish of St. Mary le Bow in the ward of Cheap; and that the said Charles Stuart brought the said James Sommerfett, his negro slave and property, along with him in the said voyage, from America aforesaid to this kingdom, as the negro slave and property of him the said Charles Stuart, to attend and serve him, during his stay and abiding in this kingdom, on the occasion aforesaid, and with an intent to carry the said James Sommerfett back again into America, with him the said Charles Stuart, when the said affairs and business of the said Charles Stuart should be transacted; which said affairs and business of the said Charles Stuart are not yet transacted, and the intention of the said Charles Stuart to return to America as aforesaid hitherto hath continued, and still continues. And I do further certify to our said lord the king, that the said James Sommerfett did accordingly attend and serve the said Charles Stuart in this kingdom, from the time of his said arrival, until the said James Sommerfett's departing and absenting himself from the service of the said Charles Stuart herein aftermentioned, to wit at London aforesaid in the parish and ward aforesaid; and that before the coming of this writ to me, to wit on the first day of October in the year of our Lord 1771, at London aforesaid, to wit in the parish and ward aforesaid, the said James Sommerfett, without the consent, and against the will of the said Charles Stuart, and without any lawful authority whatsoever, departed and absented himself from the service of the said Charles Stuart, and absolutely refused to return into the service of the said Charles Stuart, and serve the said Charles Stuart, during his stay and abiding in this kingdom, on the occasion aforesaid: whereupon the said Charles Stuart afterwards and before the coming of this writ to me, to wit on the twenty-sixth day of November in the year of our Lord 1771, on board the said vessel called the Ann and Mary, then and still lying in the river Thames, to wit at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, and then and still bound upon a voyage for Jamaica aforesaid, did deliver the said James Sommerfett unto me, who then was, and yet is master and commander of the said vessel, to be by me safely and securely kept and carried and conveyed, in the said vessel, in the said voyage to Jamaica aforesaid, to be there sold as the slave and property of the said Charles Stuart; and that I did thereupon then and there, to wit at London aforesaid in the parish and ward aforesaid, receive and take, and have ever since kept and detained the said James Sommerfett in my care and custody, to be carried by me in the said voyage to Jamaica aforesaid, for the purpose aforesaid. And this is the cause of my taking and detaining the said James Sommerfett, and whose body I have now ready, as by the said writ I am commanded.

After the reading of the return, Mr. serjeant Davy, one of the counsel for Sommerfett the negro, desired time to prepare his argument against the return; and on account of the importance of the case, the court postponed hearing the objections against the return, till the seventh of February, and the recognizance for the negro's appearance was continued accordingly. On that day Mr. serjeant Davy and Mr. serjeant Glynn argued against the return, and the further argument was postponed till Easter term, when Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Alleyne, and Mr. Hargrave, were also heard on the same side. Afterwards Mr. Wallace and Mr. Dunning argued in support of the return, and Mr. serjeant Davy was heard in reply to them. The determination of the court was suspended till the following Trinity term; and then the court was unanimously of opinion against the return, and ordered that Sommerfett should be discharged.

The following argument, on the behalf of the negro, is not to be considered as a speech actually delivered: for though the author of it, who was one of the counsel for the negro, did deliver one part of his argument in court without the assistance of notes; yet his argument, as here published, is entirely a written composition. This circumstance is mentioned, lest the author should be thought to claim a merit, to which he has not the least title.

Argument of Mr. Hargrave for the Negro.

THOUGH the learning and abilities of the gentlemen, with whom I am joined on this occasion, have greatly anticipated the arguments prepared by me; yet I trust, that the importance of the case will excuse me, for disclosing my ideas of it, according to the plan and order, which I originally found it convenient to adopt.

The case before the court, when expressed in few words, is this. Mr. Stewart purchases a negro slave in Virginia, where by the law of the place negroes are slaves, and saleable as other property. He comes into England, and brings the negro with him. Here the negro leaves Mr. Stewart's service without his consent; and afterwards persons employed by him seize the negro, and forcibly carry him on board a ship bound to Jamaica, for the avowed purpose of transporting him to that island, and there selling him as a slave. On an application by the negro's friends, a writ of habeas corpus is granted; and in obedience to the writ he is produced before this court, and here sues for the restitution of his liberty.

The questions, arising on this case, do not merely concern the unfortunate person, who is the subject of it, and such as are or may be under like unhappy circumstances. They are highly interesting to the whole community, and cannot be decided, without having the most general and important consequences; without extensive influence on private happiness and public security. The right claimed by Mr. Stewart to the detention of the negro, is founded on the condition of slavery, in which he was before his master brought him into England; and if that right is here recognized, domestic slavery, with its horrid train of evils, may be lawfully imported into this country, at the discretion of every individual foreign and native. It will come not only from our own colonies, and those of other European nations; but from Poland, Russia, Spain, and Turkey, from the coast of Barbary, from the Western and Eastern coasts of Africa, from every part of the world, where it still continues to torment and dishonour the human species. It will be transmitted to us in all its various forms, in all the gradations of inventive cruelty: and by an universal reception of slavery, this country, so famous for public liberty, will become the chief seat of private tyranny.

In speaking on this case, I shall arrange my observations under two heads. First, I shall consider the right, which Mr. Stewart claims in the person of the negro. Secondly, I shall examine Mr. Stewart's authority to enforce that right, if he has any, by imprisonment of the negro and transporting him out of this kingdom. The court's opinion in favour of the negro, on either of these points, will entitle him to a discharge from the custody of Mr. Stewart.

(1st.) The first point, concerning Mr. Stewart's right in the person of the negro, is the great one, and that which, depending on a variety of considerations, requires the peculiar attention of the court. Whatever Mr. Stewart's right may be, it springs out of the condition of slavery, in which the negro was before his arrival in England, and wholly depends on the continuance of that relation; the power of imprisoning at pleasure here, and of transporting into a foreign country for sale as a slave, certainly not being exerciseable over an ordinary servant. Accordingly the return fairly admits slavery to be the sole foundation of Mr. Stewart's claim; and this brings the question, as to the present lawfulness of slavery in England, directly before the court. It would have been more artful to have asserted Mr. Stewart's claim in terms less explicit, and to have stated the slavery of the negro before his coming into England, merely as a ground for claiming him here, in the relation of a servant bound to follow wherever his master should require his service. The case represented in this disguised way, though in substance the same, would have been less alarming in its first appearance, and might have afforded a better chance of evading the true question between the parties. But this artifice, however convenient Mr. Stewart's counsel may find it in argument, has not been adopted in the return; the case being there stated as it really is, without any suppression of facts to conceal the great extent of Mr. Stewart's claim, or any colouring of language to hide the odious features of slavery in the feigned relation of an ordinary servant.

Before I enter upon the enquiry into the present lawfulness of slavery in England, I think it necessary to make some general observations on slavery. I mean however always to keep in view slavery, not as it is in the relation of a subject to an absolute prince, but only as it is in the relation of the lowest species of servant to his master, in any state, whether free or otherwise in its form of government. Great confusion has ensued from discoursing on slavery, without due attention to the difference between the despotism of a sovereign over a whole people and that of one subject over another. The former is foreign to the present case; and therefore when I am describing slavery, or observing upon it, I desire to be understood as confining myself to the latter; though from the connection between the two subjects, some of my observations may perhaps be applicable to both.

Slavery has been attended in different countries with circumstances so various, as to render it difficult to give a general description of it. The Roman lawyer (a) calls slavery, a constitution of the law of nations, by which one is made subject to another contrary to nature. But this, as has been often observed by the commentators, is mistaking the law, by which slavery is constituted for slavery itself, the cause for the effect; though it must be confessed, that the latter part of the definition obscurely hints at the nature of slavery. Grotius (b) describes slavery to be, an obligation to serve another for life, in consideration of being supplied with the bare necessities of life. Dr. Rutherford (c) rejects this definition, as implying a right to direct only the labors of the slave, and not his other actions. He therefore, after defining despotism to be an alienable right to direct all the actions of another, from thence concludes, that perfect slavery is an obligation to be so directed. This last definition may serve to convey a general idea of slavery; but like that by Grotius, and many other definitions which I have seen, if understood strictly, will scarce suit any species of slavery, to which it is applied. Besides, it omits one of slavery's severest and most usual incidents; the quality, by which it involves all the issue in the misfortune of the parent. In truth, as I have already hinted, the variety of forms, in which slavery appears, makes it almost impossible to convey a just notion of it in the way of definition. There are however certain properties, which have accompanied slavery in most places; and by attending to these, we may always distinguish it, from the mild species of domestic service so common and well known in our own country. I shall shortly enumerate the most remarkable of those properties; particularly, such as characterize the species of slavery adopted in our American colonies, being that now under the consideration of this court. This I do, in order that a just conception may be formed, of the propriety with which I shall impute to slavery the most pernicious effects. Without such a previous explanation, the most solid objections to the permission of slavery will have the appearance of unmeaning, though specious, declamation.

Slavery always imports an obligation of perpetual service; an obligation, which only the consent of the master can dissolve.—It generally gives to the master, an arbitrary power of administering every sort of correction, however inhuman, not immediately affecting the life or limb of the slave: sometimes even these are left exposed to the arbitrary will of the master; or they are protected by fines, and other slight punishments, too inconsiderable to restrain the master's inhumanity.—It creates an incapacity of acquiring, except for the master's benefit.—It allows the master to alienate the person of the slave, in the same manner as other property.—Lastly, it descends from parent to child, with all its severe appendages.—On the most accurate comparison, there will be found nothing exaggerated in this representation of slavery. The description agrees with almost every kind of slavery, formerly or now existing; except only that remnant of the ancient slavery, which still lingers in some parts of Europe, but qualified and moderated in favour of the slave by the humane provision of modern times.

From this view of the condition of slavery, it will be easy to derive its destructive consequences.—It corrupts the morals of the master, by freeing him from those restraints with respect to his slave, so necessary for controul of the human passions, so beneficial in promoting the practice and confirming the habit of virtue.—It is dangerous to the master; because his oppression excites implacable resentment and hatred in the slave, and the extreme misery of his condition continually prompts him to risk the gratification of them, and his situation daily furnishes the opportunity.—To the slave it communicates all the afflictions of life, without leaving for him scarce any of its pleasures; and it depresses the excellence of his nature, by denying the ordinary means and motives of improvement.—It is dangerous to the state, by its corruption of those citizens on whom its prosperity depends; and by admitting within it a multitude of persons, who, being excluded from the common benefits of the constitution, are interested in scheming its destruction.—Hence it is, that slavery, in whatever light we view it, may be deemed a most pernicious institution: immediately so, to the unhappy person who suffers under it; finally so, to the master who triumphs in it, and to the state which allows it.

However, I must confess, that notwithstanding the force of the reasons against the allowance of domestic slavery, there are civilians of great credit, who insist upon its utility; founding themselves chiefly, on the supposed increase of robbers and beggars in consequence of its disuse. This opinion is favoured by Puffendorf (d) and Ulricus Huberus (e). In the dissertation on slavery prefixed to Potgiesserus on the German law de statu servorum, the opinion is examined minutely and defended. To this opinion I oppose those ill consequences, which I have already represented as almost necessarily flowing from the permission of domestic slavery; the numerous testimonies against it, which are to be found in ancient and modern history; and the example of those European nations, which have suppressed the use of it, after the experience of many centuries and in the more improved state of society. In justice also to the writers just mentioned I must add, that though they contend for the advantages of domestic slavery, they do not seem to approve of it, in the form and extent in which it has generally been received, but under limitations, which would certainly render it far more tolerable. Huberus in his Eunomia Romana (f) has a remarkable passage, in which, after recommending a mild slavery, he cautiously distinguishes it from that cruel species, the subject of commerce between Africa and America. His words are, loquor de servitute, qualis apud civiliores populos in usu fuit; nec enim exempla barbarorum, vel quæ nunc ab Africa in Americam fiunt hominum commercia, velim mihi quisquam objiciat.

(a) Dig. lib. 1. tit. 5. l. 4. f. 1. Servitus est constitutio juris gentium, quæ quis dominio alieno contra naturam subicitur. (b) Jur. Bell. lib. 2. c. 8. f. 27. (c) Inst.

Nat. L. b. 1. c. 20. p. 474.

(e) Prælect. Jur. Civ. pag. 16.

(d) Law of Nature and Nations, b. 6. c. 3. f. 10.

(f) See pag. 48.

Origin of slavery, and its general history
considered.

The great origin of slavery is captivity in war, though sometimes it has commenced by contract. It has been a question much agitated, whether either of these foundations of slavery is consistent with natural justice. It would be engaging in too large a field of enquiry, to attempt reasoning on the general lawfulness of slavery. I trust too, that the liberty, for which I am contending, doth not require such a disquisition; and am impatient to reach that part of my argument, in which I hope to prove slavery reprobated by the law of England as an inconvenient thing. Here therefore I shall only refer to some of the most eminent writers, who have examined, how far slavery founded on captivity or contract is conformable to the law of nature, and shall just hint at the reasons, which influence their several opinions. The antient writers suppose the right of killing an enemy vanquished in a just war; and thence infer the right of enslaving him. In this opinion, founded, as I presume, on the idea of punishing the enemy for his injustice, they are followed by Albericus Gentilis (g), Grotius (h), Puffendorf (i), Bynkershoek (j), and many others. But in The Spirit of Laws (k) the right of killing is denied, except in case of absolute necessity and for self-preservation. However, where a country is conquered, the author seems to admit the conqueror's right of enslaving for a short time, that is, till the conquest is effectually secured. Dr. Rutherford (l), not satisfied with the right of killing a vanquished enemy, infers the right of enslaving him, from the conqueror's right to a reparation in damages for the expences of the war. I do not know, that this doctrine has been examined; but I must observe, that it seems only to warrant a temporary slavery, till reparation is obtained from the property or personal labour of the people conquered. The lawfulness of slavery by contract is asserted to by Grotius and Puffendorf (m), who found themselves on the maintenance of the slave, which is the consideration moving from the master. But a very great writer of our own country, who is now living, controverts (n) the sufficiency of such a consideration. Mr. Locke (o) has framed another kind of argument against slavery by contract; and the substance of it is, that a right of preserving life is unalienable; that freedom from arbitrary power is essential to the exercise of that right; and therefore, that no man can by compact enslave himself. Dr. Rutherford (p) endeavours to answer Mr. Locke's objection, by insisting on various limitations to the despotism of the master; particularly, that he has no right to dispose of the slave's life at pleasure. But the misfortune of this reasoning is, that though the contract cannot justly convey an arbitrary power over the slave's life, yet it generally leaves him without a security against the exercise of that or any other power. I shall say nothing of slavery by birth; except that the slavery of the child must be unlawful, if that of the parent cannot be justified; and that when slavery is extended to the issue, as it usually is, it may be unlawful as to them, even though it is not so as to their parents. In respect to slavery used for the punishment of crimes against civil society, it is founded on the same necessity, as the right of inflicting other punishments; never extends to the offender's issue, and seldom is permitted to be domestic, the objects of it being generally employed in public works, as the galley-slaves are in France. Consequently this kind of slavery is not liable to the principal objections, which occur against slavery in general (q). Upon the whole of this controversy concerning slavery, I think myself warranted in saying, that the justice and lawfulness of every species of it, as it is generally constituted, except the limited one founded on the commission of crimes against civil society, is at least doubtful; that if in any case lawful, such circumstances are necessary to make it so, as seldom concur, and therefore render a just commencement of it barely possible; and that the oppressive manner in which it has generally commenced, the cruel means necessary to enforce its continuance, and the mischiefs ensuing from the permission of it, furnish very strong presumptions against its justice, and at all events evince the humanity and policy of those states, in which the use of it is no longer tolerated.

But however reasonable it may be to doubt the justice of domestic slavery, however convinced we may be of its ill effects, it must be confessed, that the practice is ancient, and has been almost universal. Its beginning may be dated from the remotest period, in which there are any traces of the history of mankind. It commenced in the barbarous state of society, and was retained, even when men were far advanced in civilization. The nations of antiquity most famous for countenancing the system of domestic slavery were the Jews, the Greeks, the Romans, and the antient Germans (r); amongst all of whom it prevailed, but in various degrees of severity. By the antient Germans it was continued in the countries they over-run; and so was transmitted to the various kingdoms and states, which arose in Europe out of the ruins of the Roman empire. At length however it fell into decline in most parts of Europe; and amongst the various causes, which contributed to this alteration, none were probably more effectual, than experience of the disadvantages of slavery; the difficulty of continuing it; and a persuasion that the cruelty and oppression almost necessarily incident to it were irreconcilable with the pure morality of the christian dispensation. The history of its decline in Europe has been traced by many eminent writers, particularly Bodin (s), Albericus Gentilis (t), Potgiesserus (u), Dr. Robertson (w), and Mr. Millar (x). It is sufficient here to say, that this great change began in Spain, according to Bodin, about the end of the eighth century, and was become general before the middle of the fourteenth century. Bartolus, the most famed commentator on the civil law in that period, represents slavery as in disuse; and the succeeding commentators hold much the same language. However, they must be understood with many restrictions and exceptions; and not to mean, that slavery was completely and universally abolished in Europe. Some modern civilians, not sufficiently attending to this circumstance, rather too hastily reprehend their predecessors for representing slavery as disused in Europe. The truth is, that the antient species of slavery by frequent emancipations became greatly diminished in extent; the remnant of it was considerably abated in severity; the disuse of the practice of enslaving captives taken in the wars between christian powers assisted in preventing the future increase of domestic slavery; and in some countries of Europe, particularly England, a still more effectual method, which I shall explain hereafter, was thought of to perfect the suppression of it. Such was the expiring state of domestic slavery in Europe at the commencement of the sixteenth century, when the discovery of America and of the western and eastern coasts of Africa gave occasion to the introduction of a new species of slavery. It took its rise from the Portuguese, who, in order to supply the Spaniards with persons able to sustain the fatigue of cultivating their new possessions in America, particularly the islands, opened a trade between Africa and America for the sale of negro slaves. This disgraceful commerce in the human species is said to have begun in the year 1508, when the first importation of negro slaves was made into Hispaniola from the Portuguese settlements on the western coasts of Africa (y). In 1540 the emperor Charles the fifth endeavoured to stop the progress of the negro slavery, by orders that all slaves in the American isles should be made free; and they were accordingly manumitted by Lagasca the governor of the country, on condition of continuing to labour for their masters. But this attempt proved unsuccessful, and on Lagasca's return to Spain domestic slavery revived and flourished as before (z). The expedient of having slaves for labour in America was not long peculiar to the Spaniards; being afterwards adopted by the other Europeans, as they acquired possessions there. In consequence of this general practice, negroes are become a very considerable article in the commerce between Africa and America; and domestic slavery has taken so deep a root in most of our own American colonies, as well as in those of other nations, that there is little probability of ever seeing it generally suppressed.

Here I conclude my observations on domestic slavery in general. I have exhibited a view of its nature, of its bad tendency, of its origin, of the arguments for and against its justice, of its decline in Europe, and the introduction of a new slavery by the European nations into their American colonies. I shall now examine the attempt to obtrude this new slavery into England. And here it will be material to observe, that if on the declaration of slavery in this and other countries of Europe where it is discountenanced, no means had been devised to obstruct the admission of a new slavery, it would have been vain and fruitless to have attempted superseding the antient species. But I hope to prove, that our ancestors at least were not so short-sighted; and that long and uninterrupted usage has established rules, as effectual to prevent the revival of slavery, as their humanity was successful in once suppressing it. I shall endeavour to shew, that the law of England never recognized any species of domestic slavery, except the antient one of villenage now expired, and has sufficiently provided against the introduction of a new slavery under the name of villenage (a) or any other denomination whatever. This proposition I hope to demonstrate from the following considerations.

I. I apprehend, that this will appear to be the law of England from the manner of making title to a villein.

The only slavery our law-books take the least notice of is that of a villein; by whom was meant, not the mere tenant by villain services, who might be free in his person, but the villein in blood and tenure; and as the English law has no provisions to regulate any other slavery, therefore no slavery can be lawful in England, except such as will consistently fall under the denomination of villenage.

The condition of a villein had most of the incidents which I have before described in giving the idea of slavery in general. His service was uncertain and indeterminate, such as his lord thought fit to require; or, as some of our ancient writers (b) express it, he knew not in the evening what he was to do in the morning, he was bound to do whatever he was commanded. He was liable to beating, imprisonment, and every other chastisement his lord could devise, except killing and maiming (c). He was incapable of acquiring property for his own benefit, the rule being quicquid ac-

Revival of domestic slavery in America.

The attempt to introduce the slavery of negroes into England examined.

Argument to prove, that the law of England will not admit a new slavery.

Argument from the manner of making title to a villein.

The condition of a villein.

(g) De Jur. Gent. cap. de servitute. (h) De Jur. Bell. l. 3. c. 7. f. 5. (i) Quest. Jur. Publ. l. 1. c. 3. (j) De Jur. Nat. Law, vol. 2. p. 573. and vol. 1. p. 481. (k) De Jur. Bell. l. 2. c. 5. f. 1. 2. and Puff. Law of Nature and Nations, l. 6. c. 3. f. 4. (l) See Blackst. Comment. 1st ed. vol. 1. p. 411. (m) See Locke on Government. 2nd edit. b. 2. c. 4. p. 215. (n) See his Inst. Nat. Law. vol. 2. p. 480. (o) Some writers there are, who deduce the lawfulness of domestic slavery from the practice of it amongst the Jews; and from some passages in the Old Testament which are thought to countenance it. See Vinn. in Instit. Titul. ed. l. 1. c. 3. p. 31. There are others who attempt to justify slavery by the New Testament, because it contains no direct precepts against it. See Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 434.—I shall not attempt to examine either of these opinions. (p) It appears by Cæsar and Tacitus, that the antient Germans had a kind of slaves before they emigrated from their own country.

See Cæsar de bell. Gall. lib. 6. cap. 13. & Tac. de mor. German. cap. 24. & 25. & Potgiess. de stat. servor. ap. Germ. lib. 2. cap. 1. (s) See his book De Republica, cap. 5. de imperio servitute. (t) Jur. Gent. cap. de servitute. (u) Jur. Germ. de statu servorum. (w) Life of the emperor Charles the 5th. vol. 1. (x) Observations on the Distinction of Ranks in Civil Society. See also Tayl. Elem. Civ. L. 434. to 439. (y) Ander. Hist. Comm. v. 1. p. 236. (z) See Bodin de republica. lib. 1. c. 5. (a) Villenage is used to express sometimes the tenure of lands held by villain-services, and sometimes the personal bondage of the villain; but throughout this argument it is applied in the latter sense only. (b) See the extracts from them in Co. Litt. 216. b. (c) See Termes de la Ley, ed. of 1562; see Villenage—Old Tenures, cap. Villenage—Arimb. Abr. Coram. 27. m. Bo. Abr. l. 2. m. Inst. 45. m. Co. Litt. 216. & 217.

quiritur servus acquiratur domino (d). He was himself the subject of property; as such saleable and transmissible. If he was a villein regardant, he passed with the manor or land to which he was annexed, but might be severed at the pleasure of his lord (e). If he was a villein in gross, he was an hereditament or a chattel real according to his lord's interest; being descendible to the heir where the lord was absolute owner; and transmissible to the executor where the lord had only a term of years in him (f). Lastly, the slavery extended to the issue, if both parents were villeins, or if the father only was a villein; our law deriving the condition of the child from that of the father, contrary to the Roman law, in which the rule was partus sequitur ventrem (g).

The origin of villenage is principally (h) to be derived from the wars between our British, Saxon, Danish and Norman ancestors, whilst they were contending for the possession of this country. Judge Fitzherbert, in his reading on the 4th of Edw. I. stat. 1. intitled Extenta manerii, supposes villenage to have commenced at the Conquest, by the distribution then made of the forfeited lands and of the vanquished inhabitants resident upon them (i). But there were many bondmen in England before the Conquest, as appears by the Anglo-Saxon laws regulating them; and therefore it would be nearer the truth to attribute the origin of villeins, as well to the preceding wars and revolutions in this country, as to the effects of the Conquest (k).

After the Conquest many things happily concurred, first to check the progress of domestic slavery in England; and finally to suppress it. The cruel custom of enslaving captives in war being abolished, from that time the accession of a new race of villeins was prevented, and the humanity policy and necessity of the times were continually wearing out the ancient race. Sometimes, no doubt, manumissions were freely granted; but they probably were much oftener extorted during the rage of the civil wars, so frequent before the reign of Henry the VIIth, about the forms of the constitution or the succession to the crown. Another cause, which greatly contributed to the extinction of villenage, was the discouragement of it by the courts of justice. They always presumed in favour of liberty, throwing the onus probandi upon the lord, as well in the writ of homine replegiando, where the villein was plaintiff, as in the nativo habendo, where he was defendant (l). Nonfuit of the lord after appearance in a nativo habendo, which was the writ for asserting the title of slavery, was a bar to another nativo habendo, and a perpetual enfranchisement; but nonfuit of the villein after appearance in a libertate probanda, which was one of the writs for asserting the claim of liberty against the lord, was no bar to another writ of the like kind (m). If two plaintiffs joined in a nativo habendo, nonfuit of one was a nonfuit of both; but it was otherwise in a libertate probanda (n). The lord could not prosecute for more than two villeins in one nativo habendo; but any number of villeins of the same blood might join in one libertate probanda (o). Manumissions were inferred from the slightest circumstances of mistake or negligence in the lord, from every act or omission which legal refinement could strain into an acknowledgment of the villein's liberty. If the lord vested the ownership of lands in the villein, received homage from him, or gave a bond to him, he was enfranchised. Suffering the villein to be on a jury, to enter into religion and be professed, or to stay a year and a day in ancient demesne without claim, were enfranchisements. Bringing ordinary actions against him, joining with him in actions, answering to his actions without protestation of villenage, imparling in them or assenting to his imparlance, or suffering him to be vouched without counterpleading the voucher, were also enfranchisements by implication of law (p). Most of the constructive manumissions I have mentioned were the received law, even in the reign of the first Edward (q). I have been the more particular in enumerating these instances of extraordinary favour to liberty; because the anxiety of our ancestors to emancipate the ancient villeins, so well accounts for the establishment of any rules of law calculated to obstruct the introduction of a new stock. It was natural, that the same opinions, which influenced to discountenance the former, should lead to the prevention of the latter.

I shall not attempt to follow villenage in the several stages of its decline; it being sufficient here to mention the time of its extinction, which, as all agree, happened about the latter end of Elizabeth's reign or soon after the accession of James (r). One of the last instances, in which villenage was insisted upon, was Crouch's case reported in Dyer and other books (s). An entry having been made by one Butler on some lands purchased by Crouch, the question was, whether he was Butler's villein regardant; and on two special verdicts, the one in ejectment Mich. 9th and 10th Eliz. and the other in assize Baster 11th Eliz. the claim of villenage was disallowed, one of the reasons given for the judgment in both being the want of seizin of the villein's person within 60 (t) years, which is the time limited by the 32d of Hen. VIII. chap. 2. in all cases of hereditaments claimed by prescription (u). This is generally said to have been the last case of villenage; but there are four subsequent cases in print. One was in Hillary 18th of Elizabeth (w); another was a judgment in Easter 1st of James (x); the third, which was never determined, happened in Trinity 8th of James (y); and the fourth was so late as Hillary 15th of James (z). From the 15th of James the first, being more than 150 years ago, the claim of villenage has not been heard of in our courts of justice; and nothing can be more notorious, than that the race of persons, who were once the objects of it, was about that time completely worn out by the continual and united operation of deaths and manumissions.

But though villenage itself is obsolete, yet fortunately those rules, by which the claim of it was regulated, are not yet buried in oblivion. These the industry of our ancestors has transmitted; nor let us their posterity despise the reverend legacy. By a strange progress of human affairs, the memory of slavery expired now furnishes one of the chief obstacles to the introduction of slavery attempted to be revived; and the venerable reliques of the learning relative to villenage, so long consigned to gratify the investigating curiosity of the antiquary, or used as a splendid appendage to the ornaments of the scholar, must now be drawn forth from their faithful repositories for a more noble purpose; to inform and guide the sober judgment of this court, and as I trust to preserve this country from the miseries of domestic slavery.

The several remedies against and for one claimed as a villein are now so little understood, that perhaps a short account of them may be acceptable; more particularly as, by a right conception of them, it will be more easy to determine on the force of the argument drawn against the revival of slavery from the rules concerning villenage.

The lord's remedy for a fugitive villein was, either by seizure, or by suing out a writ of nativo habendo, or nefty, as it is sometimes called.

1. If the lord seized, the villein's most effectual mode of recovering liberty was by the writ of homine replegiando; which had great advantage over the writ of habeas corpus. In the habeas corpus the return cannot be contested by pleading against the truth of it, and consequently on a habeas corpus the question of liberty cannot go to a jury for trial; though indeed the party making a false return is liable to an action for damages, and punishable by the court for a contempt; and the court will hear affidavits against the truth of the return, and if not satisfied with it restore the party to his liberty. Therefore, if to a habeas corpus villenage was returned as the cause of detainer, the person for whom the writ was sued at the utmost could only have obtained his liberty for the time, and could not have had a regular and final trial of the question. But in the homine replegiando it was otherwise; for if villenage was returned, an alias issued directing the sheriff to replevy the party on his giving security to answer the claim of villenage afterwards, and the plaintiff might declare for false imprisonment and lay damages, and on the defendant's pleading the villenage had the same opportunity of contesting it, as when impleaded by the lord in a nativo habendo. See Fitzb. N. Br. 66. F. & Lib. Intrat. 176. a. 177. b.

2. If the lord sued out a nativo habendo, and the villenage was denied, in which case the sheriff could not seize the villein, the lord was then to enter his plaint in the county court; and as the sheriff was not allowed to try the question of villenage in his court, the lord could not have any benefit from the writ, without removing the cause by the writ of pone into the King's Bench or Common Pleas. [For the count pleading and judgment in the nativo habendo after the removal, see Rast. Entr. 436, 437.] It is to be observed, that the lord's right of seizure continued notwithstanding his having sued out a nativo habendo, unless the villein brought a libertate probanda. This writ, which did not lie except upon a nativo habendo previously sued out, was for removal of the lord's plaint in the nativo habendo for trial before the justices in eyre or those of the King's Bench, and also for protecting the villein from seizure in the mean time. This latter effect seems to have been the chief reason for suing out the libertate probanda; and therefore after the 25th of Edw. 3. stat. 5. c. 18. which altered the common law, and gives a power of seizure to the lord, notwithstanding the pendency of a libertate probanda, that writ probably fell much into disuse, though subsequent cases, in which it was brought, are to be found in the year-books. See Fitzb. Nat. Br. 77. to 79. & 11 Hen. 4. 49. (m) Co. Litt. 139. (n) Co. Litt. 139. (o) Fitzb. Nat. Br. 28. C. D. (p) See Litt. fed. 202 to 209. & 2 Ro. Abr. 735, 736, & 737. (q) See Brit. cap. 31. & Mirr. cap. 4. § 13. (r) See Sir Thomas Smith's Commonwealth, b. 2. c. 10. and Barrington's Observ. on Ant. Stat. ad. ed. p. 229. (s) See Dy. 266. pl. 21. & 223. pl. 32. (t) Accord. Bro. Read. on the Stat. of Limitat. 32 Hen. 8. page 17. (u) Before this statute of Hen. the 8th. the time of limitation seems to have been the coronation of Hen. 3. as appears by the form of the nativo habendo; though in other writs of right the limitation by 31 E. 1. c. 39. was from the commencement of the reign of Rich. the 1st. (w) See Co. Entr. 406. b. (x) Telf. 2. (y) This case is only to be found in Hugh's Abridgment, 119. Villenage, § 1. 23. (z) Noy, 27.

(d) Co. Litt. 117. a. — The words, in pleading seizin of villein-service, are very expressive of the lord's power over the villein's property. In 1 E. 2. 4. it is pleaded, that the lord was seized of the villein and his ancestors come assise recbat de char & de sank & de fille n'rier & de eux tailler baut & bas, &c. The form in 3 E. 2. 13. is, come de nos vileynes en fessant de luy nostre provost en grant de luy recbat de char & de sank & redemption pur fil & filz marier de luy & de ces nans & a tailler baut & bas a notre volente. In the first of the above forms there is evidently a misprint; and the reading should be a faire recbat instead of affaire recbat. As to the word provost in the second form, it seems to signify plunder, and perhaps the print should be prois or proye instead of provost. I was led to this conjecture by the following proverb in Cotgrave's French Dictionary, qui a le vilain il a la proye. See Cotgr. ed. of 1673. voc. proye. However, in the Latin Entries the word provost is translated propositum, which in a barbarous sense of the word may be construed to signify will or pleasure, and will make the passage intelligible. In some Entries provost is translated propositus; but this word cannot be understood in any sense that will make this use of it intelligible.

The forms of pleading seizin of villein-services in the Latin Entries are very similar to those I have extracted from the year-books. See Rast. Entr. 402. a.

(e) Litt. fed. 181. (f) Bro. Abr. Villenage, 60. — Co. Litt. 117. (g) Co. Litt. 123. Antiently our law seems to have been very uncertain in this respect. See Glanv. lib. 3. c. 6. Mirr. c. 2. f. 38. Britt. c. 31. But the writers in the reign of Henry the 6th agree, that our law was as here represented; and from the plea of bastardy, which was held to be a peremptory answer to the allegation of villenage so early as the reign of Edward the 3d. I conjecture, that the law was settled in the time of his father. See Fortesc. laud. leg. Angl. c. 42. Litt. fed. 187. — 43 E. 3. 4. & Bro. Abr. Villenage, 7. (h) I do not say wholly, because probably there were some slaves in England before the first arrival of the Saxons; and also they and the Danes might bring some few from their own country. (i) See the extract from Fitzherbert's reading in Barrington's Observations on Ant. Stat. ad. ed. p. 237. (k) See Spelm. Gloss. voc. Latini & Servus. Jomn. on Gavelk. 65. and the index to Will. Leg. Saxon. tit. Servus.

(l) See Lib. Intrat. 176. a. 177. b. & Bro. Abr. Villenage, 66. It seems however, that if after a nativo habendo brought by the lord, the villein, instead of waiting for the lord's proceeding upon it, sued out a libertate probanda to remove the question of villenage for trial before the justices in eyre, on the return of it he was to produce some proof of his free condition; and that if he failed, he and his pledges were amerced. But this failure did not entitle the lord to any benefit from his nativo habendo, and therefore, if he proceeded in it, and could not prove the villenage, the judgment was for the villein; or if the lord did not proceed, a nonfuit, which was equally fatal to the lord's claim, was the necessary consequence. See 47 H. 3. It. Dec. Fitz. Abr. Villenage, 39. In truth, the requisition of proof from the villein on the libertate probanda, and the amercement for want of it, seem to have been mere forms; for, as Fitzherbert says, in explaining the effect of the libertate probanda, 'the record shall be sent before the justices in eyre, and the lord shall declare thereupon, and the villein shall make his defence and plead thereunto, and the villein shall not declare upon the writ of libertate probanda, nor shall any thing be done thereupon; for that writ is but a supplicatio to the justices for the time, and to adjourn the record and the writ of nativo habendo before the justices in eyre.' Fitz. Nat. Br. 77. D. Upon the whole therefore I may I think be safely asserted, that in all cases of villenage the onus probandi was laid upon the lord.

Winner of making title to a villain explained.

Winner of making title to a villain explained.

1. The patrons as by no ot

2. In former or year-book

3. The and allow family, on

Edward the third; and ever since, the entry of such production on the rolls of the court has been mere form, being always with an &c. and without naming the witnesses. But in the nativo habendo the actual pro-

Flyzb. Abr. Villenage, 36 & 37.—Also Britton lays, un masse sauns plusurs nest mie receivable. Britt. Wingate's ed. p. 82. It is remarkable that females, whether sole or married, were not receivable to prove villenage against men. Saunk de un home ne puit ne doit estre trie par femmes. Britt. Wing. ed. p. 82. The reason assigned is more

(a) Sect.
ne peut être
sup. 31. p. 7
bande, and

in addition to the proofs already mentioned, that no slavery having had commencement within time of memory was lawful in England; and that if one ancestor could be found whose blood was unpolluted with the stain of slavery, the title of villenage was no longer capable of being sustained.

Such were the striking peculiarities in the manner of making title to a villein, and of contesting the question of liberty; and it is scarce possible to attend to the enumeration of them, without anticipating me in the inferences I have to make.—The law of England only knows slavery by birth; it requires prescription in making title to a slave; it receives on the lord's part no testimony except such as proves the slavery to have been always in the blood and family, on the villein's part every testimony which proves the slavery to have been once out of his blood and family; it allows nothing to sustain the slavery except what shews its commencement beyond the time of memory, every thing to defeat the slavery which evinces its commencement within the time of memory. But in our American colonies and other countries slavery may be by captivity or contract as well as by birth; no prescription is requisite; nor is it necessary that slavery should be in the blood and family, and immemorial. Therefore the law of England is not applicable to the slavery of our American colonies, or of other countries.—If the law of England would permit the introduction of a slavery commencing out of England, the rules it prescribes for trying the title to a slave would be applicable to such a slavery; but they are not so; and from thence it is evident that the introduction of such a slavery is not permitted by the law of England.—The law of England then excludes every slavery not commencing in England, every slavery though commencing there not being antient and immemorial. Villenage is the only slavery which can possibly answer to such a description, and that has been long expired by the deaths and emancipations of all those who were once the objects of it. Consequently there is now no slavery which can be lawful in England, until the legislature shall interpose its authority to make it so.

This is plain, unadorned, and direct reasoning; it wants no aid from the colours of art, or the embellishments of language; it is composed of necessary inferences from facts and rules of law, which do not admit of contradiction; and I think, that it must be vain to attempt shaking a superstructure raised on such solid foundations.

As to the other arguments I have to adduce against the revival of domestic slavery, I do confess that they are less powerful, being merely presumptive. But then I must add, that they are strong and violent presumptions; such as furnish more certain grounds of judicial decision, than are to be had in many of the cases which become the subjects of legal controversy. For 2dly. I infer that the law of England will not permit a new slavery, from the fact of there never yet having been any slavery but villenage, and from the actual extinction of that antient slavery. If a new slavery could have lawfully commenced here, or lawfully have been introduced from a foreign country, is there the most remote probability, that in the course of so many centuries a new slavery should never have arisen? If a new race of slaves could have been introduced under the denomination of villeins, if a new slavery could have been from time to time engrafted on the antient stock, would the laws of villenage have once become obsolete for want of objects, or would not a successive supply of slaves have continued their operation to the present times? But notwithstanding the vast extent of our commercial connections, the fact is confessedly otherwise. The antient slavery has once expired; neither natives nor foreigners have yet succeeded in the introduction of a new slavery; and from thence the strongest presumption arises, that the law of England doth not permit such an introduction.

3dly. I insist, that the unlawfulness of introducing a new slavery into England, from our American colonies or any other country, is deducible from the rules of the English law concerning contracts of service. The law of England will not permit any man to enslave himself by contract. The utmost, which our law allows, is a contract to serve for life; and some perhaps may even doubt the validity of such a contract, there being no determined cases directly affirming its lawfulness. In the reign of Henry the fourth (g), there is a case of debt, brought by a servant against the master's executors, on a retainer to serve for term of life in peace and war for one hundred shillings a-year; but it was held, that debt did not lie for want of a speciality; which, as was agreed, would not have been necessary in the case of a common labourer's salary, because, as the case is explained by Brooke in abridging it, the latter is bound to serve by statute (h). This case is the only one I can find, in which a contract to serve for life is mentioned; and even in this case, there is no judicial decision on the force of it. Nor did the nature of the case require any opinion upon such a contract; the action not being to establish the contract against the servant, but to enforce payment against the master's executors for arrears of salary in respect of service actually performed; and therefore this case will scarce bear any inference in favour of a contract to serve for life. Certain also it is, that a service for life in England is not usual, except in the case of a military person; whose service, though in effect for life, is rather so by the operation of the yearly acts for regulating the army, and of the perpetual act for governing the navy, than in consequence of any express agreement. However, I do not mean absolutely to deny the lawfulness of agreeing to serve for life; nor will the inferences I shall draw from the rules of law concerning servitude by contract, be in the least affected by admitting such agreements to be lawful. The law of England may perhaps give effect to a contract of service for life; but that is the ne plus ultra of servitude by contract in England. It will not allow the servant to invest the master with an arbitrary power of correcting imprisoning (i) or alienating him; it will not permit him to renounce the capacity of acquiring and enjoying property, or to transmit a contract of service to his issue (k). In other words, it will not permit the servant to incorporate into his contract the ingredients of slavery. And why is it that the law of England rejects a contract of slavery? The only reason to be assigned is, that the law of England, acknowledging only the antient slavery which is now expired, will not allow the introduction of a new species, even though founded on consent of the party. The same reason operates with double force against a new slavery founded on captivity in war, and introduced from another country. Will the law of England condemn a new slavery commencing by consent of the party, and at the same time approve of one founded on force, and most probably on oppression also? Will the law of England invalidate a new slavery commencing in this country, when the title to the slavery may be fairly examined; and at the same time give effect to a new slavery introduced from another country, when disproof of the slavery must generally be impossible? This would be rejecting and receiving a new slavery at the same moment; rejecting slavery the least odious, receiving slavery the most odious; and by such an inconsistency, the wisdom and justice of the English law would be completely dishonoured. Nor will this reasoning be weakened by observing that our law permitted villenage, which was a slavery confessed to originate from force and captivity in war; because that was a slavery coeval with the first formation of the English constitution, and consequently had a commencement here prior to the establishment of those rules which the common law furnishes against slavery by contract.

Having thus explained the three great arguments which I oppose to the introduction of domestic slavery from our American colonies, or any foreign country, it is now proper to enquire, how far the subject is affected by the cases and judicial decisions since or just before the extinction of villenage.

The first case on the subject is one mentioned in Mr. Rushworth's Historical Collections (l); and it is there said, that in the eleventh of Elizabeth, one Cartwright brought a slave from Russia, and would scourge him; for which he was questioned; and it was resolved, that England was too pure an air for a slave to breathe in. In order to judge what degree of credit is due to the representation of this case, it will be proper to state from whom Mr. Rushworth reports it. In 1637, there was a proceeding by information in the Star-Chamber against the famous John Lilburne, for printing and publishing a libel; and for his contempt in refusing to answer interrogatories, he was by order of the court imprisoned till he should answer, and also whipped, pilloried, and fined. His imprisonment continued till 1640, when the Long Parliament began. He was then released, and the house of commons impeached the judges of the Star-Chamber for their proceedings against Lilburne. In speaking to this impeachment, the managers of the commons cited the case of the Russian slave. Therefore the truth of the case doth not depend upon John Lilburne's assertion, as the learned Observer on the Antient Statutes (m) seems to apprehend; but rests upon the credit due to the managers of the commons. When this is considered, and that the year of the reign in which the case happened is mentioned, with the name of the person who brought the slave into England; that not above 72 or 73 years had intervened between the fact and the relation of it; and also that the case could not be supposed to have any influence on the fate of the impeachment against the judges; I see no great objection to a belief of the case. If the account of it is true, the plain inference from it is, that the slave was become free by his arrival in England. Any other construction renders the case unintelligible, because scourging, or even correction of a severer kind, was allowed by the law of England to the lord in the punishment of his villein; and consequently, if our law had recognized the Russian slave, his master would have been justified in scourging him.

The first case in our printed Reports is that of Butts against Penny (n), which is said to have been adjudged by the court of King's Bench in Trinity term, 29th of Charles the second. It was an action of trover for 10 (o) negroes; and there was a special verdict, finding, that the negroes were infidels, subjects to an infidel prince, and usually bought and sold in India as merchandize by the custom amongst merchants, and that the plaintiff had bought them, and was in possession of them; and that the defendant took them out of his possession. The court held, that negroes being usually bought and sold amongst merchants in India, and being infidels (p), there might be a property in them sufficient to maintain the action; and it is said that judgment nisi was given for the plaintiff, but

(g) 2 H. 4. 14. (h) Bro. Abr. Dett. 53. (i) Lord Hobart says, the body of a freeman cannot be made subject to distress or imprisonment by contract, but only by judgment. Hob. 61. I shall have occasion to make use of this authority again in a subsequent part of this argument. (k) Mr. Molloy thinks, that servants may contract to serve for life; but then he adds, but at this day there is no contract of the master can oblige his posterity to an hereditary service; nor can such as accept these servants surrender the ancient right or dominion over them, so that so much as to set an extraordinary rigour, without subjecting themselves to the law. Moll. de Jur. Marit. lib. 2. c. 1. §. 7. p. 388.

(l) Rushw. v. 2. p. 458. (m) Barr. Observ. on Ant. Stat. ad edit. p. 247. (n) 1 Ld. Raym. 235. See Hill. 29 Char. II. A. R. ret. 1116. (o) According to Lenth, the action was for 200 negroes; but it is a mistake, the record only mentioning 10. (p) According to this reasoning, it is lawful to have an infidel slave, but not a Christian one. This distinction, between persons of opposite persuasions in religion, is very antient. Amongst the Jews, the condition of the Hebrew slave had many advantages over that of a slave of foreign extraction. [See 2d. 37. of the dissertation on slavery prefixed to Potgiesser. Jus Germ. de Stat. Serv.] Formerly too the Mahometans pretended, that their religion did not allow them to enslave such as should embrace it; but, as Bodin says, the opinion was little attended to in practice. (See Bodin. de Republica, lib. 1. cap. 3. de imperio servili.) A like distinction was made in very early times amongst Christians; and the author of the Mirror in one place expresses himself, as if the distinction had been adopted by the law of England. (See the Mirror. c. 2. §. 28.) But our other antient writers do not take the least notice of such a distinction, nor do I find it once mentioned in the year books; which are therefore strong presumptive evidence against the reception of it in our courts of justice as law; however the opinion may have prevailed amongst divines and others in speculation. See Barr. Observ. Ant. Stat. ad edit. p. 239.

that on the prayer of the counsel for the defendant to be further heard in the case, time was given till the next term. In this way our Reporters state the case; and if nothing further appeared, it might be cited as an authority, though a very feeble one, to shew that the master's property in his negro slaves continues after their arrival in England, and consequently that the negroes are not emancipated by being brought here. But having a suspicion of some defect in the state of the case, I desired an examination of the roll (q); and according to the account of it given to me, though the declaration is for negroes generally in London, without any mention of foreign parts, yet from the special verdict it appears, that the action was really brought to recover the value of negroes, of which the plaintiff had been possessed, not in England, but in India. Therefore this case would prove nothing in favour of slavery in England, even if it had received the court's judgment, which however it never did receive, there being only an ulterius consilium on the roll.

The next case of trover was between Gelly and Cleve in the Common-Pleas, and was adjudged in Michaelmas term 5th of William and Mary. In the report of this case (r), the court is said to have held, that trover will lie for a negro boy, because negroes are heathens; and therefore a man may have property in them, and the court without averment will take notice that they are heathens. On examination of the roll (s), I find that the action was brought for various articles of merchandize as well as the negro; and I suspect, that in this case, as well as the former one of Butts and Penny, the action was for a negro in America; but the declaration being laid generally, and there being no special verdict, it is now too late to ascertain the fact. I will therefore suppose the action to have been for a negro in England, and admit that it tends to shew the lawfulness of having negro slaves in England. But then if the case is to be understood in this sense, I say that it appears to have been adjudged without solemn argument; that there is no reasoning in the report of this case to impeach the principles of law, on which I have argued against the revival of slavery in England; that unless those principles can be controverted with success, it will be impossible to sustain the authority of such a case; and further, that it stands contradicted by a subsequent case, in which the question of slavery came directly before the court.

The only other reported case of trover is that of Smith against Gould, which was adjudged Mich. 4 Ann in the King's Bench. In trover (t) for several things; and among the rest for a negro, not guilty was pleaded, and there was a verdict for the plaintiff with several damages, 30*l.* being given for the negro; and after argument on a motion in arrest of judgment, the court held, that trover did not lie for a negro. If in this case the action was for a negro in England, the judgment in it is a direct contradiction to the case of Gelly and Cleve. But I am inclined to think, that in this, as well as in the former cases of trover, the negroes for which the actions were brought, were not in England; and that in all of them the question was not on the lawfulness of having negro slaves in England, but merely whether trover was the proper kind of action for recovering the value of a negro unlawfully detained from the owner in America and India. The things, for which trover in general lies, are those in which the owner has an absolute property, without limitation of the use of them; whereas the master's power over the slave doth not extend to his life, and consequently the master's property in the slave is in some degree qualified and limited. I am willing to suppose, that the cases of trover were determined on this distinction, and therefore I will not insist upon any benefit from them in argument; though the last of them, if it will bear any material inference, is certainly an authority against slavery in England.

The next case I shall state is a judgment by the King's Bench in Hilary 8th and 9th of William the IIIrd. Trespass vi et armis was brought by Clumberlain (u) against Harvey, for taking a negro of the value of 100*l.* and by the special verdict it appears, that the negro, for which the plaintiff sued, had been brought from Barbadoes into England, and was here baptized without the plaintiff's consent, and at the time when the trespass was alledged, was in the defendant's service, and had 6*l.* a year for wages. In the argument of this case, three questions were made. One was, whether the facts in the verdict sufficiently shewed that the plaintiff had ever had a vested property in the negro (x): another was, whether that property was not devested by bringing the negro into England: and the third was, whether trespass for taking a man of the value of 100*l.* was the proper action. After several arguments, the court gave judgment against the plaintiff. But I do confess, that in the Reports we have of the case, no opinion on the great question of slavery is mentioned; it becoming unnecessary to declare one, as the court held, that the action should have been an action to recover damages for the loss of the service, and not to recover the value of the slave. Of this case, therefore, I shall not attempt to avail myself.

But the next case, which was an action of indebitatus assumpsit in the King's Bench by Smith against Browne and Cowper (xx), is more to the purpose. The plaintiff declared for 20*l.* for a negro sold by him to the defendants in London; and on motion in arrest of judgment, the court held, that the plaintiff should have averred in the declaration, that the negro at the time of the sale was in Virginia, and that negroes by the laws and statutes of Virginia are saleable (y). In these words there is a direct opinion against the slavery of negroes in England: for if it was lawful, the negro would have been saleable and transferable here, as well as in Virginia; and stating, that the negro at the time of the sale was in Virginia, could not have been essential to the sufficiency of the declaration. But the influence of this case, on the question of slavery, is not by mere inference from the court's opinion on the plaintiff's mode of declaring in his action. The language of the judges, in giving that opinion, is remarkably strong against the slavery of negroes, and every other new slavery attempted to be introduced into England. Mr. justice Powell says, In a villein the owner has a property; the villein is an inheritance; but the law takes no notice of a negro. Lord chief justice Holt is still more explicit; for he says, that one may be a villein in England; but that as soon as a negro comes into England, he becomes free. The words of these two great judges contain the whole of the proposition, for which I am contending. They admit property in the villein; they deny property in the negro. They assent to the old slavery of the villein: they disallow the new slavery of the negro.

I beg leave to mention one other case, chiefly for the sake of introducing a strong expression of the late lord chancellor Northampton. It is the case of Shanley and Hervey, which was determined in Chancery some time in March 1762. The question was between a negro and his former master, who claimed the benefit of a donatio mortis causa made to the negro by a lady, on whom he had attended as servant for several years by the permission of his master. Lord Northampton, as I am informed by a friend who was present at the hearing of the cause, disallowed the master's claim with great warmth, and gave costs to the negro. He particularly said, As soon as a man puts foot on English ground, he is free: a negro may maintain an action against his master for ill usage, and may have a habeas corpus, if restrained of his liberty (z).

Having observed upon all the cases, in which there is any thing to be found relative to the present lawfulness of slavery in England; it is time to consider the force of the several objections, which are likely to be made, as well to the inferences I have drawn from the determined cases, as to the general doctrine I have been urging.

1. It may be asked, Why it is that the law should permit the ancient slavery of the villein, and yet disallow a slavery of modern commencement?

To this I answer, that villenage sprung up amongst our ancestors in the early and barbarous state of society; that afterwards more humane customs and wiser opinions prevailed, and by their influence rules were established for checking the progress of slavery; and that it was thought most prudent to effect this great object, not instantaneously by declaring every slavery unlawful, but gradually by excluding a new race of slaves, and encouraging the voluntary emancipation of the ancient race. It would have seemed an arbitrary exertion of power, by a retrospective law to have annihilated property, which, however inconvenient, was already vested by lawful means; but it was policy without injustice to restrain future acquisitions.

2 It may be said, that as there is nothing to hinder persons of free condition from becoming slaves by acknowledging themselves to be villeins; therefore a new slavery is not contrary to law.

The force of this objection arises from a supposition, that confession or acknowledgment of villenage is a legal mode of creating slavery; but on examining the nature of the acknowledgment, it will be evident, that the law doth not permit villenage to be acknowledged for any such purpose. The term itself imports something widely different from creation; the acknowledgment, or confession of a thing, implying that the thing acknowledged or confessed has a previous existence; and in all cases, criminal as well as civil, the law intends, that no man will confess an untruth to his own disadvantage, and therefore never requires proof of that which is admitted to be true by the person interested to deny it. Besides, it is not allowable to institute a proceeding for the avowed and direct purpose of acknowledging villenage; for the law will not allow the confession of it to be received, except where villenage is alledged in an adverse way; that is, only (a) when villenage was pleaded by the lord against one whom he claimed as his villein; or by the villein against strangers, in order to excuse himself from defending actions to which his lord only was the proper party; or when one villein was produced to prove villenage against another of the same blood who denied the slavery. If the acknowledgment had been permitted as a creation of slavery, would the law have required, that the confession should be made in a mode so indirect and circuitous as a suit professedly commenced for a different purpose? If confession is a creation of slavery, it certainly must be deemed a creation by consent; but if confession had been adopted as a voluntary creation of slavery, would the law have restrained the courts of justice from receiving confession, except in an adverse way? If confession had been allowed as a mode of creating slavery, would the law have received the confession of one person as good evidence of slavery in another of the same blood merely because they were descended from the same common ancestor? This last circumstance is of itself decisive; because it necessarily implied, that a slavery confessed was a slavery by descent.

On a consideration of these circumstances attending the acknowledgment of villenage; I think it impossible to doubt its being merely a con-

Objections likely to be made to the arguments against the present lawfulness of slavery in England, stated and answered.

(q) The roll was examined for me by a friend. (r) 1. L. Raym. 147. (s) See Trin. 5 W. & M. C. B. Roll. No. 407. (t) 2. Salk. 666.—See also, 1. L. Raym. 147.

(u) 1. L. Raym. 146. Carth. 396. & 5. Mod. 186. (x) The facts which occasioned this question, I have omitted in the state of the case; because they are not material to the question of slavery in England. (xx) 2. Salk. 666. The case is not reported in any other book; and in Salkeld the time when the case was determined is omitted. But it appears to have been in the King's Bench, by the mention of Lord Ch. J. Holt and Mr. J. Powell. (y) The reporter adds, that the court directed, that the plaintiff should amend his declaration. But after verdict it cannot be the practice to permit so essential an amendment; and therefore the reporter must have misunderstood the court's direction. (z) In the above enumeration of cases, I have omitted one; which was Sir Thomas Grantham's case in the Vol. XI.

Common-Pleas, Hilary 2 & 3 Jam. 2. Being short, I shall give it in the words of the Report. He bought a monster in the Indies, which was a man of that country, who had the shape of a child growing out of his breast as an excrescency all but his head. This man he brought hither, and exposed to the sight of the people for profit. The Indian turns Christian and was baptized, and was detained from his master, who brought a homine replegiando. The sheriff returned, that he had replevied the body; but doth not say the body in which Sir Thomas claimed a property; whereupon he was ordered to amend his return, and then the court of Common-Pleas bailed him. 3. Mod. 120.—It doth not appear, that the return was ever argued, or that the court gave any opinion on this case; and therefore nothing can be inferred from it. (a) Co. Litt. 121. b.

session of that antiquity in the slavery, which was otherwise necessary to be proved. But if a doubt can be entertained, the opinions of the greatest lawyers may be produced to remove it, and to shew, that, in consideration of law, the person confessing was a villein by descent and in blood. In the year-book of 43 E. III. (b), it is laid down as a general rule, that when one claims any man as his villein, it shall be intended always that he is his villein by reason of stock. Lord chief justice Hobart considers villenage by confession in this way, and says (c), the confession in the court of record is not so much a creation, as it is in supposal of law a declaration of rightful villenage before, as a confession in other actions. Mr. Serjeant Rolle too, in his abridgment, when he is writing on villenage by acknowledgment, uses very strong words to the same effect. He says in one place (d), it seems intended that title is made that he should be a villein by descent; and in another place (e), it seems intended that title is made by prescription, wherefore the issue should also be villains. The only instance I can find, of a nativo habendo founded on a previous acknowledgment of villenage, is a strong authority to the same purpose. In the 19th of Edward II. (f) the dean and chapter of London brought a writ of neifty to recover a villein, and concluded their declaration with mentioning his acknowledgment of the villenage on a former occasion, instead of producing their suit, or witnesses, as was necessary when the villenage had not been confessed: but notwithstanding the acknowledgment, the plaintiffs alleged a seizure of the villein with splices, or receipt of profits from him, in the usual manner. This case is another proof, that a seizure previous to the acknowledgment was the real foundation of the lord's claim, and that the acknowledgment was merely used to stop the villein from contesting a fact which had been before solemnly confessed. However, I do admit, that under the form of acknowledgment there was a possibility of collusively creating slavery. But this was not practicable without the concurrence of the person himself who was to be the sufferer by the fraud; and it was not probable, that many persons should be found so base in mind, so false to themselves, as to sell themselves and their posterity, and to renounce the common protection and benefit of the law for a bare maintenance, which, by the wise provision of the law in this country, may always be had by the most needy and distressed, on terms infinitely less ignoble and severe. It should also be remembered, that such a collusion could scarcely be wholly prevented, so long as any of the real and unmanumitted descendants from the ancient villeins remained; because there would have been the same possibility of defrauding the law on the actual trial of villenage, as by a previous acknowledgment. Besides, if collusions of this sort had ever become frequent, the legislature might have prevented their effect by an extraordinary remedy. It seems, that antiently such frauds were sometimes practised; and that free persons, in order to evade the trial of actions brought against them, alleged that they were villeins to a stranger to the suit, which, on account of the great improbability that a confession so disadvantageous should be void of truth, was a plea the common law did not suffer the plaintiff to deny. But a remedy was soon applied, and the statute of (g) 37 E. III. was made, giving to the plaintiff a liberty of contesting such an allegation of villenage. If in these times it should be endeavoured to revive domestic slavery in England, by a like fraudulent confession of villenage, surely so unworthy an attempt, so gross an evasion of the law, would excite in this court the strongest disapprobation and resentment, and from parliament would receive an immediate and effectual remedy; I mean, a law declaring that villenage, as is most notoriously the fact, has been long expired for want of real objects, and therefore making void all precedent confessions of it, and prohibiting the courts of justice from recording a confession of villenage in future.

3. It may be objected, that though it is not usual in the wars between christian powers to enslave prisoners, yet that some nations, particularly the several states on the coast of Barbary, still adhere to that inhuman practice; and that in case of our being at war with them, the law of nations would justify our king in retaliating; and consequently, that the law of England has not excluded the possibility of introducing a new slavery, as the arguments against it suppose.

But this objection may be easily answered; for if the arguments against a new slavery in England are well founded, they reach the king as well as his subjects. If it has been at all times the policy of the law of England not to recognize any slavery but the antient one of the villein, which is now expired; we cannot consistently attribute to the executive power a prerogative of rendering that policy ineffectual. It is true, that the law of nations may give a right of retaliating on an enemy, who enslaves his captives in war; but then the exercise of this right may be prevented or limited by the law of any particular country. A writer of eminence (h) on the law of nations, has a passage very applicable to this subject. His words are, If the civil law of any nation does not allow of slavery, prisoners of war who are taken by that nation cannot be made slaves. He is justified in his observation not only by the reason of the thing, but by the practice of some nations, where slavery is as unlawful as it is in England. The Dutch (i) when at war with the Algerines, Tunisians, or Tripolitans, make no scruple of retaliating on their enemies; but slavery not being lawful in their European dominions, they have usually sold their prisoners of war as slaves in Spain, where slavery is still permitted.

To this example I have only to add, that I do not know an instance, in which a prerogative of having captive slaves in England has ever been assumed by the crown; and it being also the policy of our law not to admit a new slavery, there appears neither reason nor fact to suppose the existence of a royal prerogative to introduce it.

4. Another objection will be, that there are English acts of parliament, which give a sanction to the slavery of negroes; and therefore that it is now lawful, whatever it might be antecedently to those statutes.

The statutes in favour of this objection are the 5 Geo. II. c. 7. (k) which makes negroes in America liable to all debts, simple-contract as well as specialty, and the statutes regulating the African trade, particularly the 32 Geo. II. c. 31. which in the preamble recites, that the trade to Africa is advantageous to Great Britain, and necessary for supplying its colonies with negroes. But the utmost which can be said of these statutes is, that they impliedly authorize the slavery of negroes in America; and it would be a strange thing to say, that permitting slavery there, includes a permission of slavery here. By an unhappy concurrence of circumstances, the slavery of negroes is thought to have become necessary in America; and therefore in America our legislature has permitted the slavery of negroes. But the slavery of negroes is unnecessary in England, and therefore the legislature has not extended the permission of it to England; and not having done so, how can this court be warranted to make such an extension?

5. The slavery of negroes being admitted to be lawful now in America, however questionable its first introduction there might be, it may be urged, that the lex loci ought to prevail, and that the master's property in the negro as a slave, having had a lawful commencement in America, cannot be justly varied by bringing him into England.

I shall answer this objection by explaining the limitation, under which the lex loci ought always to be received. It is a general rule (l), that the lex loci shall not prevail, if great inconveniences will ensue from giving effect to it. Now I apprehend, that no instance can be mentioned, in which an application of the lex loci would be more inconvenient, than in the case of slavery. It must be agreed, that where the lex loci cannot have effect without introducing the thing prohibited in a degree either as great, or nearly as great, as if there was no prohibition, there the greatest inconvenience would ensue from regarding the lex loci, and consequently it ought not to prevail. Indeed, by receiving it in a case so circumstanced, the end of a prohibition would be frustrated, either entirely or in a very great degree; and so the prohibition of things the most pernicious in their tendency would become vain and fruitless. And what greater inconveniences can we imagine, than those, which would necessarily result from such an unlimited sacrifice of the municipal law to the law of a foreign country? I will now apply this general doctrine to the particular case of our own law concerning slavery. Our law prohibits the commencement of domestic slavery in England; because it disapproves of slavery, and considers its operation as dangerous and destructive to the whole community. But would not this prohibition be wholly ineffectual, if slavery could be introduced from a foreign country? In the course of time, though perhaps in a progress less rapid, would not domestic slavery become as general, and be as completely revived in England by introduction from our colonies and from foreign countries, as if it was permitted to revive by commencement here; and would not the same inconveniences follow? To prevent the revival of domestic slavery effectually, its introduction must be resisted universally, without regard to the place of its commencement; and therefore in the instance of slavery, the lex loci must yield to the municipal law. From the fact of there never yet having been any slavery in this country except the old and now expired one of villenage, it is evident, that hitherto our law has uniformly controlled the lex loci in this respect; and so long as the same policy of excluding slavery is retained by the law of England, it must continue intitled to the same preference. Nor let it be thought a peculiar want of complaisance in the law of England, that disregarding the lex loci in the case of slaves, it gives immediate and entire liberty to them, when they are brought here from another country. Most of the other European states, in which slavery is discountenanced, have adopted a like policy.

In Scotland domestic slavery is (m) unknown, except so far as regards the (n) coal-hewers and salt-makers, whose condition, it must be confessed, bears some resemblance to slavery; because all who have once acted in either of these capacities are compellable to serve, and fixed to their respective places of employment during life. But with this single exception, there is not the least vestige of slavery; and so jealous is the Scotch law of every thing tending to slavery, that it has been held to disallow contracts of service for life, or for a very long term; as, for sixty years (o). However, no particular case has yet happened, in which it has been necessary to decide, whether a slave of another country acquires freedom on his arrival in Scotland. In 1757 this question was depending in the Court of Session in the case of a negro; but the negro happening to die during the pendency of the cause, the question was not determined. But when it is considered, that in the time of Sir Thomas Craig, who wrote at least 150 years ago, slavery was even then a thing unheard of in Scotland, and that there are no laws (p) to re-

(b) 43 E. 3. 4. (c) Hob. 99. (d) 2 Ro. Abr. 732. (e) 2 Ro. Abr. 732. pl. 8. (f) Fitz. Abr. Villenage 34. (g) 37 E. 3. c. 16. (h) Rutherford. Inst. Nat. L. v. 2. p. 576. (i) Quia ipsa servitus inter Christianos fere exolevit, et quoque non utitur in hostes captos. Possimus tamen, si ita placeat; imo utitur quandoque adversus eos, qui in nos utuntur. Quare et Belgæ quos Algerenses, Tunisianos, Tripolitenses, in Oceano aut Mari Mediterraneo capiunt, solent in servitutem Hispanis vendere, nam ipsi Belgæ servos non habent, nisi in Asia Africa et America. Quin anno 1661, Ordines Generales Admiralis sui mandârunt, piratas captos in servitutem venderet. Idemque observatum est anno 1664. Bynkershoek Quæst. Jur. Publ. lib. 1. cap. 3. (k) 5 Geo. 2. c. 7. s. 4. (l) See the chapter de consuetu legum diversarum in diversis imperiis, in Huber. Præleç. p. 538. (m) See Craig. Jus Feud. lib. 1. dieges. 11. f. 32.—Stair's Instit. E. 1. t. 2. f. 11, 12. (n) Forb.

Instit. part 1. b. 2. t. 3.—Macdoul. Instit. vol. 1. p. 68. (o) Macdoul. Instit. vol. 1. p. 68. But I must observe, that in the case relied on by Mr. Macdoul, the term of service was not the only material circumstance. The contract was between the masters and the crews of some fish boats; the latter binding themselves for a yearly allowance to serve in their respective boats during three times nineteen years, so that not one of them, during all that time, could remove from a particular village, or so much as from one boat to another. See Dict. Decis. tit. Pañum illicitum. (p) Wall. Instit. Law of Scotl. chap. on master and servant. (q) Sir Thomas Craig, mentioning the English villenage, says,—Nullus est apud nos ejus usus, et inauditum nomen, nisi quod nonnulla in libro Regiæ Majestatis de nativis et ad libertatem proclamantibus proponantur; que et ab Anglorum moribus sunt recepta, et nunquam in usum nostrum deducta. Craig. Jus Feud. lib. 1. dieges. 11. f. 32.

regulate slavery, one can scarce doubt what opinion the Lords of Session would have pronounced, if the negro's death had not prevented a decision.

In the United Provinces slavery having fallen into disuse (q), all their writers agree, that slaves from another country become free the moment they enter into the Dutch territories (r). The same custom prevails in some of the neighbouring countries, particularly Brabant, and other parts of the Austrian Netherlands; and Gudelinus, an eminent civilian, who was formerly professor of law at Louvain in Brabant, relates from the annals of the supreme council at Mechlin, that, in the year 1531, an application for apprehending and surrendering a fugitive slave from Spain was on this account rejected (s).

In France the law is particularly explicit against regarding the lex loci in the case of domestic slavery: and though, in some of the provinces, a remnant of the ancient slavery is still to be seen in the persons of the serfs, or gens de main-morte, who are attached to particular lands (t), as villeins regardant formerly were in England; yet all the writers on the law of France agree, that the moment a slave arrives there from another country he acquires liberty, not in consequence of any written law, but merely by long usage having the force of law. There are many remarkable instances in which this rule against the admission of slaves from foreign countries has had effect in France. Two are mentioned by (u) Bodin; one being the case of a foreign merchant who had purchased a slave in Spain, and afterwards carried him into France; the other being the case of a Spanish ambassador, whose slave was declared free, notwithstanding the high and independent character of the slave's owner. This latter case has been objected to by some writers (w) on the law of nations, who do not disapprove of the general principle on which liberty is given to slaves brought from foreign countries, but only complain of its application to the particular case of an ambassador. But, on the other hand, Wicquefort (x) blames the states of Holland for not following the example of the French, in a case which he mentions. After the establishment of the French colonies in South America, the kings of France thought fit to deviate from the strictness of the ancient French law, in respect to slavery, and in them to permit and regulate the possession of negro slaves. The first edict for this purpose is said to have been one in April 1615, and another was made in May 1685 (y), which is not confined to negroes, but regulates the general police of the French islands in America, and is known by the name of the Code noir. But notwithstanding these edicts, if negro slaves were carried from the French American islands into France, they were intitled to the benefit of the ancient French law, and became free on their arrival in France (z). To prevent this consequence, a third edict was made in October 1716, which permits the bringing of negro slaves into France from their American islands. The permission is granted under various restrictions; all tending to prevent the long continuance of negroes in France, to restrain their owners from treating them as property whilst they continue in their mother country, and to prevent the importation of fugitive negroes; and with a like view, a royal declaration was made in Dec. 1738 (a), containing an exposition of the edict of 1716, and some additional provisions. But the ancient law of France in favour of slaves from another country, still has effect, if the terms of the edict of 1716, and of the declaration of 1738 are not strictly complied with; or if the negro is brought from a place, to which they do not extend. This appears from two cases adjudged since the edict of 1716. In one (b) of them, which happened in 1738, a negro had been brought from the island of Saint Domingo without observing the terms of the edict of 1716; and in the other (d), which was decided so late as in the year 1758, a slave had been brought from the East Indies, to which the edict doth not extend: and in both these cases the slaves were declared to be free.

Such are the examples drawn from the laws and usages of other European countries; and they fully evince, that wherever it is the policy to discountenance slavery, a disregard of the lex loci, in the case of slavery, is as well justified by general practice, as it is really founded on necessity. Nor is the justice of such proceeding less evident; for how can it be unjust to devest the master's property in his slave, when he is carried into a country, in which, for the wisest and most humane reasons, such property is known to be prohibited, and consequently cannot be lawfully introduced?

6. It may be contended, that though the law of England will not receive the negro as a slave, yet it may suspend the severe qualities of the slavery whilst the negro is in England, and preserve the master's right over him in the relation of a servant, either by presuming a contract for that purpose, or, without the aid of such a refinement, by compulsion of law grounded on the condition of slavery in which the negro was previous to his arrival here.

But insuperable difficulties occur against modifying and qualifying the slavery by this artificial refinement. In the present case, at all events such a modification cannot be allowable; because, in the return, the master claims the benefit of the relation between him and the negro in the full extent of the original slavery. But for the sake of shewing the futility of the argument of modification, and in order to prevent a future attempt by the masters of negroes to avail themselves of it, I will try its force.

As to the presuming a contract of service against the negro, I ask at what time is its commencement to be supposed? If the time was before the negro's arrival in England, it was made when he was in a state of slavery, and consequently without the power of contracting. If the time presumed was subsequent, the presumption must begin the moment of the negro's arrival here, and consequently be founded on the mere fact of that arrival, and the consequential enfranchisement by operation of law. But is not a slavery, determined against the consent of the master, a strange foundation for presuming a contract between him and the slave? For a moment, however, I will allow the reasonableness of presuming such a contract, or I will suppose it to be reduced into writing; but then I ask, what are the terms of this contract? To answer the master's purpose, it must be a contract to serve the master here; and when he leaves this country to return with him into America, where the slavery will again attach upon the negro. In plain terms, it is a contract to go into slavery whenever the master's occasions shall require. Will the law of England disallow the introduction of slavery, and therefore emancipate the negro from it; and yet give effect to a contract founded solely upon slavery, in slavery ending? It is impossible, that the law of England can be so insulting to the negro, so inconsistent with itself.

The argument of modification, independently of contract, is equally delusive.—There is no known rule by which the court can guide itself in a partial reception of slavery. Besides, if the law of England would receive the slavery of the negro in any way, there can be no reason why it should not be admitted in the same degree as the slavery of the villein: but the argument of modification necessarily supposes the contrary; because, if the slavery of the negro was received in the same extent, then it would not be necessary to have recourse to a qualification. But there is one other reason still more repugnant to the idea of modifying the slavery. If the law of England would modify the slavery, it would certainly take away its most exceptionable qualities, and leave those which are least oppressive. But the modification required will be insufficient for the master's purpose, unless the law leaves behind a quality the most exceptionable, odious, and oppressive; an arbitrary power of reviving the slavery in its full extent, by removal of the negro to a place, in which the slavery will again attach upon him with all its original severity (e).

From this examination of the several objections in favour of slavery in England, I think myself well warranted to observe, that instead of being weakened, the arguments against slavery in England have derived an additional force. The result is, not merely that negroes become free on being brought into this country, but that the law of England confers the gift of liberty entire and unincumbered; not in name only, but really and substantially; and consequently, that Mr. Stuart cannot have the least right over Sommerfett the negro, either in the open character of a slave, or in the disguised one of an ordinary servant.

(2.) In the outset of the argument I made a second question on Mr. Stuart's authority to enforce his right, if he has any, by transporting the negro out of England. Few words will be necessary on this point, which my duty as counsel for the negro requires me to make, in order to give him every possible chance of a discharge from his confinement, and not from any doubt of success on the question of slavery.

(a) Point on Mr. Stuart's authority to enforce his right to the negro by transporting him out of England.

If in England the negro continues a slave to Mr. Stuart, he must be content to have the negro subject to those limitations which the laws of villenage imposed on the lord in the enjoyment of his property in the villein; there being no other laws to regulate slavery in this country. But even those laws did not permit that high act of dominion which Mr. Stuart has exercised; for they restrained the lord from forcing the villein out of England. The law, by which the lord's power over his villein was thus limited, has reached the present times. It is a law made in the time of the First William, and the words of it are, prohibemus ut nullus vendat hominem extra patriam (f).

If Mr. Stuart had claimed the negro as a servant by contract, and in his return to the habeas corpus had stated a written agreement to leave England as Mr. Stuart should require, signed by the negro, and made after his arrival in England, when he had a capacity of contracting, it might then have been a question, whether such a contract in writing would have warranted Mr. Stuart in compelling the performance of it, by forcibly transporting the negro out of this country? I am myself satisfied, that no contract, however solemnly entered into, would have justified such violence. It is contrary to the genius of the English law, to allow any enforcement of agreements or contracts, by any other compulsion,

(q) Belga servos non habent, nisi in Asia, Africa, et America. Bynkersh. Quest. Jur. Pub. lib. 1. c. 3. Another great Dutch lawyer adds, Nec cuiquam mortalium nunc liceat sese vendicare, aut alia ratione servitutis jure semel alteri addicere. Voet Commentar. ad Pandect. lib. 1. tit. 5. l. 3.

(r) Servitus paulatim ab usu recessit, ejusque nomen hodie apud nos exolevit; adeo quidem ut servi, qui aliunde hic adducuntur, simul ac imperii nostri fines intrant, in tota ipsorum dominis ad libertatem proclamare possint: id quod et aliorum Christianorum gentium moribus receptum est. Gronewegen de Leg. Abrogat. in Hollandia, &c. p. 5. John Voet, in the place cited in the preceding note, expresses himself to the same effect.

(s) Gudelin, de Jur. Noviss. lib. 1. c. 5. et Vinn. in Instit. lib. 1. tit. 3. p. 32. edit. Heinecc.

(t) See Instit. au droit Franc. par M. Argou, ed. 1753, liv. 1. chap. 1. p. 4. (u) Bodin, de Republic. lib. 1. cap. 5. de imperio herili. See several other instances mentioned in the Negro cause in the 13th volume of the Causés Celebres.

(w) Kirchner, de Legat. lib. 2. c. 1. num. 233—and after him Bynkershoek Jur. Compet. des Ambassade. ed. par Barbeyr. c. 15. f. 3.

(x) Wicquefort's Em-

bassador, Engl. ed. p. 268. (y) Décisions Nouvelles, par M. Denifart, tit. Negres.—Denifart mentions, that the edict of 1685 is registered with the sovereign council at Domingo, but has never been registered in any of the French parliaments.

(z) Nouvelles Décisions par M. Denifart, tit. Negres, f. 27.

(a) M. Denifart observes, that the edict of 1716, and the declaration of 1738, do not appear to have been ever registered by the parliament of Paris, because they are considered as contrary to the common law of the kingdom.—See his Nouvelles Décisions, tit. Negres.

(b) See Causés Celebres, vol. 13. p. 492.

(c) This answer to the argument of modification, includes an answer to the supposition, that an action of trespass per quod servitium amisit, will lie for loss of a negro's service. I am persuaded, that the case, in which that remedy was loosely suggested, was one in which the question was about a negro being out of England.

See the case of Smith and Gould, 2. Salk. 667.—Another writ, hinted at in the same case, is the writ of trespass, quare captivum suum cepit; which is not in the least applicable to the negro, or any other slave. It supposes the plaintiff to have had one of the king's enemies in his custody as a prisoner of war, and to have had a right of detaining him till payment of a ransom. See Reg. Br. 102. b. and 2. Salk. 667.

(f) Wilk. Leg. Saxon. p. 229. et cap. 63, Leg. Gulielm. 1.

(g) This law furnishes one more argument against slavery imported from a foreign country. If the law of England did not disallow the admission of such a slavery, would it restrain the master from taking his slave out of the kingdom?

than that from our courts of justice. The exercise of such a power is not lawful in cases of agreements for property; much less ought it to be so for enforcing agreements against the person. Besides, is it reasonable to suppose, that the law of England would permit that against the servant by contract, which is denied against the slave? Nor are great authorities wanting to acquit the law of England of such an inconsistency, and to shew, that a contract will not warrant a compulsion by imprisonment, and consequently much less by transporting the party out of this kingdom. Lord Hobart, whose extraordinary learning judgment and abilities have always ranked his opinion amongst the highest authorities of law, expressly says (g), that the body of a freeman cannot be made subject to distress or imprisonment by contract, but only by judgment. There is, however, one case, in which it is said that the performance of a service to be done abroad, may be compelled without the intervention of a court of justice; I mean, the case of an infant-apprentice, bound by proper indentures to a mariner or other person, where the nature of the service imports, that it is to be done out of the kingdom (h), and the party, by reason of his infancy, is liable to a coercion not justifiable in ordinary cases. The habeas corpus act (i) goes a step further; and persons who, by contract in writing, agree with a merchant or owner of a plantation, or any other person, to be transported beyond sea, and receive earnest on such agreements, are excepted from the benefit of that statute. I must say, that the exception appears very unguarded; and if the law, as it was previous to this statute, did entitle the subject to the habeas corpus in the case which the statute excepts, it can only operate in excluding him in that particular case from the additional provisions of the statute, and cannot, I presume, be justly extended to deprive him of the habeas corpus, as the common law gave it before the making of the statute.

Upon the whole, the return to the habeas corpus in the Conclusion, present case, in whatever way it is considered, whether by inquiry into the foundation of Mr. Stuart's right to the person and service of the negro, or by reference to the violent manner in which it has been attempted to enforce that right, will appear equally unworthy of this court's approbation. By condemning the return, the revival of domestic slavery will be rendered as impracticable by introduction from our colonies and from other countries, as it is by commencement here, such a judgment will be no less conducive to the public advantage, than it will be conformable to natural justice, and to principles and authorities of law; and this court, by effectually obstructing the admission of the new slavery of negroes into England, will in these times reflect as much honour on themselves, as the great judges, their predecessors, formerly acquired, by contributing so uniformly and successfully to the suppression of the old slavery of villenage.

(g) Hob. 61.

(h) Hob. 134.

(i) 31 Cha. 2. c. 2. f. 13.

No. VIII. The Case of Pressing Mariners, on the Trial of Alexander Broadfoot, for Murder, Bristol, August 30, 1743.

[This case is taken from the second edition of Sir Michael Foster's Reports, published by his nephew Michael Dodson, Esq. The additional notes and references by Mr. Dodson, are distinguished by being placed between parentheses.]

A D V E R T I S E M E N T.

THIS case, though already in print, hath been thought to deserve a place in this collection. It is therefore here inserted.

If it be asked, where are the adjudged cases on which the author groundeth his opinion? he freely confesseth, that he hath not met with one, in which the legality of pressing for the sea-service hath directly come in judgment. What this is to be imputed to every reader will judge. A few modern cases there are, from which the legality of the practice may be inferred. But the author chose to ground himself on much better authorities than inferences from modern reports.

AT the gaol-delivery holden for the city and county of the city of Bristol, August 30, 1743, Alexander Broadfoot was indicted for the murder of Cornelius Calahan, a sailor belonging to his majesty's ship the Mortar Sloop.

The case was thus: captain Hanway, commander of the Mortar Sloop, had a warrant from the Lords of the Admiralty, grounded on an order of his majesty in council, empowering him to impress, or cause to be impressed, seamen for his majesty's service. The warrant expressly directeth, That the captain shall not intrust any person with the execution of it, but a commission-officer; and shall insert the name and office of the person intrusted on the back of the warrant.

The lieutenant of the Mortar Sloop, (the only commission-officer on board besides the captain) was deputed by him to impress according to the tenor of the warrant.

On the 25th of April last captain Hanway, being at anchor in Kingroad within the port and county of Bristol, ordered the ship's boat down the channel in order to press as they should see opportunity. But the lieutenant staid in Kingroad, on board with the captain.

Towards evening, the boat came up with a merchantman, the Bremen Factor, homeward-bound, in that part of the channel which is within the county of the city of Bristol, but some leagues from Kingroad; and some of the crew went on board, in order to press; who being informed that one or two of the Bremen's men were concealed in the hold, Calahan, with three others of the boat's crew, went thither in search of them. Whereupon Broadfoot, one of the Bremen's men, (who had before provided himself with a blunderbuss and pistols for his defence against the press-gang) called out and asked them what they came for: he was answered by some of the press-gang, 'We come for you and your comrades.' Whereupon he cried out, 'Keep back, I have a blunderbuss loaded with swan-shot.' Upon this the others stopped, but did not retire. He then cried out, 'Where is your lieutenant?' And being answered, 'He is not far off,' he immediately fired among them. By this shot Calahan was killed on the spot, and one or two more of the press-gang wounded.

The case being thus, the Recorder was of opinion, that the boat's crew having been sent out with a general order to impress as they should see opportunity, and having, in pursuance of that order, boarded the vessel without a proper officer, expressly against the terms of the captain's warrant, every thing they did was to be looked upon as an attempt upon the liberty of the persons concerned, without any legal warrant: and he accordingly directed the jury to find Broadfoot guilty of manslaughter. But this being a case of great expectation, and uncommon pains having been taken to possess people with an opinion that pressing for the sea-service is a violation of Magna Charta, and a very high invasion of the liberty of the subject, the Recorder thought proper to deliver his opinion touching the legality of pressing for the sea-service; provided the persons impressed are proper objects of the law, and those employed in that service come armed with a proper warrant for that purpose.

Captain Hanway's warrant with the indorsement.

By the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of Great Britain and Ireland, &c. and of all his majesty's plantations, &c.

IN pursuance of his majesty's order in council dated the 19th day of Jan. 1742, we do hereby empower and direct you to impress or cause to be impressed so many seamen and seafaring men and persons whose occupations and callings are to work in vessels and boats upon rivers, as shall be necessary not only to complement the number of men allowed to his majesty's ship under your command, but also to mann such others of his majesty's ships as may be in want of men, giving unto each man so impressed one shilling for press-money. And in the execution hereof you are to take care that neither yourself nor any officer authorized by you do demand or receive any money, gratuity, reward, or other consideration whatsoever, for the sparing, exchanging, or discharging any person or persons impressed, or to be impressed, as you will answer it at your peril. You are not to intrust any person with the execution of this warrant but a commission-officer, and to insert his name and office in the deputation on the other side hereof, and set your hand and seal thereto. This warrant to continue in force till the 31st day of December 1743. And in the due execution of the same and every part thereof, all mayors, sheriffs, justices of the peace, bailiffs, constables, headboroughs, and all other his majesty's officers and subjects whom it may concern, are hereby required to be aiding and assisting unto you and those employed by you, as they tender his majesty's service, and will answer the contrary at their perils. Given under our hands and seal of the office of Admiralty the 31st day of January 1742.

This personal service in cases of extreme necessity is a principal branch of the service every subject of England oweeth to the crown. See 11 H. III. c. 13. Vol. XI.

consideration whatsoever, for the sparing, exchanging, or discharging any person or persons impressed, or to be impressed, as you will answer it at your peril. You are not to intrust any person with the execution of this warrant but a commission-officer, and to insert his name and office in the deputation on the other side hereof, and set your hand and seal thereto. This warrant to continue in force till the 31st day of December 1743. And in the due execution of the same and every part thereof, all mayors, sheriffs, justices of the peace, bailiffs, constables, headboroughs, and all other his majesty's officers and subjects whom it may concern, are hereby required to be aiding and assisting unto you and those employed by you, as they tender his majesty's service, and will answer the contrary at their perils. Given under our hands and seal of the office of Admiralty the 31st day of January 1742.

By command of their

Lordships,

Thomas Corbett.

Jo. Cockburne.

Geo. Lee.

J. Trevor.

I do hereby depute A. B. a lieutenant belonging to his majesty's ship the Mortar Sloop under my command, to impress seamen, sea-faring men, and persons whose occupations and callings are to work in vessels and boats upon rivers according to the tenor of this warrant. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this ——— day of ———

The RECORDER's Argument.

This question touching the legality of pressing mariners for the public service is a point of very great and national importance. On one hand, a very useful body of men seem to be put under hardships inconsistent with the temper and genius of a free government. On the other, the necessity of the case seemeth to intitle the public to the service of this body of men, whenever the safety of the whole calleth for it.

Before I speak directly to the point, it will be necessary to throw out of the case every thing which doth not enter into the merits of the present question.

We are not at present concerned to inquire, whether persons may be legally pressed into the land-service, nor whether landmen may be legally pressed into the sea-service. The present question, I say, is not, whether people may be taken from their lawful occupations at home, and sent against their wills into a remote and dangerous service; into a service they are utterly unacquainted with, and possibly unfit for: no; the only question at present is, whether mariners, persons who have freely chosen a sea-faring life, persons whose education and employment have fitted them for the service, and inured them to it, — whether such persons may not be legally pressed into the service of the crown, whenever the public safety requireth it, ne quid detrimenti respublica capiat.

For my part, I think they may. I think the crown hath a right to command the service of these people, whenever the public safety calleth for it. The same right that it hath to require the personal service of every man able to bear arms, in case of a sudden invasion or formidable insurrection. The right in both cases is founded on one and the same principle, the necessity of the case in order to the preservation of the whole.

It would be time very ill spent to go about to prove, that this nation can never be long in a state of safety, our coast defended and our trade protected, without a naval force equal to all the emergencies which may happen. And how can we be secure of such a force? The keeping up the same naval force in time of peace, which will be absolutely necessary for our security in time of war, would be an absurd, a fruitless, and a ruinous expence.

The only course then left is, for the crown to employ upon emergent occasions the mariners bred up in the merchant's service.

By this means the trade of the nation becometh a nursery for her navy; and the merchant, while he is increasing the wealth of the kingdom, is at the same time training up the mariner for its defence.

And as for the mariner himself, he when taken into the service of the crown only changeth masters for a time: his service and employment continue the very same; with this advantage, that the dangers of the sea and enemy are not so great in the service of the crown, as in that of the merchant.

I am very sensible of the hardship the sailor suffereth from an impress in some particular cases, especially if pressed homeward-bound after a long voyage. But the merchants who hear me know, that an impress on outward-bound vessels would be attended with much greater inconveniences to the trade of the kingdom; and yet that too is sometimes necessary. But where two evils present, a wise administration, if there be room for an option, will choose the least.

War itself is a great evil, but it is chosen to avoid a greater. The practice of pressing is one of the mischiefs war bringeth with it. But it is a maxim in law, and good policy too, that all private mischiefs must be borne with patience for preventing a national calamity. And as no greater calamity can befall us, than to be weak and defenceless at sea in a time of war, so I do not know that the wisdom of the nation hath hitherto found out any method of manning our navy, less inconvenient than pressing; and, at the same time, equally sure and effectual.

The expedient of a voluntary register, which was attempted in king William's time, had no effect.

And some late schemes I have seen appear to me more inconvenient to the mariner and more inconsistent with the principles of liberty, than the practice in pressing: and, what is still worse, they are in my opinion totally impracticable.

Thus much I thought proper to say upon the foot of reason and public utility, before I come to speak directly to the point of law. Which I shall now do.

According to my present apprehension, (and I have taken some pains to inform myself) the right of impressing mariners for the public service is a prerogative inherent in the crown, grounded upon common-law, and recognized by many acts of parliament.

A general immemorial usage not inconsistent with any statute, especially if it be the result of evident necessity, and withal tendeth to the public safety, is, I apprehend, part of the common-law of England. If not, I am at a loss to know what is meant by common-law, in contradistinction to statute-law. And therefore it is a great mistake in this case, as indeed it would be in any other, to conclude that there is no law, because perhaps there may be no statute that expressly and in terms empowereth the crown to press. For the rights of the crown, and the liberties of the subject too, stand principally upon the foot of common-law; though both have been in many cases confirmed, explained, or ascertained by particular statutes.

As to the point of usage in the matter of pressing, I have met with a multitude of commissions and mandatory writs to that purpose conceived in various forms; and from time to time directed to different officers, as the nature of the service required.

It would be tedious for me to cite one half of them; but I will endeavour to range them under some general heads, and then cite a few.

Some are for pressing ships.

Others for pressing mariners.

And others for pressing ships and mariners.

In some, the parties to whom they are directed are required to make a general impress upon certain great and emergent occasions.

In others, they are confined to a certain number of ships and mariners for special services.

And in others, they are still farther confined to certain places on the coast.

Some commissions, particularly those conferring the admiralty-jurisdiction and the rights of admiralty, warrant an impress as often as there shall be occasion.

Others empower commanders of fleets or squadrons intended for certain expeditions, to press for that particular service.

And others empower masters of particular ships to press for manning their respective vessels.

This general view will be sufficient to let us into the nature of these precedents. And though the affair of pressing ships is not now before me, yet I could not well avoid mentioning it; because many of the precedents I have met with and must cite go as well to that, as to the business of pressing mariners; and taken together, they serve to shew the power the crown hath constantly exercised over the whole naval force of the kingdom, as well shipping as mariners, whenever the public service required it.

This however must be observed, that no man served the crown in either case at his own expence. Masters and mariners received full wages, and owners were constantly paid a full freight. But whether the pay in either case commenced from the time of pressing, or from the time of actual entry into the service, is not so clear.

There is in Cotton's records a note of a petition of the commons, and of the king's answer upon this subject, in the 57 E. III. which inclineth me to think that the latter was the case. The petition, as abridged by Cotton, is thus: "The masters of ships may be paid the wages of them and their mariners from the day of their being appointed to serve the king." The answer is, "that taking of ships shall not be but for necessity, and payment shall be reasonable as heretofore."

In the same parliament an attempt was made to obtain for owners of ships an allowance for wear and tear in the king's service.

The petition is thus abridged: "The masters of ships require an allowance for the tackling of their ships worn by the king's service."

The answer is, "Such allowance hath not been heretofore made."

In the 2 R. II. an attempt of the like kind was made and with the like success. The petition is, "That owners of ships taken up for the king's service, for their losses in the same, may be considered; and that mariners may have the like wages as archers have." The answer is, "It shall be as it hath been used."

These petitions, though filed in the record the petitions of the commons, as having probably begun in that house, were really the acts of both houses; otherwise they could not have been offered to the king in a parliamentary way: for the antient method of passing bills was, that the matter of the bill was tendered to the crown for the royal assent of both houses in form of petitions; and according to the answers from the throne, they passed into laws or were rejected.

I cannot but observe, that when we see every branch of the legislature speaking of the subject of pressing in the manner they do in these petitions and answers, it is not easy to conceive, that the legality of the practice was then questioned. It is plain at least, that it was in those early times treated in parliament as an antient and well-known usage.

I come now to the commissions and mandatory writs I speak of. I will cite a few from Rymer's Fœdera, out of a great number of the like kind which may be met with in that valuable collection of public records.

William Barret, commander of the ship Julian, had a commission to make choice of and take up in the counties of Kent, Essex, Surry, and Suffex, as well within liberties as without, 36 mariners, and to put them on board his ship, in order to proceed with the Prince of Wales on an expedition to Gascony†.

The like commissions were given at the same time to the commanders of seven other ships for manning their respective vessels for the same service.

There is a commission to John Orwell, one of the King's serjeants at arms, to arrest and take up 60 able mariners in the Thames and Medway and parts adjacent, as well within liberties as without, and to cause them to be at Sandwich within 15 days for the King's service.

John Elingham, a serjeant at arms, is empowered to arrest and take up in the counties of Somerset, Gloucester, Bristol, Devon and Cornwall, and in South Wales, as well within liberties as without, so many ships, barges, and other vessels, and also mariners sufficient for manning them, as should be found sufficient for an expedition to Ireland under the king's uncle the duke of Gloucester. And all sheriffs, mayors, bailiffs, masters of ships and mariners are required to be assisting to him in that service.

In the same year the like commissions issued to two other serjeants at arms for the same service, in Wales, Ireland, Lancashire, and Cheshire‡.

John Kingston, commander of the ship Katharine, is commissioned by himself or deputies to arrest and take up, as well within liberties as without, as many mariners as should be necessary for manning his ship, and to put them on board for the king's service. And all sheriffs, mayors, &c. are required to be assisting to him in that service.

Commissions went at the same time to six commanders of other vessels, for manning their respective vessels in the same manner, and for the same service.

A mandatory writ issued directed to Thomas College serjeant at arms, and to Ralph Ingoldesby, and to the customers of the port of Sandwich, and of every port from thence to Southampton, requiring them to arrest and take up for the king's service all and singular ships, barges, and other vessels capable of transporting men or horses, of what burden soever; and also all masters and mariners who could be found in any of the ports mentioned before, and to put the said masters and mariners on board the said vessels for an expedition to the duchy of Aquitain; any royal letters of licence theretofore granted to any person or persons, or any other matter notwithstanding: and all sheriffs, mayors, and other officers are required to be assisting to them in that service.

At the same time the like writs issued to the customers and other officers of almost all the port-towns in the kingdom.

There is a commission to the master and purser of the Mary Graue, empowering them to arrest and take up, as well within liberties as without, wheresoever they could be found, as many mariners as should be sufficient for manning their vessel, and to put them on board at the king's wages and for his service.

At the same time the like commissions issued to four other masters for manning their respective ships in the same manner.

The like commissions to masters of six vessels.

The like to eleven masters in the same form.

I will now mention a few precedents of another sort; which, because they relate in great measure to one and same service, I will place together, to avoid as much as possible a needless repetition in matters of form.

These are either special commissions for commanding fleets or squadrons intended for certain expeditions mentioned in the commission; or the general commissions conferring the whole admiralty-jurisdiction with the rights of admiralty, whether to one person under the title of High Admiral, or to two under the character of Admirals of the north and west. Which latter was the usual manner of conferring the admiralty-jurisdiction before the office of Lord High Admiral of England came much in use.

As to the special commissions, sir William Bardolph was appointed admiral of a fleet then intended to be fitted out; his commission empowereth him among other things to make choice of and take up for the king's service a sufficient number of mariners and others, and to put them on board the fleet, and to punish and chastise such mariners who should be disobedient or refractory in that respect.

The lord William de Bole was appointed commander in chief of the fleet and army then intended for an expedition to France; he hath the same powers with regard to the manning the fleet as sir William Bardolph had.

for the like service; eligis facias 30 nautas &c. 2 E. II.

† See the editor's note at the end of this argument)

29 E. III.
(5 Rym. 815.)
Ad Eligendum & Ca-
piendum.

(5 Rym. 816.)

1 R. II.
(7 Rym. 196.)
Ad Arrian-dum & Ca-
piendum.

15 R. II.
(7 Rym. 718.)

(See also 7
Rym. 195,
391, 451;
501, 504,
506, 507,
789, 839.)

(7 Rym. 718.)

3 H. V.
(9 Rym. 238.)

(See also
9 Rym. 91,
104, 144,
310.)

(9 Rym. 239.)

21 H. VI.
(11 Rym. 31.)

(See also
10 Rym.
449, 685.)

(11 Rym. 843.)

(11 Rym. 31.)

14 E. IV.
(11 Rym.
843.)

(See also
11 Rym.
839.)

(11 Rym. 843.)

25 E. IV.
(12 Rym.
4, 5.)

20 E. IV.
(12 Rym.
339, 140.)

2 H. V.
(10 Rym. 63.)

Eligendi &
Capiendi.

2 H. VII.
(12 Rym.
455.)

* The citations from Cotton have been found to agree with the record.

† See Madox's Hist. of the Exchequer 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

Sir Robert Poyntz is appointed to command the fleet in the absence of the lord Willoughby, and hath the same powers with regard to manning the fleet.

Sir Martin Frobusser had a commission, which, after reciting that the command of a small squadron intended against the Spaniards in the West Indies had been given to him, goeth on thus: 'We therefore let you to wit that we have authorized and appointed, and by these presents do give full power and authority unto the said Sir Martin Frobusser, and to his sufficient deputy or deputies, whereforever he shall have need, to press and to take up for our service, to the furniture of such ships as are committed to his charge, in any place upon our coasts of England or Ireland, any mariners, soldiers, gunners, or other needful artificers: and then requireth all justices and other officers to be assisting to him in the premises.

I would not be understood to say, that all commanders of fleets or squadrons for special services have had the same powers as those I have mentioned. The truth is, the greater number of these special commissions, which I have met with, and those too of the latest date, are silent as to that point.

I come now to the general commissions conferring the whole admiralty-jurisdiction and the rights of admiralty.

And those I have met with, though I apprehend they all agree in substance with regard to the present question, yet differ a little in point of form.

In the 10th E. III. and in the 12th of the same reign, the admirals (for at that time there were two, one for the north, the other for the west) are empowered to make choice of, as well within liberties as without, able-bodied men fit for the service, and to put them on board the fleet. The word eligendi, made use of in these commissions, is the word used to the same purpose about that time in all the commissions for pressing for the land-service, which was then likewise practised. You have the word in relation to the land-service in the statute of the 18 E. III. Stat. 2. c. 7. 'Men of arms, hoblars and archers, chosen to go in the king's service out of England, shall be at the king's wages from the day that they depart out of the counties where they were chosen, till their return.'

In the 50th E. III. the admirals' commissions, with regard to this matter, run thus, 'Necnon naves & naviculas guerrinas, quæ necessariæ, cujuscumque portus fuerint, quotiens necesse fuerit, congregandi; & marinarios & alios pro navibus & naviculis illis necessariis eligendi, capiendi, & in eisdem ponendi; & hujusmodi marinarios qui rebelles vel contrariantes fuerint in hac parte, debite compescendi & castigandi; & omnia alia, quæ ad officium admiralli pertinent IN HAC PARTE, faciendi & exercendi; prout de jure & secundum legem maritimarum fuerit faciendum.'

And all sheriffs, mayors, bailiffs, ministers, owners of ships, masters and mariners, are required to be aiding and assisting to them in the premises.

The admirals' commissions run exactly in the same form.

So doth Thomas of Lancaster's commission of high admiral.

So doth the earl of Warwick's commission of high admiral.

And so doth the duke of Richmond's.

The lord Seymour's commission of high admiral expresseth the matter a little differently: the words are, 'Ac ad naves & marinarios ac alios, pro omnibus & singulis navibus et naviculis conducendum & gubernandum necessarios, eligendum, capiendum & apprehendendum, atque solum in dictis navibus & naviculis ponendum & retinendum.'

In the same year the lord Seymour had another commission in fuller terms, with all the jurisdictions and rights of admiralty particularly enumerated and set forth at large: the words with regard to the present matter are, 'Et insuper tam naves & naviculas guerrinas quam quascunque alias naves & naviculas seu vasa quæcumque, pro quibuscumque viaggiis et negotiis nostris vel expeditionibus eorundem, cum navibus suis pilotas, ac navium magistros, naves, naucleros, viduatores, bombariatores et marinarios ac alias personas quascunque, pro navibus et naviculis seu vasis hujusmodi aptos & idoneos, de tempore in tempus quotiens necesse fuerit, ubique locorum infra regna & dominia nostra predicta, tam infra libertates quam extra, congregandum, deligendum, retinendum, capiendum, arestandum, deputandum & assignandum absque interruptione seu impedimento per quemcumque alium in contrarium, fiendo; cum plena jurisdictione & potestate ad exequendum omnia alia & singula quæ in ea parte per magnum admirallum nostrum & prefatum generalem classis & marium, jure fieri debent, possint, vel solent.'

The earl of Warwick had a commission of high admiral in the same form.

And so had the duke of Buckingham.

And now, when I consider these precedents, not fetched from dark, remote, and unsettled times, but running uniformly through a course of many ages, all, as I conceive, speaking to the same purpose, though in different forms of expression; some for making choice of, others, and those the much greater number of the latest date, for making choice of and taking up, or for arresting, pressing and taking up, mariners, and putting them on board for the public service:—when I consider these precedents, with the practice down to the present time, I cannot conceive otherwise of the point in question, than that the crown hath been always in possession of the prerogative of pressing mariners for the public service. Which prerogative hath been carried into execution, as well by virtue of special commissions, issued as the exigency of affairs required, as by the persons who from time to time have been intrusted with the whole admiralty-jurisdiction.

And indeed the words, touching the manning the fleet, empowering the admirals to do and execute all other matters and things touching that service which belong to the office of admiral, seem to imply either that those powers were deemed to be inherent in the office, or that they had been constantly by express words in the commissions annexed to it.

To this purpose I will mention a very remarkable transaction in the parliament of the 7th and 8th H. IV.

Complaint was made in parliament, that the sea-service had been greatly neglected, and that depredations were daily committed. To remedy this evil a very extraordinary expedient was offered, to which the necessity of the king's affairs obliged him for the present to submit. It was, that the naval force of the kingdom should, for a time, be put under the direction of the merchants themselves.

Accordingly an act passed, that the merchants should have the keeping of the seas from the first day of May 1406 to Michaelmas 1407: and to defray the expence of this service they were to be intitled by writs of privy seal to certain duties mentioned in the record, as I find it abridged by Cotton.

Among other provisions touching this matter, it was enacted, that the merchants should name two persons, one for the north and the other for the south, who by commission should have the like powers as other admirals have had.

In pursuance of this act, Nicholas Blackburn was named by the merchants for the north, and Richard Gliderow for the south.

One might reasonably hope, that no powers deemed illegal or oppressive, no powers hurtful to trade or grievous to the mariners, should be inserted in the commissions of admirals nominated by the merchants: but it happeneth that Blackburn's commission is extant, and runneth in the very words of those I have cited from the 50th of E. III. to the 17th of H. VIII.

You have it in Rymer. It reciteth the act of parliament, and that Blackburn had been nominated by the merchants for the north, and then goeth on in the usual form empowering him to make choice of, take up and put on board such mariners and others as shall be found necessary for the service, and to punish and chastise such as shall be disobedient and refractory in that behalf.

The commission was to continue as long as the merchants should have the keeping of the seas; which indeed was not long: for before that parliament rose, this novelty came to an end, the merchants were eased of a service they were found to be very unequal to, their admirals' commissions dropped, and the whole direction of the marine returned to its proper channel.

I think it may safely be inferred from this record, that in the judgment of those times, and in a concern of the merchants themselves, the practice of manning the navy by the methods mentioned in these commissions was esteemed to be necessary for the service, and a branch of admiral jurisdiction.

I come now to the statutes which speak of this matter.

And I do admit, that I know of no statute now in force, which directly and in express terms empowereth the crown to press mariners into the service; and admitting that the prerogative is grounded on immemorial usage, I know of no necessity for any such statute; for let it be remembered, that a prerogative grounded upon general immemorial usage not inconsistent with any statute, nor repugnant to the public utility, is as much part of the law of England, as statute-law. You will be pleased to carry this observation too along with you, that the statutes, which mention pressing as a practice then subsisting and not disallowed, are at least an evidence of the usage, if they go no farther, I mean if they do not amount to a tacit approbation of it.

For it is hard to conceive, that the legislature should frequently mention a practice utterly illegal, and repugnant to the principles of the constitution as subsisting, without some mark of disapprobation.

The first statute I have met with is that of the 2 R. II. stat. 1. c. 4. It is an act against mariners deserting the service; not to be met with in the later editions of the Statutes at Large, which give us only the title of this act, with a note that it is altered by the 18th H. VI. and 5th Eliz.

It is however still in force, and as such is inserted by Rastal in his abridgment under title Mariner No. 1. My worthy friend Mr. Gray hath likewise inserted it in his abridgment under title Seaman No. 1. I will give you the words of the act as far as concerneth this point, as I find it in an edition of the Statutes at Large ending with the last year of H. VII. 'Item because that divers mariners after that they be arrested and retained for the king's service upon the sea in defence of the realm and thereof have received their wages, do flee out of the said service without licence of the admirals or their lieutenants—it is ordained and established, that all those mariners, which from hence-grounded on orders made from time to time by the king in council, as the exigency of affairs hath required.

The parliament roll placeth this parliament in the 3th of H. IV. whereas Rymer, Dugdale, and the printed statutes place it in the 7th. It was, to speak in modern language, a parliament of the 4th and 5th of that reign: it began in the 7th and ended in the 8th.

It is likewise in a collection of the statutes at large, called Rastal's Statutes, printed 1612, and in an old collection of the statutes called the Great Book of Statutes; and in every edition antecedent to Fulton's in 1618. (It is now printed in several of the modern editions of the Statutes.)

forth shall do in such manner,--shall be holden to restore to our said sovereign lord the king the double of that they have taken for their wages, and nevertheless shall have one year's imprisonment without being delivered by mainprize, bail, or by other way.

The act then goeth on to direct how fugitive mariners shall be apprehended and dealt with; and concludeth with this clause: 'And like punishment shall be made of serjeants of arms, masters of ships and all others that shall be attained before the admiral or his lieutenant aforesaid, that they have any thing taken of the said mariners for to suffer them to go at large out of the said service after that they have been arrested for the same service.'

You will be pleased to observe, that the word arrest, twice used in this act, is made use of in the precedents I cited of the 1st and 15th of this very reign, and in most of those of later date: it is likewise used in ten other commissions in the same reign touching this very service, all likewise directed for execution to serjeants at arms, which for brevity sake I have omitted.

So that if it be asked, who are the persons subjected to the penalties of this act, it must be answered, mariners arrested and taken into the service by virtue of commissions from the crown, in case of their desertion; and serjeants at arms, masters of ships and others executing such commissions, who for lucre shall suffer them to go at large after such arrests.

Mariners indeed were not subject to the penalties of this act, unless they had received wages. But might not a mariner so arrested have reasonably said, 'I was compelled against law into the service, I did my duty while I continued in it, and dearly earned the wages I received; might not a mariner have said this, and much more upon a supposition of the illegality of an impress? Certainly he might. But you see mariners, though taken into the service by compulsion, are by this act made liable to pecuniary, and corporal punishment too, in case of desertion. This doth more than imply the legality of such compulsion.'

It may possibly be objected, that the word retained is used in the act, and that a retainer implieth a mutual contract for some service to be done. It may, when it standeth alone, have received that sense in modern language, but in strict propriety it meaneth nothing more than the taking a person into some service; and is in truth the act only of the person retaining or taking. And therefore when I see the word retained connected with one, which hath no other meaning in the English tongue than what carrieth with it the idea of compulsion, I cannot conceive that the legislature, speaking of persons arrested and retained, should mean no other, than persons taken into the service with their own consent.

That there was a practice then subsisting of taking mariners into the service by compulsion cannot be denied: the parliament could not be ignorant of it. Is it possible then to imagine, that they could use a word which manifestly signifieth compulsion, and yet mean nothing more than a mutual contract? Besides, it cannot be conceived, that serjeants at arms, who, as I before observed, were the persons about that time usually employed in the service of pressing, could be expressly and by name subjected to the penalties of the act, if no mariners but such as voluntarily entered into the service were comprehended in it.

The next act is that of the 2d & 3d Ph. and Mar. which layeth a penalty on watermen plying between Gravesend and Windsor, who, to speak in the language of the act, in the time of pressing by commission for the service of the crown upon the sea, do willingly and obstinately withdraw, hide and convey themselves into secret places and out-corners; and after, when such time of pressing is over-passed, return to their employments.

This provision, it is true, extendeth only to watermen on the Thames, and may be considered as one of the many wholesome regulations those persons are brought under by this act: and it is mentioned in that light in an act passed in the late queen's time. But at the same time it sheweth, that commissions for pressing were then in use. And, in my opinion, it likewise supposeth the legality and utility of such commissions, and that these people are the objects of them: otherwise why are they subjected even to the slightest punishment, for absconding at the time of the execution of those commissions?

The acts which come next to be considered are some made since the Revolution; a most auspicious period! when the principles of liberty were well understood, and most gloriously asserted.

These are the 7th & 8th of king William, the 2d & 3d, and the 4th & 5th of the late queen.

The first is intitled, An act for the increase and encouragement of seamen.

It enacteth, among other things, that licences may be given, by his majesty, or the Lord High Admiral, or Commissioners of Admiralty, to any landmen willing to enter into the merchants service; which shall be to them a protection against being impressed for the space of two years.

Provided such landmen bring two credible persons to vouch for them. But if any person shall vouch for any one as a landman, who shall afterwards appear to have been a seaman, he shall forfeit twenty pounds.

The 2d & 3d of the late queen is intitled, An act for the increase of seamen, and better encouragement of navigation and security of the coal-trade. To these ends it empowereth parish-officers to bind out poor boys to sea in the merchants' service; and enacteth, that boys so bound out shall not be compelled or impressed or permitted to enter into the service of the crown at sea till they attain their age of eighteen, and that certificates of such binding shall be transmitted by the collectors of the respective ports to the Admiralty; and that thereupon such protections shall be made for such apprentices without fee or reward.

And, for encouraging other persons to bind themselves apprentices in the merchants' service, it further enacteth, that persons so binding themselves shall not be compelled or impressed into the service of the crown for three years from the time of such binding, and that, upon certificates of such binding from the Collectors of the respective ports, the Admiralty shall grant protections without fee or reward.

And, for encouraging the coal-trade, it farther enacteth, that during the war there shall be allowed to every vessel employed in that trade, besides the master, mate, and carpenter, one able seaman for every one hundred tun of the vessel, not exceeding three hundred tun, free from impressing.

The 4th & 5th of the late queen reciteth that clause in the act of the 2d & 3d, which exempted voluntary apprentices for three years, and saith, 'Whereas such exemption for three years, which was intended for the encouragement of landmen to bind themselves, hath been manifestly abused for the exempting and protecting of seamen from the service, to the great hindrance and prejudice of her majesty's sea-service: Be it therefore enacted and declared, that no person or persons of the age of eighteen years shall have any exemption or protection from her majesty's sea-service, who shall have been in any sea-service before the time they bound themselves, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding.' †

Let us now take a short view of these acts.

Persons under certain special qualifications are exempted from being impressed.

To that end, in one case, licences are to be granted by his majesty or from the Admiralty, but under proper cautions to prevent abuses.

In other cases, certificates are to be returned from the chief officers of the ports, and protections thereupon granted without fee or reward.

And in every case these exemptions, as they are confined to persons under certain limited qualifications, so are they limited too in point of time, and withal given by way of encouragement. And lastly, the extending the benefit even of a temporary exemption beyond the original intent of the legislature is declared to be an abuse, and an abuse tending to the great hindrance and prejudice of her majesty's sea-service.

Do not these things incontestably presuppose the expediency, the necessity, and the legality of an impress in general? If they do not, one must entertain an opinion of the legislature acting and speaking in this manner, which it will not be decent for me to mention in this place.

For the very notion of an exemption, when granted by statute to particular persons, and this too by way of encouragement, implieth, that, without such exemption, the parties intitled to the benefit of it would by law be liable to the duty or burden which is the subject-matter of that exemption: otherwise the statute doth nothing; it operateth upon nothing, if no legal duty or burden be removed by it. And consequently the granting exemptions to seamen under certain limited qualifications, and for a limited time only, supposeth that all seamen in general, without such exemption, were by law liable to the duty or burden which is the subject-matter of that exemption.

And the many provisions the legislature hath made to prevent abuses with regard to these exemptions, attended with a plain, full and express declaration, that such abuses, namely the extending the benefit of exemptions beyond the intent of the legislature, tend to the great hindrance and prejudice of the sea-service, imply, that the duty or burden, which is the object of all this care and caution, is expedient and necessary to the service.

And this burden is plainly an impress in time of war.

Which, from the authorities I have cited, appeareth to me to be grounded on common and statute-law; in other words, upon a general immemorial usage, allowed, approved, and recognized by many acts of parliament.

Against what I have said it hath been objected, that the practice of pressing is inconsistent with the liberty of the subject, and a breach of Magna Charta.

I readily admit, that an impress is a restraint upon the natural liberty of those who are liable to it; but it must likewise be admitted on the other hand, that every restraint upon natural liberty is not eo nomine illegal, or at all inconsistent with the principles of civil liberty. And if the restraint, be it to what degree soever, appeareth to be necessary to the good and welfare of the whole, and to be warranted by statute-law, as well as immemorial usage, it cannot be complained of otherwise than as a private mischief: which, as I said at the beginning, must, under all governments whatsoever, be submitted to for avoiding a public inconvenience.

As to Magna Charta, it is not pretended that the practice of pressing mariners for the public service is condemned by express words in that statute: and if it be warranted by common and statute-law, it cannot be shewn to be illegal by any consequences drawn from Magna Charta; in like manner as pressing for the land-service could not be deemed illegal, or inconsistent with the principles of our constitution, while there were temporary acts (as there were many in the late war) to warrant it.

Besides, we know that Magna Charta hath been expressly and by name confirmed by many acts of parliament, my lord Coke saith 32; and yet the practice of pressing mariners still continued through all ages, and was never, that I know of, once mentioned in any of those acts as illegal or a violation of the Great Charter.

† N. B. Other acts to the like purpose which did not occur to the author when this argument was delivered are, 1 Anne, c. 16. s. 4. 16. s. 6. 1 Anne, c. 31. s. 4. 1 Geo. II. s. 17. s. 1. s. 3. and s. 21. s. 1. (See also 29 Geo. II. s. 20.)

1 E. III. c. 2.
2 E. III. c. 5.
3 E. III. c. 5. In a similar case, I mean the practice of pressing soldiers for foreign service, there are statutes of an early date, which I conceive, were intended against it; though it was practised long afterwards. But those acts extend only to the case of pressing for the land-service, not a word do I find in them touching the sea-service. One reason of the difference, among others, may be, that the land-service was thought to be sufficiently provided for in ordinary cases by the military tenures; and extraordinary cases, cases of necessity, such as that of a foreign invasion, were expressly excepted. In those cases, saith the 1 E. III. it shall be done as in times past; which we know was by commissions of array; whereas no competent provision was made by law for the ordinary sea-service. There were no naval services due to the crown, except those of the cinque ports and a very few others; which, all together, were too inconsiderable to be mentioned, and bore no sort of proportion to the common exigencies of the public in time of war.

But there is another objection, which deserveth to be considered. It is, that temporary acts have from time to time been made, authorizing the pressing mariners for the sea-service; from whence it is argued, that the legislature, which is supposed to do nothing in vain, would not have given those powers for a time, if the king by his prerogative could have provided for the service without the aid of such temporary acts.

Vol. 679.
in margin. The gentleman who had the care of publishing lord chief justice Hale's History of the Pleas of the Crown referreth to several temporary acts made in the late queen's time, authorizing, as he supposeth, the pressing of soldiers and mariners. I have looked into all those acts. They are solely for pressing soldiers and mariners; not a single word that concerneth the pressing of mariners do I find in any of them.

4. 5 Annæ.
c. 19. There was indeed an act made in that reign for compelling mariners into the service, by methods which, it was then thought, the prerogative alone could not warrant. To that end it authorized and required justices of the peace, and other magistrates to cause privy searches to be made from time to time for mariners, who, as the act expresseth it, did lie hid, withdrew, and concealed themselves, and to deliver them when apprehended to conductors for the service of the crown; and constables and other officers were, by warrants from the magistrates, to make privy searches by night; and were empowered to enter houses and open doors in execution of such warrants, and were required to give an account of their proceedings from time to time to the magistrates on oath, and, in case of negligence or remissness in the premises, were subjected to pecuniary punishments. This is the substance of the first nine sections of the act; which sections, continuing in force only till the first of March 1706, are not printed in the later editions of the statutes at large.

But it cannot, I conceive, be inferred from the new powers given by this act, that an impress by commission from the crown or by admiralty-warrants, which was practised at that very time, was illegal. All that can be inferred is, that the ordinary methods then in use were found imperfect; and therefore the legislature had, for that time, recourse to an extraordinary one, for compelling into the service those, who could not be come at by the ordinary methods; those, who, in the language of the act, lay hid, withdrew, and concealed themselves. And to that end, civil magistrates and civil officers are required and authorized to do, what, in the judgment of the legislature, without the aid of that act, they could not have done, or at least were not compellable to do.

And whoever readeth and considereth the 17th and 18th sections of this act, which I have already cited to another purpose; will hardly conceive, that that parliament had any doubts concerning the legality of an impress by the ordinary methods of law.

16 & 17 Car. I.
c. 5, 23, 26. Indeed the temporary acts of the 16th and 17th of Car. I. come directly to the point. They authorized an impress by admiralty-warrants for a limited time. And had temporary acts of that kind been frequent, or had the practice of pressing been discontinued from the time of Charles I. unless when revived by subsequent temporary acts, I think what hath been said upon the foot of ancient precedents could, after all, have had very little weight. For I freely declare, that ancient precedents alone, unless supported by modern practice, weigh very little with me in questions of this nature; I mean, in questions touching the prerogative. But we all know, that the practice of pressing by admiralty-warrants hath continued, now, near a century since the expiration of those acts of king Charles I. without one statute of the like kind to authorize it.

These acts of king Charles I. do indeed shew, that the prerogative of pressing mariners into the public service was at that time doubted of. And whoever considereth the peculiar circumstances of that time, when the prerogative had in too many instances been carried to great lengths, and when the nation was at the very eve of a civil war upon the subject of liberty and prerogative, and considereth withal that a naval force must in all events, as things then stood, be provided;—whoever, I say, considereth these things, will not wonder, that the prerogative of pressing mariners should, at that very critical time, be called in question; or that, in order to procure an universal submission to a measure necessary at that time, the authority of parliament should be called in, in aid of the prerogative.

c. 23. There was a temporary act made in this very session for pressing for the land-service. It reciteth that a rebellion was on foot in Ireland, and then declareth, almost in the words of 1 E. III. before cited, That by law no man is compellable to go out of his county to serve as a soldier, except in case of necessity of sudden coming of strange enemies into the kingdom, or except he was bound thereto by tenure.

It is worth observing, that no such declaration saving the rights of the subject is to be found in any of the acts of this session for pressing mariners. And the different penning of these acts, made in the same session.

VOL. XI.

sion, and touching cases of so similar a nature, strongly intimateth, that the point was not, even at that critical time, thought equally clear in the one case as in the other. The same observation occurreth with regard to the different penning of all the acts of the late queen for pressing soldiers and mariners, and of that for pressing mariners; the former declare, that it was necessary at that time of war that soldiers and mariners should be raised by the methods prescribed in the acts, 'by common consent and grant in parliament.' These are the words of the acts, and they are the very words made use of to the same purpose in the 25th E. III. already cited. The latter, without any such declaration, barely empowereth and requireth magistrates and other peace officers to make search for and apprehend mariners, who then lay hid, withdrew and concealed themselves, and to send them into the service.

Lord chief justice Hale, in his History of the Pleas of the Crown, speaking of the legality of pressing, which he indeed Vol. 678. seemeth to doubt of, saith, 'He that looks upon the acts enabling pressing of soldiers and mariners for foreign service upon or beyond the sea, namely 17 Car. I. c. 12, 25, 26. may think that those times made some doubt of it. But of this,' saith he, 'I deliver no opinion.'

The chapters are misnumbered. they are 5, 23, 26. That learned man, you see, carrieth the inference from these temporary acts no farther than to render the matter doubtful; and so he leaveth it. But had he lived to see the practice of pressing mariners continue near a century longer, and especially had he seen this practice treated by the legislature in the manner the acts made since the Revolution treat it, I think what was then but matter of doubt would have now appeared to him in a different light. I confess it doth so to me. For rights of every kind, which stand upon the foot of usage, gradually receive new strength in point of light and evidence from the continuance of that usage; as it implieth the tacit content and approbation of every successive age, in which the usage hath prevailed. But when the prerogative hath not only this tacit approbation of all ages, the present as well as the former on its side, but is recognized, or evidently presupposed, by many acts of parliament, as in the present case I think it is, I see no legal objection that can be made to it.

I make no apology for the length of my argument, because I hope the importance of the question will be thought a sufficient excuse for me in that respect. For it is no more nor less than, whether the only effectual method yet found out for manning our navy in time of war, for raising that number of mariners which the legislature from time to time declare to be necessary for defending our coast and protecting our trade,—whether this method be legal or not. This I say is the question. And therefore I could not satisfy myself without entering as far into the merits of it as I could.

And I have delivered my opinion upon it without any reserve.

[N. B. The authorities for pressing mariners for the public service, to be found in Rymer's Fœdera, are so numerous, that the learned author purposely left many of them uncited by him. To some of those in the reigns of Richard II. Henry V. Henry VI. and Edward IV. I have referred in the margin of his argument. But as amongst the commissions and mandatory writs cited in pages 162 and 163, he hath given none which were issued in the reign of Henry IV. I think it not improper to take particular notice in this place of two commissions granted in that king's reign. The first of them was issued in the 12th year of his reign; and being a remarkably strong authority for the practice, it deserves to be here transcribed. It is in the following form.

Rex dilecto sibi Roberto Spellowe servienti suo ad arma, salutem. 8 Rym. 700.

Scias quod assignavimus te, tam ad omnes et singulas naves, bargeas, et balingeras, ac alia vasa portagii triginta doliorem et ultra, in quibuscumque portibus et locis regni nostri Angliæ inveniri poterunt, quam ad tot magistris et marinariis, quot pro gubernatione navium, bargearum, balingerarum et vasorum prædictorum necessarij fuerint, infra libertates et extra, pro denariis nostris prompte et rationabiliter solvendis, arestandum et capiendum, et usque portum civitatis nostræ Londoniæ;

Ad proficiscendum nobiscum in propria persona nostra in præsentis viagio nostro versus partes transmarinas;

Duci faciendum;

Et ad omnes illos quos in hac parte contrarios inveneris seu rebelles arestandum et capiendum, et prisonis nostris mancipandum, in eisdem moraturos quousque pro eorum deliberatione aliter duxerimus ordinandum;

Et ideo tibi præcipimus quod circa præmissa diligenter intendas, ac ea facias et exequaris in forma prædicta:

Damus autem universis et singulis vicecomitibus, majoribus, ballivis, constabulariis, ministris, possessoribus, magistris et marinariis navium, bargearum, et balingerarum, et aliorum vasorum quorumcumque, ac aliis fidelibus et subditis nostris, tam infra libertates quam extra, tendere præsentium, firmiter in mandatis, quod tibi in executione præmissorum pareant, obediant, et intendant, prout decet.

In cujus &c.

Teste Rege apud Westmonasterium Tertio die Septembris.

Per ipsum regem.

By the other, which issued in the 13th year of the same 8 Rym. 710. reign, John Drax, a serjeant at arms, is empowered, by himself and his deputies, to arrest and take up one hundred mariners in the county of Suffolk, one hundred in the county of Kent, and thirty in the county of Essex. And all sheriffs, mayors and other officers are required to be assisting to him in that service. DODSON.]

4 X

A N

1. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is of European descent. This is a fact which has been recognized by the government and the people of the United States for many years. It is a fact which has been recognized by the government and the people of the United States for many years.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

[illegible][illegible]

A N ALPHABETICAL TABLE OF THE NAMES of the PRISONERS or PRINCIPAL PARTIES in the several TRIALS.

To WHICH ARE ADDED,

The DATES of the TRIALS; the CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION; the COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL; the PUNISHMENTS, JUDGMENTS, or EVENTS of the several PROSECUTIONS; with REFERENCES to the VOLUMES in which the TRIALS are respectively contained.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION.	COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
A
BINGTON	Sept. 15, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 134
Astton	Aug. 1, 1729	Murder	Affizes	Acquitted	ix. 181, 203, 209, 218
Anderson	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 993
Anderton	June 3, 1693	Treason	O. B.	Executed	viii. - - 63
Andrews,	Aug. 16, 1650	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	vii. - - 324
Anglesea, Earl	Nov. 11, 1743	Ejectment	Ireland	Verdict for defendant	ix. - - 380
	Aug. 3, 1744	Affault	Ireland	Fined	ix. - - 336
Anna Boleyn, Queen	May, 1536	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. - - 10
Annesley	July 15, 1742	Murder	O. B.	Chance-medley	ix. - - 315
Appletree	April 4, 1658	Treason	O. B.	Pardoned	ii. - - 385
Argyle, Earl	Nov. 1681	Treason	Scotland	Beheaded	ii. 417 vii. 379
Argyle, Marquis	Jan. 23, 1661	Treason	Scotland	Beheaded	iii. - - 441
Armstrong, Sir Thomas	June 14, 1684	Treason	B. R.	Executed	iii. - - 383
Arnold	March 20, 1723-4	Felonious shooting at	Affizes	Reprieved	viii. - - 290
Asaph, Saint Bishop	June 29, 1788	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. - - 304
Arandel, Earl	April 18, 1589	Treason	High Steward	Died in prison	i. 164 xi. 27
Ashby	Jan. 1703	Breach of Privilege	Parliament		viii. - - 89, 124
Ashley	April, 1752	Perjury	O. B.	Pilloried, imprisoned, and transported	x. - - 411
Astton	Jan. 17, 1690	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. - - 455
Astlin	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Atkins, Samuel	Feb. 11, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Acquitted	ii. - - 792
Atkins, William	Aug. 13, 1679	Romish Priest	Affizes	Sentence for Treason	ii. - - 968
Atherbury, Bishop	May, 1723	Treasonable Conspiracy	Parliament	Banished	vi. - - 335
Audley, Lord	April 25, 1631	Rape and Sodomy	High Steward	Beheaded	i. - - 388
Axtel	Oct. 13, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 369
B
Babington	Sept. 14, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 128
Bacon, Lord	March 19, 1620	Bribery and Corruption	H. L.	Fined and imprisoned	i. - - 375
Baillie, David	Feb. 14, 1703-4	Defamation	Scotland	Imprisoned	viii. - - 1195
Baillie, Robert	Dec. 3, 1684	Treason	Scotland	Executed, &c.	iii. - - 1095
Ballard	Sept. 14, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed, &c.	i. - - 128
Balmerino, Lord	March 10, 1609	Treason	Scotland	Pardoned	vii. - - 85
Balmerino, Lord	Dec. 3, 1634	Treasonable Libel	Scotland	Pardoned	i. - - 429
Balmerino, Lord	July, 1746	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. - - 587
Bambridge	May 22, 1729	Murder	O. B.		ix. - - 145
	Jan. 22, 1729-30	Appeal of Murder	G. H.	Acquitted	152
	Dec. 26, 1729	Felony	O. B.		234
Banbury, Earl	January, 1692-3	Murder	B. R.	Arraigned only	viii. - - 50
Barbot	Jan. 5, 1753	Murder	Saint Christopher's	Executed	x. - - 139
Barkstead, Colonel	April 16, 1662	Regicide	B. R.	Executed	viii. - - 309
Barlicorn	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. - - 287
Barnard	May 10, 1758	Threatening Letters	O. B.	Acquitted	x. Ap. - - 447
Barnardiston, Sir Samuel	Feb. 14, 1683	Misdemeanour	G. H.	Fined	iii. - - 933
Barnewell	Sept. 14, 186	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 128
Barroverie, Sir James	March 12, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Beheaded	i. - - 5
Bastwick	June 14, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Pilloried, ears cut off, and imprisoned	i. - - 481
Bateman	Dec. 9, 1685	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. - - 162
Bates, John	M. Term, 1604	Contempt	Exchequer		xi. - - 29
Bates, Thomas	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder Plot	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 232
Batray	July 16, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Reprieved	ix. - - 555
Bayard, Colonel	Feb. 19, 1701	Treason	New-York	Reprieved	v. - - 419
Baynton	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible Marriage	B. R.	Reprieved	v. - - 464
Baxter, Clerk	May 20, 1685	Libel	G. H.	Fined	x. Ap. - - 37
Beadle	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 585
Beaflay	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 585
Beauchamp	March 12, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Beheaded	i. - - 15
Bedford, Earl	May 29, 1630	Seditious Writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xii. - - 121
Belknap, Sir R.L.C.J.C.B.	March 2, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Banished	i. - - 13
Belamy	Sept. 13, 1536	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 134
Bennet, Ralph	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Bernardi, Major	March 25, 1696	Assassination Plot	B. R.	Died in prison	x. Ap. - - 64
Berry, Henry	Feb. 10, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Executed	ii. - - 760
Berry, John	March 1, 1755	Accessory before the Fact	O. B.	Pilloried and imprisoned	x. - - 417
Berwick	July 17, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. - - 559
Bibel	Oct. 5, 1681	Affault and Battery	Southwark	Fined	iii. - - 413
	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. - - 630
Bishops, Seven	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. - - 304
Blackmore	E. and M. Terms, 1765	False Imprisonment	C. B.	Damages	xi. - - 307
Blackston, Colonel	Aug. 16, 1649	Treason	Affizes	Executed	vii. - - 312

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATED.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Blake, King's Counsel	March 3, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Executed	i. — 14
Blague	July 13, 1683	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	iii. — 739
Blandy, Mary	Feb. 29, 1752	Parricide	Oxon	Executed	x. — 1
Blunt, Sir Christopher	March 5, 1600	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	i. 209 vii. 47
Bolton	June 25, 1662	Refusing to take the Oaths	O. B.	Imprisoned	ii. — 463
Boleyn Anna, Queen	May, 1536	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Bonnet, Major	Oct. 30, 1718	Piracy	Carolina	Executed	vi. — 156
Borosky	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 469
Bothwell, Earl	April 12, 1567	Regicide	Scotland	Acquitted	i. — 78
Bouchier	Feb. 28, 1703	Treason	B. R.	Reprieved	v. — 506
Braddon	Feb. 7, 1683	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 853
Bradshaw, Deering	June 1, 1688	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	vii. — 648
——, James	Oct. 27, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 576
Brambre, Mayor of London	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Executed	i. — 1
Brereton	May, 1536	Treason	Commissioners	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Brewster	Feb. 22, 1663	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, and imprisoned	ii. — 538
Bristol, Bishop of	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Britton	Feb. 24, 1703-4	Conspiracy	B. B.	Fined	viii. — 178
Broadfoot	Aug. 30, 1754	Murder	Bristol	Manlaughter	xi. — 349
Brodway	June 27, 1631	Rape and Sodomy	B. R.	Executed	i. — 396
Brommich	Aug. 13, 1679	Romish Priest	Affizes	Sentence for treason	ii. — 963
Brooke	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	vii. — 63
Brookesby	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Reprieved	vii. — 63
Brooks	Feb. 22, 1663	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, and imprisoned	ii. — 528
Buckner	Feb. 7, 1633	Libel	C. S.	Censured	i. — 418
Burleigh, Simon de	March 12, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Beheaded	i. — 15
Burleigh, Sir William	March 12, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Banished	i. — 13
Burton	June 14, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Pilloried, ears cut off, and imprisoned	i. — 481
Busby	July 25, 1681	Romish Priest	Affizes	Reprieved	iii. — 328
Butler	Oct. 12, 1699	Forgery	O. B.	Fined	v. — 232
Byron, Lord	April 16, 1765	Murder	H. L.	Discharged	x. — 498*
C.
Cambridge university	April, 1687	Contempt		Vice Chancellor deprived	iv. — 254
Cameron, Doctor	May, 17, 1753	Treason	B. R.	Executed	x. — 204
Campman	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Affizes	Fined	x. Ap. — 85
Canning, Eliz.	April, 1754	Perjury	O. B.	Transported	x. — 205
Canterbury, Archbishop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Carew	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 330
Carey, Sir John, baron of Exchequer	March 2, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Banished	i. — 13
Carliel	June 27, 1612	Murder	O. B.	Executed	vii. — 91
Carnegie	July 25, 1728	Murder	Scotland	Acquitted	ix. — 26
Carnwath, earl	Feb. 9, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Pardoned	vi. — 1
Carr	July 2, 1680	Libel	G. H.		iii. — 57
Carter	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chichester	Executed	ix. — 716
Cave	June 1, 1688	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	vii. — 648
Cavenagh	March 7, 1688	Cow-stealing	Ireland	Executed	iv. — 408
Carrington	M. Term, 1765	Seizure of papers	C. B.	Damages	ix. — 313
Cellier, Eliz.	June 11, 1680	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. — 32
	Sept. 1680	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried and fined	iii. — 89
Chadwick	July 16, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 555
Chambers	1629	Seditious speeches	C. S.	Fined	xi. — 118
Charles, king	Jan. 20, 1648	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	i. — 986
Charnel	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Charnock, John	Sept. 15, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 134
Charnock, Robert	Nov. 23, 1682	Misdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. — 519
	March 11, 1695	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 562
Chetwynd	Oct. 12, 1743	Murder	O. B.	Pardoned	ix. — 527
Chichester, bishop	March 6, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Pardoned	i. — 15
	June 29, 1638	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Churchill	May 8, 1704	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Clare, earl	May 29, 1630	Seditious writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. — 121
Clarendon, earl	July 10, 1663	Treason	Parliament	Banished	ii. — 554
Clarke	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	vii. — 63
Clement	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 338
Cobby	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chichester	Executed	ix. — 716
Cobham, lord	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	High Steward	Imprisonment	vii. — 163
Coke	March 16, 1721	Maiming	Affizes	Executed	vi. — 212
Cole	Sept. 2, 1692	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	iv. — 506
Coleman	Nov. 27, 1678	Treason	B. R.	Executed	ii. — 660
Colledge	Aug. 17, 1681	Treason	Oxon	Executed	iii. — 341
Constable, capt.	Oct. 8, 1702	Desertion	Court-martial	Shot	v. — 445
Cook, John	Oct. 13, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 341
——, Peter	May 9, 1696	Treason	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. — 738
——, Shadrack	April 3, 1696	Sedition	Affizes	Censured and imprisoned	x. Ap. — 43
Conningsmark, count	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	iii. — 466
Copley	Nov. 13, 1603	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.		vii. — 63
Corbet, Miles	April 16, 1622	Regicide	B. R.	Executed	viii. — 369
——, sir John	Nov. 22, 1627	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Discharged	vii. — 114
Corbett, Richard	Jan. 22, 1729-30	Appeal of murder	Nisi Prius	Acquitted	ix. — 152
Corker	July 18, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 917
	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Cornish	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 639
	Oct. 19, 1685	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 139
Cornwallis, lord	1678	Murder	High Steward	Acquitted	ii. — 725
Cotton, Edward	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 586
Cotton, Sir Robert	May 29, 1630	Seditious writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. — 121
Cowper	July 16, 1699	Murder	Affizes	Acquitted	v. — 194
Cranburne	April 21, 1696	Treason	Westminster	Executed	iv. — 698
Creighton, lord Sanguire	June 27, 1612	Murder	B. R.	Executed	vii. — 86
Crook	June 25, 1662	Not taking oaths	O. B.	Imprisoned	ii. — 462

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Cromartie, earl	July, 1746	Treason	H. L.	Reprieved	ix. — 587
Crompton, bp. of London	Aug. 1686	Contempt	Ecclef. Com.	Suspended	iv. — 247
Crone	May 19, 1690	Treason	O. B.		x. Ap. — 40
Crook	June 25, 1662	Not taking oaths	O. B.	Imprisoned	ii. — 463
Crosby,	E. Term, 1694	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	x. Ap. — 42
mayor of London	E. Term, 1771	Hab. Corp.	C. B.	Remanded	xi. — 335
Cuffe	March 5, 1600	Treason	Com. Oy. & Term.	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
Curl	M. Term, 1714	Libel	B. R.	Pilloried	x. Ap. — 92
Curtis	1679	Libel	G. H.		ii. — 1042
D.
Dacres, lord	July 9, 1535	Treason	High Steward	Acquitted	xi. — 10
Dagleish	June 13, 1567	Treason	Scotland	Executed	viii. — 327
Dammaree	April 18, 1710	Treason	O. B.	Pardoned	viii. — 218
Danby, earl	Dec. 1678	Treason	Parliament	Pardoned	ii. — 731
Darby	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Parliament	Fine and imprisonment	vii. — 47
Darnel, fir Thomas	Nov. 15, 1627	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Discharged	vii. — 114
Davers, fir Charles	March 5, 1601	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	i. 209 vii. 47
Davis, fir John	March 5, 1601	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
Davison	March 28, 1587	Mispris. and contempt	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 20
Dawson	Oct. 19, 1696	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 1
Deacon	July 17, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 558
Deagle	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Delamere, lord	Jan. 14, 1685	Treason	High Steward	Acquitted	iv. — 210
Denew	Feb. 14, 1703	Affault and conspiracy	B. R.	Fined	viii. — 178
Derwentwater, earl	Feb. 9, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	vi. — 1
Devonshire, earl	E. Term, 1687	Affault	B. R.	Fined 30000l.	xi. — 133
Digby, fir Everard	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder-plot	Westminster	Executed	i. — 232
Disney	June 25, 1685	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 558
Donn	Sept. 14, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 128
Dover	Feb. 22, 1663	Libel	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, and im- prisoned	ii. — 545
Downes	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 396
Dudley, fir Edward	Aug. 19, 1553	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. — 26
Edmund	July 16, 1509	Treason	Northampton	Beheaded	xi. — 3
E.
Earl, fir Walter	Nov. 22, 1627	Habeas Corpus	B. R.	Discharged	vii. — 114
Earles	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Egan	March 1, 1755	Accessory before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and imprisoned	x. — 417
Elliot, Edmund	Jan. 17, 1690	Treason	O. B.	Not tried	iv. — 410
Elliot, fir John	M. Term, 1629	Seditious speeches in Parl.	B. R.	Fined and imprisoned	vii. — 243
Ellis	Aug. 6, 1734	Quo Warranto	Affizes	Judgment	x. Ap. 127
Elwes, fir Jeevis	Nov. 16, 1615	Murder	G. H.	Executed	i. — 341
Ely, bishop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Empson, fir Thomas	July 16, 1509	Treason	Northampton	Beheaded	xi. — 3
Essex, earl	Feb. 19, 1600	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	i. — 197
earl and countefs	1613	Impotency	Delegates	Divorced	i. — 315
Eviot	Nov. 15, 1600	Treason	Scotland	Executed	vii. — 33
F.
Fagg, fir John	May, 1675	Appeal to the Lords	H. of Commons	Taken into custody	vii. — 453
Farewell	June 20, 1682	Libels	G. H.	Pilloried and fined	iii. — 505
Farrel	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Faulconer	July 12, 1652	Perjury	B. S.	Imprisoned	vii. — 343
Fawkes	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 232
Fenwick	June 13, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 829
Fenwick, fir John	Nov. 1696	Treason	Parliament	Beheaded	v. — 440
Fernley	Oct. 19, 1685	Treason	O. B.	Reprieved	iv. — 139
Ferrers, earl	April 16, 1760	Murder	H. L.	Executed	x. — 478
Fielding	Dec. 4, 1706	Bigamy	O. B.	Pardoned	v. — 610
Fiennes, colonel	June 25, 1707		Doctors Commons	Marriage annulled	v. — 628
Finch, fir John, lord keeper	Dec. 14, 1643	Cowardice	C. of war	Pardoned	i. — 766
Fisher, bishop of Rochester	Jan. 1640	Treason	H. of Commons	Flight	vii. — 309
Fitzharris	June 17, 1535	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. — 7
Fitzpatrick	March 25, 1681	Treason	B. R.	Executed	iii. — 224
Fleetwood	June 27, 1631	Rape and sodomy	B. R.	Executed	i. — 396
Fletcher	Oct. 10, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 311
Fogg, captain	July 16, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 552
Ford	Oct. 8, 1702	Defertion	Martial	Shot	v. — 445
Fortescue, fir John	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Fowles, fir David	March, 1603	Parl. election	H. of Commons	New writ	vii. — 67
Fowles, Henry	H. Term, 1633	Traducing of state	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. — 131
Fox	H. Term, 1633	Traducing of state	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. — 131
Frances	June 30, 1654	Treason	H. C. J.	Pardoned	ii. — 212
Francis	July 16, 1685	Murder	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. — 34
Franklin, James	Jan. 22, 1716	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	vi. — 58
Franklin, Richard	Nov. 27, 1615	Murder	B. R.	Executed	i. — 346
Freeman	Dec. 3, 1731	Libel	B. R.	Imprisoned and fined	ix. — 255
Friend, fir John	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Fuller, William	March 23, 1695	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 599
Fulthorp, fir Roger, J. C. B.	Jan. 19, 1701	Libel	Parliament	Imprisoned, pilloried, &c.	v. — 441
G.	May 20, 1702	Impostor	G. H.	Pilloried, &c.	viii. — 78
Gage	March 2, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Banished	i. — 13
Gahagan	Sept. 15, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 134
Garland	March 1, 1755	Accessory before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and imprisoned	x. — 417
Garnet	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 398
Gascoigne, fir Thomas	March 28, 1606	Gunpowder plot	G. H.	Executed	i. — 248
Gates, Henry	Feb. 11, 1679	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. — 1
Gates, fir John	Aug. 19, 1553	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. — 26
Gavan	June 13, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 329
Gaunt, Elizabeth	Oct. 19, 1685	Treason	O. B.	Beheaded	iv. — 150
Gerhard	June 30, 1654	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. — 215
Germaine	Nov. 24, 1692	Crim. con.	B. R.	Damages	viii. — 27
Gibson, John	Aug. 1734	Quo Warranto	Affizes	Judgment	ii. — 183
Gibbons, John	July 18, 1651	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	x. Ap. — 118

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Gibbs	Dec. 11, 1662	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 478
Gilbert, L. C. B.	July 28, 1719	Contempt	Ireland	Imprisoned	vi. - - 188
Giles	July 14, 1680	Attempt to murder	O. B.	Pilloried and fined	iii. - - 65
Goddard	Sept. 1751	Robbery	O. B.	Acquitted	x. - - 411
Golding and others	Sept. 1693	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	viii. - - 73
Goodenough	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. - - 630
Goodere	March 17, 1740	Murder	Bristol	Executed	vi. - - 795
Goodwin, sir Francis	March, 1603	Parl. election	House of Commons	New writ	vii. - - 67
Gowrie, earl	Nov. 15, 1600	Treason	Scotland	Attainted	vii. - - 33
Grant	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 232
Gray, lord	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	High Steward	Imprisoned	vii. - - 63
Greaves, John	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
—, William	March 14, 1704	Piracy	Scotland	Executed	v. - - 572
Green, capt.	Feb. 10, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Executed	ii. - - 760
Green, Robert	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Green, William	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 585
Greg	Jan. 19, 1707-8	Treason	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. - - 77
Gregory, George	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Grey, lord	June 25, 1540	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. - - 17
	Nov. 23, 1682	Misdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. - - 519
	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. - - 630
Grey, Isaac	June 25, 1662	Refusing oaths	O. B.	Imprisoned	ii. - - 463
Grove	Dec. 17, 1678	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 696
H.
Hacker	Oct. 15, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 382
Hales	Feb. 13, 1588	Sedition	C. S.	Fined and imprisoned	vii. - - 729
Hales, sir Edward	June 1, 1686	Not taking oaths	B. R.	Verdict for defendant	vii. - - 612
Hales, William	Dec. 7, 1728	Forgery	O. B.		x. Ap. - - 94
	Jan. 20, 1728-9				ix. - - 67
		Misdemeanour			ix. - - 76
		Forgery		Imprisonment	ix. - - 77
	Jan. 28,	Misdemeanour	O. B.		ix. - - 93
		Forgery	O. B.	Fined, pilloried, and died in prison	ix. - - 103
Hales, Robert	Jan. 27, 1728-9	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Pardoned	ix. - - 68
Halifax, lord	Feb. 15, 1700-1	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. 339 viii. 512
Hamilton, duke	Feb. 9, 1648	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - - 1
Hammond	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chichester	Executed	ix. - - 716
Hampden, sir Edmund	Nov. 22, 1627	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Discharged	vii. - - 114
—, John	T. Term, 1638	Ship-money	Exchequer	Judgment	i. - - 505
	Feb. 6, 1683	High Crimes	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 824
	Dec. 30, 1685	Treason	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. - - 207
Harcourt	June 13, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 829
Harding	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Affizes	Fined	x. Ap. - - 86
Harris, Benjamin	Feb. 5, 1679	Libel	G. H.	Pilloried, fined, and imprisoned	ii. - - 1037
—, John	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Parliament	Fined and imprisoned	vii. - - 317
Harrison, Clerk	T. Term, 1638	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Fined and imprisoned	i. - - 720
—, Henry	April 6, 1692	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iv. - - 448
—, Thomas	Oct. 11, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 313
Hartwell	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible marriage	B. R.	Acquitted	v. - - 465
Harvey	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 390
Hastings corporation	T. Term, 1736	Mandamus	B. R.	Admittance	x Ap. - - 138
Hathaway	March 24, 1702	Impostor	Affizes	Pilloried, &c.	v. - - 482
	March 26, 1703	Riot	Affizes		v. - - 504
Haverham, lord	June 24, 1701	Words spoken	H. L.	Charge dismissed	v. - - 339
Hawkins	March 11, 1668	Felony	Affizes	Acquitted	ii. - - 595
Hay	June 13, 1567	Treason	Scotland	Executed, &c.	viii. - - 327
Hayes	Nov. 21, 1684	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. - - 1067
Heath, Mary	Feb. 8, 1744	Perjury	Ireland	Acquitted	ix. - - 432
Hendley, Clerk	July 15, 1719	Preaching charity-sermon	Affizes	Fined	x. Ap. - - 86
Hepburn	June 13, 1567	Treason	Scotland	Executed, &c.	viii. - - 327
Heveningham	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 400
Hewet, doctor	June 1, 1658	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - - 281
Hickford	Feb. 9, 1571	Treason	B. R.	Judgment	i. - - 117
Hicks	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	Affizes	Fined	x. Ap. - - 86
Hill	Feb. 10, 1678	Murder	B. R.	Executed	ii. - - 760
Hoe	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Hind	Dec. 11, 1662	Treason	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 478
Hollis, Denzil	M. Term, 1629	Seditious speeches in Parl.	B. R.	Fined and imprisoned	vii. - - 242
Hollis, sir John	Nov. 10, 1615	Traducing public justice	C. S.	Fined	i. - - 333
Holloway	April 21, 1684	Treason	B. R.	Executed	iii. - - 943
Holt, sir John, J. C. B.	March 2, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Banished	i. - - 13
Hont	July 12, 1683	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iii. - - 702
Horne	July 4, 1777	Libel	B. R.	Fined, imprisoned, &c.	xi. - - 264
Howe	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. - - 287
Huggins	May 21, 1729	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	ix. - - 112
Hulet	Oct. 15, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 385
Hurly	May 31, 1701	Perjury and cheat	Ireland	Fined	v. - - 384
Hutchinson and Charles	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.		iii. - - 949, 978
I.
Jackson	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Affizes	Died in prison	ix. - - 716
James	Nov. 14, 1662	Treason	B. R.	Executed	ii. - - 470
Jeffereys, Elizabeth	March, 1752	Murder	Chelmsford	Executed	x. - - 36
Jephth	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. - - 630
Jenkes	June 27, 1676	Seditious speech	Privy Council	Fined	vii. - - 468
	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. - - 630
Jenkins	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. - - 287
Jennison	June 21, 1686	High crimes	B. R.	Imprisoned, pilloried, whipped, and fined	vii. - - 645
Jones, David	Nov. 23, 1682	Misdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. - - 519
—, Edward	Sept. 15, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 134
—, Frances	Nov. 23, 1682	Misdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. - - 519
—, John	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 338

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Jones, Rebecca	Nov. 23, 1682	Misdemeanour	B. R.	No judgment	iii. — 519
—, fir Thomas, J. B. R.	July, 1688	Breach of privilege	H. of Commons	Taken into custody	viii. — 1
—, Thomas	Sept. 1693	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	viii. — 73
Ireland, duke	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	i. — 1
—, William	Dec. 17, 1678	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 696
Ivy, lady K.	June 3, 1684	Tortious entry	B. R.	Ejected	vii. — 571
Keach	Oct. 8, 1664	Libel	Affizes	Pilloried, fined, and imprisoned	ii. — 550
Kelly	May 1723	Treasonable conspiracy	Parliament	Imprisoned for life	vi. — 335
Kemish	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Arraigned only	ii. — 663
Kendal	Oct. 31, 1695	Habeas Corpus	B. R.	Bailed	iv. — 554
Kenn, bp. of Bath and Wells	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Kenmore, viscount	Feb. 9, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	vi. — 1
Kerne	Aug. 4, 1679	Treason	Affizes	Acquitted	ii. — 961
Key	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Keys, Robert	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Westminster	Executed	i. — 232
—, Thomas	March 11, 1695	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 562
Kidd, capt. and others	May 8, 1701	Murder and piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Kilmarnock, Earl	July 1746	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. — 587
King	March 11, 1695	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 562
Kinlock	1746	Treason	Southwark	Not tried	ix. — 567
Kirby and others	Oct. 8, 1702	Desertion	Court-martial	Shot	v. — 445
Knevet, fir Edmund	June 10, 1441	Striking in the palace	Commissioners	Executed	xi. — 16
Knightley, Alexander	May 20, 1696	Treason	B. R.	Pardoned	iv. — 777
—, fir Richard	Feb. 13, 1588	Sedition and libel	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 29
Knowles, C. commonly called earl of Banbury	Jan. 1692-3	Murder	B. R.	Arraigned only	viii. — 50
Knox	Nov. 25, 1679	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Fined and imprisoned	ii. — 970
Kingston, duches L.	April 15, 1776	Bigamy	H. L.	Discharged	xi. — 198
Lake, bishop of Chichester	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Lalor	H. Term, 1607	Romish Priest	Ireland	Premunire	xi. — 69
Lamley	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Lane	Nov. 25, 1679	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Pilloried, fined, and imprisoned	ii. — 970
Langhorne	June 14, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 878
Latimer	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Pardoned	ii. — 585
Laud, archbishop	March 12, 1643	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	i. — 824
Layer	Nov. 21, 1722	Treason	B. R.	Executed	vi. — 229
Layton, fir Thomas	H. Term, 1633	Traduction	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. — 131
Lee, capt.	Nov. 26, 1600	Treason	O. B.	Executed	vii. — 44
Leech	Oct. 14, 1682	Contempt	O. B.	Acquitted	x. Ap. — 31
Leighton, doctor	June 4, 1630	Libel	C. S.	Whipped, pilloried, branded, &c.	xi. — 120
Lewis	March 28, 1679	Treason	Affizes	Executed	xi. — 801
Lilburne, John	Feb. 9, 1637	Libels	C. S.	Pilloried, whipped, imprisoned, fined, & banished	vii. — 286
—, His Jury	Oct. 24, 1649	Treason	G. H.	Acquitted	ii. — 19
Lilburne, Robert	July 13, 1653	Return from banishment	H. Com.	Acquitted	vii. — 354
Limerick	Aug. 20, 1653	Regicide	O. B.	Examined	ii. — 81
Lindfay	Oct. 16, 1660	Treason	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 394
Lisle, lady	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 585
Lloyd, bp. of St. Asaph	April 19, 1704	Treason	Winton	Reprieved	v. — 508
—, bp. of Worcester	Aug. 27, 1685	Libel	B. R.	Beheaded	iv. — 105
—, His Son	June 29, 1688	Breach of privilege	H. Commons	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Loekton, king's serj. at law	Nov. 18, 1702	The like	H. Commons	Removed	viii. — 82
Loff	Nov. 18, 1702	Treason	Parliament	Prosecution ordered	viii. — 82
Logan	March 2, 1388	Piracy	O. B.	Banished	i. — 13
London, bishop	May 8, 1701	Treason	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
London, city	June, 1609	Contempt	Scotland	Attainted	vii. — 78
Lovat, lord	Aug. 1686	Quo Warranto	Ecclef. Com.	Suspended	iv. — 247
Love	Hil. T. 1683	Treason	B. R.	Charter forfeited	iv. — 769
Lowick	March 9, 1746-7	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	ix. — 621
Lumden	June 20, 1651	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. — 83
—, Alexander M.	April 22, 1696	Treason	Westminster	Executed	iv. — 718
Macclesfield, earl	Nov. 10, 1615	Misdemeanour	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Macdaniel	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	C. S.	Fined	i. — 333
Macdonald	May 6, 1725	High crimes	H. L.	Fined	vi. — 477
Macgrowther	March 1, 1755	Accessory before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and imprisoned	x. — 417
Macguire, lord	Dec. 10, 1747	Treason	B. R.	Pardoned	ix. — 586
Magdalen College	July 31, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Reprieved	ix. — 566
Maitland	Feb. 10, 1644	Contempt	B. B.	Executed	i. — 949
Markham, fir Griffin	June 1637	Perjury	Ecclesiastical	Fellows expelled	iv. — 262
Marshall, William	July 28, 1681	Treason	Scotland	Acquitted	viii. Ap. — 436
Marson	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	Com. of Oj & Term.	Imprisoned	vii. — 63
Marten, Harry	July 13, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 917
Matthews	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Mawgridge	July 16, 1699	Murder	B. R.	Acquitted	v. — 194
Mead, William	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 392
Merriam	Oct. 30, 1719	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 680
Merrick, fir Gilly	July 1, 1706	Murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 61
Messenger	Sept. 1, 1670	Tumult	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 610
Mayne	Feb. 14, 1703-4	Assault, &c.	B. R.	Acquitted	viii. — 178
Millington	March 5, 1600-1	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
Mills	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 585
Mitchel	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 399
Moders, German princess	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 393
Mohun, lord	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Chichester	Executed	ix. — 716
	Jan. 7, 1677	Attempt to murder	Scotland	Executed	ii. — 623
	June 3, 1663	Bigamy	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 498
	Jan. 31, 1692	Murder	H. L.	Acquitted	vii. — 910
	March 29, 1699	Murder	H. L.	Acquitted	v. — 180

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION.	COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Moncrief	Nov. 15, 1600	Treason	Scotland	Executed	vii. — 33
Money	E. Term, 1765	False Imprisonment	C. B.	Damages	xi. — 397
Monson, fir Thomas	Dec. 1, 1615	Murder	G. H.	Not tried	i. — 347
Mordaunt	June 1, 1658	Treason	H. C. J.	Acquitted	ii. — 292
More, lord chancellor	May 7, 1535	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	i. — 59
Morgan	July 16, 1746	Treason	Southwark	Executed	ix. — 561
Morley, lord	April 30, 1666	Murder	High Steward	Discharged	vii. — 42
Morris, colonel	Aug. 16, 1649	Forgery	Parliament	Fined and imprisoned	vii. — 320
—, John	Sept. 21, 1747	Treason	Affizes	Executed	vii. — 317
Mostyn, governor	T. Term, 1773	Banishment	Common Pleas	Damages	xi. — 162
Mullins	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Munson	July 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Murphy	Jan. 13, 1753	Forgery	O. B.	Executed	x. — 183
N.
Nairn, lord	Feb. 9, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Pardoned	vi. — 1
Nairn, Katharine	Aug. 5, 1765	Incest and murder	Scotland	Escaped	x. — 479
Napper	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Naylor	Dec. 1656	Blasphemy	H. Commotts	Whipped, pilloried, branded, &c.	ii. — 265
Nevil, archbishop of York	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	i. — 1
Nithisdale, earl	Feb. 9, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	vi. — 1
Norfolk, duke	Dec. 13, 1546	Treason	Westminster	Saved	xi. — 18
—, duke and duchess	Jan. 16, 1571	Treason		Beheaded	i. — 82
	Jan. 1691	Adultery		Marriage dissolved	viii. — 7
	Feb. 1699			Divorced	v. — 239
Norkott	1628	Murder	H. L.	Executed	x. Ap. — 29
Norriss	May 1536	Treason	Affizes	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Northampton, earl	Aug. 18, 1553	Treason	Commissioners	Beheaded	xi. — 26
Northumberland, duke	Aug. 18, 1553	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 26
O.
Oates	June 18, 1684	Scand. mag.	B. R.	Damages	iii. — 987
	May 8, 1685	Perjury	B. R.	Pilloried, whipped, fined, &c.	iv. — 1
	May 9, 1685	Perjury	B. R.	Pilloried, whipped, fined, &c.	iv. — 66
Ogilvie, a Jesuit	Feb. 28, 1615	Treason	Scotland	Executed	vii. — 95
—, Patrick	Aug. 5, 1765	Murder	Scotland	Executed	x. — 479
Okeman	1628	Murder	Affizes	Executed	x. Ap. — 29
Okey, colonel	April 16, 1660	Regicide	B. R.	Executed	viii. — 369
Oldcastle, lord Cobham	Sept. 23, 1413	Herefy	Arch. of Canterbury	Hanged and burnt	i. — 36
Oneby	March, 1725-26	Murder	O. B.	Died in prison	ix. — 14
Owen	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	x. Ap. — 196
Owens	July 6, 1752	Libel	G. H.	Acquitted	v. — 287
Orford, earl	Feb. 15, 1700-1	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. 339 viii. 512
Oxford, earl	June 24, 1717	Treason	H. L.	Acquitted	vi. — 102
P.
Pain	June 20, 1682	Libel	G. H.	Fined	iii. — 505
Palmer, earl of Castlemaine	June 23, 1680	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	iii. — 36
—, fir Thomas	Oct. 26, 1689	Treason	H. Commons	Bailed	iv. — 397
Papillon	Aug. 19, 1553	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. — 26
Parham, fir Edward	Nov. 6, 1684	False arrest	G. H.	Damages, 10,000l:	iii. — 1072
Parris	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	Winton	Acquitted	vii. — 63
Parrot	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 993
Parry	May 8, 1701	Piracy	O. B.	Executed	v. — 287
Pemberton, fir Francis J. K. B.	Feb. 25, 1584	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 121
Pembroke, earl	July 1689	Breach of privilege	H. Commons	Imprisoned	viii. — 1
Penn	April 4, 1678	Murder	H. L.	Discharged	ii. — 641
Pennington	Sept. 1, 1670	Tumult	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 610
Penruddock, colonel	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 391
Perkins, fir William	April 19, 1655	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Beheaded	ii. — 259
Perrot, fir John	March 24, 1695	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. — 627
Perry	April 27, 1592	Robbery	Westminster	Died in prison	i. — 188
	1661	Murder	Affizes	Pardoned	x. Ap. — 29
Peterborough, bishop	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Executed	x. Ap. — 29, 30
Peters	Oct. 13, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Pickering	Dec. 17, 1678	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 357
Pilkington	May 8, 1683	Riot	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 696
Phillips	Dec. 11, 1662	Treason	G. H.	Fined	ii. — 630
Player, fir Thomas	May 8, 1683	Riot	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 478
Plunket, John	May 1723	Treason	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
—, Oliver	June 8, 1681	Treasonable conspiracy	B. R.	Executed	iii. — 291
Pordage, doctor	Sept. 1654	Insufficiency	Parliament	Imprisoned	vi. — 335
Porteous, captain	July 5, 1736	Murder	Commissioners	Ejected	ii. — 217
Porter	Dec. 10, 1684	Murder	Scotland	Executed	vi. — 763
Portland, earl	1701	High crimes	O. B.	Pardoned	x. Ap. — 74, n.
Potter	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	H. L.	Acquitted	v. — 339
Powie	June 13, 1567	Treason	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 398
Poyntz	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Scotland	Executed	viii. — 327
Prance	June 15, 1686	Perjury	Parliament	Imprisoned and fined	vii. — 317
Pratt	July 15, 1719	Collecting charity	King's Bench	Pilloried, whipped, &c.	viii. — 442, n.
—, bishop of Rochester	1692	Treasonable conspiracy	Affizes	Fined	x. Ap. — 86
Predicks	July 24, 1680	Treason	Privy Council	No prosecution	viii. — 37
Predson, viscount	Jan. 17, 1690	Treason	Affizes	Acquitted	iii. — 79
Price, Anne	Feb. 3, 1679	Subornation of perjury	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. — 410
—, John	March 6, 1688	Treason	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 1017
Priest	Jan. 26, 1615	Sending a challenge	Ireland	Not tried	iv. — 401
Prynn	Feb. 7, 1633	Libel	C. S.	Fine, commitment, &c.	xi. — 112
	June 14, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Fined, mutilated, &c.	i. — 478
Purchase	April 18, 1710	Treason	C. S.	Pilloried, ears cut off, and imprisoned	i. — 481
			O. B.	Pardoned	viii. — 267
Q.
Queles	June 13, 1704	Piracy	New England	Executed	viii. — 205

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Raleigh, sir Walter	Nov. 17, 1603	Treason	Com. of Oy & Term.	Beheaded	i. - - 212
Rapley	July 20, 1681	False return of writ	Affizes		viii. - - 94 n.
Ratcliffe	Nov. 21, 1746	Treason	O. B.	Beheaded	ix. - - 582
Rea, lord, and Ramsay	1631	Appeal of treason	Chivalry	Duel prevented	xi. - - 124
Reading	April 24, 1679	Misdemeanour	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Pilloried, fined, and imprisoned	ii. - - 806
Reason	Feb. 3, 1721	Murder	B. R.	Burnt in the hand	vi. - - 196
Redding	July 15, 1742	Murder	O. B.		ix. - - 315
Riccards, Arthur	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
, Samuel
Richardson	April 4, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 585
Ring	Oct. 19, 1685	Treason	O. B.	Reprieved	iv. - - 130
Rochester, Atterbury, bishop	May, 1723	Treasonable conspiracy	Parliament	Banished	vi. - - 335
, Fisher, bishop	June 17, 1535	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. - - 7
, Spratt, bishop	1692	Restoration plot	Privy Council	Cleared	viii. - - 37
Rocheforde, viscount	May, 1536	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. - - 10
Roe, Owen	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 394
, Richard	Oct. 31, 1695	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Bailed	iv. - - 554
Rogers	July 16, 1699	Murder	Affizes	Acquitted	v. - - 194
Rookwood, Ambrose	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 232
Roswell	April 2, 1696	Treason	Westminster	Executed	iv. - - 661
Roufe	Nov. 18, 1684	Treason	B. R.	Pardoned	iii. - - 997
Rumley	July 12, 1683	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iii. - - 731
Russel, William	July 18, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 917
, lord	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 993
Ruthven, Alexander	July 13, 1683	Treason	O. B.	Beheaded	iii. - - 706
, Henry	Nov. 15, 1600	Treason	Scotland	Attainted, &c.	viii. - - 33
, S.	Nov. 15, 1600	Treason	Scotland	Executed, &c.	vii. - - 33
Sacheverel, doctor	Feb. 27, 1709	High Crimes	H. L.	Silenced	v. - - 641
, William	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949
Saintjohn	April 15, 1615	Contempt	C. S.	Fined and imprisoned	xi. - - 110
Salisbury, sir John	May 29, 1630	Seditious writings	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. - - 121
, Mary	March 12, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Executed	i. - - 15
, Thomas	March 12, 1712-13	Murder	Affizes	Bailed	ix. - - 1
Salmon, Francis	Sept. 14, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 128
, James	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Sancroft, archbishop	March 1, 1755	Accessory before the fact	O. B.	Pilloried and imprisoned	x. - - 417
Sands, Thomas	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. - - 300
Sanquaire, lord	M. Term. 1683	Infringement of charter	B. R.	Convicted	vii. - - 493
Savage	June 27, 1612	Murder	B. R.	Executed	vii. - - 86
Sayer, Mary	Sept. 13, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. - - 128
Scots, queen	March 12, 1712-13	Petty treason	Affizes	Bailed	ix. - - 1
Scot	Oct. 12, 1586	Traitorous conspiracy	Com. of Oy & Term.	Beheaded	i. - - 143
Scroggs, sir Wm. L. C. J.	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 334
Scroop	Nov. 13, 1680	High crimes	H. of Commons	Removed	iii. - - 479, 476
Sedley, sir Charles	Oct. 12, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Executed	ii. - - 334
Selden	M. Term. 1663	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Imprisoned	x. Ap. - - 94
	1629	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Fined and imprisoned	vii. - - 217
Sellers	May 29, 1630	Seditious writing	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. - - 121
Seymour, sir Thomas	Dec. 11, 1662	Treason	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 478
Shaftesbury, earl	Feb. 25, 1549	Treason	Parliament	Beheaded	vii. - - 1
	June 29, 1677	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Remanded	ii. - - 616
	Nov. 24, 1681	Treason	O. B.	Bill thrown out	iii. - - 418
Sherfield	Feb. 6, 1632	Misdemeanour	C. S.	Fined	i. - - 369
Sherwin	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Shirley, doctor	May, 1675	Breach of privilege	H. Com.	Imprisoned	vii. - - 453
Shrewsbury, countess	T. Term. 1614	Contempt	B. R.	No judgment	xi. - - 108
Shute	May 6, 1683	Riot	G. H.	Fined	iii. - - 630
Sidney, colonel	Nov. 21, 1683	Treason	B. R.	Beheaded	iii. - - 704
Simons	Dec. 10, 1751	Perjury	B. R.	Acquitted	x. - - 411
	March 12, 1752	Misdemeanour	Affizes	Special verdict	x. - - 414
	July 12, 1681	Misdemeanour	Affizes	Acquitted	x. - - 416
Sindercome, alias Fish	Feb. 9, 1656	Treason	O. B.	Died in prison	vii. - - 371
Slingsby, sir Henry	May 21, 1658	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded	ii. - - 277
Smeton	May, 1536	Treason	Commissioners	Executed	xi. - - 10
Smith, Francis	Feb. 7, 1679	Libel	G. H.	Fined	ii. - - 1040
, Henry	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 395
, Isabel	Sept. 21, 1647	Forgery	Parliament	Fined and imprisoned	vii. - - 317
, Richard	1608	Affizes	B. R.	Disseised	xi. - - 86
, Richard
, Samuel
, William	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 949, 978
Snatt	April 3, 1696	Sedition	B. R.	Censured and imprisoned	x. Ap. - - 43
Soame, sir William	Nov. 12, 1674	Parl. election	Exchequer	Fine remitted	vii. - - 428
	June, 1689		H. L.
Somers, lord	Feb. 15, 1700-1	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. 339 viii. 512
Somerfet, duke	Jan. 1550-1	Misdemeanour & treason	Parliament	Fined and degraded	vii. - - 127
, earl	Dec. 1, 1551	Treason and felony	High Steward	Beheaded	vii. - - 157
, countess	May 25, 1616	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. - - 351
, James	May 29, 1630	Seditious writings	C. S.	Not proceeded in	xi. - - 121
	May 24, 1616	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. - - 348
Southampton, earl	1771	Habeas Corpus	B. R.	Discharged	xi. - - 339
Sparkes	Feb. 19, 1600	Treason	High Steward	Reprieved	i. - - 397
Speke	Feb. 7, 1633	Libel	C. S.	Censured	i. - - 418
Spottiswood, sir Robert	Feb. 7, 1683	Misdemeanour	B. R.	Fined	iii. - - 855
Sprot	Nov. 1645	Treason	Scotland	Beheaded	v. - - 177
Squir	Aug. 12, 1608	Treason	Scotland	Executed	i. - - 310
Squires, Mary	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible marriage	B. R.	Acquitted	v. - - 465
Stifford, viscount	Feb. 21, 1753	Robbery	O. B.	Pardoned	x. - - 223
Standfield	Nov. 30, 1680	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	iii. - - 101
Stanley, sir William	Feb. 6, 1687	Parricide	Scotland	Executed	iv. - - 283
Stanley, sir Miles	1494-5	Treason		Beheaded	xi. - - 17
Stanley	June 18, 1681	Treason	Affizes	Acquitted	iii. - - 317
Stanley	Jan. 17, 1679	Romish Priest	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. - - 993
Stanley	Nov. 21, 1678	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iii. - - 997
Stedman	June 3, 1663	Bigamy	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. - - 48
Stephens	July 16, 1669	Murder	Affizes	Acquitted	v. - - 194
Storne	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iii. - - 418
Sturgeson	April 27, 1759	Murder	Affizes	Burnt in the hand	x. - - 428

THE ALPHABETICAL TABLE.

NAMES.	DATES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Steward, Archibald	June 8, 1747	Neglect of duty	Scotland	Acquitted	ix. — 587
—, James	Sept. 1752	Murder	Scotland	Executed	x. — 40
Stirling	Nov. 15, 1708	Treason	Scotland	Acquitted	v. — 630
Strafford, earl	March 22, 1640	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	i. — 723
Streeter, capt.	Nov. 1653	Hab. Corp.	U. B.	Discharged	ii. — 195
Strickland, Mary	Oct. 12, 1699	Forgery	O. B.	Fined and imprisoned	v. — 232
Stubbs	Dec. 11, 1662	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 478
Sudley, lord	Feb. 25, 1549	Treason	Parliament	Executed	vii. — 1
Suffolk, earl	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	i. — 1
Surry, earl	Dec. 13, 1546	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. — 18
Swan	March 1752	Petty Treason	Affizes	Executed	x. — 36
Swensden	Nov. 25, 1702	Forcible marriage	B. R.	Executed	v. — 449
Swinock	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
T.
Talbot	H. Term, 1614	Popery	C. S.	No judgment	xi. — 116
Tapner	Jan. 16, 1748-9	Murder	Affizes	Executed	ix. — 716
Talborough	Feb. 3, 1679	Subornation of perjury	B. R.	Fined	ii. — 1017
Temple, James	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 398
—, Peter
Thompson, Clerk	Dec. 24, 1680	High crimes	Parliament	Never tried	vii. — 491
—, Nathaniel	June 20, 1682	Libels	G. H.	Pilloried and fined	iii. — 505
Thorpe	July 3, 1407	Heresy	ABp.	Imprisoned	i. — 16
Throckmorton, sir Nicholas	April 17, 1554	Treason	G. H.	Acquitted	i. — 63
—, his Jury	Nov. 10,	Misdemeanour	C. S.	Fined	i. — 78
Thwing	July 24, 1680	Treason	Affizes	Executed	iii. — 79
Tilney	Sept. 15, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 134
Titchburne, Chidiock	Sept. 14, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	i. — 128
—, Robert	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 394
Tonge	Dec. 11, 1662	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 478
Townley	July 15, 1746	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Executed	xi. — 543
Tranter	Feb. 3, 1721	Murder	B. R.	Burnt in the hand	vi. — 195
Travers	Sept. 15, 1586	Treason	Westminster	Executed	iv. — 134
Trelawney, bp. of Rochester	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	i. — 304
Trefilian, Lord C. J.	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Executed	i. — 1
Trigge, Thomas	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 948, 978
Turner, Anne	Nov. 7, 1615	Murder	B. R.	Executed	i. — 339
—, Anthony	June 13, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Executed, &c.	ii. — 829
—, bishop of Ely	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
—, col.	Jan. 15, 1663	Burglary	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 502
Turpin, Joseph	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Tutchin	Nov. 4, 1704	Libel	G. H.	No judgment	v. — 528
Twyn	Feb. 20, 1663	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 528
V.
Valentine	1629	Hab. Corp.	B. R.	Remanded	vii. — 217
	M. Term, 1629	Sedition	B. R.	Fined and imprisoned	vii. — 242
Vane, sir Henry	June 2, 1662	Treason	B. R.	Beheaded	ii. — 435
Vaughan, capt.	Nov. 6, 1696	Treason	O. B.	Executed	v. — 17
Uchiltree, lord	Nov. 30, 1631	Slander	Scotland	Imprisoned	vii. — 260
Udal	July 24, 1590	Felony	Affizes	Pardoned	i. — 168
Vere, duke of Ireland	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	i. — 1
Vincent, capt.	Oct. 8, 1702	Defertion	Court-martial	Shot	i. — 168
Vowel	June 30, 1654	Treason	H. C. J.	Executed	ii. — 212
Vratz	Feb. 28, 1681	Murder	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 466
Uke	March 8, 1388	Treason	Parliament	Executed	i. — 14
W.
Wade, capt.	Oct. 8, 1702	Defertion	Martial	Shot	v. — 445
Waite	Oct. 16, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 398
Wakeman, sir Geo.	July 18, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 917
Walcot	July 12, 1683	Treason	O. B.	Executed	iii. — 684
Waller, sir Hardres	Oct. 10, 1660	Regicide	O. B.	Reprieved	ii. — 308
Walters	June 1, 1688	Murder	O. B.	No judgment	vii. — 648
Ward, sir Patience	May 19, 1683	Perjury	B. R.	No judgment	iii. — 661
Warwick, earl	Aug. 18, 1553	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 26
	March 28, 1699	Murder	H. L.	Discharged	v. — 137
Watson, James	E. Term, 1765	Falfe imprisonment	C. B.	Damages	xi. — 307
—, William	Nov. 15, 1603	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Executed	vii. — 63
Wedderburne, sir John	Nov. 4, 1746	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Executed	ix. — 580
Wells, Sufannah	Feb. 21, 1753	Robbery	O. B.		x. — 224
Wentworth, sir John	Nov. 10, 1615	Traducing public justice	C. S.	Fined, imprisoned, &c.	i. — 333
Weston, Richard	Oct. 19, 1615	Murder	G. H.	Executed	i. — 324
—, sir Francis	May 1536	Treason	Commissioners	Beheaded	xi. — 10
Wharton	Feb. 9, 1637	Libel	C. S.	Fined, pilloried, &c.	vii. — 286
White, bp. of Peterborough	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 304
Whitebread	Dec. 17, 1678	Treason	O. B.	Jury discharged of him	ii. — 696
	June 13, 1679	Treason	O. B.	Executed	ii. — 829
Whitelocke	June 1613	Contempt	C. S.		xi. — 106
Wiat, sir Thomas	March 13, 1554-5	Treason	Westminster	Executed	vii. — 325
Wickham	May 8, 1683	Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. — 630
Wickstone	Feb. 13, 1588	Sedition	C. S.	Imprisoned and fined	vii. — 29
Widdrington, lord	Feb. 9, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Pardoned	vi. — 1
Wilkes	E. Term, 1763	Hab. Corp.	C. B.	Discharged	xi. — 302
	M. Term, 1764	Seditious libel
	H. Term, 1770	Blasphemous libel	B. R.	Fined, &c.	xi. — 324
Wilks	April 4, 1668	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Williams	March 22, 1638	Murder	B. R.		ix. — 63, 534, n.
Willia	April 18, 1710	Treason	B. R.	Acquitted	viii. — 250
Willon, William	May 2, 1684	Riot	B. R.	Fined	iii. — 949, 978
Winter, Robert	Jan. 27, 1605	Gunpowder plot	Westminster	Executed	i. — 232
—, Thomas
Wintoun, earl	March 15, 1715	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	vi. — 17
Woodburn	March 13, 1722	Maiming	Affizes	Executed	iv. — 212
Woodward	April 14, 1668	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. — 585
Worcester, Lloyd, bp. of	June 29, 1688	Libel	B. R.	Acquitted	iv. — 305
	1702	Breach of privilege	H. Commons	Removed	viii. — 82
Wrayham	E. Term, 1618	Slander	C. S.	Censured	vii. — 102
Wright	Jan. 26, 1615	Carrying a challenge	C. S.	Commitment, &c.	xi. — 112
Y.
York, Archbishop	Feb. 3, 1388	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	i. — 1
Z.
Zugge	Aug. 4, 1735	Libel	New-York	Acquitted	ix. — 276

CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE

OF THE DATES OF THE TRIALS.

TO WHICH ARE ADDED,

The NAMES of the PRISONERS or PRINCIPAL PARTIES in the several TRIALS; the CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION; the COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL; the PUNISHMENTS, JUDGMENTS, or EVENTS of the several PROSECUTIONS; with REFERENCES to the VOLUMES in which the TRIALS or PROCEEDINGS are respectively contained.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
RICHARD THE SECOND.
1388. 11 Rich. II.	Archbishop of York Duke of Ireland Earl of Suffolk L. C. J. of England Mayor of London & others	Treason	H. L.	Escaped Escaped Escaped Executed Executed	i. — 1
HENRY THE FOURTH.
1407. 8 Hen. IV.	William Thorpe	Herefy	Archbishop	Imprisoned	ii. — 16
HENRY THE FIFTH.
1413. 1 Hen. V.	Lord Cobham	Herefy	Archbishop	Executed and burnt	ii. — 36
HENRY THE SEVENTH.
1494-5. 10 Hen. VII.	Sir William Stanley	Treason		Beheaded	xi. — 2
HENRY THE EIGHTH.
1509. 1 Hen. VIII.	Sir Thomas Empson Edmund Dudley	Treason	Northampton	Beheaded	xi. — 3
1521. 13 Hen. VIII.	Duke of Buckingham	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 4
1535. 26 Hen. VIII.	Lord Chancellor More Bishop of Rochester Lord Dacres	Treason Treason Treason	Commissioners Com. of O. & Term. High Steward	Beheaded Beheaded Beheaded Acquitted	xi. — 59 xi. — 7 ix. — 10
1536. 27 Hen. VIII.	Queen Anne Boleyn Viscount Rocheforde	Treason Treason	High Steward High Steward	Beheaded Beheaded	xi. — 10 xi. — 10
	Henry Norrys Mark Smeton William Brereton Sir Francis Weston	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Beheaded Hanged Beheaded Beheaded	xi. — 10
1540. 33 Hen. VIII.	Lord Grey	Treason	Westminster	Attainted	xi. — 17
1541. 33 Hen. VIII.	Sir Edmund Knevet	Striking in the palace	Commissioners	Pardoned	xi. — 16
1546. 37 Hen. VIII.	Earl Surrey Duke of Norfolk	Treason Treason	Com. O. & Term. Attainted	Executed Saved	xi. — 18 xi. — 18
EDWARD THE SIXTH.
1549. 2 & 3 Edw. VI.	Lord Sudley	Treason	Parliament	Executed	vii. — 1
1550. 3 & 4 Edw. VI.	Duke of Somerset	Treason, &c.	Parliament	Pardoned	vii. — 12
1551. 4 & 5 Edw. VI.		Treason and felony	High Steward	Beheaded	vii. — 15
QUEEN MARY.
1553. 1 Mary	Duke of Northumberland Marquis of Northampton Earl of Warwick	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	xi. — 26
	Sir John Gates Henry Gates Sir Andrew Dudley Sir Thomas Palmer	Treason	Westminster	Beheaded	xi. — 16
1554. 2 Mary	Sir Nicholas Throckmorton Sir Thomas Wiat	Treason Treason	Commissioners Westminster	Acquitted Arraigned only	i. — 63, 78 vii. — 24
QUEEN ELIZABETH.
1567. 9 Eliz.	William Powrie George Dalgleish John Hay John Hepburn Nicholas Hubert	Treason	Scotland	Executed Examined	viii. — 327 viii. — 328 viii. — 329 viii. — 330 viii. — 331

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
Q U E E N E L I Z A B E T H.
1567. 9 Eliz.	Earl Bothwell	Treason and regicide	Commissioners	Acquitted	i. — 78
1571. 14 Eliz.	Duke of Norfolk	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	i. 82 viii. 335
	Robert Hickford	Herefy	Queen's Bench	No judgment	i. — 117
1584. 26 Eliz.	William Parry, L. D.	Treason	Commissioners	Executed	i. — 121
1586. 28 Eliz.	Mary Queen of Scots	Traitorous conspiracy	Commissioners	Beheaded	i. — 145
	Anthony Babington
	Chidiock Titchburne
	Thomas Salisbury	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	i. — 128
	Robert Barnewell
	John Savage
	Henry Donn
	John Ballard
	Edward Abington
	Charles Tilney	Treason	Commissioners	Executed	i. — 134
	Edward Jones
	John Travers
	John Charnock
	Jerome Bellamy
	Robert Gage
1587. 30 Eliz.	Davison	Contempt	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 19
1588. 31 Eliz.	Sir Richard Knightley	Sedition	C. S.	Fined	vii. — 30
1589. 31 Eliz.	Earl of Arundel	Treason	High Steward	Died in prison	i. 164 xi. 27
1590. 32 Eliz.	John Udall, clerk	Belony	Judges of affize	Pardoned	i. — 168
1592. 34 Eliz.	Sir John Perrot	Treason	Commissioners	Died in prison	i. — 188
1599. 41 Eliz.	Brains	Appeal of murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 536, n.
1600. 43 Eliz.	Earls Essex & Southampton	Treason	High Steward	Beheaded	i. — 196
	Sir Christopher Blunt			Beheaded
	Sir Charles Davers			Beheaded
	Sir John Davis	Treason	Commissioners	Executed	i. 209 vii. 47
	Sir Gilly Merrick			Executed
	Henry Cuffe			Executed
	Earl Gowrie
	Alexander Ruthven	Treason	Edinburgh	Executed	vii. — 33
	Henry Ruthven
	Hugh Moncrief
	Peter Eviot	Treason	O. B.	Executed	vii. — 44
	Captain Lee
J A M E S T H E F I R S T.
1603. 1 & 2 Jac. I.	Sir Walter Raleigh	Treason	Commissioners	Beheaded	i. 212 viii. 339
	Sir Griffin Markham			Reprieved	vii. — 63
	Sir Edward Pagham		Winton	Acquitted	vii. — 63
	George Brooke			Executed
	Bartholemew Brookefby	Treason	Commissioners	Reprieved	vii. — 63
	Anthony Copley			Executed	vii. — 63
	William Watson			Executed
	William Clarke			Executed
1604. 2 & 3 Jac. I.	Sir Francis Goodwin	Parliamentary election	H. Commons	New writ	vii. — 67
	Richard Bates	Refusing to pay duty	Exchequer		ix. — 29
1605. 3 & 4 Jac. I.	Robert Winter
	Thomas Winter
	Guy Fawkes
	John Grant	Gunpowder plot	Commissioners	Executed	i. — 232
	Ambrose Rookwood
	Robert Keyes
	Thomas Bates
	Sir Everard Digby
1606. 4 & 5 Jac. I.	Henry Garnet	Gunpowder plot	Commissioners	Executed	i. — 248
1607. 5 & 6 Jac. I.	Robert Lalor	Romish Priest	Ireland	Premunire	xi. — 69
1608. 6 & 7 Jac. I.	Richard Smith	An affize	B. R.	Disseisin	xi. — 86
	George Sprot	Treason	Scotland	Executed	i. — 310
1609. 7 & 8 Jac. I.	Robert Logan	Treasonable conspiracy	Scotland	Attainted	vii. — 78
	Lord Balmerino	Treason	Scotland	Pardoned	vii. — 85
1612. 10 & 11 Jac. I.	Lord Sanquaire	Murder	King's Bench	Executed	vii. — 86
	James Whitelocke	Contempt	C. S.		xi. — 106
	Countess of Shrewsbury	Contempt	C. S.		xi. — 108
1613. 11 & 12 Jac. I.	William Talbot	Popery	C. S.		xi. — 116
	Earl and Countess of Essex	Impetency	Delegates	Divorced	i. — 315, n.
1615. 13 & 14 Jac. I.	Richard Weston	Murder	Commissioners	Executed	i. — 324
	John Ogilvie	Treason	Scotland		vii. — 95
	Oliver St. John	Misdemeanour	C. S.	Fined	xi. — 110
	Sir John Hollis
	Sir John Wentworth	Traducing public justice	Star-chamber	Imprisoned and fined	i. — 333
	Mr. Lumsden
	Sir Jervis Elwes	Murder	G. H.	Executed	i. — 341
	James Franklin	Murder	King's Bench	Executed	i. — 346
	William Priest	Sending a challenge	C. S.	Fined, &c.	xi. — 112
	Sir Thomas Monson	Murder	King's Bench	Arraigned only	i. — 347
	Richard Wright	Carrying a challenge	C. S.	Fined, &c.	xi. — 112
1616. 14 & 15 Jac. I.	Countess of Somerset	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. — 348
	Earl of Somerset	Murder	High Steward	Pardoned	i. — 351
1618. 16 & 17 Jac. I.	Wraynham	Slander	C. S.	Cenfured	vii. — 102
1620. 18 & 19 Jac. I.	Lord Chancellor Bacon	Bribery and corruption	Parliament	Fined, &c.	i. — 375

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
C H A R L E S T H E F I R S T.
1627. 3 Car. I.	Sir Thomas Darnel Sir John Corbet Sir Walter Earl Sir John Heveningham Sir Edmund Hampden	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	vii. — 114
1628. 4 Car. I.	Holloway	Murder	O. B.	Executed	ix. — 532, 533
1629. 5 Car. I.	William Stroud Walter Long John Selden	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	vii. — 217
	Richard Chambers	Seditious speeches	C. S.	Imprisoned	xi. — 118
	Sir John Elliot Denzil Hollis Benjamin Valentine	Seditious speeches in Parl.	King's Bench	Commitment	vii. — 242
1630. 6 Car. I.	Lord Uchiltrie Doctor Leighton	Calumny Libel	Edinburgh C. S.	Perpetual imprisonment Whipped, pilloried, &c.	vii. — 259 xi. — 120
	Earl Bedford Earl Clare Earl Somerset Sir Robert Cotton John Selden Oliver St. John	Seditious writing	C. S.	Proceedings stayed	xi. — 121
1631. 7 Car. I.	Lord Audley	Rape and sodomy	High Steward	Beheaded	i. 385 vi. Ap. 5
	Laurence Fitzpatrick Giles Broadway	Rape and sodomy	King's Bench	Executed	i. — 396
1632. 8 Car. I.	Lord Rea and Day. Ramsay Henry Sheffield	Appeal of treason Breaking church window	Chivalry Star-chamber	No combat Commitment, &c.	xi. — 124 i. — 399
1632-3. 9 Car. I.	William Prynne Michael Sparkes William Buckner	Libel	Star-chamber	Imprisoned, pilloried, &c. Pilloried, fined, &c. Imprisoned and fined	i. — 418
	Sir Thomas Layton Sir David Fowles Henry Fowles	Traducing of state	Star-chamber	Dismissed Fine, commitment, &c. Commitment and fine	xi. — 131
1634. 10 Car. I.	Lord Balmerino	Libel	Scotland	Pardoned	i. — 429
1637. 13 Car. I.	John Bastwick, M. D. Henry Burton William Prynne	Libel	Star-chamber	Loss of ears, fine, &c. The same The same and stigmatized	i. — 481
	John Hampden	Ship-money	Exchequer	Judgment	i. 505 vi. Ap. 5
	John Lilburne John Wharton	Sedition	C. S.		vii. — 285
1638. 14 Car. I.	Thomas Harrison, clerk David Williams	Reflecting on a judge Murder	King's Bench O. B.	Fined 50,000l. &c. Burnt in the hand	i. 720 vi. Ap. 10 xi. — 534 n.
1640. 16 Car. I.	Earl. Strafford	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	i. — 723
1643. 19 Car. I.	Lord Keeper Finch Colonel Fiennes	Treason Cowardice	Parliament Council of war	Fled Pardoned	vii. — 309 i. — 766
1644. 20 Car. I.	Archbishop Laud Lord Macguire Sir Robert Spotswood	Treason Treason Treason	H. L. King's Bench Scotland	Beheaded Executed Beheaded	i. — 824 i. 949 viii. 341 i. — 961
1645. 21 Car. I.	John Morris, alias Poyntz, and his wife	Forgery	H. L.	Fine and imprisonment	vii. — 317
1647. 23 Car. I.	Isabel Smith Leonard Darby John Harris
1648. 24 Car. I.	Charles, king of England	Treason	H. C. of Justice	Beheaded	i. — 985

C H A R L E S T H E S E C O N D.

1648. 1 Car. II.	Duke of Hamilton	Treason	H. C. of Justice	Beheaded	ii. — 81
1649. 2 Car. II.	Colonel Lilburne	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Acquitted	ii. — 19
1650. 3 Car. II.	Colonel Morris	Treason	Justices of Assize	Executed	vii. — 320
	Colonel Andrews	Treason	H. C. of Justice	Beheaded	vii. — 323
1651. 4 Car. II.	Christopher Love John Gibbons	Treason Treason	H. C. of Justice H. C. of Justice	Beheaded Beheaded	ii. — 83 ii. — 183
1652. 5 Car. II.	Richard Faulconer	Perjury	King's Bench	Commitment	vii. — 343
1653. 6 Car. II.	Captain Streater John Lilburne —, his jury	Hab. Corp. Return from banishment Misdemeanour	Upper Bench O. B. Council of State	Discharged Acquitted Examined	ii. — 195 vii. — 354 ii. — 81
1654. 7 Car. II.	John Gerhard Peter Vowell Somerset Fox	Treason	H. C. J.	Beheaded Executed Reprieved	ii. 211 viii. 366 ii. 211 viii. 365 ii. — 211
1655. 8 Car. II.	John Pordage, D. D. John Penruddock Buckner	Insufficiency Treason Murder	Commissioners Com. of O. & Term. O. B.	Ejected Beheaded Burnt in the hand	ii. — 259 ix. — 534 n. vii. — 371
1656. 9 Car. II.	James Nayler Miles Sindercome	Blasphemy Treason	H. of Commons Upper Bench	Tongue bored, &c. Died in prison	ii. — 266 vii. — 371

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION.	COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
--------	--------	-----------------------------	----------------------------	------------------	----------

[illegible]

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
C H A R L E S T H E S E C O N D.
1674. 26 Car. II.	Sir Samuel Barnardiston	Parl. Election	King's Bench	Damages	vii. - 427, 433
			Exchequer	Judgment reversed	vii. - 431
1675. 27 Car. II.	Doctor Shirley	Breach of Privilege	H. of Lords	Reversal affirmed	vii. - 451
1676. 28 Car. II.	Francis Jenks	Seditious Speeches	H. of Commons	Taken into custody	vii. - 453
1677. 29 Car. II.	Earl of Shaftesbury	Hab. Corp.	Privy Council	Commitment	vii. - 467
	James Mitchel	Attempt to murder	King's Bench	Remanded	ii. - 610
	Earl Pembroke	Murder	Scotland	Executed	ii. - 623
1678. 30 Car. II.	William Stayley	Treason	H. of Lords	Discharged	ii. - 641
	Edward Coleman	Treason	King's Bench	Executed	i. 656 viii. 439
			King's Bench	Executed	i. - 660
	T. White, alias Whitebread			Jury discharged of him
	William Ireland			Executed
	John Fenwick	Treason	O. B.	Jury discharged of him	ii. - 696
	Thomas Pickering			Executed	ii. 696 viii. 440
	John Grove			Executed
	Lord Cornwallis	Murder	High Steward	Discharged	ii. - 726
	Earl Danby	Treason, &c.	Parliament	Pardoned	ii. - 732
1678. 31 Car. II.	Robert Green				ii. 760 vi. 12
	Henry Berry	Murder	King's Bench	Executed	viii. - 441
	Lawrence Hill				ii. 760 viii. 44
1679. 31 Car. II.	Samuel Atkins	Accessory to murder	King's Bench	Acquitted	ii. 791 viii. 443
	David Lewis	Treason	Judge of Assize	Executed	ii. - 801
	Nathaniel Reading	Misdemeanour	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Fined and pilloried	ii. - 806
	T. White, alias Whitebread
	William Harcourt	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ii. - 830
	John Fenwick
	John Gavan
	Anthony Turner
	Richard Langhorn	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	ii. - 878
	Lord Chief Justice Scroggs	High Misdemeanours	Privy Council	Dismissed	vii. - 476
	Sir George Wakeman
	William Marthal	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	ii. 917 viii. 453
	William Rumley
	James Corker
	Charles Kerne	Treason	Judges of Assize	Not guilty	ii. - 961
	Thomas Knox	Misdemeanours	King's Bench	Imprisoned and fined	ii. - 971
	John Lane			Pilloried, fined, &c.
	Leo. Anderson, alias Munfon
	Wm. Ruffel, alias Napper
	Charles Parris, alias Parry	Treason	O. B.	Sentenced	ii. - 994
	Henry Starkey
	James Corker
	William Marthal
	Alexander Lumden
	Joseph Kemish
	John Tasborough	Subornation of Perjury	King's Bench	Fined	ii. 1018 vi. Ap. 12
	Anne Price
	Benjamin Harris	Libel	G. H.	Sentenced	ii. - 1038
	Francis Smith	Libel	G. H.	Fined	ii. 1039 vi. Ap. 13
	Jane Curtis	Libel	G. H.	Found guilty	iii. - 1042
	Sir Thomas Gascoigne	Treason	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. - 1
	Eliz. Collier	Treason	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. - 31
1680. 32 Car. II.	Earl Castlemaine	Treason	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. - 35
	Henry Carr	Libel	G. H.	Guilty	iii. - 58
	John Giles	Attempt to murder	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, &c.	iii. - 66
	Richard Thompson, Clerk	Complaints	Parliament	Ordered to be impeached	vii. - 491
	Thomas Thwing	Treason	Affizes	Executed	iii. 80, 89 viii. 459
	Mary Preficks	Treason	Affizes	Not guilty	iii. 90 vi. Ap. 14
	Eliz. Collier	Libel	O. B.	Fined, pilloried, &c.	iii. - 102
	Viscount Stafford	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded	vii. - 479
	Lord Chief Justice Scroggs	Treason	Parliament	Removed	iii. 225, 263
1681. 33 Car. II.	Edward Fitzharris	Treason	King's Bench	Executed	iii. - 293
	Oliver Plunket, D. D.	Treason	King's Bench	Executed	iii. - 317
	Sir Miles Stapleton	Treason	Affizes	Not guilty	iii. - 328
	George Busby	Romish Priest	Affizes	Sentenced	iii. - 341
	Stephen Colledge	Treason	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Executed	iii. - 413
	Slingsby Bethel	Affault and Battery	Southwark	Fined	iii. - 418
	Earl of Shaftesbury	Treason	O. B.	No bill	iii. - 442
	Earl Argyle	Treason	Scotland	Beheaded
	George Borosky			Executed, &c.
	Christopher Vratz	Murder	O. B.	Executed, &c.	iii. - 466
	John Stern			Executed, &c.
	Count Conningsmark			Not guilty
	William Rapley	False return of Parl. writ	Affizes	Damages	viii. - 94, n.
	Charles Maitland	Perjury	Edinburgh	Not prosecuted	viii. - 436
1681. 34 Car. II.	Earl Danby	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Remanded	ii. - 752, 754
	Nathaniel Thompson
	William Pain
	John Farewell	Libel	G. H.	Pilloried, fined, &c.	iii. - 886
	Lord Grey
	Robert Charnock	Misdemeanour	King's Bench	No judgment	i. 519 vi. Ap. 15
	Anne Charnock

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

NAMES. DATES. CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION. COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL. PUNISHMENTS, &c. VOLUMES.

CHARLES THE SECOND.

1683. 35 Car. II.

David Jones
Frances Jones		Misdemeanour	King's Bench	No judgment	i. 519 vi. Ap. 15
Rebecca Jones
City of London		Ufurpation of Franchise	King's Bench	Forfeiture of charter	iii. 545 vi. Ap. 16
Thomas Pilkington
Samuel Shute
Henry Cornish
Ford Lord Grey
Sir Thomas Player
Slingsby Bethel
Francis Jenks
John Deagle		Riot	Nisi Prius	Fined	iii. 630 vi. Ap. 49
Richard Freeman
Richard Goodenough
Robert Key
John Wickham
Samuel Swinock
John Jekyll

1683. 35 Car. II.

Sir Patience Ward		Perjury	King's Bench	No judgment	iii. - - 662
Captain Thomas Walcot		Treason	O. B.	Executed	iii. 684 vi. Ap. 42
William Hone		Treason	O. B.	Executed	iii. - - 706
Lord Ruffel		Treason	O. B.	Beheaded	iii. 706, 755, 766
Thomas Sandys		Infringement of Charter	King's Bench	Damages	viii. 464, 471, 471
John Rouse		Treason	O. B.	Executed	vii. - - 496
William Blague		Treason	O. B.	Not guilty	iii. - - 731
Colonel Sidney		Treason	King's Bench	Beheaded	iii. 793 vi. Ap. 45
John Hampden		Misdemeanour	King's Bench	Fined and sureties, &c.	viii. 469, 471, 476
Lawrence Braddon		Misdemeanour	King's Bench	Fined and sureties, &c.	iii. 824 vi. Ap. 45
Hugh Speke		Misdemeanour	King's Bench	Fined and sureties, &c.	iii. 856 vi. Ap. 46
Sir Samuel Barnardiston		Misdemeanour	Nisi Prius	Fined and sureties, &c.	iii. 933 vi. Ap. 46
James Holloway		Treason	King's Bench	Executed	iii. - - 943

1684. 36 Car. II.

William Sacheverel
George Gregory
Charles Hutchinson
John Greaves
William Greaves
Samuel Richards
Robert Green
Francis Salmon
Arthur Riccards
Ralph Bennet		Riot	King's Bench	Fined and security	iii. - - 949, 978
John Sherwin
William Wilfon
Samuel Smith
Thomas Trigg
Richard Smith
John Hoe
William Smith
Joseph Turpin
Nathaniel Charnel
Joseph Astlin
Sir Thomas Armstrong		Treason	King's Bench	Executed, &c.	iii. 983 viii. 470
Titus Oates		Scand. mag.	King's Bench	Damages	iii. - - 987
Thomas Rosewell		Treason	King's Bench	Pardoned	iii. 997 vi. Ap. 48
Joseph Hayes		Treason	King's Bench	Not guilty	iii. 1067 vi. Ap. 50
Thomas Papillon		False Arrest	Nisi Prius	Damages	iii. 1072 vi. Ap. 50
Robert Baillie		Treason	Scotland	Executed, &c.	iii. - - 195
Lady Ivy		Tortious Entry	King's Bench	Ejected	vii. - - 516

JAMES THE SECOND.

1685. 1 Jac. II.

Titus Oates, D. D.		Perjury	King's Bench	Fined, degraded, &c.	iv. - - 1, 66
William Disney		Treason	Special com.	Executed, &c.	vii. - - 611
Lady Lisle		Treason	Winton	Beheaded	iv. - - 105
Richard Baxter, Clerk		Seditious libel	G. H.	Fined, &c.	x. Ap. - - 37
John Fernley				Reprieved	iv. - - 131
William Ring				Reprieved	iv. - - 134
Elizabeth Gaunt		Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. - - 142
Henry Cornish		Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. 132, 142
Robert Frances		Murder	O. B.	Executed	viii. 473, 476
Charles Bateman		Treason	Com. of Oy & Term.	Executed	x. Ap. - - 33
John Hampden		Treason	O. B.	Executed	iv. - - 164
Lord Delamere		Treason	O. B.	Pardoned	iv. 207 vi. Ap. 51
Bishop of London		Contempt	High Steward	Acquitted	iv. - - 209
Sir Edward Hales		Not taking oaths	Ecclef. Com.	Suspended	iv. - - 247
Samuel Johnson		Libels	King's Bench	Judgment	vii. - - 612
Miles Prance		Perjury	King's Bench	Fined, pilloried, &c.	vii. - - 645
John Peachell, D. D.		Contempt	Ecclef. Com.	Fined, pilloried, &c.	viii. 442, n.
Duke of Devonshire		Striking in the palace	King's Bench	Deprived and suspended	iv. - - 254
Magdalen College Oxon		Contempt	Ecclef. Com.	Fined 10,000l.	xi. - - 133
Philip Stansfield		Parricide	Scotland	Fellows incapacitated	iv. - - 262
				Executed	iv. - - 283

1686. 2 Jac. II.

1687. 3 Jac. II.

1688. 4 Jac. II.

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES. NAMES. CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION. COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL. PUNISHMENTS, &c. VOLUMES.

JAMES THE SECOND.

1689 5 Jac. II.	Archbishop of Canterbury Bishops of St. Asaph Ely Chichester Bath and Wells Peterborough Bristol	Libel	King's Bench	Acquitted	iv. — 304
	Rowland Walters Dearing Bradshaw Ambrose Carr	Murder	O. B.	Manlaughter Acquitted Acquitted	vii. — 648
	John Price and 100 others by name	Treason	Ireland	All bailed but seven, who were imprisoned	iv. — 402

WILLIAM AND MARY.

1688-9. 1 W. & M.	Maurice Cavenagh Edmund Poor William Bowland	Felony	Ireland	Sentenced to be executed	iv. — 408
1689. 1 W. & M.	Earl Castlemaine	Treason	H. of Commons	Bailed	iv. — 397
	Sir Francis Pemberton Sir Thomas Jones Judges, B. R.	Breach of Privilege	H. Commons	Taken into custody	viii. — 1
1690. 2 W. & M.	Viscount Preston John Ashton	Treason	O. B.	Pardoned Executed	iv. — 423 455
1692. 4 W. & M.	Henry Harrison John Cole John Germaine Lord Mohun Bishop of Rochester	Murder Murder Crim. Con. Murder Treasonable Conspiracy	O. B. O. B. King's Bench H. L. Privy Council	Executed Not guilty Damages Discharged No prosecution	iv. 448 viii. 483 iv. — 506 vii. — 27 iv. — 510 viii. — 37
1692-3. 4 & 5 W. & M.	Charles Knowles, earl of Banbury	Murder	O. B.	No trial	viii. — 50
1693. 5 W. & M.	William Anderton John Golding & al.	Treason Piracy	O. B. Admiralty	Executed Executed	viii. — 63 viii. — 74

WILLIAM THE THIRD.

1695. 7 W. III.	Thomas Kendall Richard Roe	Hab. Corp.	King's Bench	Bailed	iv. — 554
1695. 8 W. III.	Robert Charnock Edward King Thomas Keys	Treason	Special Commis.	Executed, &c.	iv. — 562
	Sir John Friend	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Executed, &c.	iv. — 599
	Sir William Parkyns		O. B.		iv. — 627
1696. 8 W. III.	Ambrose Rookwood Charles Cranburne Robert Lowick	Treason	Com. of O. & Term.	Executed, &c.	iv. — 661 iv. 698 vi. 56 iv. 718 viii. 56
	Peter Cook Alexander Knightley	Treason Treason	Goal-delivery King's Bench	Pardoned Pardoned	iv. — 737 iv. — 777
	Joseph Dawson Edward Forfeith William May William Bishop James Lewis John Sparkes	Piracy	Admiralty	Executed	v. — 1
	Captain Vaughan Sir John Fenwick Earl of Warwick, &c.	Piracy Treason Murder	Admiralty Parliament H. L.	Executed Beheaded Discharged	v. 18 vi. 57 v. — 40 v. — 138
1699. 11 W. III.	Spencer Cowper Ellis Stephens William Rogers John Marlon	Murder	Affizes	Acquitted	v. 194 viii. 485
1699. 12 W. III.	Mary Butler	Forgery	O. B.	Fined and imprisoned	v. — 230
1700. 13 W. III.	Duke & Dukes of Norfolk	Adultery	Parliament	Divorce	v. 239 viii. 7, 27
1701. 13 W. III.	John Cowland Captain Kidd	Murder Murder and Piracy	O. B. Admiralty	Executed Executed	ix. — 534 n. v. 287, 289, 297, 313

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES. NAMES. CRIMES or CAUSES of ACTION. COURTS or PLACES of TRIAL. PUNISHMENTS, &c. VOLUMES.

WILLIAM THE THIRD.

1701. 13 W. III.	Nicholas Churchill Abel Owens James Howe Robert Lamley Darby Mullins William Jenkins Robert Hickman Gabriel Loffe John Eldridge Hugh Parrot	Piracy and Robbery		Sentenced to be executed	v. 297, 315, 318, 330
	Earl Portland Lord Somers Earl Orford Lord Halifax	High crimes	H. L.	Acquitted	v. — 339
	Lord Haversham Duke of Leeds Patrick Hurley Colonel Bayard	Words High Crimes Perjury and Conspiracy Treason	H. L. H. L. Ireland New York	Impeachment dismissed Impeachment dismissed Fined Sentence pronounced	v. 373, 375, 378, 381 viii. — 512 v. — 389 v. — 419

1701-2. 14 W. III.

QUEEN ANNE.

1702. 1 Anne	William Fuller Colonel Kirkby Captains Constable Wade Vincent Fogg	Cheat Breach of Articles of War	G. H. Jamaica	Guilty Shot Imprisoned	v. 441 vi. 58 v. — 446
	Haagen Swenden	Forcible Marriage	Queen's Bench	Suspended Executed	v. — 449
	Sarah Baynton John Hartwell John Spurr	Forcible Marriage	Queen's Bench	Reprieved Acquitted Acquitted	v. — 466
1702. 2 Anne	Richard Hathaway Bp. of Worcester and son	Cheat and Impostor Breach of Privilege	Affizes H. of Commons	Guilty Removed	v. 482 vi. 59 viii. — 82
1703. 2 Anne	Richard Hathaway Thomas Welling and wife Elizabeth Willoughby	Riot and Assault	Affizes	Guilty	v. 504 vi. 59
1704. 3 Anne	William White	Breach of Privilege	H. of Commons H. of Peers Queen's Bench		viii. 89, 135 viii. 125, 163 viii. — 158
	James Bouchier	Treason	Queen's Bench	Reprieved	v. 506 vi. 60
	Nathaniel Denew John Merriam Richard Britton	Assault, &c.	Queen's Bench	Fined Not guilty Fined	viii. 178, 536
	David Baillie David Lindsay Captain Quelch John Tutchin Captain Green Robert Fielding John Mawgridge William Gregg James Stirling and others Henry Sacheverell D. D.	Defamation Treason Piracy Libel Piracy Bigamy Murder Treason Treason High Crimes	Scotland O. B. Boston G. H. Scotland O. B. O. B. O. B. O. B. Scotland H. L.	Pilloried and banished Reprieved Executed Judgment arrested Executed Pardoned Executed Executed Not proven Silenced	viii. — 195 v. 508 vi. 60 viii. 204, 217, 218 v. — 528 v. — 572, 606 v. — 610 ix. — 61 x. Ap. — 77 v. — 630 v. 641, viii. 557
1704-5. 4 Anne 1706. 5 Anne 1707-8. 6 Anne 1708. 7 Anne 1709-10. 8 Anne 1710. 9 Anne	Daniel Damaree			Pardoned	viii. — 218
	Francis Willis	Treason	O. B.	Not guilty	viii. — 250
	George Purchase			Pardoned	viii. — 267
1712-13. 10 Anne	Richard Noble Mary Sayer Mary Salisbury	Murder Petty Treason Murder	Affizes Affizes Affizes	Executed Acquitted Acquitted	ix. — 1

GEORGE THE FIRST.

1715. 2 Geo. I.	Earl Derwentwater Lord Widdrington Earl Nithisdale Earl Carnwath Viscount Kenmare Lord Nairn	Treason	H. L.	Beheaded Pardoned Escaped Pardoned Beheaded Pardoned	vi. — 1 vi. 1 x. Ap. 84
-----------------	---	---------	-------	---	----------------------------

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.	NAMES.	CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.	COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.	PUNISHMENTS, &c.	VOLUMES.
GEORGE THE FIRST.
1716. 3 Geo. I.	Earl Wintoun	Treason	H. L.	Escaped	vi. - 17
1717. 4 Geo. I.	Francis Francia	Treason	O. B.	Acquitted	vi. - 58
1718. 5 Geo. I.	Earl Orford	Treason, &c.	H. L.	Act of Grace	vi. - 102
1719. 6 Geo. I.	Major Bonnet and others	Piracy	Charlestown	Executed	vi. - 156
	Jeffery Gilbert, Lord C. B.	Breach of Privilege	Ireland	Taken into custody	vi. - 188
	John Matthews	Treasonable Libel	O. B.	Executed	ix. - 680
	William Hendley, Clerk	Preaching charity sermon
	George Campman
	Robert Hicks	Collecting charity money	Affizes	Fined	x. Ap. - 86
	Filmer Harding
	Walter Prat
1721. 8 Geo. I.	Hugh Reason	Murder	King's Bench	Burnt in the hand	vi. - 196
	Robert Tranter
	John Woodburne	Maiming	Affizes	Executed	vi. 212 vi. Ap. 60
	Arundel Coke
1722. 9 Geo. I.	Christopher Layer	Treason	King's Bench	Executed, &c.	vi. - 229
1723. 10 Geo. I.	John Plunket	Treasonable Conspiracy	Parliament	Imprisoned	vi. - 390
	George Kelly			Imprisoned	vi. 335, 397
	Bishop of Rochester			Banished	vi. - 475
1723-4. 10 Geo. I.	Edward Arnold	Shooting at & wounding	Affizes	Execution respited	viii. - 290
1725. 10 Geo. I.	Earl Macclesfield	High Crimes	H. L.	Fined	vi. - 477
1725-6. 11 Geo. I.	Major Oneby	Murder	O. B.	Destroyed himself	ix. - 14

GEORGE THE SECOND.

1728. 1 Geo. II.	James Carnegie	Murder	Scotland	Not guilty	ix. - 26
	Edmund Curl	Libel	King's Bench	Pilloried	x. Ap. - 92
	William Hales	Forgery	O. B.	Pilloried, fined, &c.	x. Ap. 94 ix. 67
1728-9. 1 Geo. II.	Thomas Kinnerley			Pilloried, fined, &c.	ix. 67, 75, 77, 93, 94
1729. 2 Geo. II.	John Huggins	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	ix. - 112
1729-30. 2 Geo. II.	Thomas Bambridge	Murder	O. B.	Acquitted	ix. - 146, 226,
		Felony	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Acquitted	ix. - 234
		Appeal of Murder	G. H.	Acquitted	ix. - 152
	William Acton	Murder	Affizes	Acquitted	ix. 182, 203, 209, 218
1731. 4 Geo. II.	Richard Franklin	Libel	King's Bench		ix. - 255
1734. 7 Geo. II.	Peter Zenger	Libel	New York	Acquitted	ix. - 276
1735. 8 Geo. II.	John Gibbon	Quo Warranto	Affizes	Verdict for the King	x. Ap. - 218
	Richard Elles	Quo Warranto	Affizes	Verdict for the King	x. Ap. - 229
1736. 9 Geo. II.	Captain Porteous	Murder	Scotland	Executed	vi. - 763
	Corporation of Hastings	Mandamus	King's Bench	Admittance	x. Ap. - 138
1740. 13 Geo. II.	Samuel Goodere	Murder	Bristol	Executed	vi. - 795
	Matthew Mahony			Executed, &c.
	Charles White			Executed
1742. 15 Geo. II.	James Annesley	Murder	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Chance-medley	ix. - 315
	Joseph Redding
1743. 16 Geo. II.	Alexander Broadfoot	Murder	Bristol	Manlaughter	xi. - 349
	Earl Anglesea	Ejectment	Ireland	Verdict against him	ix. - 380
	William Chetwynd	Murder	Com. of Oy. & Term.	Pardoned	ix. - 527
1744. 17 Geo. II.	Earl Anglesea	Affault	Ireland	Fined	ix. - 336
	Francis Annesley
	John Jones
1746. 19 Geo. II.	Mary Heath	Perjury	Ireland	Acquitted	ix. 451 See ix. 431
	Francis Townley	Treason	Special Commis.	Executed, &c.	ix. - 543
	George Fletcher				ix. - 552
	Thomas Chadwick			Executed
	William Battragh			Reprieved	ix. - 555
	Tho. Theodorus Deacon	Treason	Special Commis.	Executed, &c.	ix. - 558
	John Berwick			Executed, &c.	ix. - 559
	David Morgan			Executed, &c.
	Alexander Macgrowther			Reprieved	ix. - 566
	Alex. and Charles Kinloch	Treason		Pardoned	ix. - 567, 575
	James Bradshaw			Executed, &c.	ix. - 575
	Sir John Wedderburne			Executed, &c.	ix. - 580
	Charles Ratcliffe	Treason	King's Bench	Beheaded	ix. - 582, 585
	Earl Kilmarnock			Beheaded
	Earl Cromartie	Treason	H. L.	Pardoned	ix. 590*, 595*
	Lord Balmerino			Beheaded	ix. 590*, 595*
1746-7.	Lord Lovat	Treason	H. P.	Executed	ix. 616* x. Ap. 188
1747. 20 Geo. II.	Aeneas Macdonald	Treason	Southwark	Pardoned	ix. - 586
	Archibald Stewart	Neglect of Duty, &c.	Scotland	Not guilty	ix. - 589, 608

THE CHRONOLOGICAL TABLE.

DATES.

NAMES.

CRIMES OR CAUSES OF ACTION.

COURTS OR PLACES OF TRIAL.

PUNISHMENTS, &c.

VOLUMES.

GEORGE THE SECOND.

1748-9. 21 Geo. II.

William Jackson
William Carter
Benjamin Tapper
John Cobby
John Hammond
Richard Mills

Murder

Com. of Oj. & Term.

Executed

ix.

716

1752. 25 Geo. II.

Mary Blandy
William Owen
James Stewart

Parricide
Libel
Murder

Oxon
King's Bench
Scotland

Executed
Acquitted
Executed, &c.

x.

x. Ap.

1

196

40

139

223

1753. 26 Geo. II.

John Barbot
Mary Squires
Sufannah Wells

Murder
Robbery

St. Christopher's
O. B.

Executed
Pardoned

x.

x.

x.

x.

183

205

1754. 27 Geo. II.

Timothy Murphy
Elizabeth Canning
Stephen Macdaniel
John Berry
James Egan
James Salmon

Forgery
Perjury

O. B.
O. B.

Executed Transported

x.

x.

183

205

1758. 31 Geo. II.

William Barnard

Threatening Letter

O. B.

Acquitted

x.

448

1759. 32 Geo. II.

John Stevenson

Murder

Affizes

Burnt in the hand

x.

462

1760. 33 Geo. II.

Earl Ferrers

Murder

H. L.

Executed

x. 478

x Ap. 208

GEORGE THE THIRD.

1763. 3 Geo. III.

John Wilkes

Hab. Corp.
Seditious Libel

Common Pleas
King's Bench

Discharged
Fined, imprisoned, &c.

xi.

xi.

302

324

1764. 4 Geo. III.

John Money
James Watson
Robert Blackmore

False Imprisonment

King's Bench

Damages

xi.

307

1765. 5 Geo. III.

Lord Byron
Nathan Carrington

Murder
Seizure of Papers

House of Lords
Common Pleas

Discharged
Damages

x.

xi.

517

313

1766. 6 Geo. III.

Katharine Nairn
Patrick Ogilvie

Incest and Murder

Scotland

Escaped
Executed

x.

479

1770. 10 Geo. III.

John Wilkes
Crosby, mayor of London

Blasphemous Libel
Hab. Corp.

King's Bench
Common Pleas

Fined, imprisoned, &c.
Remanded

xi.

xi.

324

335

1771. 11 Geo. III.

James Somerset

Hab. Corp.

King's Bench

Discharged

xi.

339

1772. 12 Geo. III.

Governor Mofyn

False Imprisonment, &c.

Common Pleas

Damages

xi.

162

1773. 13 Geo. III.

Dutcheffs of Kingston

Bigamy

H. L.

Discharged

xi.

198

1776. 16 Geo. III.

John Horne

Libel

King's Bench

Fined, imprisoned, &c.

xi.

264

1777. 17 Geo. III.

INDEX

I N D E X.

N. B. The Numerals denote the Volume; the Figures the Pages; Ap. the Appendix to the Volume referred to, Em. Pref. Mr. Emlyn's Preface to the Second Edition; and the Asterisks preceding the Articles, signify that they were in the original Alphabetical Table of the principal Matters contained in the first Six Volumes, which is entirely preserved in the Course of this Index.

A.

ABATEMENT.

Misnomer pleaded in abatement by a peer viii. 51
ABBOT GEORGE, Abp. of CANTERBURY,
 His case of Robert earl of Essex, and lady Frances Howard, relating to their divorce x. 4. Ap.
 Explains proceedings in vol. i. 315. x. 4. Ap.
 Shews the opinion of the bishops and civilians x. 4. Ap.
 Some observable particulars, when sentence pronounced x. 14. Ap.
 The speech the archbishop intended to have made, when it came to his turn to give his opinion x. 21. Ap.
 Seven of the commissioners in favour of the nullity of the marriage, five against it x. 21. Ap.
 King James's letter to the archbishop on the occasion x. 29. Ap.

ABBOTSBURY WITNESSES,

That swore on the trial of Mary Squires, indicted for perjury x. 242
 Debate about the Certiorari to remove their indictment x. 243
Sir Crisp Gage, knt. lord mayor, quitted the chair at the Old-Bailey when their trials were called on x. 243
 No evidence appearing against them, they were acquitted x. 246
Serjeant Davy's speech to the court on their behalf x. 246

* A B D I C A T I O N.

* The principle the Convention went upon, when they declared the throne vacant, at the Revolution v. 146

* A B I N G T O N E D W A R D,

* Charles Threlkeld, Edward Jones, John Travers, John Charnock, Jerome Bellamy, and Robert Gage; their trial for high treason the 15th of September, 1586; 28 Eliz. i. 134
 * The five first indicted for a conspiracy against the queen's life, and contriving to set the queen of Scots at liberty; the two last for receiving and harbouring traitors i. 134
 * The court deny Abington a pair of writing-tables to take notes; but allow him to speak to any point as it was urged, before the whole charge was gone through i. 135
 * The confession of Babington and others, who had been attainted of treason, read against them i. 135, 136
 * Abington objects that he could not be convicted without two witnesses brought face to face i. 137
 * The court deny that two witnesses are necessary on an indictment for high treason, on the 25th of Edward III. i. 135, 136
 * The prisoners are convicted i. 140
 * Their judgment, and execution i. 140, &c.
 * The bare hearing of treason, no treason; and what shall be deemed an assent to it i. 138

A B N E Y, Sir T H O M A S,

His speech for Henry Moore, against mayor, &c. of Hastings x. 138. Ap.
 Proposes reading an ancient book of the corporation x. 142. Ap.
 His reply x. 167. Ap.

ABRIDGEMENT. See VINER CHARLES.

A C C E S S A R Y.

* Where the concealing an intended felony shall make one an accessory before the fact i. 326
 Persons supposed to be guilty of a barbarous murder, as accessories, declared by parliament, that if they should be found guilty as accessories, they should not have their clergy iv. 174. See PARLIAMENT.
 Persons indicted and tried as accessories, with principals, cannot be good witnesses against the accessory iv. 199
 * If all the principals are acquitted, the jury shall not enquire of the accessories: otherwise if any of the principals are convicted iii. 470. See also ii. 506
 Accessary in same indictment with principal, need not be tried at same time iv. 199
 Accessories to all principals are accessories to every one of them severally iv. 199. See x. 434. 439
 The accessories to murder, either before or after the fact, cannot be convicted till after the conviction of the principal ix. 733 See x. 434. 439
 * One species of felony is advised, and another committed, the adviser is not accessory x. 437
 Who are accessories before the fact, and by what terms they are described by statutes x. 441
 * A man procures a felony to be done, he is an accessory before the fact if he consents before-hand x. 444, 445
 Principal ought to be convicted before trial of accessory iv. 199
 Vol. XI.

Though principal and accessory be tried together, yet verdict is always given against the principal, before it is given against the accessory iv. 199

A person may be an accessory before the fact, by the Roman law, who never spoke to, or even saw the principal x. 435
 Accessories are good witnesses, ii. 143. See MACDANIEL STEPHEN, and others. PRINCIPALS.

* A C C O M P L I C E.

* Accessories in treason, legal witnesses till they are indicted i. 113. ii. 144, 339, 1099. iii. 883. iv. 149, 572, 594. vi. 259
 * What an accomplice has said, no evidence against those who are indicted with him iii. 476
 * One indicted for treason, and another for a misdemeanor for the same fact; the record of the conviction of the first for treason shall not be read in evidence against the other iii. 834

* A C C U S A T I O N.

* No man bound to accuse himself. i. 176, 395. ii. 24, 463, 822. iii. 439. iv. 606. ix. 323.
 * Whether one accused may legally be committed without oath made against him? ii. 743

A C Q U I T T A L S.

Acquittal pleadable to impeachments iv. 166, 170

* A C T I O N.

* Action de Scandal. Magnat. iii. 987
 * Action lies for charging a man with a crime after he has had his clergy, or a pardon v. 168
 * Where one arrests another without probable cause of action, he is liable to an action by the party grieved iii. 1076
 * The pursuing malicious methods to obtain a right, subjects the party who takes such methods to an action iii. 1090
 The reason why many actions die with the persons against whom they lay in their life-times iv. 205
 Non user of action does not take it away vii. 432
 No action will lie against a judge vii. 442
 Record of a cause in an action for false imprisonment vi. 50. Ap. See ASHBY and WHITE viii. 89, 93, 95, 131, 134

A C T of G O D.

A person non sane memorat, and a lunatic during lunacy, are said to be by act of God, tho' the means be human, as violent or hard imprisonment, terror of death; or natural, as sickness iv. 209

A C T of G R A C E. See PETITIONS. See also vi. 156.

A C T O N W I L L I A M,

(First indictment) for the murder of Thomas Blif, 1st Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 181

He would not challenge any of the jury ix. 111
 Mr. Harding opens the indictment against him ix. 182
 Mr. Marsh on the same side ix. 182
 Mr. Ward on the same side ix. 183
 The evidence against him ix. 183
 Mr. Richardson would have asked a question then, but not admitted, ix. 187

Evidence for him ix. 197
 Sir John Darnell and others to his character ix. 198
 Baron Carter sums up the evidence ix. 199
 Acquitted ix. 203

(second indictment) for the murder of John Bramfield, 2d Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 203

Desires to have the indictment read in Latin ix. 203
 Mr. Ward opens the nature of the evidence ix. 204
 Evidence against Acton ix. 204
 For him ix. 206
 Baron Carter sums up the evidence ix. 208
 Acquitted ix. 209

(third indictment) for the murder of Robert Newson, 2d Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 209

Mr. Marsh opens how he came by his death ix. 209
 Evidence against him ix. 209
 For him ix. 215
 Baron Carter sums up the evidence ix. 216
 Acquitted ix. 218

(fourth indictment) for the murder of James Thompson, 2d Aug. 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 218

Mr. Marsh opens the indictment against him ix. 218
 Evidence against him ix. 218
 For him ix. 223
 Baron Carter sums up the evidence ix. 224
 Acquitted ix. 224

I N D E X.

- Mr. Strange's motion for prisoner's discharge, and his application to Mr. Oglethorpe ix. 226
- Mr. Oglethorpe's speech in answer to it ix. 226
- a bill preferred against him for a fifth murder, but returned Ignoramus ix. 226
- Mr. Strange's motion to admit Acton to bail, on affidavit of his former trials and acquittals, but refused ix. 226
- ## ACTS of PARLIAMENT.
- Manner of surrendering, in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. 652
- Acts of parliament that give remedy, do not take away the Common Law remedy vii. 432, 440
- When an act inflicts a penalty for second offence, indictment for second offence must recite record of first conviction; and, upon evidence, said record must be proved: but matter of first conviction is never re-examined, but must stand for granted x. 433. n.
- Act of Parliament cannot lose its force by non user vi. 713
- The reason of altering the ancient manner of passing laws into the method that is now used vi. 760
- Whatever is tested per regem et concilium in parlamento, is to be intended an act of parliament vi. Ap. 1. n.
- Act to inflict pains and penalties on John Plunkett vi. 390
- Act to inflict pains and penalties on George Kelly, alias Johnson vi. 397
- Act to inflict pains and penalties on Francis, lord bishop of Rockester vi. 477. See ATTAINERS. MORRIS JOHN, and others.
- ## PARLIAMENT. RECORDS. STATUTES.
- ## ADDRESSES.
- The address of the house of lords to queen Anne, to grant writs of error in the case of the Aylesbury men viii. 163. See CONVOCAATION.
- ## ADDRESSES of the LORDS HIGH-STEWARDS.
- See BATHURST Earl. BUCKHURST Lord. CARMARTHEN Marquis. COVENTRY Lord. COWPER Lord. DAVENTRY Lord. ELLESMERE Lord. HARDWICK Lord. HENLEY Lord. JEFFERIES Lord. NORTHINGTON Earl. NOTTINGHAM Earl. SOMERS Lord. See also SACHEVEREL Doctor's trial. GOODWIN Sir FRANCIS. HIGH-STEWARD.
- ## * ADHERING. See ENEMY.
- ## * ADJOURNMENT.
- Whoever can call or dissolve an assembly, may adjourn it iii. 658
- Improper adjournments of courts of justice censured iv. 176
- House of lords adjourned on a peer declining to be examined as a witness, on an allegation that the disclosure desired would affect his honour, being communicated to him in confidence xi. 247. * See PARLIAMENT.
- ## ADMISSION.
- Record on a mandamus for admission into the freedom of a corporation x. Ap. 138, 139
- ## ADULTERY.
- When a man is taken in adultery with another man's wife, if the husband stab the adulterer or knock out his brains, it is bare manslaughter ix. 66
- Adultery seems not indictable by our law, though admitted to be a temporal offence against the peace of the realm, for which sureties of the peace may be required; and that no adequate damages can be given for this crime in an action at the suit of the injured husband Em. Pref. x. n.
- In ancient time adultery was punished in the turns and leets by fine or imprisonment Em. Pref. x. n.
- The history of the punishment for this crime Em. Pref. xi. 21
- See BIGAMY. CRIMINAL CONVERSATION. FIELDING ROBERT. GERMAN PRINCESS. GREY FORD Lord. KINGSTON Duche's Dowager of. NAIRN CATHARINE. OGILVIE PATRICK. POLYGAMY.
- ## AFFIDAVITS.
- Affidavit to support petition, in order to put off trial in the house of lords, on impeachment for treason ix. 619, 620
- Affidavits by juries, to ground motion for new trial. See CANNING ELIZABETH. SIMONS HENRY.
- ## AFRICAN HOUSE.
- Burglary in an apartment of the African house, must be laid to be the mansion-house of the company x. 575. n.
- ## AGREEMENT.
- Agreement to make a lease is not a lease ix. 133
- ## * AIDING and ABETTING.
- Whoever is privy and consenting to treason, or procures another to commit treason, is a traitor; and the procurer of felony or murder is a felon i. 73
- What shall be deemed an assent to treason, &c. i. 138. ii. 594
- The hiding a traitor knowingly, treason ii. 151
- The encouraging a traitor, treason ii. 365, 594
- Aiding and assisting a pirate; 'tis no excuse to say he was under the pirate's command v. 314
- Yet those who were servants on board, directed to be acquitted v. 314
- One held to be aiding and assisting at a forcible marriage, though not present at the ceremony v. 478
- AYLESBURY, THOMAS Earl of, iv. 606. See PREIND Sir JOHN.
- ALAND, Sir JOHN FORTESCUE, vi. 63
- His reply on prosecution against Francis for treason vi. 63
- baron of the Exchequer, his argument in the prince's case xi. 296
- His opinion xi. 306, 307
- ALBANS, SAINT. See BACON, Sir FRANCIS. BACON, Lord.
- ## ALDERMEN.
- Resolution, that alderman might be removed for being a drunkard and haunter of taverns iii. 587
- Aldermen of London facetiously compared to pictures and household furniture xi. 94
- ## ALFRED.
- King Alfred caused no less than forty-four of his justices to be hanged in one year, as murderers, for condemning and executing some of his people without a legal indictment and trial by a sworn jury, and others of them for offences not capital by the known law of the land, and without clear evidence ii. 288
- ## * ALIEN. See POST NATI.
- * Aliens are good witnesses i. 113
 - * Natives of Scotland denizens of England to all intents ii. 9
 - * An act naturalizing the father, naturalizes his issue born before the act, without special words. Not so in case of denization ii. 12
 - * An Englishman having issue of an alien woman out of the king's dominions, such issue are denizens of England ii. 12
 - * He who pleads he is an alien, must make it appear ii. 15
 - * Aliens shall be tried by a jury of half foreigners and half natives iii. 468. v. 449
 - * An alien and a natural-born subject indicted differently v. 527
 - * Whether a juryman's being an alien is sufficient cause for arresting judgment? v. 439
 - * An alien naturalized in Scotland shall not inherit lands in England, as a native of Scotland may v. 524
 - * An interpreter sworn, to interpret the evidence to the aliens on a Party-Jury iii. 472
- ## * ALLEGIANCE.
- * Ligeantiam naturalem nemo ejurare potest, nec patriam exuere ii. 9. See MAXIMS.
 - To doubt or hesitate in point of allegiance, said to be direct treason and apostacy ii. 314
 - Jesuits* hold it damnation to take the oath of allegiance iii. 7
 - Allegiance due from natural-born subjects is perpetual and unalienable ix. 550, 586. See MAXIMS. OATHS.
 - * Allegiance cannot be circumscribed by place, but is due to the person of the king v. 517
 - * The difference to be observed in an indictment against one who owes allegiance and him who owes natural allegiance v. 527. vi. 87
 - * Spencer's treason; that allegiance was due to the king only in his political capacity; and that the people might compel him by duress (or per asperum) to yield to their demands ii. 305
 - Said to be due to those from whom we receive protection ii. 442. See RESISTANCE.
- ## * ALLIES. See ENEMY.
- ## ALLYBONE, Sir RICHARD, J. B. R.
- Is of opinion, that the petition of the seven bishops is a libel iv. 393, 394
- Mistakenly cites a case as a case in point against the defendants iv. 395
- Not qualified by law to sit as a judge, being a papist, and consequently had not taken the oaths or test, which the law enjoins to be done, before a judge takes his place on the bench xi. 133
- ## * AMBASSADOR.
- * A French ambassador beheaded by the duke of Milan, for treasonable practices during his embassy to him i. 119
 - * An ambassador may be tried for treason ii. 8
 - * Earl of Castlemaine charged by the house of commons with going ambassador to Rome iv. 397
 - * A bill of attainder against a person for killing a foreign minister Prince of Ross's case referred to. II. P. v. 105
- By the judgment of lord Bacon, in point of conspiracy against the state, even an ambassador is not privileged ii. 8. See CASTLEMAIN, ROGER, Earl of; also, i. 119. ii. 78. vii. 245, 248. PANTALOON.
- ## * AMENDMENTS.
- Books cited where amendments are allowed in crown cases v. 547
 - No instances of amendment in criminal prosecution v. 553
 - Error in point of skill not amendable, tho' misprisions or mistakes are v. 577
 - Mr. justice Blackstone gives the rise and history of amendments xi. 332
 - Record of information amended xi. 332
 - "Division" struck out, and "parish" inserted xi. 332
 - Great difference between amending indictments and informations xi. 333
 - Order to amend information miscalled an alteration of the record xi. 333
 - Information amendable by judge, at chambers xi. 333
 - Amendment, where to be allowed in criminal cases, as well as in civil v. 58
 - Warranted by common law, no statute of jeofails extending to criminal causes, or other cause, where the king is a party viii. 58. * See DISCONTINUANCES. PLEADING and PLEAS. WRITS.
- ## AMERICA. See PLANTATION. SLAVERY.
- ## AMICUS CURIAE.
- Any person may inform the courts as amicus curiae ii. 456. iv. 168
- ix. 583
- ## ANANDALE, Marquis. See BAILLIE DAVID.
- ## ANARCHY.
- Tyranny, bad as it is, is better than anarchy, in the opinion of Lord C. J. Camden xi. 323
- ## ANDERSON, Sir EDMUND.
- Lord chief justice of the common pleas; at the arraignment of Davison in the Star-chamber for a contempt vii. 19, 21
- His speech on that occasion vii. 24, 27
- He was one of the commissioners on the trial of Babington and others, for treason i. 127
- And on the trial of Abington for like offence i. 135
- His report concerning the imprisonment of the subject, without cause, read in the house of commons, and the articles, to which all the judges subscribed their names v. 133, 140, 147, 161
- All written with his own hand vii. 133, 147, 148, 228

His report of the resolution of the judges of C. B. that they could not obey the queen's letter in matters of justice; cited i. 708

ANDERSON, alias MUNSON, LIONEL,

- William Ruffel, Charles Parris, alias Parry, Henry Starkey, James Corker, William Marshal, and Alexander Lumsden, tried for high treason the 17th of January, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 993
- Kemish indicted and arraigned for remaining in England, having received popish orders ii. 993
- But being sick he is remanded to prison ii. 993
- Anderson, &c. indicted also, for accepting popish orders ii. 993
- Marshal and Corker object they had been already tried for high treason and acquitted; but are told, that was for compassing the king's death, &c. which is another species of treason ii. 994
- Anderson first tried ii. 995
- The king's order for his staying in England does not avail him at his trial ii. 995
- Sir John Keyling opens the evidence ii. 995
- Whoever accepts popish orders, by consequence disowns the king's supremacy, and asserts the pope's ii. 995
- Dungerfield deposes, that he went to confession to Anderson ii. 996
- And that he had an indulgence from Anderson to be drunk as soon as he had received the sacrament ii. 996
- Oates's evidence, that the prisoner performed the function of a priest; and the court directs, that it is not necessary to prove his ordination ii. 997
- Bedloe commits a mistake in his evidence against Anderson ii. 998
- The prisoner urges in his defence, that he wrote in behalf of the king's power against the pope's supremacy ii. 998
- And observes, that the judges had delivered their opinion, that this law was made only in terrorem ii. 999
- The chief justice directs the jury ii. 1000
- The clerk absolves the priest when he says mass ii. 1000
- Mr. Corker's trial ii. 1000
- He is proved to be titular bishop of London ii. 1000
- A convent in the Savoy suppressed ii. 1001
- Mr. Marshal's trial ii. 1002
- His own confession, that he was a priest when tried for the popish plot, brought as evidence against him ii. 1003
- Mr. Ruffel's trial ii. 1006
- Oates and Bedloe complain, that the court is crouded with papists ii. 1007
- Parris's trial ii. 1007
- The Venetian ambassador's letter not admitted as evidence for the prisoner ii. 1010
- Starkey's trial ii. 1010
- He says that Oates did not know what a priest's habit was ii. 1011
- Objects, that the priest makes the mass, and not the mass the priest ii. 1011
- Says that a protestant had said mass about town ii. 1011
- Says he had spent 4000l. and lost a leg in the king's service ii. 1011
- That he was banished in the time of the usurpation, for refusing to take the engagement against the king ii. 1011
- Mr. Lumsden's trial ii. 1011
- He appears to be a Scotchman, and procurator for Scotland ii. 1012
- The six first convicted; but Lumsden being a Scotchman, it was found specially as to him, the court doubting whether he was within the statute ii. 1013
- The recorder shews the reasonableness of making statute 27 El. c. 2. and the putting it in force at this time, ii. 1016. See ii. 967.
- Sentence passed on the first six ii. 1017

 ANDERTON, WILLIAM,

His trial for high treason at the Old-Bailey, for two traitorous libels, June 3, 1693, 5 W. & M. viii. 63

Evidence of a printing-press, and materials for printing, found in his room viii. 64

And the two libels, one corrected by his own hand viii. 64

Prisoner's defence, that no overt act was proved, and prays counsel viii. 64

Printing declared an overt act viii. 64

Lord chief justice Treby sums up the evidence, and the jury find him guilty viii. 64

Is executed, and the ordinary's account of him viii. 65

His trial by another hand viii. 65

The several evidences viii. 66

Is refused counsel, and delivers in his plea himself viii. 66

The plea viii. 67

That 13 & 14 Car. II. ch. 33, which makes printing seditious books an offence, extends not the punishment to life or limb viii. 68

The jury ask the court, if having such things by him, without using them, affected the prisoner's life? viii. 68

Jury, after long debate, find him guilty viii. 69

Petitions, that sentence may be respited till counsel heard in his behalf viii. 69, 70

Pleas in arrest of judgment, and is condemned viii. 70

His behaviour till execution viii. 71

Delivers a paper to the sheriffs viii. 72

ANDREWS, EUSEBIUS, Col.

Proceedings against him for high treason, before the high court of justice, Aug. 16, 1650 vii. 324

His narrative presented to the council of state vii. 324

Some further circumstances relating to his examination, put into writing vii. 327

Petitions the council to have his friends come to him, and for a speedy trial vii. 328

Warrant for his commitment to the Tower, dated two months after his real commitment vii. 328

Petitions the parliament vii. 329

Puts in his answer in writing to the high court of justice vii. 329

Pleas, that the act constituting the high court of justice is repugnant to Magna Charta vii. 329

Puts in a second answer, that by the letter of the act the court is not qualified to try a freeman of England vii. 330

That they are sworn in words of manifest partiality vii. 330

His third answer, that it is not repugnant to the act to try him by his peers vii. 331

Avows his right, as a freeman, to the benefit of challenging, and of having the witnesses brought face to face vii. 331

His arguments at his trial

- First, that he ought to be tried by his peers vii. 332
- Second, that the court, if a court, is only a court ex parte, not having power to discharge, if the person is acquitted vii. 333
- Third, that it is no court of record, and therefore not capable to pass upon any man, in matter of life vii. 334
- Fourth, that the commissary power of the court is against common law and vulgar reason vii. 334
- Fifth, compares the oath of the judges and the commissioners vii. 335
- Sixth, a recapitulation of the whole argument vii. 336
- Sentenced to be beheaded vii. 337
- Desires a copy of his charge, and a day to be assigned to deliver in his answer vii. 338
- Urges the crime imputed to him only a bare resolution; so, consequently; no treason vii. 338
- That the owning king Charles II. not within the words of the act, proclaim, declare, publish, or any ways promote, vii. 338
- Takes exceptions to some of his triers, but not regarded vii. 340
- His speech on the scaffold on Tower-hill vii. 341

ANGLESEA, RICHARD, Earl of,

Annesley James, esq; and John Fans, gent. for an assault on James Annesley, esq; and others, tried at Athy, in the county of Kildare, in Ireland, 3 Aug. 1744, 17 Geo. II. ix. 336

The indictment, and opened by Mr. Disney ix. 336

Mr. Harward on the same side ix. 336

Mr. Spring on the other side ix. 337

Mr. Harward and Mr. Spring argue on the nature of giving evidence ix. 337

The court's opinion upon it ix. 337

Mr. Mac Manus for the prosecution ix. 339

Mr. Morgan for the defendants, and for separating the indictments ix. 339

Court over-rule him ix. 340

Evidence against them, by Mr. Mac Kercher, and others, in support of the indictments ix. 340

Mr. Spring states the case ix. 364

Mr. Morgan moves, that those acquitted may give testimony for the rest ix. 365

Court of opinion they may ix. 365

Mr. Harward against allowing it ix. 366

His dispute with the court about it ix. 366

Mr. Attorney-general, Mr. Mac Manus, and Mr. Callaghan's speeches on the point ix. 367

Mr. Malone for the defendants ix. 368

The counsel for the prosecutors over-ruled in their objection ix. 368

More evidence on the other indictments ix. 369

Lord Anglesea is found guilty ix. 375

Mr. Spring's speech, whether more evidence is necessary ix. 375

Court's opinion ix. 376

Mr. Harward's speech ix. 376

Court states the case ix. 376

Mr. Attorney-general's opinion upon it ix. 378

Jury find them guilty ix. 378

Mr. Harward's speech, for judgment ix. 378

Court's on giving sentence ix. 379

Their punishment ix. 379

ANIMADVERSIONS

On two 30th of January sermons, resolved by the lords, a villainous libel, and condemned to be burnt by the common hangman, 1700 viii. 80

ANNALY, Lord. See xi. 219.

ANNE BOLEYN. See BOLEYN ANNE.

ANNESLEY, JAMES,

And Joseph Redding, for murder, at the Old-Bailey, 15 July, 1742, 15 Geo. II. ix. 315

The indictment ix. 316

Mr. Brown opens the indictment against them ix. 317

Mr. serjeant Gapper on the same side ix. 317

The evidence against them ix. 317, 318, &c.

Their defence, the latter being a gamekeeper ix. 323

The opinion of the court on their case ix. 329

The counsel's argument for the prisoners ix. 330

The counsel's argument against them ix. 331

Mr. Hume Campbell's reply ix. 331

More evidence called ix. 332

Court summed up the evidence ix. 333

Found guilty of chance-medley ix. 335

ANNESLEY JAMES, Esq.

Against Richard earl of Anglesea, his trial in ejectment, for lands in the county of Down, in Ireland, Nov. 1743, 16 Geo. II. ix. 380

The declaration ix. 380

Mr. serjeant Marshall's speech on opening the evidence ix. 381-3

Mr. serjeant Tisdall on the same side ix. 383

Mr. Leburn for defendant ix. 383

Mr. retorder Stannard on the same side ix. 383

Lord

- Lord chief-baron Bowes's request, that the jury would take notes ix. 383
 The names of the evidence for the plaintiff ix. 383
 Mr. Giffard, a principal witness for the plaintiff ix. 384
 His evidence objected to ix. 384
 Several speeches for and against allowing him a witness ix. 385, &c.
 Attorney ought not to disclose the secrets of his client ix. 387
 Mr. Giffard gives his evidence ix. 388
 A point of law, whether an attorney shall disclose any thing whatsoever in a collateral question that shall affect his client ix. 389
 Debated, with the several arguments ix. 389, &c.
 Lord chief-baron Bowes's opinion thereupon ix. 392
 Baron Mountney's ix. 392
 Baron Dawson's ix. 394
 Mr. Giffard proceeds in his evidence ix. 394
 Mr. Attorney-general (St. George Caulfield, esq;) opens the defendant's evidence ix. 399
 Names of defendant's witnesses ix. 402
 Mrs. Heath, a principal witness for the defendant ix. 403
 More witnesses called, and confronted with Mrs. Heath ix. 413
 Lord chief-baron's charge ix. 415
 Mr. Baron Mountney's ix. 423
 Mr. Baron Dawson's ix. 429
 A verdict for the plaintiff ix. 431
 See Mrs. Heath's trial for perjury in this cause ix. 431
 His and his sons death ix. 432. See ANGLESEA, RICHARD Earl of.
- ANSWER in CHANCERY.
 If it does not give an account of all the minute circumstances charged by the bill, it may be excepted to vi. 703
- ANTIDOTE against POISON;
 Containing some remarks on paper mentioned to have been delivered by lord Ruffel to the sheriffs at his execution; composed by Sir Bartholomew Shower viii. 464
- ANTIGUA. See BARBOT JOHN.
ANTRIM, Marquis of,
 His case before the commissioners in the bill of settlement in Ireland viii. 419
 Account of what money he received from Ireland viii. 423
- A P P E A L.
 * In an appeal, where one stands mute he shall be hanged i. 389
 * Appeals in parliament remain in the same state on the meeting of a new parliament; as they were in at the dissolution of the old ii. 747
 * In an appeal the prisoner's witnesses shall be sworn ii. 253
 * A conviction on an indictment for murder no bar to an appeal ii. 253
 The king may pardon burning even in an appeal v. 108
 * One acquitted for murder shall give security to answer any appeal that may be brought iii. 501
 Infant against whom special verdict is found for murder, pardoned before argument, not to give bail to answer appeal ix. 542
 Appeal resembles an impeachment ix. 567
 In an appeal the prisoner may have counsel, and his witnesses shall be sworn ii. 253. iv. 174
 Why appeals less frequent than indictments iv. 174
 Appeal lies in robbery, murder, burglary, felony, and in all crimes at common law, punishable by loss of life or member iv. 174
 The Chancery has power to relieve, in case writ of appeal is lost, and to renew it viii. 487
 Appeal against a member of the house of commons, during the time of parliament, and debates between the two houses thereon. See PAGG, Sir JOHN.
 There lies, of common right, an appeal from all ecclesiastical courts in England to the sovereign, in virtue of his majesty's supremacy. See resolved by all the judges of England viii. 570
 In appeal of murder, peers to be tried by ordinary jury of freeholders, vii. 149, 152. xi. 278
 An attempt to deprive the subject of his right of appeal in case of murder, made in parliament xi. 278
 Trial of murder of a very extraordinary nature on appeal x. 31 Ap.
 Appeals in parliament taken away by stat. 1 Hen. IV. ch. 14. vi. 6. D.
 In appeals of treason battle did not lie, if it could be proved by witnesses i. 11. n.
 Quaker cannot be a witness on appeal ix. 122. n.
 Holt, chief justice, B. R. ordered an appeal himself v. ix. 152. See BAMBRIDGE THOMAS. BATHURST CHARLES. CHETWIND WILLIAM. CORBET RICHARD. COWPER SPENCER. NOBLE RICHARD. PORTER GEORGE. REA Lord. SHIRLEY D. Lord. SLAUGHTERFORD CHRISTOPHER. TALES VERNIRE.
 Appeals to the court of Rome. See POPE vi. 108.
A P P E A R A N C E.
 Where one appears upon summons he shall have an imparlance; but if he comes in custody, or on recognizance, he shall plead instantly. 323
 Voluntary appearance upon an outlawry cannot be taken notice of by the court judicially xi. 325
 * APPLETREE THOMAS ii. 385. See MESSINGER, et al.
- A P P R O V E R.
 Great credit was given to an approver iv. 200. See ii. 143
 * ARCHBISHOP. See BISHOP.
ARCHER, JOHN, has been executed
 Not permitted to argue at the bar, because he refused to take the engagement ii. 159
- A R E O P A G I T A.
 Upon what occasion Milton wrote that famous pamphlet xi. 322
 * ARGYLE, ARCHIBALD, Marquis of,
 His trial in Scotland for high treason, Jan. 23, 1681, 13 Car. II. ii. 417.
- The grand indictment exhibited against him by his majesty's advocate to the parliament of Scotland vii. 379
 * The charge against him, wherein are enumerated several acts of hostility in the reign of the late king ii. 418
 * The delivering the king's person into the hands of the English rebels, ii. 418
 * In taking the part of Oliver Cromwell when protector, and opposing king Charles the second's restoration ii. 419, &c.
 Petitions the parliament for a recognition of his case, and for warrants to cite such persons whose names he should give in vii. 385
 Refused vii. 386
 Resolved, that his advocates could not be allowed to speak in cases of treason, but upon their peril vii. 390
 His speech before presenting his submission vii. 390
 His submission, and begs the intercession of parliament vii. 392
 Not accepted, and ordered to put in his defence vii. 392
 The speech before the parliament after the indictment read observes, that several matters stated in the libel are not produced, without which he is incapable of answering vii. 394
 That the acts of parliament on which the libel is founded are not repeated as they bear vii. 395
 That the libel, as founded on practice, is no ways relevant vii. 396
 That the dittay is unclear and indistinct; therefore the libel inept vii. 396
 * The marquis's answer ii. 427
 His defence vii. 387
 * Pleads his majesty's act of oblivion ii. 427, vii. 397
 * Denies most of the other articles ii. 428
 His further answer to particular articles vii. 399
 Distinction between acts concurring with the usurper, transferring de facto in his person the power he usurps and acts, whereby the oppressed subjects make use of the power usurped, wherein the utility, not of the usurper, but of the subjects, is respected vii. 413
 The opinion of several eminent civil lawyers concerning concealing treason vii. 418
 * His speech at his execution ii. 434
- * ARGYLE, ARCHIBALD, Earl of,
 His trial for high treason, in November, &c. 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 441
 * November 3, 1681, the earl takes the Scotch test in council, his royal highness the duke of York, high-commissioner, being present iii. 441
 * The privy council's explanation of the test iii. 441
 * November 4. The earl of Argyle being about to take the test as a commissioner of the treasury, and offering the explanation he had offered the day before, it was resolved he could not sit in council, not having taken the test according to the meaning of the act iii. 442
 * The earl of Argyle's explication of the test iii. 442
 * November 8. The council send a letter to his majesty, to acquaint him they had committed the earl to the castle, and ordered him to be prosecuted for the scandalous paper he gave in as his explication of the test, iii. 442
 * November 15. The king sends an answer, approving their proceedings, iii. 443
 * The indictment against him for treason and perjury, &c. iii. 443
 * Abstract of the acts of parliament whereon the indictment is founded, iii. 444
 * The earl's petition that Sir George Lockhart may be assigned of counsel for him iii. 446
 * The answer of the council iii. 446
 * A second petition of the earl's; with the answer of the council, that they allow counsel to plead for him iii. 447
 * The earl causes Sir George Lockhart to be served with the order of council, allowing counsel to plead for him iii. 447
 * The earl is arraigned December 12, before the lords of judiciary, iii. 448
 * His speech, reciting his services to the king at Worcester fight, &c. iii. 448
 * The king's letter to the earl when he was lord Lorn iii. 449
 * General Middleton's orders to the earl, and the earl of Glencairn's letter to him, read in court iii. 449
 * Sir George Lockhart's argument and plea for the earl of Argyle iii. 450
 * The king's advocate's argument and plea against the earl iii. 455
 * Sir John Dalrymple's reply to the king's advocate iii. 453
 * Sir George Lockhart's reply to the king's advocate iii. 460
 * The king's advocate's third plea against the earl iii. 463
 * The several arguments entered by the clerks in court iii. 464
 * December 12. The lords of judiciary adjudge the libel or indictment to be well supported, as to the treason; and refer the proof of the facts therein contained to the assize (or jury) consisting of fifteen peers and commoners iii. 464
 * The assize having chosen the marquis of Montrose their chancellor (or foreman) with one voice find the earl guilty of treason, leasing-making, and raising-selling; and, by plurality of voices, acquit him of the perjury iii. 464
 * The council acquaint his majesty with the proceedings iii. 464
 * The king, in his answer, directs the lords of judiciary to proceed to pass sentence; but to respite the execution iii. 465
 * December 23, 1681. The court pass sentence of high treason upon the earl in his absence, he having made his escape iii. 466
- A R M S.
 The heralds and pursuivants with their coats displayed (after sound of trumpet) publicly, in face of court, conform to the custom of Scotland in sentences of treason; and in pursuance thereto, in his majesty's name and by his authority, cancel, tear, and destroy the traitor's arms, throw them in his face, trample them under foot, and ordain his arms to be expunged out of the books of heraldry, his posterity to be ignoble and never to enjoy honour or dignity. They then go to the market-cross of Edinburgh, and solemnly tear and cancel the the said arms, and affix them on said cross reversed, with this inscription, "The arms of mr. Robert Baillie, late of Jerviswood, traitor."

iii. 1101. See iii. 466. iv. 304. vii. 44, 85. viii. 332.

* ARMSTRONG, Sir THOMAS,

* Proceedings on the outlawry against him, Trin. 36 Car. II. 1684 iii. 983
 * He desires he may have the benefit of a trial, according to the statute of Edw. VI. it being less than a year since he was out-law'd. The court answer, he did not surrender himself pursuant to that statute; but was taken, and so could not have the benefit of it iii. 983

* Remarks on this proceeding iii. 984

* Mrs. Matthews, the prisoner's daughter, exclaims against the court for murdering her father, and is committed iii. 984

* The prisoner charged with being one of those who engaged to kill the king iii. 985

* He complains his money was taken from him when he was made prisoner iii. 985

* Execution awarded iii. 985

* His behaviour at execution iii. 985

* Substance of his dying speech iii. 986

* Proceedings of the commons upon this attainder, in 1689 iii. 986

* His attainder reversed, 6 W. III. iii. 986

The paper delivered by sir Thomas to the sheriffs viii. 471. See iii. 397, 398

Sir John Hawles's remarks on the award of execution against sir Thomas iv. 198. See viii. 64, n. See also EXAMINATIONS.

ARMSTRONG, Lady,

Copy of the paper delivered by her to the lord keeper, lord chief justice, and attorney-general, in behalf of her husband sir Thomas Armstrong viii. 470

ARNOLD, EDWARD,

His trial for shooting at lord Onslow, Mar. 20, 1723-4 viii. 290

The indictment viii. 290

Counsel moves for a solicitor to be by him, to call his witnesses, he being a lunatic viii. 291

Counsel for the king oppose it viii. 291

Mr. serjeant Cheshire's speech, at opening the fact viii. 292

The evidence of the persons with lord Onslow, when he was shot viii. 293

Evidence of his declaring he would shoot lord Onslow, if he saw him viii. 297

His confession to the justice, that he had long and deliberately intended to murder him viii. 300

Evidence for the prisoner, to prove him a lunatic viii. 301

Mr. Hungerford urges, the prisoner's not being disguised brought him not within the act of parliament viii. 313

Mr. justice Tracy delivers the opinion of all the judges, that the clause was distinct from the former, of being in disguise viii. 313

Mr. serjeant Cheshire's observations on the evidence viii. 313

Some letters of the prisoner's during his confinement, and state of the case, as he himself dictated it, produced viii. 316

Mr. justice Tracy sums up the evidence viii. 317

The jury find him guilty viii. 322

Died in prison viii. 322

ARRAIGNMENT.

Not necessary for peer or commoner to hold up his hand at the bar on his arraignment ii. 28. iii. 212, 213. iv. 211, 512. See FITZHARRIS, EDWARD. HOLDING UP THE HAND.

ARREST.

* Hussy, chief justice, said, that sir John Markham told king Edward IV. he could not arrest a man for treason or felony, as a subject might, because that if the king did wrong, the party could not have his action against him vii. 120, 129, 130, 146, 171, 219, 221. See ii. 208, 212. iv. 558.

Arrest under a warrant filled up after sealed, illegal x. 478

Mr. justice Foster's opinion of such arrest x. 476. n. See ACTION. PRITCHARD, WILLIAM.

ARTICLES of IMPEACHMENT. See IMPEACHMENTS.

ARUNDEL, Archbishop of Canterbury,

Is said to have been impeached of, but not committed for, treason ii. 572

* ARUNDEL, PHILIP HOWARD, Earl of,

His trial for high treason, the 18th of April, 1589. 31 Eliz. before a commission of peers i. 164

* Indicted for corresponding with dr. Allen, a traitor, in promoting a foreign invasion, and paying mass for the success of the Spanish armada i. 165

* A picture found in his trunk given in evidence against him i. 166

* Refused to have his accusers brought face to face i. 167

* He objects to some of the witnesses, that they were indicted or attainted; but is over-ruled i. 168

* He is convicted; and sentence pronounced upon him i. 168

* He dies in prison i. 168

ARUNDEL, THOMAS HOWARD, Earl of,

Lord high steward on earl Strafford's trial for treason i. 736

ASHBY and WHITE.

Proceedings in the house of commons in that case viii. 89

Alby brings his action against White, for refusing his vote; is cast in the Queen's Bench, and recovers on a writ of error, in the house of lords viii. 89

Members appointed to search the journals of the house of lords, and the Queen's Bench viii. 89

The record viii. 89, 90

Mr. speaker Harley's speech viii. 92, 113

Mr. Brewer's speech against the action's lying viii. 93

Daniel Onslow's case cited viii. 94

Sir Thomas Powys's speech against it viii. 95

Cites the case of Nevil and Stroud, 1655 viii. 98

And Seame and Barnardiston viii. 98

Vol. XI.

Sir John Hawles's speech in justification of the lords viii. 100

Sir Edward Seymour's speech that no action lay viii. 103

Marquis of Harrington's speech viii. 104

Mr. Lowndes's speech viii. 104

Sir Simon Harcourt, solicitor-general, his speech viii. 107

Mr. Dormer's speech viii. 108, 109

Sir Joseph Jekyl's speech viii. 110

Sir George Meggot's and mr. Tancred's cases cited by him viii. 111

Sir Thomas More's speech viii. 114

Mr. Cowper's speech viii. 114

Sir Humphrey Mackworth's speech viii. 117

Sir Gilbert Dolben's speech viii. 119

Mr. King's speech viii. 121

Sir Thomas Littleton's speech viii. 122

Serjeant Hooper's speech viii. 122

Mr. Walpole's speech viii. 123

Resolved, that the qualification of any elector, or right of any person elected, is cognizable, and determinable no where, but before the parliament viii. 123

Alby resolved guilty of a breach of privilege viii. 124

Report of the lords committees appointed to draw up a state of the case, upon the writ of error viii. 125

Reasons of the lords for reversing the judgment viii. 125

Two sorts of boroughs described viii. 126

Though the inheritance of the franchise be in the body corporate, yet it is for the benefit of the particular members, and enures to their advantage in their private capacities viii. 127

Where a man is injured, if he cannot bring his action to recover the thing itself, the law will always give him damages in lieu thereof viii. 131

The lords resolve, the action maintainable in the queen's courts; and that the voting Alby guilty of a breach of privilege, is an unprecedented attempt upon the judicature of parliament viii. 134

Mr. Mead brings other actions of the like nature, and is ordered to attend the house of commons viii. 134

The declarations in five causes viii. 135

The several plaintiffs, and the attorney, committed to Newgate viii. 137

The commons address the queen, that she will not give leave for any writ of error viii. 137

Her majesty's answer viii. 138

Mr. Page, mr. Mountague, mr. Lechmere, and mr. Denton, ordered into custody, for pleading on the return of a habeas corpus, in behalf of the persons committed viii. 139

The five plaintiffs taken from Newgate, into the custody of the serjeant at arms viii. 139

Report of the proceedings of the house of lords, in relation to the persons committed, read viii. 140

Protection granted to their counsel and attornies, on their petition viii. 140

Conference appointed viii. 141

Two writs of habeas corpus served on the serjeant for mr. Mountague and mr. Denton viii. 142

Report of the committee appointed to draw up what is proper to be offered at the next conference viii. 143

The case of the Norfolk election, 28 Eliz. and of sir Francis Goodwin, viii. 145

Writs issued by the lord-chancellor, during a prorogation, declared void viii. 146

Mr. Bromley reports the conference viii. 149

Resolved, that no person committed by the commons should be brought by habeas corpus before any other judicature during that session, viii. 149

That the serjeant make no return, and the lord-keeper be acquainted with these resolutions, that the writs may be superseded viii. 149

Report of a third conference viii. 149

The lords say, the commons have no power to make declarations, which belong to the crown viii. 150

No action lay for a double return till 7 & 8 William III. viii. 151

The commons justify their declaration viii. 154

Writ of error lies not in any proceedings on a habeas corpus viii. 157

Resolved, that the proceedings in relation to the Aylebury men, and other proceedings in that matter, are in maintenance of the privileges of the commons of England viii. 157

Proceedings in the Queen's-Bench on the habeas corpus viii. 158

Mr. Page, mr. Lechmere, mr. Mountague, and mr. Denton, urge they were bailable, and object to the return viii. 158

Gould, Powys, and Powell, give their opinions, seriatim, they were not bailable viii. 159

Lord chief-justice Holt, e contra viii. 161

Prisoners remanded, and judgment entered on record viii. 163

House of lords address the queen to grant writs of error viii. 163

The queen's answer viii. 170

The parliament prorogued viii. 170

Some arguments of the lords at the free conferences viii. 171

Copy of the record viii. 89

ASHLEY, Sir FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law,

His speech on behalf of his majesty, at a conference of lords and commons, concerning the liberty of the subject vii. 179

He was committed to the Tower by the house of lords, for delivering the above speech as from the commons, without their authority, and for asserting in the argument of it, that there was a law of state different from the common law vii. 180, xi. 323. See STATE LAW.

ASHLEY, JAMES,

And Simons Henry a Jew; their case for felony and robbery x. 411

ASHLEY, THOMAS,

A witness on Goddard's trial, perjured x. 411

His

* ASHTON, JOHN,

- * His trial for high treason, the 19th of January, 1690, 2 W. & M. iv. 455
- * The indictment iv. 410
- * The prisoner is denied to have his solicitor by him at the trial iv. 455
- * Mr. serjeant Thompson's speech before evidence iv. 456
- * Billop's evidence of his taking the prisoners on board a yacht, with the papers, as in the lord Preston's trial iv. 464
- * Mr. Ashton's defence iv. 473
- * He calls witnesses to his reputation iv. 476
- * Mr. serjeant Thompson sums up the evidence iv. 479
- * The chief-justice Holt directs the jury iv. 481
- * Lord chief-justice Pollexfen adds his observations iv. 484
- * Mr. Ashton is convicted iv. 485
- * Lord Preston and Mr. Ashton called to hear judgment iv. 486
- * Mr. Ashton desires a sight of the indictment, but is denied iv. 486
- * Sentence passed on the lord Preston and Mr. Ashton iv. 487
- * Mr. Ashton's dying speech iv. 487
- * He reflects upon a particular judge and jurymen iv. 488
- * Copy of paper he left in a friend's hand vi. 64. See viii. 64, n. ii. 432. n.

* ASK, RICHARD,

Argues against return of hab. corp. for William Stroud and others, vii. 219

* ASSASSINATION. See *BARNARDI'S PLOT. ASSAULT.

- Record for an assault vi. 59. Ap.
- Indictment for an assault and conspiracy with intent to wound and beat viii. 178
- Ex officio* information for riot, assault, and battery iii. 629. See vi. 40
- Indictment for assault and attempt to murder iii. 65. See BETHEL SLINGSBY. BRITON JOHN. DENEW NATHANIEL. EL-LIOT Sir JOHN. GILES JOHN. HATHAWAY RICHARD. MERRIAM JOHN. VALENTINE BENJAMIN. WELLING THOMAS and ELIZ.

* ASSIZE. See *JURY. ASSIZES.

It is the duty of all justices of the peace to attend the assizes x. 92. Ap.

* ASSOCIATION.

- * Association entered into (for the preservation of queen Elizabeth) by private persons, confirmed by parliament i. 143, 144
- * The draught of an association to exclude the duke of York, found in the earl of Shaftesbury's study iii. 424
- Association for bringing in the late king James, forged by Younge and Blackhead. See ROCHESTER, Bishop of.
- * ASTLIN JOSEPH, iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* ASTON, RICHARD,

His argument for Macdonald and others x. 441. See WILKES JOHN.

* ATHEISTS.

He pleads against a God, not that he disbelieves a Deity, but would have it so iii. 223. vii. 481

* ATKINS, SAMUEL,

- His examination before the committee of lords appointed to examine into the murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey viii. 443
- The deposition of captain Atkins, upon which Mr. Atkins was apprehended viii. 446
- Mr. Bedlow's deposition before the lords viii. 449
- * His trial for the murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, February 1678, 31 Car. II. ii. 792
- * His indictment, as accessory with Green, Berry, and Hill ii. 792
- * He pleads not guilty ii. 792
- * His indictment, as principal with Welch and Le Faire ii. 793
- * He pleads not guilty ii. 794
- * The jury sworn and charged with both indictments ii. 794
- * Sir William Jones, Attor. Gen. his speech ii. 794
- * Charles Atkins's evidence of the prisoner's expressing some resentment against Sir Edmundbury Godfrey ii. 795
- * And of his desiring to speak with one Child, who would afterwards have engaged him in the murder of a man ii. 796
- * Bedlow's evidence ii. 797
- * He owns he had formerly declared that the prisoner was in the room where Sir Edmundbury Godfrey's body lay, and spake to him; but now cannot be positive whether it was the prisoner or not ii. 797
- * Evidence that the prisoner disappointed some persons who expected his company that day ii. 798
- * The prisoner proves to the satisfaction of the court, that he was at Greenwich at the time mentioned by Bedlow ii. 799
- * He is acquitted ii. 800. See viii. 443, 452.

* ATKINS, WILLIAM,

- * His trial at Stafford assizes, for high-treason, the 13th of August 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 968
- * The indictment, for that being a subject of England, he accepted Pepish orders, and afterwards resided in England ii. 968
- * Evidence of the prisoner's exercising his function ii. 969
- * He makes no defence, and is convicted ii. 970

* ATKINS, EDWARD, Baron of the Exchequer,

- His directions to the jury on the trial of Thwyng and Mary Presticks for treason iii. 87
- Lord viscount Stafford hoped that Mr. Baron Atkins's reason why two witnesses were not necessary to every overt act of treason, viz. "because else a great many of those persons who have been already executed, must be acknowledged to have been unjustly cut off," was an argument which would not weigh with any body. He said it struck him, and he was sorry to hear a judge advance any such doctrine, and that his blood rose at it iii. 205
- He was examined as a witness on one of Oates's trials for perjury iv. 41

* ATKINS, ROBERT, of Lincoln's-inn,

- (Afterwards a Judge in the Court of Common Pleas)
- Opens the answer of William Prynne, who was informed against in the Star-Chamber for writing and publishing Hypionastix i. 419

His argument in his defence

* ATKINS, ROBERT, Serjeant at Law.

Henry Burton prays he may be assigned one of his counsel i. 503

So does doctor John Bastwick i. 502

ATKINS, Sir ROBERT, Knight of the Bath, Justice C. P. and L. C. B. of the Exchequer,

* His remarks on Lord Russel's trial iii. 755, 784

His argument in the cause of Barnardiston and Soame vii. 433

His argument on the pleadings in the cause of Godwin against Sir Edward Hale vii. 624

His animadversions on the lord chief-justice Herbert's justification of the king's dispensing power vii. 625

Acknowledges himself to be the author of the arguments against the dispensing power iii. 782

He was very severe against Matthew Crone, a traitor x. 39. Ap. See

* ANDERSON LIONEL. ATTACHMENTS.

There must be a motion to make the order of a judge a rule of court, if it becomes necessary to enforce the order by attachment xi. 333

* ATTAINER.

* Bills of attainder universally exploded, where the party is forth-coming v. 68

Proceedings of the commons on the reversal of Sir Thomas Arnsfords attainder at the Revolution iii. 986

Manner of surrendering, in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. 652

Record of such surrender ix. 652

If it be a good reason to reverse attainders, because party had not benefit of law, same reason holds against enacting them v. 125

* Sir John Fenwick's was the first bill of attainder began in the house of commons, except the duke of Monmouth's v. 125

Lord Ormswell was the first man who promoted attainders in Henry VIII's reign, and the advice he gave his master for the ruin of others proved fatal to himself v. 125. vi. 475. See v. 83. 106

Attainders in Henry VIII's time censured xi. 25

Lord Russel's attainder void iv. 172

Attainders for treason do not work disinherison of heirs, or affect any other rights than only offenders for life Em. Pref. vi.

Act for the attainder of Seymour Lord Sudley vii. 6

Act for annulling Algernon Sidney's attainder viii. 472

Viscount Stafford's attainder was attempted to be reversed 1 Jac. II. and a bill for that purpose passed the lords, but was dropped in the commons iii. 214 n.

* Bill of attainder against one for killing a foreign minister after a trial in an inferior court v. 105

Bills of attainder used to begin by impeachment, and then witnesses were upon oath v. 111

Law ought to be the rule even in bills of attainder v. 125

Whether attainder of commoner can begin in house of peers v. 127

Algernon Sidney's attainder reversed at Revolution iii. 824

The act of parliament for it given in evidence x. 42. Ap.

Earl of Stafford's attainder reversed i. 764

Act for reversing alderman Cornish's attainder viii. 473

Act for reversing Lord Russel's attainder viii. 471

Sir William Stanley's placing the crown upon the earl of Richmond's head, purged his attainder v. 679. See xi. 2

Trial on the identity of the person upon attainder cannot be put off by the common affidavit ix. 584

No peremptory challenge on such a trial ix. 584

Legislative and judicial capacities united on passing bills of attainder vi. 405

Bills of attainder are like Sisyphus's stone, they have frequently rolled back upon those who were the chief promoters of them vi. 475

The act of attainder of the earl of March passed, because he had been instrumental in the attainder of another lord vi. 475

Attainder reversed for error in entry of judgment, and reversal confirmed in parliament iii. 752

Duke of Norfolk attainted xi. 20

Reasons for reversal of it xi. 20

Attainders of a new and unheard of nature passed in the parliament of 1539 xi. 25

Attainting persons without trial is a breach of the most sacred and unalterable rules of justice xi. 25

The parliament of 1539, attainted sixteen persons for treason xi. 25. See v. 86

The parliament of 1540, attainted seventeen persons for treason xi. 25

The parliament of 1541, attainted fifteen persons for treason xi. 25

Person attainted pleads that he is not the person mentioned in the record or act of parliament, a verdict may be awarded returnable instanter, and a verdict against the defendant on such issue is conclusive ix. 582, 583

Execution awarded against persons attainted many years before ix. 583

And against persons attainted by act of parliament, or by outlawry ix. 583, 584. x. 203

Act of parliament attainting a man of treason, removed by certiorari into Chancery, and sent thence into B. R. by mittimus x. 203, 204

How far an attainted person is liable to civil suits, and how far under the protection of the law ix. 586, 587

Act for annulling the attainder of Alicia Lisle, widow vi. 130

Attainder of treason reversed, some words being omitted in the entry of the judgment iii. 752. See ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.

ATKINS, FRANCIS, Bishop of Rochester. CAMERON ARGHIBALD. FENWICK Sir JOHN. GOWRIE, JOHN earl of.

KELLY GEORGE. LAUD archbishop. MONRIEF HUGH. OYER and TERMINER. PLUNKET JOHN. RUTCLIFFE

CHARLES. RECORDS. RUTHVEN ALEXANDER. SEYMOUR, THOMAS lord. STAFFORD earl of. STAFFORD

earl of.

A T T E M P T.

- Attempt to rob or ravish, punishable with death in Scotland ii. 629
- See GILES JOHN, MITCHEL JAMES.
- ATTERBURY, Dr. FRANCIS, Bishop of Rochester,
- Proceedings in parliament against him, John Plunket, and George Kelly, alias Johnson, upon bills of pains and penalties for a treasonable conspiracy, May 1723, 9 Geo. I. vi. 335
- The names of the committee appointed by the house of commons vi. 335
- The report of the said committee vi. 335
- The resolutions of the house of commons on the said report vi. 382
- The names of the committee of the house of lords vi. 382
- The report of the said committee vi. 382
- The resolutions of the house of lords on the said report vi. 390
- The lord chancellor's speech, returning the thanks of the house to the lords of the committee vi. 390
- The act to inflict pains and penalties on John Plunket vi. 390
- Mr. Kelly's speech to the house of lords vi. 391
- The act to inflict pains and penalties on George Kelly, alias Johnson vi. 397
- Sir Constantine Phipps's speech for the bishop of Rochester vi. 398
- Mr. Wynne's speech for the bishop vi. 406
- Sir Constantine Phipps's recapitulation of the evidence vi. 429
- Mr. Wynne's recapitulation vi. 430
- The bishop's speech in his own defence vi. 435
- Mr. Reeve's reply vi. 445
- Mr. Wear's reply vi. 453
- The bishop of Salisbury's speech for the bill vi. 458
- The duke of Wharton's speech against the bill vi. 465
- The act to inflict pains and penalties on Francis lord bishop of Rochester vi. 475
- The deprived and banished bishop embarks for France vi. 476
- See ATTORNEY. SOLICITORS. WITNESSES.
- ATTORNEY - GENERAL.
- He is called upon by defendant to give his evidence in a cause wherein he was prosecutor for the crown xi. 283
- Defends himself against charge of acting improperly in his office xi. 287
- See THURLOW, EDWARD.
- Sir F. Bacon the first attorney-general permitted to have a seat in the house of commons xi. 273
- The office of attorney-general hath been the rock whereon many aspiring lawyers have made a shipwreck of their virtue and of human nature xi. 273
- Charles Pratt, esquire, attorney-general to Geo. III. an illustrious instance of exception to the above observation x. 483
- The office of attorney-general of more profit than that of a puisne judge iv. 166
- Queen Elizabeth said, the duty of the attorney-general was to prosecute for truth, as well as for the queen iv. 176
- When Mr. Egerton, of solicitor was made attorney-general i. 194
- Charged with being an impeached traitor vii. 364
- Information filed by solicitor-general during vacancy of attorney-general, good in law; foreclosed by the judges xi. 334. See BAIL. OUTLAWRY.
- ATTORNIES AT LAW.
- An attorney fined 1000l. bound to his good behaviour for seven years, and his name struck out of the roll, without any offence alledged in his practice iii. 219. vii. 482, 483
- Two attorneys at New-York were, by order of court, excluded from practice, and their names struck out of the rolls of attorneys, for their contempt in signing exceptions that denied the legality of the judges their commission ix. 281
- Attorney fined for libelling a justice of peace ix. 313
- Serjeant at law prosecuted for libelling an attorney ix. 311
- The arguments of counsel in Ireland, with those of the judges, and their opinion on the question, "whether an attorney shall be allowed to disclose and give in evidence what his client had told him in secret" ix. 379. n. 386, 387, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394. See ii. 828.
- ATWOOD, WILLIAM.
- His examination of Sir Edward Herbert's justification of the king's dispensing power vii. 630
- Of counsel for Richard Baxter; and brow-beat and ill treated by lord chief justice Jeffries x. 39. App. See v. 421
- AUDLEY, MERVIN, Lord, and Earl of Castlehaven,
- His trial for a rape upon his own wife, and for sodomy, Apr. 25, 1631, 7 Car. I. i. 388
- Opinions of the judges upon several points moved to them by the attorney-general before the trial i. 388
- Lord steward's speech to the prisoner i. 390
- His charge to the peers i. 390
- The countess's examination read against the earl i. 392
- Evidence that he held his lady, while his servant ravished her i. 392
- Evidence of the earl's committing sodomy i. 392
- That he solicited his servants to lie with his daughter at twelve years old i. 392
- His daughter, the young lady Audley's examination read against him i. 392
- The earl objects to his lady's testimony, that she was a lewd woman i. 393
- The earl is convicted, and sentenced to be hanged; but is beheaded i. 394
- His behaviour at execution i. 395
- Fitzpatrick and Broadway, lord Audley's servants, tried and convicted; the one for buggery, and the other for a rape on lady Audley i. 396
- The person prostituting himself adjudged guilty of felony as well as the actor i. 396
- The judges letter to the lord keeper about their case i. 396
- They are executed, and confess the crime i. 397

- The indictment for the rape vi. 4. Ap.
- The indictment for the sodomy vi. 5. Ap.
- Audley, Mervin lord, was beheaded, though he had judgment to be hanged iv. 129
- AUDLEY, Sir THOMAS,
- (Lord Chancellor, and Commissioner on the Trial of Sir Thomas More)
- Omits to ask the prisoner what he had to say why judgment should not be pronounced against him, before he passed sentence; of which omission Sir Thomas reminded Audley i. 61. See iv. 199
- AUTREFOITS ACQUITE.
- This plea unjustly over-ruled ii. 715, 831. iv. 673. See ix. 542
- * AVERMENT.
- Where words are plain and express, there needs no averment iii. 1060
- * See PLEADING and PLEAS.
- * AVERY. See DAWSON, & al.
- * AXTEL, DANIEL. iii. 369. See REGICIDES.
- AYLESBURY - M E N,
- Their case. See ADDRESSES. ASHBY and WHITE.
- A X E.
- A mayor in his mayoralty caused an uncommon axe to be made, to strike off the heads of such as should resist his will and pleasure; and he was sentenced by the parliament to be beheaded with his own axe i. 13. n.
- No axe to be carried before a prisoner impeached i. 736

B.

- * BABINGTON, ANTHONY,
- * Chidiock Titchburn, Thomas Salisbury, Robert Barnewell, John Savage, Henry Dunn, and John Ballard, their arraignment, Sept. 1586. 28 Eliz. i. 128
- * Indicted of high treason, for conspiring the queen's death, and to set the queen of Scots at liberty i. 129
- * They all confess the indictment i. 129, &c.
- * After they pleaded guilty, their former confessions are read in court i. 130, &c.
- * Being called to judgment, they quarrel among one another who were the first contrivers of the plot i. 133
- * Their behaviour and cruel execution i. 140, 141. See EXECUTION.
- BACON, Sir FRANCIS,
- By command of queen Elizabeth published a declaration touching the treasons of the earl of Essex and his accomplices vii. 47. n.
- Reports the conference with the judges, in presence of king and council, on the case between Sir Francis Goodwin and Sir John Fortescue, concerning the election for the county of Bucks vii. 76
- His speech as counsel for Galvin, in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 79
- Argument of Sir Francis Bacon, king's solicitor, in lower house of parliament, for impositions by crown xi. 33
- Speech of Sir Francis Bacon to the king, on presenting petition of grievances by the commons xi. 65
- His speech on the trial of Robert lord Sanquhar vii. 89
- Lord Sanquhar's execution was the noblest piece of justice, in lord Bacon's opinion, that ever came forth in any king's time xi. 112. See SANQUHAR lord.
- His speech on prosecution of James Whitelock xi. 106
- His speech in the case of William Talbot xi. 116
- His speech on prosecution of Mary countess of Shrewsbury xi. 109
- His speech in the case of Oliver St. John xi. 111
- His charge in the case of Duels xi. 112
- His speech on the proceedings against Sir John Hollis, and others, in the Star-chamber, for traducing the public justice of the kingdom i. 333
- Opens the evidence on the trial of Robert Carr, earl of Somerset, as necessary before the fact, to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury i. 352
- He observed to the noble prisoner, on his wishing a witness present because he could clear up many obscure things, that if he was present he could not be sworn for reasons of state i. 364. See STATE LAW.
- His speech on the countess of Somerset's confession at her trial for same crime as her earl i. 349
- The first attorney-general permitted to have a seat in the house of commons xi. 273
- This very wise chancellor affirmed, that proverbs were the wisdom of a people x. 208. Ap.
- When lord chancellor Verulam, he told Sir Walter Raleigh positively, that upon his life, he had a sufficient pardon for all that was passed, the king having, under his broad seal, made him admiral of his fleet, and given him power of the martial law over the officers and soldiers i. 227, 228
- Observed that evidence was the lantern of justice i. 352
- In the judgment of lord Bacon, an ambassador is not privileged in a conspiracy against the state ii. 8
- Compares the benefit king Hen. VII. received from Sir William Stanley in Bosworth field, to the benefit of Christ, at once to save and crown xi. 2
- A quotation from his "Advancement of Learning" concerning the judges iii. 763
- His encomiums on the laws of England vi. 407
- Wraynham was severely punished for slandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 109. ix. 314. See WRAYNHAM.
- Said judges should beware of hard constructions and strained inferences, because there was no worse torture than the torture of laws x. 56. n.
- The great luminary of sciences, lord Bacon, exercised his eloquence to reconcile parliament to impositions by prerogative xi. 29
- BACON, FRANCIS, Lord,
- * Proceedings against him in parliament for bribery and corruption, Mar. 1620 i. 375
- * Report from the committee of the house of commons i. 375
- * A second

- * A second report of the said committee i. 376
- * Debates in the house of commons i. 377
- * The report sent up to the lords i. 378
- * A conference between the two houses i. 379
- * The lords read a letter from lord Bacon i. 380
- * And send an answer thereto i. 381
- * Receive a further complaint from the commons i. 381
- * State an account of the briberies and corruptions of the lord chancellor i. 381
- * Who sends a general confession and submission i. 382
- * Which is objected to by the lords i. 383
- * Afterwards he makes a particular answer to each head of complaint i. 383
- * And acknowledges it at the lords bar i. 383
- * The commons demand judgment; which is pronounced by the lord chief justice Lea in his absence, his attendance being excused on account of sickness i. 387
- His condemnation an instance of the virtue and integrity of the lords, in the abhorrence they shewed, and the punishment they inflicted on that great man's crimes vi. 497
- Admonition to the earl of Middlesex, afterwards convicted of the same crime as his lordship vi. 597
- * Was reduced to great want i. 387
- * His death and burial i. 387
- Extracts from his history of the reign of king Henry VII. xi. 2
- Extracts from his lordship's works in quarto edition, 1740 xi. 79, 106, 109, 110, 111, 112.

BACON, FRANCIS,

One of Oliver Cromwell's judges, his answer to lord Maguire, on his demanding by what authority the court sat i. 959. See viii. 341. n. 363

BAGSHAW, EDWARD,

The prosecution of him made one of the charges in the articles of impeachment, against archbishop Laud i. 864

BAIL,

- Cannot be granted ex gratia in sodomy; resolved by all the judges i. 388
- * A peer committed by the house of peers cannot be bailed by the court of king's bench ii. 622, 754
- * Bail not be taken (even in case of a peer) in a homine replegiando, till the party effaigned be produced iii. 544
- * The bail cannot be a witness for the principal iii. 842
- Refusing sufficient bail in cases bailable by law, illegal, and an high breach of liberty of subject iii. 221, 223. vii. 484, 486
- The mayor of London committed by the house of commons, in his magisterial capacity, not bailable by the inferior courts in Westminster-hall xi. 335, 338
- Whether persons imprisoned by the king's particular command, be bailable? See DARNEL, Sir THOMAS.
- Difference between bailable and repleviable vii. 153, 230
- Defendant in execution upon an outlawry, after conviction of a misdemeanor, in crown prosecutions, cannot be admitted to bail without the consent of the attorney-general xi. 327
- Several proceedings relating to bailing Bambridge ix. 227
- The counsel's speeches thereupon ix. 228, &c.
- Lord chief justice Raymond, mr. baron Comyn, and mr. j. Probyn, opinions on the case ix. 229, &c. See DANBY, earl of. SHAFTESBURY, earl of.

BAILEY, the Biographer,

Extracts from his life of John Fisher, bishop of Rocheſter xi. 7

BAILEY, DAVID,

- Proceedings against him for defaming the marquis of Anandale, Feb. 1703-4 viii. 195
- He charges the duke of Queensbury, and the marquis of Anandale, with enticing him to accuse duke Hamilton of a plot viii. 195
- Is examined upon interrogatories viii. 196
- Refuses to answer them viii. 196
- The indictment for leſſing-making and defamatory libelling viii. 197
- His answer to the indictment viii. 198
- The queen's advocate's reply viii. 199
- Found guilty by all the privy counſellors present, and banished for life viii. 200
- Is set at liberty by the parliament, on finding bail viii. 200
- Several letters relating to the plot mentioned viii. 201
- The letter to duke Hamilton for which he was indicted viii. 203
- To earl Eglington, president of the council viii. 204

* BAILLIE, ROBERT, of Fervifwood,

- * His trial for high treason before the earl of Linlithgow, lord justice-general of the kingdom of Scotland, and other the lords of judiciary, at Edinburgh, Dec. 23d of December, 1684 iii. 1095
- * The indictment, for conspiring the death of his majesty, and endeavouring to excite an insurrection and rebellion iii. 1095
- * The prisoner can demand no time to prepare for his trial in Scotland iii. 1097
- * Two noblemen and thirteen commoners upon the affize, or jury iii. 1097
- * An accomplice, who had been indicted and confessed the crime, admitted a witness iii. 1099
- * Earl of Tarras deposes, that the prisoner went to London to concert measures with the English; and that Argyle was to have 10,000*l.* of the English to begin an insurrection in Scotland iii. 1099
- * Carſtair's evidence as to lord Ruffel's being concerned iii. 1104
- * Mr. Sheppard privy to the design iii. 1105
- * Dr. Quen, and mr. Mead of Stepney, concerned in it iii. 1106
- * Sheppard's examination read concerning the Scots coming to London to settle matters with the English iii. 1106
- * Sir George Mackenzie, lord advocate, his speech iii. 1107
- * The prisoner is convicted iii. 1110

* The manner of pronouncing judgment in Scotland

BALDWIN, Mrs.

iii. 1111

Ordered to be prosecuted for selling some of Fuller's libels. See FULLER WILLIAM.

BALDWIN, Sir SAMUEL, King's Serjeant at Law, His speech before evidence, on the trial of William Ireland and others, for treason ii. 699

* BALLARD, JOHN, i. 108. See BABINGTON.

BALMERINO, ARTHUR Lord,

- The whole proceedings in the house of peers, upon the indictment against him for high-treason, in levying war against his majesty, July and August, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 587
- The lord high-steward's procession upon his trial ix. 590*
- His commission ix. 591*
- Certiorari* and return ix. 591*
- Captions of the indictment ix. 591*
- The indictment ix. 593*
- Copy of commitment read ix. 594*
- The lord steward's speech to the prisoner ix. 595*
- Lord Balmerino mentions a defect in the indictment previous to pleading to it ix. 596*
- He pleads not guilty ix. 596*
- Sir Richard Lloyd, king's counsel, opens the indictment ix. 596*
- Mr. serjeant Skinner, king's serjeant, opens the case ix. 597*
- Mr. attorney-general (Dudley Ryder) his speech before evidence ix. 598*
- Sir John Strange calls and examines the witnesses ix. 599*
- House adjourned on a point of law ix. 600*
- The judges of opinion, that it is not necessary to prove the overt-act to be committed on the particular day laid in the indictment ix. 600*
- He is found guilty ix. 600*
- His lordship prayed counsel to an objection he made to the trial ix. 611*
- The house adjourns thereon ix. 612*
- He waves his objection ix. 613*
- Lord steward's speech previous to his passing judgment ix. 613*
- Account of his behaviour at his execution x. 183. Ap. See x. 179. Ap.
- His genuine speech on that solemn occasion x. 185. Ap.

* BALMERINO, JOHN Lord,

- * His trial, for libelling his majesty and the government, at Edinburgh, the 3d of December, 1634, 10 Car. I. before William earl of Errol, great constable of Scotland, lord justice-general, and sir Robert Spotiswood, sir John Hay, and sir James Learmouth, assessors to the lord justice-general i. 429
- * The indictment i. 429
- * Concealing the author, as well as composing the libel, capital i. 431
- * The petition, or libel i. 433
- * The kirk is apprehensive of being new modelled i. 433
- * That the king favoured Arminianism, and admitted Papists to sit in parliament i. 434
- * Counsel assigned the prisoner i. 435
- * They have liberty of perusing the depositions against him i. 435
- * His counsel manage his defence i. 435
- * The king's counsel reply i. 443
- * The prisoner's counsel answer; and the counsel on both sides debate i. 459, &c.
- * His exceptions to the indictment over-ruled i. 470
- * The affize (or jury) empannelled, consisting of eight lords and seven commoners i. 470
- A juror challenged, for that he had prejudged the prisoner i. 471
- * The libel and depositions produced in evidence against the prisoner i. 471
- * The counsel for the prisoner make their observations on the evidence i. 478
- * The prisoner is convicted i. 480
- * Sentence passed; but he is pardoned i. 480

BALMERINOTH, Lord,

- His trial for high-treason, at St. Andrew's, 7 Ja. I. vii. 85
- Confesses writing a letter to the pope, and getting the king to sign it, among other dispatches, by surprise vii. 85
- Is found guilty, but afterwards pardoned, and restored to his blood and estate vii. 86

BAMBRIDGE, THOMAS, Warden of the Fleet,

- Report of the committee of the house of commons against him ix. 107
- His trial for murder, May 22, 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 145
- Desires the indictment may be read in Latin ix. 146
- Mr. Holland opens the indictment against him ix. 146
- Serjeant Cheſhire's speech on the same side ix. 146
- Evidences against him ix. 147
- Judge Page sums up the evidence ix. 150
- Found not guilty ix. 151
- Proceedings against him and Richard Corbett, previous to the trial on the appeal for the murder of Robert Castel ix. 151
- Trial of them on the appeal, at Guildhall, London, Jan. 26, 1729-30, 2 Geo. II. ix. 152
- Mr. Filmer opens the declaration ix. 152
- Mr. Reeves on the same side ix. 152
- Mr. Lee also for the appellant ix. 153
- The evidence against them ix. 154, &c.
- Serjeant Darnell, serjeant Eyre, mr. Fazakerly, mr. Kettelby, mr. Strange, cross-examined the witnesses for the prisoners ix. 155, &c.
- Serjeant Darnell's speech for the defendants ix. 167
- Serjeant Eyre's speech on the same side ix. 168
- The evidence for them ix. 169, &c.
- Mr. Strange states a point of law, whether Castel was unlawfully taken, and unlawfully confined ix. 176
- Lord Raymond said, tho' lawfully taken, he ought not to be unlawfully confined ix. 176
- His opinion that counsel for the crown can't reply ix. 177. See REPLY.
- Lord Raymond sums up the evidence ix. 177

Found not guilty ix. 181
 Mr. Kettelby moves for damages, but the court would not allow any; but discharge the prisoners ix. 181. See BALL.
BAMBRIDGE, THOMAS,
 His trial for felony Dec. 3, 1729, 3 Geo. II. ix. 234
 Mr. Holland opens the evidence ix. 235
 Serjeant Chebbire on the same side ix. 235
 Attorney-general, for P. Yorke, on the same side ix. 236
 Who said it would appear as a colour of distress to commit a fraud ix. 238
Bambridge replied, You mean in fraudem legis ix. 238
 Evidence against him ix. 238, &c.
Bambridge declines making any defence, but hoped, if any point of law should arise, it might be reserved ix. 248
 Lord chief justice Eyre sums up the evidence ix. 248
 He is acquitted ix. 251
 One of the grand jury very importuning to the rest to find the bill against Bambridge, laid violent hands upon himself for the injury done him ix. 229 BANBURY, Lord. See KNOWLES, CHARLES.
BANISHMENT.
 In 2 Hen. IV. lord chief justice Belknap's wife brought a writ without naming her husband therein, because he was banished vii. 229, xi. 101.
 See ATTERBURY, FRANCIS. CLARENDON, Earl of. LILBURN, JOHN.
BANKER'S CASE.
 The case of the Bankers in court of Exchequer, and afterwards in Exchequer-chamber, A. D. 1690, 1696, and 1699 xi. 136
 The record xi. 138
 Extract from Freeman's reports xi. 138
 Extract from third modern report xi. 138
 Argument of lord chief justice Treby in error in the Exchequer-chamber, xi. 141
 The argument of lord chief justice Holt xi. 143
 The argument of the lord keeper Somers on his giving judgment xi. 145
 The proceedings on error in parliament from the Exchequer-chamber xi. 160
BANKRUPT and BANKRUPTCY.
 Instance of a tradesman who had failed, becoming a general in the army, and paying all his creditors the deficiencies of their demands x. 117. Ap.
 Instance of a person becoming bankrupt, and though collusively, whereby, in fact, he was no bankrupt, yet executed for concealing his effects xi. 68, 69, 96
BANKS, Sir JOHN, Attorney-General,
 His argument for the king against John Hampden, esq. in the cause of ship-money i. 586, 594, 603
 His speech on the trial of Thomas Harrison for reflecting on the judicial character of for Richard Hutton, justice C. B. for his opinion in the cause of ship-money, 1638, 14 Car. I. i. 721
 On prosecution of William Prynne and others for several libels, in Star-chamber, 14 June, 1637, 13 Car. I. i. 483 BANNANTYNE, JOHN, v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
B A R.
 Sentence pronounced next day, though prisoner tried at bar ii. 789
 Prisoner tried at bar for treason, receives sentence same day ii. 659. See PLEADING and PLEAS.
BARBADOES.
 The case of several grantees of that island stated viii. 401
BARBOT, JOHN,
 His trial at St. Christopher's for murder, Jan. 5, 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 139
 The indictment against him x. 139
 Prisoner moves for counsel to assist him in matters of law, as well as fact x. 139
 Court ordered him counsel as to points of law to be stated by himself; and to examine his own; and cross-examine the witnesses for the crown x. 140
 Mr. Kerr opens the indictment x. 141
 Solicitor-general (of the island) on the same side x. 141
 Evidence against the prisoner x. 147, &c.
 Prisoner's defence x. 164
 Witnesses for him x. 165
 Mr. Frye, counsel for the prisoner, gave the prisoner some papers for his defence; and he went on, and cited some cases x. 168
 Solicitor-general's reply x. 171
 Mr. Kerr says, the cases cited by the prisoner are not in any book of authority extant x. 174
 The president sums up the evidence to the jury x. 174
 Found guilty x. 180
 Prisoner addresses the court x. 180
 His paper delivered at the place of execution x. 182
 Some account of the prisoner x. 182
BARKER, HUMPHREY, iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL, WILLIAM.
BARKSTEAD, Colonel,
 One of the attainted regicides, seized at Delft and brought to England viii. 370
 His speech at his execution viii. 379
BARNARD, WILLIAM,
 Tried on stat. 9 Geo. I. chap. 22. (commonly called the Black Act) for sending a letter in a fictitious name, to Charles duke of Marlborough, demanding a genteel support for life, May 1758, 31 Geo. II. x. 447
 The indictment x. 447
 Serjeant Davy opens the case x. 448
 Duke of Marlborough, and the other evidence, to prove the fact, cross-examined x. 451, &c.
 Prisoner's counsel object to part of the duke's evidence, but over-ruled x. 452
 Prisoner's defence and evidence x. 456, &c.
BARNARDISTON, Sir SAMUEL, Bart.
 His trial upon an information for a misdemeanour, the 14th of February, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 933. vi. 46
 Upon oath made of his being sick, his recognizance is respited, and he is admitted to plead by attorney iii. 933
 The information opened, for scandalizing the government in several letters, or libels, written to his correspondents, wherein he endeavours to persuade them, that the plot against the king and the duke, of which my lord Russel, Sidney, &c. had been convicted, was a sham iii. 934
 Sir Thomas Jenner's speech before evidence iii. 934
 Proved that he owned the letters before the council iii. 935
 And that they were laid, among his other letters, to go to the post-house iii. 935
 The letters read iii. 937
 Mr. Williams's speech for the defendant iii. 938
 The chief justice Jesseries his observations on the evidence iii. 940
 Mentions in his charge a contemptuous expression the defendant had used of him iii. 941
 The defendant is convicted, and receives sentence iii. 942
 The record vi. 46. Ap.
 His close imprisonment, as it was against law, so it was without precedent iv. 165
 His fine was monstrously extravagant Em. Pref. xii. See iii. 942
 Proceedings between him and Sir William Soame, Sheriff of Suffolk, for a double return, 26 Car. II. 1674 vii. 428
 Copy of the record in the King's Bench vii. 428
 Plaintiff recovers 800l. damages vii. 430
 Upon a writ of error in the Exchequer-chamber, six judges for reversing the judgment, and two for affirming it vii. 431
 Judge Ellis's argument for affirming the judgment vii. 431
 That the non-user of the action does not take away the action vii. 432
 That the acts of parliament, though they may give a remedy, take not away the remedy given by common law vii. 432, 440
 Sir Robert Atkins's argument for it vii. 433
 The objection of its belonging to the jurisdiction of the house of commons, considered vii. 436, 448
 What things concerning the parliament the court of King's Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437
 Its being a new action considered vii. 438, 447
 Lord chief justice North's argument against the judgment vii. 441
 That the sheriff is, in this case, a judge; therefore no action will lie against him vii. 442
 The words Falso, Malitiose, &c. considered vii. 450
 The reversal affirmed in the house of peers vii. 452
 Five lords protest against it vii. 453
 Those who argued against this judgment in the King's Bench, were made judges, and they themselves afterwards determined the case upon error, in the Exchequer-chamber viii. 109
BARNES, HENRY, v. 576. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
BARNWELL, ROBERT, i. 121. See BABINGTON, & al.
BARONETAGE.
 Of its institution vi. 804
BARONIES. See PEERAGE and PEERS.
BAROVERSE, Sir JAMES, i. 15. See BRAMBRE.
BARRATRY.
 Of the indictment on a prosecution for barratry iv. 191
BARTON, ELIZABETH,
 The holy maid of Kent xi. 117. See FISHER, JOHN, Bishop of Rocheſter. STANLEY, Sir WILLIAM. MOORE, Sir THOMAS.
BASTILE.
 A state prisoner in the bastile in France, pays not, nor is squeezed out of any thing for his lodging, meat, drink, or ease, nor is loaded with irons, nor put into a dungeon, or otherwise ill used in prison; but he is always handsomely provided for, and allowed a liberal subsistence by the government, according to his rank and degree x. 75. Ap.
BASTWICK, Dr. JOHN,
 * Tried in the Star-chamber, with Henry Burton and William Prynne, for several libels, June 14, 1637, 13 Car. I. i. 481
 * Counsel refusing to sign their answers, they desire they be accepted signed by themselves; which is refused i. 482
 * They not answering, the charge is taken pro confesso i. 483
 * The titles of their books i. 483
 * They receive sentence i. 486
 * Archbishop Laud's speech i. 486
 * Their crime declared to be finding fault with the common prayer, and the fasts appointed by authority i. 488
 * Their discourses to the people, and with one another, as they stand in the pillory i. 495
 Their petitions to the long parliament i. 502
 * Upon their petitions to the parliament, their sentence is reversed i. 504
 * BATEMAN, CHARLES,
 * His trial the 9th of December, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 162, 204
 * He desires his trial may be put off, having had no notice; but is told he had notice enough, being tried upon an indictment of the preceding sessions; and that notice was a favour which the prisoner could not claim iv. 162
 * The indictment for high treason in conspiring the death of the king, and promising to assist in seizing of the king's person, the Tower, &c. iv. 162
 * A wit-

Mr. Serjeant Davy's reply x. 460
 Acquitted x. 462
 Indicted a second time, for feloniously sending another letter to Charles duke of Marlborough, signed F. demanding two or three hundred pounds; but no evidence appearing, he was acquitted x. 462
BARNARDISTON, Sir SAMUEL, Bart.
 His trial upon an information for a misdemeanour, the 14th of February, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 933. vi. 46
 Upon oath made of his being sick, his recognizance is respited, and he is admitted to plead by attorney iii. 933
 The information opened, for scandalizing the government in several letters, or libels, written to his correspondents, wherein he endeavours to persuade them, that the plot against the king and the duke, of which my lord Russel, Sidney, &c. had been convicted, was a sham iii. 934
 Sir Thomas Jenner's speech before evidence iii. 934
 Proved that he owned the letters before the council iii. 935
 And that they were laid, among his other letters, to go to the post-house iii. 935
 The letters read iii. 937
 Mr. Williams's speech for the defendant iii. 938
 The chief justice Jesseries his observations on the evidence iii. 940
 Mentions in his charge a contemptuous expression the defendant had used of him iii. 941
 The defendant is convicted, and receives sentence iii. 942
 The record vi. 46. Ap.
 His close imprisonment, as it was against law, so it was without precedent iv. 165
 His fine was monstrously extravagant Em. Pref. xii. See iii. 942
 Proceedings between him and Sir William Soame, Sheriff of Suffolk, for a double return, 26 Car. II. 1674 vii. 428
 Copy of the record in the King's Bench vii. 428
 Plaintiff recovers 800l. damages vii. 430
 Upon a writ of error in the Exchequer-chamber, six judges for reversing the judgment, and two for affirming it vii. 431
 Judge Ellis's argument for affirming the judgment vii. 431
 That the non-user of the action does not take away the action vii. 432
 That the acts of parliament, though they may give a remedy, take not away the remedy given by common law vii. 432, 440
 Sir Robert Atkins's argument for it vii. 433
 The objection of its belonging to the jurisdiction of the house of commons, considered vii. 436, 448
 What things concerning the parliament the court of King's Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437
 Its being a new action considered vii. 438, 447
 Lord chief justice North's argument against the judgment vii. 441
 That the sheriff is, in this case, a judge; therefore no action will lie against him vii. 442
 The words Falso, Malitiose, &c. considered vii. 450
 The reversal affirmed in the house of peers vii. 452
 Five lords protest against it vii. 453
 Those who argued against this judgment in the King's Bench, were made judges, and they themselves afterwards determined the case upon error, in the Exchequer-chamber viii. 109
BARNES, HENRY, v. 576. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
BARNWELL, ROBERT, i. 121. See BABINGTON, & al.
BARONETAGE.
 Of its institution vi. 804
BARONIES. See PEERAGE and PEERS.
BAROVERSE, Sir JAMES, i. 15. See BRAMBRE.
BARRATRY.
 Of the indictment on a prosecution for barratry iv. 191
BARTON, ELIZABETH,
 The holy maid of Kent xi. 117. See FISHER, JOHN, Bishop of Rocheſter. STANLEY, Sir WILLIAM. MOORE, Sir THOMAS.
BASTILE.
 A state prisoner in the bastile in France, pays not, nor is squeezed out of any thing for his lodging, meat, drink, or ease, nor is loaded with irons, nor put into a dungeon, or otherwise ill used in prison; but he is always handsomely provided for, and allowed a liberal subsistence by the government, according to his rank and degree x. 75. Ap.
BASTWICK, Dr. JOHN,
 * Tried in the Star-chamber, with Henry Burton and William Prynne, for several libels, June 14, 1637, 13 Car. I. i. 481
 * Counsel refusing to sign their answers, they desire they be accepted signed by themselves; which is refused i. 482
 * They not answering, the charge is taken pro confesso i. 483
 * The titles of their books i. 483
 * They receive sentence i. 486
 * Archbishop Laud's speech i. 486
 * Their crime declared to be finding fault with the common prayer, and the fasts appointed by authority i. 488
 * Their discourses to the people, and with one another, as they stand in the pillory i. 495
 Their petitions to the long parliament i. 502
 * Upon their petitions to the parliament, their sentence is reversed i. 504
 * BATEMAN, CHARLES,
 * His trial the 9th of December, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 162, 204
 * He desires his trial may be put off, having had no notice; but is told he had notice enough, being tried upon an indictment of the preceding sessions; and that notice was a favour which the prisoner could not claim iv. 162
 * The indictment for high treason in conspiring the death of the king, and promising to assist in seizing of the king's person, the Tower, &c. iv. 162
 * A wit-

- * A witness is permitted to be examined after the evidence summed up iv. 164.
- * The prisoner convicted; sentence passed on him, and executed iv. 164.
- See viii. 460.
- Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 204.
- BATES, JOHN.
- Case of impositions on information in Exchequer-chamber, by attorney-general against John Bates, merchant, Mich. Term. 4 Jac. I. 1604 xi. 29.
- The matter was divers times argued at the bar, and on the bench xi. 30.
- Robert Clark, baron of the Exchequer, his argument xi. 30.
- Sir Thomas Fleming, chief baron, his argument xi. 31.
- BATHURST, CHARLES, Esq.
- His petition to the house of commons, setting forth the lord Wharton's proceedings against him in the house of peers viii. 175.
- Lord Wharton, in a petition to the lords, by way of appeal, begs to have an order of the court of Exchequer, to which he was no party, discharged, and the record taken off the file viii. 175.
- Some lords protest against it, as giving themselves an original jurisdiction viii. 176.
- Mr. Bathurst not allowed to make use of the record, as evidence in the trial of an issue, directed by the house of peers viii. 177.
- Resolved by the commons, that the lords taking cognizance of, and proceeding upon lord Wharton's petition, is unwarrantable viii. 177.
- That the subject has undoubted right to make use of such record viii. 178.
- The lords resolve such resolution of the commons to be an usurpation of a judicature to which they have no pretence viii. 178.
- BATHURST, Hon. HENRY, King's Counsel,
- His speech on stating the case and evidence on the trial of Mary Blandy, for parricide, 25 Geo. II. A.D. 1753 x. 3.
- His reply on the same trial x. 24.
- BATHURST, HENRY Earl, Lord Chancellor,
- His procession as lord high steward on the trial of the duchess of Kingston xi. 198.
- His grace's commission xi. 198.
- His address to the noble prisoner previous to the evidence xi. 200.
- His speech to her, on pronouncing the judgment of her peers xi. 260.
- BATTERY.
- Ex officio* information for riot, assault, and battery iii. 629. See vi. 40.
- BATTRAGH, WILLIAM,
- His trial for treason, July 16, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 555.
- Evidence against him ix. 555.
- Found guilty ix. 557.
- Reprieved ix. 559.
- BAYARD, Colonel NICHOLAS,
- * His trial at New-York for high-treason, Feb. 19, 1701-2, 13 W. III. v. 419.
- * Matters introductory to his trial v. 419.
- * The attorney-general's opinion that he was not criminal v. 420.
- * The act upon which he was tried v. 421.
- * Some of the grand jury dismissed, who were suspected of tenderness to him v. 422.
- * The indictment found against him v. 422.
- * He objects by his counsel, that twelve jurors did not agree to find it v. 423.
- * Which is over-ruled v. 424.
- * The indictment v. 424.
- * The prisoner desires two clerks to take minutes; but is denied v. 425.
- * He pleads not guilty v. 425.
- * Objection made by the prisoner's counsel, that the precept to summon the petit jury was not under the hands and seals of the commissioners: whereupon the court adjourned, and another precept was awarded v. 426.
- * His trial begins v. 427.
- * The prisoner convicted v. 435.
- * He moves in arrest of judgment v. 436.
- * Sentence passed on him as a traitor v. 440.
- BAYNES, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
- Objects to some of the pannel, as being related to William Hales, who was tried for forgery x. 94. Ap.
- His speech in favour of William Hales x. 113. Ap.
- For the king, on the prosecution of John Gibbon x. 121. Ap.
- For the defendant Richard Elles x. 129, 135. Ap.
- BAYNTON, SARAH. See SIVENSSEN.
- BAXTER, RICHARD.
- His trial for publishing a seditious libel, May 30, 1685. 1 Jac. II. x. 37. Ap.
- The indictment x. 37. Ap.
- The chief justice Jefferys' cruel treatment of him x. 38. Ap.
- His counsel, Mr. Wallop, Mr. Williams, Mr. Rotheram, Mr. Atwood, and Mr. Phipps, were brow-beat and ill-treated by the chief justice x. 39. Ap.
- Mr. Baxter not suffered to make a defence x. 39. Ap.
- Found guilty x. 40. Ap.
- Fined 500 marks, and to lie in prison till he paid it, and give security for his good behaviour for seven years; afterwards pardoned, and fine remitted x. 40. Ap.
- Died December 8, 1691 x. 40. Ap.
- * BEASLEY, RICHARD, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
- * BEAUCHAMP, JOHN, i. 15. See BRAMBRE.
- BECKET, THOMAS.
- A brief of his troubles, or rather treasons xi. 72.
- BEDFORD, Earl of,
- Proceedings against the earl of Bedford, the earl of Clarendon, the earl of Somerset, Sir Robert Cotton, John Selden, Oliver Saint John, and others, in the Star-chamber, May 29, 6 Car. I. 1630, for publishing a seditious and scandalous writing xi. 121.
- The substance of the information contained in "A proposition for his majesty's service to bridle the impertinence of parliaments" xi. 121.
- The effect of the earl of Somerset's answer xi. 123.
- The rest of the defendants deny the inuendos in the information xi. 123.
- Substance of the depositions read in the cause xi. 123.
- Court ordered by his majesty to proceed no further on account of the birth of a prince xi. 123, 124.
- The proposition ordered to be burnt, and the proceedings against the defendants to be taken off the file xi. 124.
- BEDFORD,
- The author of "Hereditary Right," a seditious libel, some account of him vi. i. viii. 682. n.
- * BEDLE, EDWARD, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
- BEDLOW.
- His deposition at the committee of lords appointed to examine into the murder of Sir Edmondbury Godfrey viii. 449.
- His examination, taken in his last sickness, by Sir Francis North, 1680 viii. 460.
- Accuses the duke of York of being in the plot viii. 460.
- Captain Bedlow's and Dr. Oates's articles exhibited to the king and council, against lord chief justice Stroggs vii. 476.
- BEHEADING.
- The king issues writ to sheriffs to only behead lord Stafford iii. 214.
- Sheriffs apply to the lords for directions, who declare the king's writ ought to be obeyed iii. 215.
- The sentence of burning altered to beheading, on precedent iv. 129. xi. 12.
- "Maiden" is the name of the instrument used in Scotland for beheading criminals ii. 435.
- Though the judgment in felony is always "to be hanged by the neck;" yet the party may be beheaded iv. 129. See AUDLEY MERVIN, lord. SOMERSET, duke of.
- BELISARIUS.
- The duchess of Kingston observed to the lords, in her speech on her defence for bigamy, that she had rested on the seat where the poor blind Belisarius is said to have asked charity of every passenger, after having conquered the Goths, Vandals, Africans, and Persians xi. 252.
- * BELKNAP, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Justice, C. B.
- Was arrested sitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and sent prisoner to the Tower i. 5 and n.
- Tried for high-treason, Feb. 3, 1388, 11 Rich. II. i. 14.
- Confesses, and begs mercy i. 8. n. 14.
- Life saved, but transported to the village of Dromore, in Ireland, with the yearly allowance of 40l. during life, not to live as a justice, but as a banished offender, and not to go out of town above the space of two miles, upon pain of death i. 14 and n. vii. 229.
- His learning gave him honour, but his villany made his exit by a rope iii. 223. vii. 481.
- Lord Egerton said, that Belknap suffered rather by the potency of his enemies, than the greatness of his offence vii. 238. * See BRAMBRE.
- * BELLAMY, JEROME, i. 139. See ABINGTON, & al.
- BELWOOD, ROGER.
- Of counsel for the crown, on the prosecution of Lionel Anderson, &c. ii. 997.
- BENEVOLENCE.
- Benevolences, loans, and gifts declared contrary to law by petition of right xi. 29, 110. See St. JOHN, OLIVER.
- * BENNET, RALPH, iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL, WILLIAM.
- BERKLEY, ROBERT, Serjeant at Law,
- His argument for return of habeas corpus in William Stroud's case vii. 221.
- BERKLEY, Sir ROBERT, Justice B. R.
- His argument, opinion, and reasons for the king against John Hampden, esq. in the cause of ship-money i. 619.
- Articles of impeachment against him, for the above opinion i. 709.
- vii. 488. viii. 566.
- Mr. Pierpont's speech thereon i. 713.
- Censured the justices Hutton and Croke for subscribing their opinion in ship-money, for conformity only, because the major number of the judges had subscribed; and that it was a base and unworthy thing for any man to give his hand contrary to his heart; this censure also is part of one of the articles of impeachment against him i. 711.
- Another charge was for saying openly in court, "that there was a rule of law, and a rule of government; and that many things which might not be done by the rule of law, might be done by the rule of government." i. 711. See ASHLEY, Sir FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law.
- See also ii. 209. vii. 250.
- BERNARDI, JOHN, Major,
- Proceedings against him, Countess, Blackburn, Cassels, Chambers, and Meldrum, on account of the assassination plot, in king William's reign x. 64. Ap.
- These proceedings were wrote by the major, after he had been confined a state prisoner thirty-three years in Newgate x. 64. Ap.
- History of Bernardi's life x. 64. Ap.
- Served in the Dutch wars, lost an eye at the siege of Maastricht, and shot through the arm x. 64. Ap.
- Went to king James II. at St. Germain's, and then sent to Ireland x. 65. Ap.
- Afterwards to Scotland, where he had like to have been seized x. 65. Ap.
- Came to London, set out for Flanders, seized at Colchester x. 65. Ap.
- Remained in custody seven months, then admitted to bail x. 66. Ap.
- Grand jury of Essex returned the bill against him Ignoramus x. 66. Ap.
- Met captain Rookwood, and seized with him x. 67. Ap.
- A proclamation, with 1000l. reward, came out against him; committed to Newgate x. 67. Ap.
- Act of parliament to confine them all x. 67. Ap.
- On the suspension of the habeas corpus act expiring, Blackburn, who was also a close prisoner in Newgate on account of the assassination conspiracy, entered his prayer, at the then next sessions and term, to be tried or admitted to bail; and he was bailed out and discharged x. 68. Ap.
- Bernardi, Countess, Cassels, Meldrum, and Chambers, make several motions by their counsel, in different reigns, to be discharged; but never could succeed x. 68. Ap.

Blackburn, after being bailed out and discharged, was taken up again upon the same account, and sent again to Newgate x. 68, 69. Ap.

Chambers, being brought up by hab. corp. to the court of King's-Bench, having entered his prayer in order to be bailed, but one of his bail refusing to swear himself worth 500*l.* was remanded to Newgate, where he remained till his death x. 69, 71. Ap.

Captain Counter was released by queen Anne x. 69, 71. Ap.

Meldrum died in prison x. 71. Ap.

Bernardi's commitment to Newgate by earl Shrewsbury, without oath x. 71. Ap.

His several petitions to the king and queen x. 71, 72. Ap.

Bernardi, Blackburn, and Cassels were unjustly charged with having spirited away an evidence that could have proved them concerned in the plot for assassinating king William III. which though false, the report of it turned much to their prejudice; for the same was the ground and foundation for the parliament passing the first act for their confinement x. 75. Ap. See FENWICK, Sir JOHN.

Bernardi died in Newgate at the age of 82, after having been a state prisoner above 40 years x. 76. Ap.

* BERRY, HENRY,
Account of his behaviour on the day of execution, for the murder of Sir E. Godfrey viii. 442. * See ii. 760. GREEN, ROBERT, & al.
BERRY, JOHN. See MACDANIEL STEPHEN, & al.
BERWICK, JOHN,
His trial for treason, July 17, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 539
Evidence against him ix. 559
Mr. J. Foster states his case ix. 559
Motions in arrest of judgment in his case, and the other rebels ix. 560
Over-ruled ix. 560
Found guilty, and executed at Kennington-common ix. 560
Some account of him ix. 560

* BETHEL, SLINGSBY, Esq.
His trial for assault and battery at an election, Oct. 5, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 413
The indictment iii. 413
Mr. Holt opens the evidence iii. 413
Evidence of the assault and battery iii. 414
Mr. Thompson's speech for the defendant iii. 415
The defendant's evidence contradicts the king's witnesses iii. 415
Mr. Thompson sums up for the defendant iii. 417
Mr. Holt for the king iii. 417
The defendant convicted iii. 417
He is fined five marks iii. 418

* BETHEL, SLINGSBY, Esq. iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
BEYOND SEA.
Master may covenant with servant that he shall serve him beyond sea iv. 186
Master may send his servant beyond sea by agreement iv. 186. See xi. 348

* BIGAMY.
Indictment for bigamy v. 610. See ADULTERY. CRIM. CON. FIELDING, ROBERT. GERMAN PRINCESS. GREY FORD, Lord. KINGSTON, Duchess Dowager of. * MARRIAGE. MODERS, MARY. NAIRN, KATHERINE. OGILVIE, PATRICK. POLYGAMY.

BILL. See GRAND JURY.
BILL OF EXCEPTIONS.
The form and ceremony with which such bills are acknowledged by the judges xi. 307, 308

* BILLS OF ATTAINDER. See ATTAINDER.
BINKS, Doctor,
His sermon on Jan. 30, 1701—2, censured by the lords viii. 81

* BISHOP of LONDON. See COMPTON, Dr. HENRY.
* BISHOP of ROCHESTER. See ATTERBURY, Dr. FRANCIS.
FISHER, JOHN. SPRATT, Doctor THOMAS.

* BISHOPS.
Impugning their authority adjudged to be an impugning the queen's authority in causes ecclesiastical i. 175
Archbishop refusing to consecrate one elected bishop, incurs a præmunire i. 850
Bishops derive their power in temporals from the prince; but in matters purely spiritual from Christ, though they may not exercise their spiritual power without leave of the prince i. 883
The title of Holiness given to the primitive bishops i. 871
Episcopacy jure divino i. 915
A schismatick may not be a witness against his bishop, by the civil law i. 934
The bishops excluded from sitting in the house of lords, by act of parliament ii. 337
Bishops may vote in matters previous to the trial in capital cases ii. 752. iii. 101

A bishop who is a peer in right of the church, must plead his peerage that he is one of the peers of the realm, for he hath no letters patent viii. 59

Bishops to be tried for treasons or felonies, at the king's suit, by an ordinary jury viii. 360

The lords spiritual omitted in the enacting part of bills of attainder v. 119

In the time of king Hen. I. the pope usurped the donation of bishopricks xi. 71

* BISHOPS, the SEVEN,
Their trial iv. 304. See v. 749.
They are brought by habeas corpus from the Tower to the King's-Bench, the first day of Trinity-Term, 1688 iv. 304
The return of the habeas corpus read, in which is recited the warrant for their commitment iv. 304
Mr. attorney prays the information may be read iv. 305
The bishops counsel move they may be discharged before it be read; for that they were not legally committed iv. 306

* 1st, Because the return says they were committed by the lords of the council, but not in council; and that the lords have no power to commit but in council iv. 306
* 2dly, That a peer cannot be committed for a misdemeanour iv. 312
* Ruled, that every commitment shall be presumed to be pursuant to the power of the person committing iv. 311
* If the process, whereby one is brought into court, be illegal, the party cannot be charged with an information iv. 312
* A peer may be committed for treason, felony, or breach of the peace iv. 315
* The making a seditious libel deemed an actual breach of the peace iv. 316
* Ruled, that the information should be read; and it was read in Latin iv. 318
* The declaration for liberty of conscience recited iv. 317
* Order of council for the reading and distributing it iv. 319
* The bishops petition iv. 320
* Mr. attorney prays the bishops may plead to the information iv. 320
* The bishops counsel insist on an imparlance iv. 320
* Sir Samuel Astry testifies the course of the court to be, that where one appears upon a summons, he shall have an imparlance; but if he comes in custody, or on a recognizance, he shall plead presently iv. 324
* In capital cases, the party accused must plead presently iv. 323
* Ruled, that my lords the bishops plead immediately iv. 328
* They offer a plea in paper, being the substance of what their counsel had already insisted on iv. 329
* The plea is rejected as frivolous, and they are ordered to plead over; whereupon they plead not guilty iv. 332
* The court directs 48 to be returned on the jury, and the jury to be struck in presence of the attorneys on both sides iv. 332
* The archbishop enters into a recognizance of 200*l.* and the other bishops in 100*l.* each for their appearance iv. 333
* The trial comes on Friday the 29th of June, 1688 iv. 333
* The names of the jury iv. 333
* Mr. attorney, Sir Thomas Powis, states the case, and opens the evidence for the king iv. 334
* The declarations under the broad seal given in evidence iv. 335
* Proof is insisted on, that they were the same with the printed declaration iv. 336
* The bishops hands to the petition attempted to be proved iv. 337
* Similitude of hands, whether proof of a man's hand-writing in criminal matters iv. 342
* And if it be, whether the witness himself be judge of the likeness; or whether some of the party's writing ought to be produced in court for the jury to judge of it iv. 342
* The court divided about the sufficiency of the proof; and directed the king's counsel to produce other proof of the bishops hands iv. 345
* Mr. Blathwayt deposes, they acknowledged their hands before the council iv. 346
* The bishops counsel examine Mr. Blathwayt, if the king did not promise that their owning their hands should be no prejudice to them iv. 348
* He deposes that the king made no such promise iv. 348
* The petition not proved to be framed in the county where the offence was laid; and matters of crime being local, it was insisted; that the defendants must be presumed to be innocent iv. 349
* Held not necessary to insert the whole petition in the information iv. 352
* Putting a libel into the post, adjudged a publication of it iv. 353
* The owning their hands before the council did not amount to a publication; but had the witnesses been positive that the bishops owned that this was the paper they delivered to the king, it was agreed that that would have been a sufficient proof of their publishing it; but the witnesses not being positive in this, it was held they had failed as to their proof of the publishing it: whereupon the people shouted iv. 361
* The lord Sunderland deposed, that the bishops applied to him, to assist them in delivering their petition to the king; whereupon the court were of opinion there was sufficient proof of the publishing iv. 366
* The bishops counsel enter upon their defence, and insist that the petition is no libel iv. 367
* That it is the subject's right to petition iv. 367
* They shew that the king cannot dispense with the laws iv. 369
* And that the bishops were under a necessity of petitioning, being commanded to distribute the declarations iv. 370
* That it was allowable to say, the king was mistaken in the law; and that this was daily practised in relation to his grants iv. 370
* The defendants produce a record, wherein it appears, that the commons empowered king Rich. II. with the consent of the lords, to suspend the statute of provisors iv. 375
* The journals of the houses of the lords and commons produced in evidence iv. 376
* Wherein are the addresses of the commons to king Charles II. against the dispensing power, and the king's answers iv. 376 &c.
* King Charles cancels his declaration for suspending the penal laws, and declares it shall never be drawn into example iv. 381
* The commons address on king James's claiming the same power after Monmouth's rebellion iv. 382
* The case of Thomas and Serrel, in relation to the dispensing power, cited by Mr. Somers iv. 382
* The attorney-general replies, that the instances they have produced are evidences against them, being only of matters transacted in parliament iv. 385
* That it may be a libel though the facts are true iv. 386
* That the bishops should have acquiesced under their passive obedience, till the meeting of a parliament iv. 386
* That the law interprets the thing to be malicious and seditious, if it be illegal iv. 386
* Mr. solicitor denies that the subject has a right to petition out of parliament concerning matters of government iv. 387

* He insists that votes and addresses are not evidence, and cannot be filed declarations in parliament iv. 389

* That the king may make constitutions in matters ecclesiastical iv. 389

* And that the bishops denying that prerogative, was in diminution of the prerogative, as laid in the information iv. 390

* The chief justice holds it lawful to petition, but not in that reflecting manner as in the petition iv. 391

* The petition of the city of London for the sitting of a parliament, adjudged a libel iv. 392

* The chief justice directs the jury, and is of opinion with mr. justice
Allybone, that it was a libel iv. 393, 394

* Mr. justice Holloway and mr. justice Powell declared their opinion, it was not a libel iv. 394, 395

* Mr. justice Allybone cites a case in the time of king James I. where it was adjudged a misdemeanour to petition the king to put the penal laws in execution iv. 395

* But was answered, the reason of that judgment was, because the puritans threatened that, unless their request was granted, many thousands of the king's subjects would be discontented iv. 395

* The court permit the jury to send for wine iv. 396

* The jury are not allowed to have any papers with them, but what are under seal iv. 396

* They are kept together all night, without fire or candle iv. 396

* The bishops are acquitted; whereupon the people shout; and a gentleman is committed for it, but released again iv. 396. See PEERS.
LAUD, Archbishop. MORE, Sir THOMAS. UDAL, JOHN.

BLACK ACT, 9 Geo. I. chap. 22. See BARNARD, WILLIAM.

BLACKHEAD. See SPRATT, doctor THOMAS, bishop of Rocheſter.

BLACKBURN, ROBERT. See BERNARDI, JOHN, major.

BLACKMORE, ROBERT. See LEACH, DRYDEN.

BLACKSTONE, Sir WILLIAM, Justice C. B.

His commentaries commended xi. 251

Mr. justice Blackstone gives in them the rise, and a short history of the doctrine of amendments xi. 332

* BLAGUE, Captain WILLIAM,

* His trial for high-treason, the 13th day of July, 1683, 35 Car. II.
iii. 731, 739

* There being but one witness that swore the treason positively against the prisoner, the chief justice directed the jury to acquit him; which they did iii. 744

BLAKE, JOHN,

Being retained of the king's counsel at law, by his command, whom he ought to obey, yet he was impeached by the commons of high-treason, for giving advice contrary to law, and his oath, and condemned, drawn, and executed, as a traitor i. 14, 15

BLANDY, MARY,

Her trial for parricide, Feb. 29, 1752, 25 Geo. II. x. 1

The indictment against her x. 1

Mr. Bathurst's speech, stating the case and evidence x. 3

Serjeant Hayward's speech on the same side x. 7

Dr. Addington, dr. Lewis, and the other evidences against her x. 9, &c.

Prisoner's defence x. 22

Mr. Bathurst's reply x. 24

Mr. baron Legge sums up the evidence to the jury x. 25

Found guilty x. 33

Baron Legge's speech at passing sentence x. 33

Prisoner begs for time to settle her affairs, which is granted x. 33

Her behaviour in gaol x. 33

Her declaration that she did not know, or believe, that the powder to which her father's death was ascribed, had any noxious or poisonous quality lodged in it, and that she had no intention to destroy him x. 35

BLASPHEMY.

In what blasphemy consists Em. Pref. viii. * See BACON, lord.

* NAYLOR, JAMES. ii. 265. PEMBROKE, earl.

BLENCOWE, Sir JOHN, Justice of the Common-Pleas,

His argument in the Prince's case xi. 295, 300

His opinion xi. 300, 302

BLUNT, Sir CHRISTOPHER,

Tried with sir Charles Davers, sir John Davis, sir Gilly Merrick, and Henry
Cuffe, for high-treason in the earl of Essex's plot, March 5, 1600, i. 209.

The commissioners names vii. 47

The indictment for conspiring with the earl of Essex vii. 47

* They plead not guilty; but upon their trial confess the facts i. 210

Ask the judges if they might not confess in part, and plead not guilty to the rest vii. 48

Mr. serjeant Yelverton opens the indictment vii. 48

Mr. attorney-general's speech vii. 49

Sir Christopher Blunt's examination and confession vii. 50

Part of the earl of Essex's confession read vii. 53

The attorney urges a correspondence between the earl of Essex, sir Chris- topher Blunt, and Tyrons vii. 54

Evidence against sir Charles Davers vii. 55

Evidence against sir John Davis vii. 56

Against sir Gilly Merrick, and Cuffe vii. 57

Sir Henry Nevil's narration read vii. 57

Cuffe's defence vii. 59

All found guilty of high treason vii. 60

Their speeches before judgment given vii. 61

Lord chief justice Popham's speech at pronouncing judgment vii. 62

* Sir Gilly Merrick and Mr. Cuffe executed at Tyburn; and their behaviour
i. 210

* Sir Christopher Blunt and sir Charles Davers beheaded upon Tower-hill
i. 211

* Sir Christopher Blunt's speech at his execution i. 211

BOLEYN, ANNE, Queen, and Lord Viscount ROCHFORD,
Their trials for treason in the court of the lord high steward, in May,
1536, 28 Hen. VIII. xi. 10, 12

Lord high steward xi. 10, 14

The queen is arraigned xi. 10, 12

She is permitted to sit at her trial xi. 10, 14

The charge xi. 12

She pleads not guilty xi. 12

Defends herself xi. 10, 14

Partially condemned xi. 10, 12

Her majesty's speech on the scaffold xi. 10, 13

She is beheaded xi. 11, 13, 15

Queen Anne flourished, was accused, condemned, and executed, and her bed and honours possessed by another, in one and the same month xi. 11

Extract from bishop Burnet's history of the reformation, respecting the proceedings against the queen xi. 11, 13

Archbishop Cranmer's letter to the king on behalf of the queen xi. 12

Lord viscount Rochford, the queen's brother, pleaded not guilty xi. 12

He is condemned to be beheaded and quartered xi. 12, 13

* BOLTON, JOHN. See CROOK, JOHN.

* BONNET, Major STEDE,

* The trial of him and thirty-three others, for piracy in South-Carolina,
1718, 5 George I. vi. 156

* Nicholas Trott, esq. judge of the vice-admiralty, his charge to the grand inquest vi. 157

* Five pirates brought to their trial vi. 160

* The indictment for taking the Francis, Peter Manwaring commander
vi. 161

* Richard Allen, esq. attorney-general, his speech before evidence vi. 161

* Mr. Hepworth's speech vi. 163

* Evidence for the king vi. 164

* The prisoners defence vi. 166

* Mr. justice Trott's charge vi. 167

* The prisoners convicted vi. 167

* Eight more tried for the same fact vi. 168

* Their defence vi. 168

* They are all convicted vi. 169

* Nine more tried for the same fact vi. 169

* Eight found guilty, and one acquitted vi. 171

* Five more tried for the same vi. 171

* Four found guilty, and one acquitted vi. 171

* Eight tried for taking the Fortune, captain Read commander vi. 171

* Evidence for the king vi. 172

* They are all convicted vi. 173

* Nine more tried for the same vi. 174

* Eight found guilty, and one acquitted vi. 174

* Eight more tried for the same, and convicted vi. 175

* Five tried for taking the Francis vi. 176

* Two convicted, and three acquitted vi. 179

* The same prisoners tried for stealing the Fortune vi. 179

* One convicted, and four acquitted vi. 180

* Judge Trott's speech before sentence vi. 181

* Sentence passed upon 29 pirates vi. 183

* Twenty-two executed vi. 183

* Major Bonnet's trial, for taking The Francis vi. 183

* Evidence against him vi. 183

* His defence vi. 185

* He is convicted vi. 186

* Judge Trott's speech before judgment vi. 186

* He is condemned and executed vi. 188

BOOK BINDER. See BROOKS, NATHAN.

BOOKS,

Several censured by the lords viii. 78. See LIBELS.

BOOKSELLER. See BREWSTER, THOMAS. CURTIS,
JAMES. HARRIS, BENJAMIN. PRINTING. SMITH,
FRANCIS.

BOOTLE, THOMAS,

Of counsel for Franklin ix. 260

His speech for him ix. 267

On the liberty of the press ix. 269

Opens indictment and evidence against Matthews for treason ix. 683

* BOROSKI, GEORGE, CHRISTOPHER VRATZ, JOHN STERN,
and CHARLES-JOHN Count CONINGSMARK,

* Tried for the murder of Thomas Thynn, esq. the first three as principals, the last as accessory before the fact, Feb. 28, 1681. 34 Car. II. iii. 466

* The prisoners being foreigners, an interpreter sworn iii. 466

* Indicted as of the parish of St. Martin's, as well all the principals as the accessary, in one indictment iii. 467

* The substance of the indictment interpreted to the prisoners in their own language iii. 467

* The court demand if they would be tried after the manner of the Eng- lish; to which they assent, and plead not guilty iii. 468

* They demand a jury of half foreigners, and half English; which is granted iii. 468

* Also that there be no friends or relations of the deceased upon the jury; which is granted iii. 468

* Coningsmark demands a jury of quality; agreed they should consist of considerable merchants iii. 468

* The court deny to try him distinctly from the rest iii. 468

* He is denied further time to prepare for his trial iii. 469

* A copy of the pannel denied him; but he is allowed to look on the pannel iii. 465

* They desire that none of the foreigners on the jury be Roman Catholics;
granted iii. 465

* The court direct that first an Englishman, and then a foreigner, should be called and sworn iii. 465

- * A foreigner challenged for the king; and the counsel insist they need not shew cause, unless they want jurymen iii. 465
- * The court inform the prisoners they may challenge all the rest, and so compel the king's counsel to shew cause iii. 465
- * Prisoners desire that those that are challenged should not come near those that are sworn; it is granted iii. 470
- * Sir Francis Wythens's speech before evidence iii. 471
- * The evidence interpreted to those aliens upon the jury, by interpreters sworn for the purpose iii. 472
- * The coroner examined that fat upon the body iii. 474
- * The justices who took the examination of the prisoners are not allowed to read the examination as evidence iii. 474, 476
- * What any of the prisoners said at their examination, no evidence against any but themselves iii. 474
- * The examination of one of the witnesses before the privy council shewn him to refresh his memory at the trial iii. 478
- * The count's defence iii. 492, &c.
- * The three first found guilty iii. 500
- * Coningsmark being acquitted of being accessory to the murder, the court order him to enter into a recognizance, with three sureties, to appear next sessions, and answer any appeal if brought iii. 501
- * Sentence pronounced on Borecki, Vratz, and Stern iii. 502
- Sir John Hawles's remarks on this trial iv. 199

B O R O U G H S,

- Two sorts of them described viii. 126

B O S T O N. See QUELCH JOHN.

* B O T H W E L L, J A M E S Earl,

- * Tried for the murder of the king of Scots, Apr. 12, 1567. 9 Eliz. i. 78. See viii. 327
- Commission of the queen of Scots to try him i. 77
- * The indictment against him i. 79
- * No prosecutor appearing, he is acquitted i. 81
- * Is afterwards forced to fly the kingdom, and turns pirate i. 82

B O U C H E R, J A M E S,

- Proceedings in the house of commons, and house of lords, relating to him viii. 536
- Her majesty's speech to both houses viii. 536
- The commons address to her majesty, that they will support her majesty against all her enemies viii. 536
- Resolved, that no persons accused of crimes, and who are her majesty's prisoners, ought to be taken out of the custody of the crown, without her majesty's leave viii. 537
- The address upon that resolution viii. 537
- Her majesty's answer viii. 538
- The humble representation of the house of lords, complaining of the address, and giving the reasons for their proceedings viii. 538
- Complaint of the commons applying to the throne without first asking a conference, as unprecedented viii. 540
- Her majesty's answer viii. 541
- Address from the commons, to clear themselves from the misrepresentations of the house of lords viii. 542
- Her majesty's answer viii. 544
- Address from the commons, to desire her majesty to re-assume the just exercise of her prerogative, and to declare the appointing a committee of lords for the sole examination of the conspiracy, is of a dangerous consequence viii. 545
- The humble representation of the lords, complaining of the conduct of the commons viii. 545
- Justify their power of taking prisoners out of any other custody, as the house thought most proper for their examination viii. 547
- Precedents out of the lords journals viii. 549
- Precedents of the same power exercised by the commons viii. 554
- The parliament prorogued viii. 557

* B O U C H E R, J A M E S,

- * His trial for high treason, for going into France, and returning without licence, Feb. 28, 1703 v. 506. vi. 60. Ap. See viii. 536
- Indictment v. 506
- * He confesses the indictment, and receives sentence v. 507

B O X - M O N E Y,

- Is a sum of money, which is laid out and distributed in private charities by the chancellor every year vi. 700

B R A C T O N.

- This author wrote the latter end of the reign of king Henry the Third, by Holt, Ch. J. ix. 62, 306
- However, he was a learned and famous judge in his age; yet he lived so long since, and the particulars of which he writes are so different from the practice and established laws of the ensuing ages, that his authority is of slight or no moment for direction in judgment of law at this day; though it be very considerable in examination, what the law was in his time, and that way it sometimes is used as an ornament in argument only vii. 235
- He died about five hundred and fifty years since vii. 235

* B R A D D O N, L A U R E N C E, and H U G H S P E K E,

- * Tried for a misdemeanor, Feb. 7, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 855. vi. 46. Ap.
- * The information, for endeavouring to make people believe that the earl of Essex was murdered by those to whose custody he was committed; and for procuring false witnesses to prove it iii. 855
- * Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iii. 856
- * The earl's commitment, and the coroner's inquisition read iii. 857
- * Bramsden and Edwards depose, that Mr. Braddon came to Edwards to enquire about a razor, said to be seen by young Edwards to be thrown out of the window where the earl of Essex lodged in the Tower iii. 857, 861
- * Edwards, the son, deposes, that the story he had told of the razor was all false iii. 865
- * Dr. Hawkins's son swears the story of the razor to be all false iii. 866
- * The information read which Mr. Braddon procured young Edwards to sign iii. 868

- * Evidence that Mr. Speke wrote a letter into the country, recommending Mr. Braddon as a prosecutor of the earl of Essex's murder iii. 870
- * Evidence that a girl had declared a story of a razor something like Edwards's iii. 871, 880
- * The counsel for Mr. Braddon enter upon the defence iii. 872
- * Where one has counsel allowed, he ought not to speak himself iii. 875
- * Evidence of the women of the Edwards's family iii. 875
- * None of the witnesses can tell from whom they had the report in the country of my lord Essex's death, which they testified they had heard before he died iii. 884
- * Mr. Speke's counsel make a defence iii. 886
- * He speaks for himself iii. 886
- * Bomeney, who had been gentleman to my lord Essex six years, and attended him in the Tower when he died, gives evidence that my lord of Essex cut his own throat iii. 888
- * The warder, the centinel at the door, and captain Hawley, the master of the house, depose to the same effect iii. 889, 890
- * The chief justice's observations on the evidence iii. 891
- * The defendants are convicted iii. 897
- * Mr. Justice Wythens's speech before judgment iii. 899
- * Their respective fines are set iii. 899
- * His vindication of the earl of Essex iii. 900
- * Copies of informations taken before the coronet iii. 901
- * Mr. Braddon committed to a gaol in Wiltshire, and his sufferings iii. 905, 906
- * His own account of the trial iii. 908
- * The lords house, in 1688, appoint a committee to enquire concerning the death of the earl of Essex iii. 910
- * The depositions which were laid before them iii. 911
- * Evidence that several persons were in the earl's room the morning he died iii. 914
- * Mr. Braddon's remarks iii. 917
- * The circumstance of the razor considered iii. 921
- * The proceedings upon the coroner's inquisition iii. 924
- * Evidence that my lord was murdered by one Holland iii. 927, 928
- * A summary recapitulation of the whole fact iii. 929
- The record vi. 46. Ap.

B R A D S H A W, J A M E S,

- His trial for treason, Oct. 27, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 576
- Sir John Strange opens the nature of his crime ix. 576
- Evidence against him ix. 576
- Mr. Joddrell and Mr. Ford, his counsel, argued his insanity ix. 577
- The defence he made ix. 577
- Sir John Strange's observations upon it ix. 578
- Found guilty, and executed at Kennington-Common ix. 578
- Some account of him ix. 578

B R A D S H A W, J O H N, Serjeant at Law,

- Lord president on the trial of king Charles the first, for treason i. 1011, 1012
- His address to the king i. 986
- His answer to the king i. 987
- His speech before sentence i. 992, 1038
- His speech to his majesty i. 986
- Lord president on the trial of James duke of Hamilton ii. 1
- His warrant for committing Eusebius Andrews, dated two months after the commitment vii. 328
- Of counsel for John Lilburne, at the bar of the house of lords vii. 273

* B R A M B R E, N I C H O L A S,

- * Proceedings in parliament against him, the archbishop of York, the duke of Ireland, the earl of Suffolk, and lord chief justice Tresilian, for high-treason i. 1
- * Articles against them i. 6
- * None appearing but Brambre, the other four are attainted i. 12
- * Brambre desires trial by combat; which is refused i. 12
- * He is condemned and executed i. 13
- * A remarkable circumstance before his execution i. 13
- * Belknap, Holt, Fulthorpe, W. Burgh, Carey, and Lockton, tried i. 14
- * They confess, and beg mercy i. 14
- * Their lives are saved; but transported i. 14
- * Blake and Uske condemned and executed i. 14
- * Tresilian takes lodgings at Westminster in disguise i. 12
- * Is discovered lying under a table covered with baize, and brought before the lords i. 12
- * Is drawn to execution i. 13
- * Refuses to confess any thing i. 13
- * Will not climb the ladder, till beaten with staves i. 13
- * Is stript; the names and images of devils found under his clothes i. 13
- * Is hanged i. 13
- * Afterwards his throat cut i. 13
- * Buried at the Grey Friars i. 13
- * Bishop of Chichester tried; but his judgment respited i. 15
- * Simon de Burleigh, Beauchamp, Barons, and Salisbury, tried and executed i. 15

B R A M S T O N E, J O H N, Serjeant at Law,

- His argument in the King's Bench, on the habeas corpus brought by Sir Thomas Darnell and others vii. 116
- Takes exceptions to return of habeas corpus, and moves to have Sir Thomas Darnell bailed, who was imprisoned for refusing to lend money upon commissions for loans vii. 116, 117

B R A M S T O N E, S I R J O H N, Lord Chief Justice B. R.

- His argument, reasons, and opinion, for the king, against John Hampden, Esq. in the cause of ship-money i. 691

B R A N T H W A Y T E, W I L L I A M, Serjeant at Law,

- His speech before evidence, on the trial of Arundel Coke, for maiming vi. 213

B R E A C H of the P E A C E.

- Member of parliament may be committed by a justice for a breach of the peace viii. 162

B R E R E T O N, W I L L I A M. See NORRIS HENRY.

B R E W E R,
His speech in the house of commons, in the case of Asby and White viii. 93
* BREWSTER, THOMAS, ii. 528. See TWYN, & al.
BRIBERY and CORRUPTION. See BACON, FRANCIS, Lord.
BRIDGEMAN, Sir ORLANDO, Baronet, Chief Baron,
His charge to the grand jury respecting the regicides ii. 304
His charge to the jury on Harrison the regicide's trial ii. 323
His charge to the jury on the trial of Scroop, the regicide ii. 329
His speech on passing sentence on Scroop, &c. regicides ii. 340
His charge to the jury on Cook the regicide's trial ii. 352
His charge to the jury on Peters the regicide's trial ii. 365
His speech before sentence on Cook's trial ii. 368
His charge to the jury on Astell the regicide's trial ii. 381
His charge on Hacker the regicide's trial ii. 382
His charge on Hulet the regicide's trial ii. 389
His charge on Smith the regicide's trial ii. 395
His speech before judgment against Hardress Waller, &c. regicides ii. 403

B R I E F S. See CHARITY.
B R I T O N S.

In the time of the Britons, the pope had no jurisdiction in England xi. 71

BRITISH MUSEUM.

There is a manuscript copy of a treatise on the court of Star-chamber in this Museum xi. 329. See BOLEYN ANNE, queen of ENGLAND.
FISHER JOHN, bishop of ROCHESTER.

B R I T T O N.

This treatise was published about 13 Edw. I. in the king's name, and by his authority xi. 332

BRITTON, RICHARD. See DENEW NATHANIEL.

BROADFOOT, ALEXANDER,

Was tried for murder, Aug. 30, 1743, 16 Geo. II. xi. 349
The case xi. 349

The recorder of Bristol (for Michael Foster, J. B. R.) directs the jury to acquit the prisoner xi. 349. See PRESSING.

B R O D E R I C K, J O H N,

His speech before evidence, on the trial of Richard Hathaway, an impostor, March 24, 1702, 2 Ann. v. 483

His argument for John Tutlin in arrest of his judgment for publishing "The Observators," Mich. Term, 3 Ann. v. 554

* BRODWAY, GILES i. 396. See AUDLEY, MERVIN, lord.
BROGRAVE, Sir JOHN,

Was one of the commissioners on the trial of Babington for treason i. 127

* BROMWICH ANDREW,

* His trial at Stafford assizes, for high-treason, Aug. 13, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 965

* Some of the jurors discharged for being thought popishly affected ii. 965

* The indictment, for that, being a subject of this crown, he took popish orders, and resided in England ii. 966

* Evidence of the prisoner's administering the sacrament after the popish manner ii. 966

* The chief justice directs the jury, that if they believe the prisoner to be a priest from the circumstances, they might find him guilty, tho' there were not two witnesses that swore it positively ii. 968

* The prisoner convicted and condemned ii. 968

BROOKE GEORGE. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

BROOKESBY BARTHOLOMEW. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

* BROOKS, NATHAN, ii. 530. See TWYN, & al.

BROTHERTON, Counsellor at Law,

Made a very novel argument respecting the attainder against Sir John Fenwick v. 114

B R O W N E, S A M U E L,

Sums up the evidence, and makes his observations on it for the commons, on the trial of William Laud, archbishop of Canterbury, for treason i. 937

Delivers a summary of the charge against him in the house of commons i. 943

His reply i. 947

Browne opens the indictment against Annesley and Redding ix. 317

B R U C K L I E, J O H N, v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

B U C K, P E T E R,

Ordered to be prosecuted for publishing some of Fuller's libels. See FULLER WILLIAM.

BUCKHURST, THOMAS, Lord Treasurer, Lord High Steward,
His charge to the peers on the trial of Robert earl of Essex and Henry earl of Southampton for treason i. 197

His address to the noble prisoners, after their trial, and previous to his pronouncing sentence of death on them i. 207, 208

BUCKINGHAM, EDWARD Duke of,

His trial for treason, in the court of the lord high steward of England, May 13, 1522, 13 Hen. VIII. xi. 4

Duke of Norfolk precluded xi. 5, 21, 22

Accused xi. 5

Principal points of his indictment xi. 4, 5

Committed to the Tower xi. 4

Tried by his peers xi. 4, 5, 6

The evidence produced by the attorney-general xi. 4, 6

The defence xi. 5, 6

The sentence xi. 5

The king mitigated his sentence to beheading xi. 5

In this duke the place of high constable of England became extinct xi. 5

The publication at the degrading the duke from the order of the garter xi. 6

The ceremony of performing it xi. 6

Some of the titles of this noble family now dormant xi. 6

BUCKINGHAM, GEORGE Duke of,

Notorious conspiracy and subornation against the life and honour of this duke in charging his grace with sodomy, punished by a slight fine and pillory iii. 220. vii. 483

* BUCKNER, WILLIAM, i. 396. See PRINNE, & al.

* B U G G E R Y, i. 388.

* The person prostituting himself adjudged guilty of this felony i. 396

* Emission without penetration in the attempt, adjudged the offence was complete; and so in a rape i. 393

B U L L E R, F R A N C I S,

His argument for Mostyn on error, in cause of Fabrigas and Mostyn xi. 186

His reply xi. 194

Opens information against John Horne, esquire, for a libel xi. 266

* B U L L S.

* A papal bull i. 956

BURGH, HUBERT DE,

No sooner was magna charta passed than Hubert de Burgh, chief justice in that day, persuaded the king he was not bound by it, because under age when it passed; but this sort of insolence the next parliament resented, to the ruin of the pernicious chief justice iii. 222. vii. 480

He was the last great justiciary xi. 142

BURGH, WILLIAM DE, Justice C. B.

Was arrested sitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and sent prisoner to the Tower i. 5. n.

Tried for high treason, Feb. 3, 1388, 11 Rich. II. i. 14

Confesses, and begs mercy i. 14

Life saved, but transported to the city of Dublin, with the yearly allowance of 40l. during life, and liberty of going two miles for his recreation i. 14. n. * See BRAMBRE.

* BURGLARY.

* Where one comes into a house by day, the doors being open, and opens the door to get out at night, it is burglary. ii. 524. See TURNER's Trial.

* One who assists at breaking a house, is not guilty of burglary, unless he enters vi. 224, 225, 227

Rogues influence a constable to break open the door of an house, and thereupon they enter and rifle it; this was adjudged burglary x. 434

Burglary in an apartment in the African House, it must be laid to be the mansion-house of the company x. 575. n.

* BURN, JAMES, v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

BURNET, GILBERT, Bishop of Salisbury,

His account of Gregg's treason x. 77. Ap.

Extracts from his History of the Reformation xi. 11, 13, 19, 20, 22

His account of Collier, Cook, and Snat, clergymen, their absolving William Perkins and John Freind, at Tyburn x. Ap. 43

BURNING.

William Sawtre executed in the year 1401, was the first person burnt in England for heresy. vii. Ap. n. See BEHEADING. GAUNT ELIZABETH. OLDCASTLE Sir JOHN.

* BURTON, HENRY,

* His trial for several libels. See BASTWICK. i. 503

BURY, JOHN,

His case of divorce for impotency x. 22, 23. Ap.

BURY, Sir THOMAS, Lord Chief Baron,

His charge to the jury, on the trial of Francis Francia, for treason vi. 98, 101

His argument in the Prince's case xi. 300, 302

* B U S B Y, G E O R G E,

* His trial for high-treason, in accepting popish orders, at the assizes for the county of Derby, July 25, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 328

* His arraignment iii. 328

* The prisoner insists he has a habeas corpus to remove him to the King's Bench, and could not be tried in the country iii. 328

* The court rule, that the grand jury having found the bill, he must be tried here iii. 328

* The indictment iii. 328

* Mr. Combes's speech before evidence iii. 329

* Evidence of the manner of his apprehension iii. 330

* Busby objects that he is an alien, and so not within the statute against taking popish orders iii. 332

* The act for naturalizing the children of subjects born in foreign countries during the late rebellion, read iii. 332

* Evidence of the prisoner's officiating as a priest iii. 333

* Mr. baron Street directs the jury iii. 338

* Tells them, that the officiating as a priest is sufficient evidence of his being in orders iii. 339

* Busby is convicted, and sentence passed upon him iii. 339

* BUTLER, alias STRICKLAND, MARY,

* Her trial for forgery at the Old-Bailey, Oct. 12, 1699, 11 W. III. v. 232

* The indictment v. 232

* Mr. serjeant Wright and Mr. Northey open the evidence v. 233

* The evidence against the prisoner v. 234

* The bond produced and read v. 235

* The prisoner's counsel enter upon her defence v. 236

* The prisoner's witnesses called v. 237

* Lord chief justice Holt sums up the evidence v. 237

* The prisoner convicted; and sentence passed v. 238

C.

CALTHORP, CHARLES,

His argument in B. R. on habeas corpus brought by fir Thomas Darnel and others: vii. 122

For Benjamin Valentine, on information against him for seditious speeches in parliament vii. 245

For fir John Corbet, imprisoned for refusing to lend money upon the commissions for loans vii. 122

CALVERT, Doctor. See KINGSTON, Ducheſs of.

CALVIN.

Sir Francis Bacon's speech for him in Exchequer-chamber xi. 79

Lord chancellor Ellesmere's speech on that occasion xi. 97. See ii. 9

CAMBRIDGE,

Franchises thereof seized for a notorious riot iii. 590

* CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY,

* Proceedings against them, 1687, 3 Jac. II. iv. 254

* The substance of the king's letter to them, to give father Francis, a monk, his degree, without administering the oaths to him iv. 254

* They refuse to admit him iv. 254

* A second letter to the university iv. 254

* The university apply to the duke of Albemarle, their chancellor iv. 255

* The vice-chancellor and senate summoned before the high commission iv. 255

* The persons deputed by the senate to attend iv. 255

* They have time allowed them to answer iv. 256

* Their answer iv. 256

* Their hearing iv. 257

* The court decree that the vice-chancellor shall be deprived; and that he should be suspended from his mastership iv. 260

* The senate are dismissed with a reprimand iv. 261

* And ordered to send up copies of their statutes iv. 261

* Balderſon elected vice-chancellor iv. 258. See PEACHEL JOHN.

CAMDEN, the Historian,

His writings no authority in Westminster-Hall xi. 142

CAMDEN, Lord,

In his charge to a jury, told them, "that he did not wish the conviction of the defendant, if any man whatsoever doubted of his guilt" xi. 276

Encomium on that great lawyer xi. 276. See ATTORNEY-GENERAL

His speech as lord chief justice of the Common-Pleas, in delivering the judgment of that court for the plaintiff in the cause of Entick and Carrington xi. 316. See KINGSTON, Ducheſs of. PRATT CHARLES.

CAMERON, Dr. ARCHIBALD,

Proceedings against him on the bill of attainder, May 17, 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 202

The doctor's education, behaviour, and execution x. 202

Mr. justice Foster's report of his case x. 203

CAMPBELL,

Instance in Scotland of a prisoner being tried by a Campbell for the murder of a Campbell, and eleven of the jury Campbells x. 73. n.

CAMPBELL, ALEXANDER HUME, (Counsel for the Crown on the prosecution of Macdaniel and others) x. 433

His argument x. 433

Cited a case met with since last argument x. 437

His reply x. 442

Opens the evidence against Timothy Murphy x. 184

His reply x. 189

His reply on Annesley and Redding's trial ix. 331

CAMPMAN, GEORGE. See HENDLEY WILLIAM, Clerk.

CANNING, ELIZABETH,

Her trial for perjury, May, 1754, 27 Geo. II. x. 205

Indictment against her x. 206

Mr. Gosſaigne opens the indictment against her x. 211

Mr. serjeant Davy, counsel for the prosecution, states the case, and opens the evidence x. 211

Mr. Willes's speech on the same side x. 218

Agreed by the counsel, that the witnesses should be examined apart; and when examined, not return to the others, and they gave each a list of witnesses x. 223

Mr. Gurney, the short-hand writer, proves what she swore at Mary Squires's trial x. 223

The several witnesses against her examined, and cross-examined all the way x. 227, &c.

Mr. Moreton's speech for the prisoner x. 289

Serjeant Nares on the same side x. 298

Witnesses for the prisoner, which were cross-examined likewise x. 305, &c.

An evidence proposed to be examined that was not in the counsel's brief; and it being agreed on both sides, that no witnesses should be examined but what were in the briefs, court refused it x. 366

Mr. Davy objects to Mr. Salt's evidence, as also to the confession of mother Wells (notis om.) x. 367

Debate about it x. 367

Court allows evidence to be given of her confession x. 367

Whether the justice shall be allowed to give evidence of Virtue Hall's confession?—refused by the court x. 371

Further evidence in behalf of Canning x. 369, &c.

Mr. Moreton rests the evidence on the testimony given x. 374

Mr. serjeant Davy's reply and observations x. 374

The recorder sums up the evidence x. 390

Jury bring her in guilty of perjury, but not wilful and corrupt x. 406

Recorder said, he could not receive that verdict, because it was partial, and they must either find her guilty of the whole indictment, or acquit her x. 406

Jury withdrew again, and returned with a verdict, guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury x. 406

Two of the jurymen declare the verdict was not according to their consciences x. 406

Foreman of the jury's account how the jury were divided, and at last agreed x. 406

Counsel moved for a new trial x. 406

Consideration of it put off x. 406

Lord chief justice Willes's opinion, a new trial could not be granted x. 407

Her case laid before counsel, and Mr. Emlyn's opinion on it; and that, on an indictment for perjury, it ought to be proved to be wilful and corrupt x. 407

Ordered to be transported, on a division, nine against eight x. 407

Recorder passes sentence upon her x. 390

Affidavits of two of the jurymen whereon motion was grounded for a new trial x. 408—410

Rev. Mr. Rayner's certificate of her behaviour in Newgate x. 410

Elizabeth Canning's declaration after her sentence x. 411

Transported to New-England x. 411

CAPITAL OFFENCES.

The law allows more favour to a prisoner in a capital, than to a defendant in a civil, matter iv. 191

Maliciously shooting at a person is a capital offence. See ARNOLD EDWARD.

The reason of that ancient law, that capital offenders had lupina capita, and might therefore by the justice of lex talionis, arte perire sua, wherein the law followed natura ordinem ii. 8. See vii. 179. xi. 91

Though dismembering was capital by the law of Scotland, mutilation was not ii. 629

CAPITULATION.

That terms of capitulation on surrender of a place were not complied with, no sort of defence in a court of law ix. 550. See id. 547. n.

* CAREW, JOHN, i. 898. See REGICIDES.

CAREW, Sir NICHOLAS.

He was arraigned, attainted, and executed, for treason, Mar. 3, 30 Hen. VIII. xi. 25

CAREY, Sir JOHN, Baron of the Exchequer,

Was arrested sitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and sent prisoner to the Tower. i. 5. and n.

He was tried for high-treason, Feb. 3, 1388, 11 Rich. II. i. 14

Confesses and begs mercy i. 14

Life saved, but transported to Waterford, in Ireland, with the yearly allowance of 20l. during life, with liberty to go two miles and no farther, on pain of death i. 14. and n. * See BRAMBRE.

CARMARTHEN, THOMAS, Marquis of, Lord President of the Council,

His procession as lord high steward, on lord Mobun's trial iv. 510

His grace's commission iv. 510

His address to the noble prisoner previous to giving evidence iv. 512

His address to him after trial, and on pronouncing the judgment of his peers iv. 554

CARNEGIE, JAMES,

His trial before the court of justiciary in Scotland, held at Edinburgh, July 25, 1728, 1 Geo. II. for the murder of Charles, earl of Strathmore ix. 26

Information against him, for Susannah, countess of Strathmore, by Charles Esſkine ix. 27

Information for him, by Robert Dundas ix. 34

His affize, or jury ix. 52

Evidence against him and for him ix. 53, &c.

Verdict not guilty ix. 59

* CARNWARTH, ROBERT, Earl of vi. 1. See DERWENT-WATER, earl of.

* CARR, FRANCES. See SOMERSET, countess of.

* CARR, HENRY,

* His trial for a libel reflecting on the justice of the nation, at Guildhall, London, July 2, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 57

* The substance of the information iii. 57

* A tales pro defectu juratorum iii. 57

* Mr. recorder's (Sir George Jefferies) speech at the opening the information iii. 58

* The evidence iii. 58, 59

* The exceptionable words read iii. 60

* Sir Francis Winnington, of counsel for the defendant, observes from the evidence, that the individual paper mentioned in the information is not proved to be the defendant's iii. 61

* 2dly, That admitting it to be his, it is not proved to be done maliciously iii. 61

* The prisoner calls witnesses to shew he was well affected to the government iii. 61

* The recorder's reply to the defence made by the prisoner's counsel iii. 62

* The lord chief justice, in his direction to the jury, shews his resentment at the noise and humming the party made in court iii. 63

* He tells the jury, they were not to expect such strict proof in this as in common matters iii. 63

* That presumptive evidence is often taken even in capital matters iii. 63

* That it had been resolved and subscribed by all the judges, when his majesty demanded their opinions concerning the regulation of the press, that to print or publish news books, or pamphlets of news, was illegal, and discovered a manifest intent to the breach of the peace iii. 64

* That if there were no scandal in it, the author ought to be convicted for publishing such books without authority, that alone being illegal iii. 64

* He censures the folly of the age in being so fond of such papers iii. 64

* Says, that it was ridiculous for the author to hope a court of justice would not understand what he designed all the rest of the world should understand (notis om.) iii. 64

* That

- * That if the jury found him guilty of the fact, the court would judge whether it implied malice iii. 64
- * And the jury were not to trouble themselves about that iii. 64
- * That the jury, by finding the defendant guilty, do not take it upon their oaths absolutely that he was the author, but that they believe him to be the author iii. 64
- * The jury withdrew, and, after an hour's recess, bring the prisoner in guilty iii. 64. See SCROGGS for WILLIAM.

* CARR, ROBERT. See SOMERSET earl of.

CARTER, THOMAS,

- This historian a prerogative writer xi. 29
- Extracts from his history of England xi. 34
- CARTER, Sir LAURENCE, Baron of the Exchequer,
- Sums up the evidence to the jury, on Aston's trials ix. 199, 208, 216, 224. See ix. 132

CARTER, WILLIAM. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

C A S E S,

Some of the principal cited, arranged in alphabetical order.

A.

- | | |
|---|--|
| Addisball and Bunting xi. 205, 215, 219 Aiban's St. (lord) vii. 243, 357, — and Cox xi. 192 Alder xi. 328 Allen vii. 178 Alphonso xi. 336 Amsey (for John) v. 114 Andrews and Holt xi. 192 Angus (earl) ii. 13 Appleard i. 214 Apsey vii. 225, xi. 336 Archer x. 436, 441 Armstrong (for Thomas) iv. 198, 199, 204. x. 203 | Arundel (earl) v. 83 — (mayor) viii. 95. n. Ash and Smith iv. 199 Ashby and White x. 136. Ap. Ashley and Harris x. 476 Ashton (for William) iii. 776, 778 Ather and Biddulph xi. 207 Atkins, for Robert, and Holford, vii. 634 Atwood and Blanchflower iii. 780 Aurol viii. 358 Awater iii. 176 Aylesbury men xi. 329, 337 |
|---|--|

B.

- | | |
|---|---|
| Bacon (lord chancellor) v. 357, vi. 597 Bagg vii. 181, 227, 237 Ball viii. 255. n. Ballister and Johnson xi. 189 Balshal iii. 768 Banbury (lord) xi. 336 Barker and Ramkissen xi. 193 Barkham xi. 336 Barkstead ix. 583, x. 203 Barnardiston, for Samuel iv. 166 Barnardiston and Seame iii. 782, viii. 98, 109, ix. 288, 292 Barnsby and Powell xi. 218 Barrington and Venables xi. 192 Barton xi. 2 Bartholomew and others vii. 139, 159, 164 Basset ii. 206 Bateman iv. 204 Bathurst and Clews xi. 206, 213, 219, 228 Bear xi. 332 Beaumont (lord) ii. 11 Beaufrage vi. 737, 738, 740 Beckley vii. 138 Beckwith vii. 118, 135, 138, 158, 164, 168, 175, 186 Beecher vii. 219, 222 Belbarbe vii. 168 Belchier x. 437, 438, 441, 443, 445 Bell xi. 332 Bellamont xi. 193 Bellafys (lord) vii. 358 Beaumont vii. 159, 164 Berchett ix. 309 Beresford and Proffer iii. 780 Berkley (lord) vii. 244 — (the judge) ii. 209, viii. 566 Berry vi. 823 Bisbel xi. 336 Biddulph and Alder xi. 207 Bildston vii. 157, 162, 173 Bilston vii. 144 Binks vii. 157, 162, 174, 237 Blackham xi. 206, 212, 219 | Blague iv. 194 Blair vii. 358 Blanchflower and Atwood iii. 780 Bland and Robinson xi. 188 Blaunsford vii. 111. ix. 310 Blunt (for Christopher) iii. 788 Bolsworth iv. 166 Bondfield and Millar xi. 333 Booth vi. 737 Bow and Jones xi. 201, 206, 214, 219, 221, 228 Boycot and others vii. 168 Boyle and Boyle xi. 216, 220, 223 Bradshaw vii. 49 Brandon (lord) iv. 177. vii. 640 Brains and Watts ix. 64, 536 Bransby and Kerriek xi. 207 Brereton ix. 311 Brewster ix. 286 Bridgewater (earl) vii. 357 Bright and Eynon xi. 220 Bruch vii. 139, 159, 165 Brocket vii. 139, 159, 237 Brooke viii. 408 Brooks and Hitcham iii. 780 Broome vii. 138, 159, 165 Browne v. 62. vii. 126, 135 Browne and Cowpe xi. 345 Browne and lady Mayo xi. 213, 214, 221, 229, 235 Brown and others vii. 139 Browning vii. 135, 138, 158, 164, 174 Browning and Beeson vii. 123 Brownfild and Edwards xi. 224 Brugge vii. 158, 164 Bryan vii. 169 Buckley and Rivers vii. 123 Buckner ix. 65, 534 Bunting and Addisball xi. 205, 215, 219 Burdett iii. 776 Burgen vi. 741 Burroughs and Jamineau xi. 207, 218 Burton vii. 159, 166, 175. iii. 776, 778 Bysbel iv. 743. ix. 294. xi. 336 Butts and Penny xi. 344 |
|---|---|

C.

- | | |
|---|---|
| Caspar ii. 201. vii. 118, 139, 160, 166, 175, 177, 237 Calbot vii. 169 Calvin ii. 9, 11, 12. iii. 769. vii. 118, 124, 143. xi. 192 Carlisle (bishop) i. 214. vii. 247 Carr xi. 223, 233 Carr (lady) iv. 197, 342 Cartwright xi. 444 Castle vi. 622 Cathlam (earl) ii. 144. iv. 681. v. 62. vii. 421 Catalina v. 108 | Catesby vii. 158, 164, 175 Cowdry vii. 179, 226 Chamberlain and Harvey xi. 345 Charlworth xi. 332, 333 Chambers xi. 337 Channery xi. 336 Chase vii. 237 Oberrie vii. 135, 137, 159, 160, 175 Chitwin ii. 203 Clarendon (lord) v. 110 Clarendon (for Roger) xi. 214 Cleve vii. 168 |
|---|---|

- | | |
|---|---|
| Cleve and Gellye xi. 345 Clews and Bathurst xi. 206, 213, 219, 228 Clipsbam iii. 780 Cobb vii. 135 Codde xi. 336 Cobham (lord) ii. 162. iii. 765, 768, 775, 778, 791, 1062. viii. 68, 468 Cojimaul and Verelst xi. 192 Coke vi. 804 Coleman iii. 776, 778. vi. 74, 75, 76 Colledge iii. 769, 776, 778. iv. 173, 186, 190, 194, 199, 204, 205. v. 120 C. llingburne iii. 776, 778 Colins and Jessum xi. 219 Coningsmark (count) iv. 169, 199. v. 101 Constable iii. 769, 770. vii. 138, 158, 163, 174, 228. viii. 408, 776, 778 Conway vii. 168 Coppinger and Higgon xi. 220 Corbet x. 203. xi. 212, 218, 219 Cornelius and Hughes xi. 218 Cornwell x. 434. n. Dacres (lord) i. 388. vi. 822. vii. 421 Da Costa & Villareal xi. 207, 219 Danby (earl) vii. 358 Dangerfield iv. 166 Darcy (lord) i. 197 Davis and Yale xi. 189 Deane and others vii. 168 Delamere (lord) iv. 314. v. 48, 61, 104, 177 Delaware (lord) ii. 13 Denning and Norris xi. 192 Earbury xi. 309, 316, 318, 324, 326, 329 East-India Company and Campbell xi. 189 Eaton ii. 12 Elliot vii. 358 — (for John) viii. 4 Ellis vii. 169 Fairchild vii. 169 Farr xi. 211, 217, 229 Felton v. 126 Ferham v. 125 Fermer xi. 224, 228, 234 Ferrers (for Richard) vii. 111 Figot (for Thomas) vii. 223, 229 Finch (lordkeeper) vii. 357. viii. 566 Finch (for Moyle) vii. 169 Fishere vii. 169 Fitzgerald xi. 233 Fitzharris iii. 1062. iv. 166, 177, 178, 182, 186, 190, 198, 199. Garbut (for John) vii. 220, 226 Gardell xi. 208 Garnet ii. 175 Garvan and Roach xi. 220, 224 Gelly and Cleve xi. 345 German iii. 776 Githerd vii. 169 Goffe xi. 333 Gomeney i. 816 Goob vi. 737 Goodwin (for Francis) viii. 145 Goudet vii. 358 Gover vi. 740 Gould and Smith xi. 345 | Cornish (alderman) iv. 177, 186, 200, 204. v. 75, 120, 130 Corton and Hitcham ix. 311 Corybn vii. 169 Cofens (doctor) vii. 566 Cotton (for Robert) v. 128 Cowland ix. 533 Cowpe and Browne xi. 345 Cowte xi. 292 Cox and St. Albans xi. 192 Cranbank vi. 741 Crawley (for Francis, and judge) viii. 566 Cressingham i. 819 Crispe and Dalmahoy vii. 458 Crogate vii. 223 Crohagan iii. 778, 780 Cromwell (lord) iv. 314. vii. 219, 220, 223, 225, 237. v. 97 Crosby v. 79 Crutchley and Robins xi. 220, 227, 231 Cudart vii. 169 Culpeper xi. 305 Curle and Fleetwood iii. 1060 Curtis ix. 6. n. Cutler and Dixy vii. 243 D. Devonshire (lord) iv. 314 Devonshire (earl) vii. 243 Derby xi. 309, 313, 316, 318 Derby (earl) xi. 189, 192, 193 Desmaistres and others vii. 160, 166, 177, 237, 358. ii. 201 Dive and Maningham vi. 740 Dixy and Cutler vii. 243 Drake vii. 358 Duffus (lord) ix. * 699. x. 188, Ap. Dutton and Howell xi. 190, 193 E. Elmhurst (for William) i. 821 Essex i. 815 — (earl of) v. 83 Essex and Southampton (earls) i. 758 Everard vii. 159, 166, 175 Exeter (marchioness) v. 86. xi. 25 Eynon and Bright xi. 220 F. 331. vi. 74, 75, 76. vii. 331, 358. Flaring (for Rowland) vii. 111. ix. 314 Fleetwood and Curle iii. 1060 Flowerdew ii. 206 Fogossa vii. 243 Fowth vii. 104, 114 Fox vii. 135 Foxworthy ix. 586. n. Frere vii. 169 Frost and Waldeck xi. 237 Fuller ix. 288, 303 Furfsman and Furfsman xi. 216 G. Grahme (for Richard) vi. 804 Gray. See Gray. Greene vii. 168 Green and Waller xi. 52 Gragg x. Ap. 77. n. vi. 74, 75 Gregory vii. 246 Greville x. 440 Gripe vi. 330 Griffin (lord) x. 203. xi. 349 Grey ix. 533 Grey (lord) iii. 765, 768, 778. viii. 468 Greenvels and Burwell, and others xi. 190 H. Harvey and Stanley i. 214 Hatfield and Hatfield xi. 206, 207, 210, 219, 221, 226, 229, 231, 235 Hatten (lady) iv. 354 Hawkins ix. 575 Haxey (for Thomas) iii. 784. v. 86, 125. vii. 829 Heale xi. 329 Heaning vii. 135 Hether iii. 776, 778 Hollards xi. 317 Henart i. 823 Hengham xi. 332 Herbert (lord) v. 114 Herbert (the attorney-general) viii. 566 Heveningham (for John) vii. 143, 161 Hairton vii. 168 Hale and Mullers ix. 314 Hales (for Edward) ix. 292 Halliday and Pit xi. 337 Holliday and Ozenbridge vii. 124 Hampden iv. 166, 172, 177, 198. v. 132. ix. 296 Harcourt vii. 135, 138, 158, 164, 175, 18 Harding iii. 780 Harra |
|---|---|

I N D E X.

- Harvey (fir Raw.)* v. 86
Harris and James x. 433
Hick (fir Baptist) iv. 354. xi. 305
Higon and Coppinger xi. 220
Hiron and Tanfield ix. 302
Hucham and Brooks iii. 780 and Carton ix. 314
Holland vii. 222
- James and Harris* x. 433
and Rutlech iii. 1054
Jamincan and Burroughs xi. 207, 218
Jesse ix. 314
Jessum and Collins xi. 219
Jugrey viii. 95. n.
Johnson iv. 166. x. 582, 583. Ap. 188
- Kattrington* i. 816
Kendal xi. 303, 305, 309, 316, 317, 318
Kenn vii. 168. xi. 205, 211, 215, 219, 221, 226, 229
- Lake and Hatton* xi. 305, 322
Llandoff (bithop) vii. 357
Lane iv. 171
Larks i. 760
Latimer (lord) vii. 245
Land (archbishop) ii. 160. vii. 566
Lawrence vii. 135, 138, 157, 163, 174
Leeds (duke) vii. 358
Leicester (earl) and Mandy vi. 741
Lewis xi. 333
Lilburne ii. 203. iii. 345. xi. 344
- Macclesfield (earl)* v. 282
Maddocks and Lloyd xi. 220, 228, 234
Magdalen College vi. 709
Man vii. 126, 135, 138
Mandike and Slint xi. 192
March (earl) v. 116
Maugridge ix. 20, 49
Maye (lady) and Brown xi. 213, 214, 221, 229, 235
Matthews and Matthews xi. 212
Merfield iii. 780
Miadefex (earl) vii. 357
Meggot (fir George) viii. 111
Mellifent and Mellifent xi. 214, 219
Mendez and Villa Real xi. 219
Melvin vii. 228
- Nevill and Stroud* viii. 98, 109, 110
New College xi. 218
Newport vii. 126, 135, 138, 157, 163, 174
Nixon xi. 333
Noel vii. 358
Noel and Wells xi. 207, 218
Norfolk (duke) i. 758. iii. 769, 775, 778. v. 132. vii. 11, 243
Norfolk election viii. 145
- Oates* iv. 166, 177
Okey ix. 583, * 653. x. 203, 204
Oneal vii. 357
Onslow viii. 94
Overbury ii. 26
- Page* vii. 139, 160, 166, 175, 237
Paine vi. 415. vii. 138
Parker vii. 120, 123, 134, 138, 139, 157, 162, 174, 235
Partridge vii. 247
Passon xi. 337
Patterson vii. 168
Peacbam iv. 197
Peak and Paul vii. 220
Peak vii. 223
Pen (fir William) vii. 358
Penn and Mead ix. 294
Penny and Butts xi. 344
Pepper vii. 169
Perry xi. 213
Pesle vii. 168
Peterborough (earl) vii. 358
Petre (lord) vii. 358
Phillips and Badby vii. 225
Phillips and Bury xi. 207
Phillips and Prudham xi. 221, 224, 227, 229, 234
- Quick* iii. 780
- Radcliffe (fir George)* vii. 357
Raleigh (fir Walter) iii. 111. iv. 169.
- Hollis* viii. 110
Holloway iv. 198. ix. 63, 64, 531. x. 203.
Holt and Andrews xi. 192
Hughes and Cornelius xi. 218
Huntington and Roe x. 433
Hussey (doctor) vi. 741
- Jones (fir William)* iv. 175
Jones and Bow xi. 201, 206, 214, 219, 221, 228
Joy (lady) iv. 0
Judges, 10 Rich. II. i. 706. ii. 289. vii. 236, 238
- Kerrick and Bransby* xi. 207
King xi. 332
Knox iv. 171
Koiver iii. 780
- Lindley* vi. 740. vii. 118
Lyle (lady) v. 101
Littlepage vii. 135
Lloyd and Maddox xi. 220, 224, 228, 234
Loan vii. 237
London (bishop) vii. 357
Long viii. 96
Lowat (lord) x. 436
Lovelace iv. 314
Lukup xi. 332
- Monmouth (duke)* v. 83, 125, 131, 133
Monson (fir Thomas) vii. 118, 134, 137, 139, 158, 164, 175
Monson and West x. 433
Moody and Thurston xi. 218
Moore and North iii. 782
Mordant (lord) v. 66, 132
Morley (lord) xi. 263
Mullers and Hale xi. 314
Morris and Webber xi. 209, 221, 226
Mortimer (lord) i. 214. v. 47, 83, 97, 107.
Murphy xi. 223, 233
Murray x. 203. xi. 336, 338
Muskerry (lord) xi. 329
- North and Moore* iii. 782
North and Stockwith vi. 612, 707, 708, 740
Northampton ix. 287, 302
Northumberland (earl) i. 760. iii. 778, 792, 821. vii. 226
Norrays (lord) vii. 246
Norton ix. 333
Norwich (bishop) i. 820. vii. 357
- Overbury (fir Thomas)* x. 439
Overton vii. 157, 163, 174
Owen iii. 769, 776, 778. vii. 227
Oxenbridge and Halliday vii. 124, 227, 229, 234
- Pickering and Thornton* xi. 220
Pinchman i. 424
Pine iii. 780. iv. 197
Pitt iii. 1062
Plowden vii. 243
Plunket iii. 765, 770. viii. 408, 782, 791
Pole (cardinal) iii. 111, 768, 776, 778. vi. 566. vii. 221
Pons and Johnson xi. 189, 192
Pope vii. 220
Poulter vi. 737. vii. 226
Poulterer vii. 118
Powell and Barnby xi. 218
Powis (earl) vii. 358
Poyning vii. 132, 154, 221, 237
Press and Bursford iii. 780
Preston (lord) vi. 75, 804
Prudham and Phillips xi. 207, 221, 224, 227, 229, 234
- Pym* ix. 304
- Ramkiffesent and Barker* xi. 193
Ratcliff x. 203
Ravallac v. 126
Rawlin x. 440
Rayner vii. 118, 134, 135, 138, 159, 165, 186
Reading ix. 309
Regicides v. 82
Reynel ((fir George) iii. 549, 550
Rhodes xi. 213, 219, 233
Richardson xi. 223, 233
Rivers x. 434. n.
Rivers and Buckley vii. 123
Roch and Garvan xi. 220, 234
Roberts xi. 208
Robins and Crutchley xi. 220, 227, 231
- Sacheverel* vi. 74, 75, 76, 77
Saint Albans and Cox xi. 192
Salisbury iv. 199. x. 584
Salisbury (earl) vii. 358
Saltonstall (fir Samuel) vii. 160, 166, 167, 177, 178
Sanchar (lord) ii. 10. viii. 349, 437
Sanders i. 333. ix. 304. x. 433, 437
Sandie vii. 169
Savage vii. 216
Saots (Mary, queen of) ii. 11
Scrogs (fir William) vii. 358
Scroop (lord) i. 87
Search xi. 336
Sedley (fir Charles) x. Ap. 93. n.
Serle and Williams xi. 220, 260
Seven Bishops ix. 288, 292, 302. xi. 304, 319
Seymour (fir Edward) vii. 358
Seymour (lord) vii. 243
Seymour (fir Thomas) v. 83, 131
Shaftesbury (earl) iv. 181, 183. xi. 336, 338
Sherave vii. 169
Sherburn vii. 146
Shirley ii. 11, 12, 13. vii. 233
Sidney iii. 1064. iv. 169, 172, 177, 186, 196, 342. v. 68, 79, 90, 103, 130. vi. 74, 75, 76.
Simmonds xi. 332
Sinclair and Fraser xi. 221, 232
Smith ix. 310
Smith and Ash iv. 199
Smith and Gould xi. 345
Smith and Mall vi. 740
Soame and Barnardiston iii. 782. viii. 98, 109. ix. 288, 292
- Tanfield and Heron* ix. 302
Tankerville (lord) xi. 304, 305
Tankred viii. 111. n.
Tarquin x. 435
Taylor iii. 776
Terret (fir Richard) ix. 314
Thicknesse xi. 336
Thomas and Sorrel iv. 384. vii. 613, 617, 620, 626, 627, 632
Thornton and Pickering xi. 220
Thorp vii. 243
- Vane (fir Henry)* iii. 765, 769, 770, 775. viii. 468, 778
Vaughan vii. 358. viii. 255
Vaux i. 757. vii. 222. ix. 436. x. 436
Venables and Barrington xi. 192
- Unwin* vii. 168
Upwell vii. 68
- Waldeck and Frost* xi. 237
Wallis ii. 11
Walsh iii. 603
Ward xi. 189
Ward (fir Patience) iv. 172
Wardour (lord A.) vii. 358
Warrington (lord) v. 128
Warwick (lord) xi. 257, 259, 260
Watts and Brains ix. 64, 536
Weyland (fir Thomas) i. 704
Webb vi. 737
Webb and Cook xi. 220
Webber and Morris xi. 209, 221, 226
Weld x. Ap. 24. n.
Wells v. 114
Wells and Newel xi. 207, 218
Wells vii. 111
- Robinson and Bland* xi. 188
Roe xi. 303, 305, 309, 316, 317, 318
Roe and Huntington x. 433
Rogers vii. 135, 138
Rolph ii. 40, 173
Rookwood iv. 743
Roswell vii. 149, 177, 178
Rudyard xi. 304, 911
Rug vii. 237
Ruffel (lord) iv. 160, 172, 177, 178, 186, 188, 190, 199, 200. v. 85, 88, 97, 120, 130. vi. 74. vii. 641. n.
Russell vii. 228, 234, 235, 238
Ruswell vii. 225. xi. 336
Rutland (countess) xi. 263
Rutlech and James iii. 1054
- Somerfet (earl)* i. 758. ii. 162. x. 444
(countess) xi. 264
Sorrel and Thomas iv. 384
Southampton and Essex (earls) i. 758. ii. 162. iii. 775, 778
Spademan vii. 168
Sparhawk iii. 776
Specot vii. 220
Spenser (father and son) viii. 566
Spikefworth i. 819
Spore vii. 169
Stafford i. 86. ii. 35. n. ix. 583. x. 203
Stafford (viscount) iii. 345, 769, 776, 778
Stanley and Harvey xi. 345
Stanley (fir Henry) i. 214
Stanley (fir Rowland) v. 70
Stephenson ii. 12, 13
Stirling xi. 223, 225, 229
Stockwith and North vi. 612, 707, 708, 740
Storey (doctor) i. 516. iii. 764, 768, 770, 775, 778, 782, 791. v. 88. vii. 228. viii. 344, 468.
See name in Index.
Stowell (fir John) ii. 91
Strafford (earl) ii. 160, 198, 206. iii. 784. v. 49, 59, 83, 84, 95, 96, 97, 108, 483, 484. viii. 566
Stroude and Nevill viii. 98, 109, 110
Sturton (lord) iii. 775. vii. 94
Suffolk (duke) i. 214, 822. vii. 171, 238, 243
Suffolk (earl) i. 759
Summers xi. 305
- Thorp (fir William)* i. 705. vi. 496
Throgmorton ii. 27
Thurston and Moody xi. 218
Timelbie vii. 237
Trelawny and Williams xi. 192
Trewynnard xi. 338
Trollop vii. 220
Tutchin ix. 287, 288, 297, 303, 304. xi. 333
Twyne vi. 737. xi. 233
Tyrone (earl) vii. 358
- Verelst and Cojimaul* xi. 192
Vernon (fir Thomas) vii. 118, 134
Villa Real and Mendez xi. 219
Vincent xi. 207, 213, 219, 222, 223, 225, 226, 229, 236
- U.*
Urswick vii. 136, 159, 166, 175
- W.*
Wendon vii. 118, 134, 138, 159, 165
Wentworth (lord) i. 823
West and Monson x. 433
Weston i. 816
Wharton iv. 743. v. 282
White and Ashby x. 136. Ap. 190
Whitebread iv. 743
Whitehead vii. 199
Widdrington iv. 199
Wigg vi. 741
Williams ix. 534, 535. n.
and Searle xi. 220, 260
and Trelawny iii. 1062. iv. 354. xi. 192
Wilmer iv. 172, 186
Wilkes xi. 336, 338
and Wood xi. 321
Winkfield vii. 121
Winkpole

Widdypole (for William)	x. 38	Wyndham	ix. 314
Winechester (bishop)	vii. 243	Wyndham (for William)	xi. 304, 315, 316
Woodburne	vi. 804
Woolsey (cardinal)	vi. 566
	Y.
Yarley	xi. 316	York (archbishop)	vii. 243
Yew	vii. 139, 159, 165
	Z.
Zanchar (See Zanchar)

CASSELLS, ROBERT. See BERNARDI JOHN, Major.
CASTLEHAVEN, MERVIN Earl. See AUDLEY, MERVIN Lord.

- * CASTLEMAINE, ROGER Earl of,
- * His trial for high treason, June 23, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 36
 - * Indictment for high treason, in conspiring the death of the king, the subversion of the government, religion, &c. iii. 37
 - * Sir Creswell Levinz, attorney-general, opens the evidence iii. 37
 - * Oates's evidence of several letters sent and received by my lord Castlemaine about the plot iii. 38
 - * Oates's voyages to Spain and Flanders iii. 39
 - * Oates's evidence of a divorce between the lord Castlemaine and Barbara duchess of Cleveland iii. 42
 - * Dangerfield called as a witness for the king iii. 43
 - * Sixteen records of conviction against Dangerfield for a cheat iii. 44
 - * Upon which the prisoner objects to his being sworn iii. 44
 - * The matter debated between the king's and the prisoner's counsel iii. 45
 - * The opinion of the court of common pleas asked iii. 47
 - * Dangerfield admitted to be sworn iii. 47
 - * He deposed that my lord managed the St. Omer's witnesses iii. 47
 - * Mentions a sham-plot iii. 47
 - * Deposes that my lord was angry with him because he refused to kill the king iii. 48
 - * The lord Castlemaine enters upon his defence iii. 48
 - * Produces a record, and calls witnesses to impeach Oates's credit iii. 49, 50
 - * Records of Dangerfield's being outlawed for felony, and several times pilloried for cheating iii. 52
 - * Mrs. Cellier's evidence of my lord's ill opinion of Dangerfield iii. 53
 - * The attorney general sums up the evidence iii. 55
 - * The lord chief justice directs the jury iii. 55
 - * My lord Castlemaine acquitted iii. 57
 - * The proceedings in the house of commons against him, 1689, 1 W. and M. iv. 397
 - * Charged with going ambassador to Rome, and for sitting in council not having taken the oaths iv. 397
 - * He answers, that there was no law against going to Rome; and he might not disobey the king's commands iv. 397
 - * That he transacted nothing there concerning religion; and shews how serviceable he was to the English merchants while he resided at Rome iv. 398
 - * As to his sitting in council, the judges were of opinion, the king might dispense with the oaths iv. 399
 - * Complains he was illegally imprisoned at the Revolution iv. 399
 - * He is committed to the Tower by order of the house of commons, and confined close prisoner iv. 400
 - * He moves for a habeas corpus, and is admitted to bail iv. 400

CATESBY, Justice, xi. 218

CATHERINE, Queen to CHARLES I. i. 428

Characterised by the earl of Dorset and Sir John Finch

CATLIN, Sir ROBERT, Chief Justice B. R. iii. 603

His speech before judgment against Hickford for treason i. 118. See

A person was indicted in B. R. for saying judge Catlin was an unjust judge vii. 111

CAVENAGH, MAURICE,

Edmund Poor, and William Bowland, their trial in Ireland, for felony in stealing cows, March 7, 1688-89, 1 W. and M. iv. 408

The evidence iv. 408

Poor and Bowland guilty iv. 408

Cavenagh not guilty iv. 408

The convicts are put to read for their clergy iv. 408, 409

The ordinary returns them both non legit iv. 409

Judge Keating's speech before sentence iv. 409

Copy of a protection or pass given by an Irish officer to some notorious robbers of the county of Wicklow iv. 409

Letter sent by the lord deputy to the judges of assize iv. 410

Answer to the foregoing letter being drawn up by the grand jury, and entered in a book, on presentation of it to judge Lynch, he told them it was a reflection and scandal to their country; whereupon it was torn out of the book iv. 410

C A U S E S.

See ASHBY MATTHEW, and WILLIAM WHITE viii. 89

BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL, and Sir WILLIAM SOAME xi. 86

CALVIN ROBERT, and RICHARD SMITH, &c. xi. 86

CRAIG CAMPBELL, and the Earl of ANGLESEA

EAST INDIA COMPANY, and THOMAS SANDYS

ENTICK JOHN, Clerk, and NATHAN CARRINGTON and others.

FABRIGAS ANTHONY, and Governor MOSTYN.

GOODWIN Sir FRANCIS, and Sir JOHN FORTESCUE.

JAY JOHN, and JOHN TOPHAM viii. 1

LEACH DRYDEN, and JOHN MONEY and others.

MOORE HENRY, and CORPORATION of HASTINGS.

NORFOLK Duke of, and JOHN GERMAINE.

PARKINGTON Sir JOHN, and the Bishop of WORCESTER.

PRITCHARD Sir WILLIAM, and THOMAS PAPILLON.

SHIRLEY Doctor, and Sir JOHN FAGG.
YORKE Duke of, and TITUS OATES iii. 987. * See also ACTION.

* CELLIER, ELIZABETH,

- * Her trial for high treason, June 11, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 32
- * The indictment for conspiring the death of the king, and endeavouring to throw the plot upon other people iii. 32
- * Gadbury the astrologer's evidence iii. 32
- * Dangerfield called as a witness iii. 35
- * Briscoe's evidence against Dangerfield iii. 35
- * His pardon adjudged defective by the court, as to the outlawry of felony iii. 36
- * Mrs. Cellier is acquitted iii. 36
- * Dangerfield is taken into custody iii. 36
- * Her trial at the Old Bailey, September 11, 1680, 32 Car. II. for a libel iii. 89
- * The indictment for writing and publishing a libel called Malice defeated, reflecting on the king, the protestant religion, the government, magistrates, king's evidence, and the justice of the nation iii. 89, vi. 14. Ap.
- * Particularly it charges the murder of king Charles I. on the principles of the protestant religion; the prosecutors of the popish plot as enemies to the crown; charges the government with using racks and tortures to compel Prance and Corral to commit perjury; says, that it is dangerous to speak truth, and meritorious and gainful to give false evidence iii. 90
- * Mr. Dormer's speech before giving the evidence iii. 91
- * John Penny gives evidence of his buying the book of her, and her owning herself to be the author iii. 92
- * Downing the printer's evidence of his printing part of the book to fol. 22. by Mrs. Cellier's directions iii. 93
- * Stephens's evidence of her acknowledging herself the author, and that she dictated the words to an Amanuensis iii. 93
- * Fowler deposes he bought two books of her, and attests it was all false that was in the libel concerning his being at Newgate with some great lords, and the threats and promises that were used to Corral there iii. 94
- * His evidence that Corral said, he saw Sir Edmundbury Godfrey's body in a sedan, and they would have had him take the body into his coach iii. 94
- * The book and the indictment compared in court iii. 95
- * Prance deposes he was never tortured, but was very well used in Newgate iii. 96
- * Corral's wife deposes, that she was not suffered to see her husband in Newgate; that he had holes in his legs when he came out, and was in danger of being starved there iii. 96
- * Mrs. Cellier complains she had not time to get her witnesses; and urges in her defence, that if she had offended, it was ignorantly, for that she apprehended it lawful to publish what others told her iii. 97
- * To induce the court to be merciful, she shews the hazards she had run to serve his majesty; and that she lost a father and a brother, both in one day, in his service iii. 98
- * Mr. baron Weston directs the jury: he tells them, that to torture criminals was illegal, and never used in England since Campion the jesuit was put upon the rack, in the 20th year of the reign of queen Elizabeth iii. 98
- * The jury desire to have the book with them out of court, but are told they could have no papers out of court, that were not under seal, without the prisoner's consent; which she refused iii. 100
- * The jury, after a little time, returned, and brought the prisoner in guilty iii. 100
- * Mrs. Cellier is committed, and carried prisoner to Newgate iii. 100
- * Monday, September 13, 1680, Mrs. Cellier being brought into court, Mr. recorder, Sir George Jeffries, pronounced judgment on her iii. 101

CERTIORARI.

Certiorari moved for in B. R. to remove indictment against the Abbotsbury witnesses, refused x. 242

Motion for superfedeas thereto x. 242

Never superseded, because lord chief justice Lee never came into court afterwards, and refused till that happened x. 242

CERTIORARI and RETURNS on the TRIALS of PEERS. See

BALMERINO, ARTHUR lord ix. 506*

BYRON, WILLIAM lord x. 517*

CROMARTIE, GEORGE earl of ix. 590*

FERRERS, LAWRENCE earl of x. 478

KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM earl of ix. 590*

KINGSTON, ELIZABETH duchess dowager of xi. 198

MOHUN, CHARLES lord iv. 512. v. 137

MORLEY, THOMAS lord vii. 222

WARWICK, EDWARD earl of v. 137

CHADWICK, THOMAS,

His trial for treason, July 16, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 555

Evidence against him ix. 556

His counsel asked the witness, if he did not expect to save his life by swearing; the question objected to ix. 556

Found guilty, and executed at Kennington-Common ix. 557

Some account of him ix. 558

* CHALLENGE.

* No challenge to a peer i. 388. vii. 18, 422. n.

* Juror challenged in Scotland for having pre-judged the cause i. 471

* At the Old-Bailey iv. 748

* Where a juror has a possibility of an interest in the cause, good cause of challenge i. 952

* None may assist the prisoner in his challenges ii. 41. iv. 608

* No peremptory challenge but in capital cases ii. 808

* The king need not shew cause, till the panel is gone thro' iii. 469

* Contra iv. 423. v. 195

* Challenge

* See, if it be, in former cases in 1. State Trials, in Throckmorton's case.

- * Challenge to the array iii. 631
 * Challenge for want of freehold in London, not allowed iii. 135
 * No challenge can be to the favour against the king iii. 825
 * No challenge without cause, in case of a misdemeanour iv. 1
 * The having been upon the grand jury held to be a good cause of challenge iv. 2
 * That a juror has given a verdict against another in the same indictment, no good cause of challenge iv. 704
 * A suit at law between a prisoner and a jurymen no good cause of challenge, unless proved by a record vi. 59
 * A challenge for a misnomer in the pannel over-ruled vi. 59
 * The prisoner obliged to declare whether he will accept or challenge a jurymen before the king's counsel take their exception vi. 247
 * Two peremptory challenges allowed vi. 248
 Prisoners refusing to join in their challenges to be tried separately iv. 423.
 Agreeing to join, tried together ix. 720, x. 38
 Refused, though requested, to be tried separately, on severing in their challenges ix. 7
 No peremptory challenges on collateral issues ix. 582, 583
 Challenge to juror, because he gave his dogs the names of Oates and Bedlow, the king's witnesses; allowed a good exception to him iii. 317
 Peremptory challenge of thirty-five in petit treason ix. 11. x. 38
 Challenge to jurymen after oath administered, but before he had kissed the book, over-ruled vii. 321
 Prisoners may except to any of the jury for just cause, and in capital cases to a large number without cause Em. Pref. iii.
 One of the rebels, in 1746, challenged peremptorily, and for cause, so many of the jurors, that there was not a sufficient number left on the pannel to proceed on his trial; when the court, ore tenus, ordered a new pannel, and adjourned ix. 587
 On the day of adjournment, the sheriff returned a pannel of the same jurors that had served through the whole proceeding, those who had been challenged by the prisoner, or sworn before, included ix. 587. See JURY.
CHAMBERS, JAMES. See BERNARDI JOHN, Major.
CHAMBERS, RICHARD,
 Proceedings against him in the Star-chamber, for seditious speeches before the privy council, 5 Car. I. 1629 xi. 118
 Substance of the information xi. 118
 Substance of the defendant's answer xi. 118
 Witnesses examined, though defendant confessed xi. 118
 Cause heard, and defendant convicted xi. 118
 Sentence passed xi. 118
 Great difference of opinion about the fine xi. 118
 That difference stated xi. 118
 The submission which defendant refused to acknowledge xi. 118
 The king's writ imposing the fine xi. 118
 Defendant's plea thereto xi. 119
 Order of Exchequer for deferring filing the plea xi. 119
Hab. Corp. and return, whereon Chambers was committed to the Fleet xi. 119
Chambers died in 1658, at seventy years of age; after twenty-six years imprisonment, troubles, and losses in standing for the liberty of the subject xi. 120
 One of the charges in the articles of treason against sir Edward Berkley, justice B. R. was his declarations and conduct on the bench, on Chambers's action respecting ship-money i. 711
CHAMBERS.
 Information amendable by judge at chambers xi. 333
 CHANCELLOR.
 * The sense of lord chancellor's oath disputed i. 2: vi. 503, 620, 704, 736, 747
 The chancellor is the keeper of the king's conscience vii. 488
 The chancellor, as such, cannot commit iv. 555
 Formerly chancellors took money for the places of the masters in chancery vi. 650
 Chancellors who have been committed, indicted, impeached, fined, removed, or otherwise proceeded against, or punished for mal-practices, or crimes:

Arundel (archbishop)	More , sir Thomas
Bacon (lord)	Shaftesbury (earl)
Clarendon (earl)	Somers (lord)
Jefferies (lord)	Suffolk (earl)
Macclesfield (earl)	Wolsey (cardinal)

 See COVENTRY, Lord. FINCH, Sir JOHN: KEEPERS of the GREAT SEAL.
CHANCE MEDLEY.
 Homicide in shooting at a wild fowl, wherein no man hath any property, is not felony, but only chance medley vi. 222
CHANCERY.
 Chancery has power to renew a writ of appeal, if just so to do vii. 321. viii. 487
 Eight judges of opinion, that the lord keeper was not bound by the opinions of the majority of the judges, by him called to his assistance, but was at liberty to give judgment according to his own opinion; and among these judges was lord chief justice Holt; three judges were of a contrary opinion xi. 159, 160
CHARACTER.
 The nature and proper weight of evidence to character viii. 246
 The reason why particular facts are not to be given in evidence to impeach the character of a witness vi. 76, 316
CHARITY. See BELISARIUS.
 Lord chancellor Cowper encouraged charitable collections x. 88. Ap. See CAMPMAN. HENDLEY, Clerk.
 It is illegal to collect charity money without letters patent or briefs, the same being an invasion not only on the king's prerogative, but also upon the legislature; and though gathered on the bishop's circular letter, unless the same be authorized by a letter from the king, under his sign manual, directed to the bishop, permitting him so to do x. 88, gr. Ap. Indictment for collecting charity-money x. 87. Ap.

CHARITY SERMONS. See CAMPMAN. HENDLEY, Clerk.

CHARLES the FIRST.

His misfortunes were occasioned chiefly by the corruptions of the long robe iii. 222. vii. 480
 In the time of Charles the First the parliament took great offence at some attempts for free gifts to the crown x. 90. Ap.
 The statutes of 16 Car. I. are in some collections styled statutes of 16 and 17 Car. I. iv. 310. See * KING CHARLES. SHIP MONEY.
STUART FAMILY.

CHARLES the SECOND. See LANE JANE. WHITFORD Sir PAUL.

* CHARNELL, NATHANIEL iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* CHARNOCK, JOHN i. 126. See ABINGTON, & al.

* CHARNOCK, ROBERT iii. 515. See GREY, lord, & al.

* CHARNOCK, ANNE iii. 515. See GREY, lord, & al.

* CHARNOCK, ROBERT,

* Edward King, and Thomas Keyes, their trial for high-treason, in conspiring to assassinate king William, March 11, 1695, 8 W. III. iv. 562

* Charnock insists on the equity of being allowed counsel, a copy of the indictment, &c. according to the late act; which was then to take place in a few days; but is denied iv. 563

* The indictment read in Latin twice iv. 563

* The prisoners agree to join in their challenges, that they may be tried together iv. 566

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iv. 567

* The prisoners desire one witness may not hear what another deposes; granted iv. 569

* Porter's evidence of the design'd assassination iv. 569

* Charnock objects against Porter's evidence, that he owns himself an accomplice iv. 572

* But is over-ruled iv. 573

* De la Rue's evidence iv. 575

* Pendergraft's evidence iv. 580

* Charnock's defence, and remarks upon the evidence iv. 583

* Sir John Hawles, solicitor-general, his reply iv. 589

* Mr. Conyers and Mr. Cowper on the same side iv. 590

* Lord chief justice sums up the evidence iv. 591

* The prisoners convicted iv. 595

* Charnock's exceptions to the frame of the indictment iv. 596

* Sentence passed on the prisoners iv. 597

* Their dying speeches iv. 598: x. 67. Ap. See PORTER Captain GEORGE.

CHARTERS.

All the charters of England were seized, and not regranted, but at excessive rates, to starving the poor, who should have been fed with the money where with the new charters were purchased iv. 172. See id. 165

Jefferies, who owed his preferments, amongst the rest of his miscarriages, to the rape he committed upon the charter of the city of London, was obliged to be the messenger to carry it back again from whence it was taken iii. 628

The seizing the city and other charters, upon the pretences on which they were questioned, was without example. iv. 165. See QUO WARRANTO.

CHEAT.

Fitzharris was a cheat more than a traitor iv. 171

Records of proceedings against a cheat vi. 58, 59. Ap. See FULLER WILLIAM. HATHAWAT RICHARD. HURLEY PATRICK.

CHESSYRE, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,

His speech before evidence on the trial of Reason and Tranter, sheriff's officers, for murder, vi. 197

His speech on the trial of Edward Arnold viii. 292

His observations on the evidence viii. 313

His speech against Bambridge for murder ix. 146, 235

His speech against Huggins for murder ix. 113

His observations on Matthews's trial for treason ix. 706

CHETWYND, WILLIAM, Esq.

His trial for the murder of Thomas Rickets, on three indictments, at the Old Bailey, in October 1743, 16 Geo. II. ix. 527

Counsel's names for and against him ix. 527

Evidence against him ix. 527, &c.

Cases cited at length in his trial ix. 537

Opinions on the statute of stabbing, in his case ix. 538

Counsel for the prisoner called no witnesses, but made observations on the evidence ix. 532

Counsel for the crown made a reply ix. 535

Court was of opinion to have a special verdict found, which was done accordingly ix. 537

Case laid before Mr. Strange, for his opinion, whether murder or not, and if proper to bring an appeal, in case of a pardon ix. 538-9

Mr. Chetwynd's petition to lords justices ix. 539

Reference to attorney and solicitor-general ix. 540-1

He was pardoned, and pleaded the same at the King's Bench bar ix. 541

Mr. Strange's report of the case ix. 542

* CHICHESTER, THOMAS, Bishop of, i. 15.

See BRAMBRE.

CHIEF JUSTICES.

Resolved by all the judges of England, that the chiefs were to attend the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high steward, in their collars of

S. S. vii. 421

CHILD.

CHILD. See PARENT and CHILD.
CHIVALRY. See REA, Lord.
CHRISTMAS-DAY.
 This day enjoined to be kept as a fast i. 947
 * C H U R C H.
 * The church to determine what is true doctrine, and not the parliament i. 935
 * The clergy had a power heretofore of granting their own subsidies i. 851
CHURCHILL, Sir J O H N, Counsellor at Law,
 Was ordered into custody for a breach of privilege vii. 459
CHUTE, Mr. the Civilian,
 Spoke learnedly and home for his grace James, duke of Hamilton ii. 5
CIRCULAR LETTERS. See CHARITY.
CIRCUMSPECTE AGATIS, vii. 194. See 13
 Edw. I. ft. 4. in chronological series, under STATUTES.
CIVIL SUITS.
 They are tedious and dilatory, and from what cause Em. Pref. iii.
CLARE, Earl of,
 Proceedings in Star-chamber against him, for publishing a seditious and scandalous writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD, earl of.
 * CLARENDON, EDWARD Earl of,
 * Proceedings against him in the house of lords, 1663, 15 Car. II. ii. 554
 * Articles exhibited against him by the earl of Bristol ii. 554
 * The judges opinions, that the charge was not regularly brought in, nor contained matter of treason, if proved; with their reasons ii. 556, &c.
 * With which resolutions the house of lords concur ii. 558
 * Proceedings against him on an impeachment by the commons, 1667,
 19 Car. II. ii. 558
 * The heads of the commons charge against the earl of Clarendon ii. 560
 * Resolved, that the house had sufficient grounds to impeach the earl
 ii. 563
 * Resolved, to impeach him of high-treason on the 16th article, for betraying his majesty's counsels to his enemies ii. 567
 * Mr. Edward Seymour carries up the impeachment in general terms ii. 567
 * The lords refuse to commit the earl, because the impeachment was for treason in general ii. 568
 * The commons insist that a peer ought to be committed on a general impeachment ii. 569
 * Conference between the two houses upon that point ii. 570
 * The lords insist upon their refusal to commit him ii. 573
 * Which the commons resolve to be an obstruction of public justice ii. 577
 * A message from the lords that the earl was withdrawn ii. 577
 * The earl's petition to the house of lords communicated to the commons
 ii. 578
 * He insinuates that his estate was not so great as represented ii. 578
 * And that he was not the author of those counsels he was charged with
 ii. 578
 * His petition voted scandalous and seditious ii. 580
 * A bill brought into the house of lords for the earl's banishment ii. 582
 * The commons agree to the bill for his banishment ii. 584. See viii. 387
 His vindication of himself against the articles of treason, exhibited against him in parliament viii. 387
 Mr. Seymour's speech at the bar of the house of lords viii. 387
 The articles viii. 388
 His letter from Montpellier viii. 388
 His answer to the first article, that he designed a standing army viii. 389
 To the second, that he had said the king was a papist viii. 392
 To the third, setting forth the proceedings concerning the Canary patent
 viii. 392, 393
 To the fourth, that he had procured the imprisonment of the subject against law viii. 397
 To the fifth, of corruptly selling several offices viii. 397
 To the sixth, concerning the farming his majesty's customs viii. 397
 To the seventh, concerning receiving money from the vintners viii. 400
 To the eighth, concerning procuring several grants to himself and relations
 viii. 400
 To the ninth, concerning the introducing arbitrary government in his majesty's plantations viii. 400
 The case of the several grantees of the island of Barbadoes, fully stated
 viii. 401
 To the tenth, for frustrating the proposal for securing St. Christopher's,
 &c. and reducing the French plantations viii. 405
 To the eleventh, concerning the sale of Dunkirk viii. 405
 To the twelfth, concerning the undue altering and erasing the inrollment of his majesty's letters patent to one doctor Crowthor viii. 407
 To the thirteenth, for arbitrarily examining and threatening his majesty's subjects viii. 407
 To the fourteenth, for issuing quo warrantos against several corporations, and taking money to renew their charters viii. 407, 408
 To the fifteenth, for procuring the bills of settlement for Ireland, and taking money for the same viii. 408
 A narrative of the whole transaction viii. 409
 The names of the commissioners for the bill of settlement viii. 416
 The commissioners disliked viii. 417
 They attend his majesty, and their defence viii. 418
 The case of the marquis of Antrim viii. 419
 To the sixteenth, for betraying his majesty in the treaties, &c. relating to the late war viii. 425
 The treaty with the Dutch upon which the peace was made, its inducements, progress and conclusion, set forth viii. 426
 To the seventeenth, for advising the fatal dividing the fleet, about June,
 1666, viii. 432
 His reasons for withdrawing himself viii. 434
 His commission of lord-high steward, on the trial of Thomas, lord Morley, in Latin vii. 422

His procession on that solemn occasion vii. 423
CLARINGTON.
 The constitutions of Claringdon xi. 72
CLARK, ROBERT, Baron of the Exchequer,
 His argument concerning impositions. See BATES JOHN.
CLARK, THOMAS,
 Opens case for Henry Moore, against mayor, jurats and commonalty of town and port of Hastings x. 138. Ap.
CLARK, WILLIAM. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.
CLERK of ASSIZE.
 He is constantly joined with the judges in the commissions of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, for the trial of criminals, even for capital offences vi. 706
 * CLEMENT, GREGORY. See REGICIDES.
 * C L E R G Y.
 * The case of a peer as to benefit of clergy, in buggery and rape i. 388
 * A woman could not have the benefit of clergy ii. 502
 * A peer who has his clergy, not to be burnt in the hand ii. 655
 * One convicted of felony, and admitted to his clergy, is restored to his credit iii. 45
 * Action lies for charging a man with a crime after he has had his clergy, or a pardon v. 168
 * The king might pardon the burning in an appeal v. 169
 * A clergyman was not to be burnt in the hand v. 170
 * The original of clergy, and how it came to be extended to laymen v. 171
 * Burning, as well as reading, was necessary to restore a man to his credit
 v. 171
 Clergyman to be divested of his canonical habit by the ecclesiastical court only viii. 475
 When canonical election began first in England xi. 72
 In the time of king Hen. II. the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the secular power xi. 72
 The proceedings on the ceremony of degrading a clergyman vii. 648
 The judges bowed, in token of their consent that a peer should have the benefit of clergy vii. 428
 Peerefs intitled to benefit of clergy, on conviction for bigamy xi. 264
COBBY, JOHN. See JACKSON WILLIAM.
COBHAM, Lord.
 How his trial was managed does not appear vii. 63, 64, &c. See OLD.
CASTLE Sir JOHN.
COFFEE-HOUSES. See LIBELS.
COIN. See MONEY.
 * COKE, ARUNDEL, Esq.
 * His trial at the assizes for the county of Suffolk, with John Woodburne, for disfiguring Edward Crispe, gent. March 13, 1721, 8 Geo. I. vi. 212
 This gentleman, who was of the long robe, pleaded, that his intent was to murder vi. 219. * See WOODBURNE JOHN. vi. 60. Ap.
COKE, Sir EDWARD,
 Enforces the charge against the earls of Essex and Southampton for high treason i. 199
 His speech on the trial of sir Walter Raleigh for high treason, in conspiring to depose the king, and for publishing a book against his majesty's title i. 214
 Is interrupted by sir Walter i. 214
 Affirms, that circumstantial evidence alone is sufficient to convict a man of high treason i. 219
 Gives sir Walter scurrilous language i. 216, 220
 Is reproved by the court i. 223. Em. Pref. i.
 Jeffs was indicted for exhibiting an infamous libel against sir Edward Coke, late chief justice B. R. i. 722. ix. 314
 His books were published by special orders and authority of parliament for good law ii. 21, 288. v. 114. vii. 358
 His institutes cited ii. 89
 A Gray's Inn poet translated Coke upon Lyttelton into rhyme iii. 773
 Lord chief justice Coke differs from mr. attorney Coke iii. 775
 The case between James and Ruilech, in 4 rep. 17. b. cited at large, respecting innuendos iii. 1054
 The famous saying of queen Elizabeth of him as attorney general
 iv. 176. Em. Pref. i.
 Gives an exact and particular account of the popish plot i. 235, 249,
 250, 251
 Shews the aggravation the crime of Garnet, tried for treason, in promoting the gun-powder plot, was attended with i. 249
 Sir Edward's reply to his defence i. 260
 Passes sentence i. 248
 His speech, on passing sentence on Weston for murder i. 332
 His speech before sentence, on the proceedings against sir John Hollis, &c.
 for traducing the public justice i. 337
 His speech on the arraignment of sir Thomas Monson for murder i. 347
 The lord chief justice was rebuked for his indiscretion, having, on this arraignment, let drop some insinuations, that Overbury's death had somewhat in it of retaliation; as if sir Thomas Overbury had been guilty of the same crime against prince Henry; and before the next year expired, sir Edward was removed from his post i. 347
 A mistake in his third institute corrected vi. 735; 759
 His speech on the trial of sir Christopher Blunt, and others vii. 49
 Urges a correspondence between the earl of Essex, sir Christopher and Tyrone vii. 54
 He told Henry Cuffe, that he was the arrantest traitor that ever came to the bar; and added, that he would give him such a cuff as should set him down, and thereupon called to have read the deceased earl of Essex's confession vii. 59
 His report of lord Sanguhar's case vii. 91
 He informed against Fowth in the Star-chamber, ex tenus, for petitioning his

His majesty against lord chancellor Ellesmere, for granting an injunction for staying of a suit at the common law, and being convicted, upon his own confession, he received a sharp censure vii. 104

His speech on censuring Wraynham for slandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 108

The professors of the law in all ages will be much bound to sir Edward Coke vii. 146

Sir Edward Coke said, that of his own knowledge, lord Anderson's reports were of his [Anderson] own hand, and no flying report of a young student vii. 148, 161, 178

Coke of one mind when a judge and in favour, and of another when out of court and of favour vii. 149. n.

His speech in the house of commons, relating to the imprisoning the subject by the king's command vii. 144

His argument at a conference with the lords on the same subject vii. 169

His speech at presenting the petition of right vii. 197

He declared in the house of commons, that he thought the duke of Buckingham was the cause of all the miseries in the reign of Charles the first vii. 214

His lordship advises defendant never to demur to declaration, if there be hopes of matter of fact vii. 450

The authority of his 12th report doubted vii. 634

The 12th part of his Reports censured xi. 30

His report of Calvin's case xi. 86

Informations in Star-chamber for libels began to be frequent about 42 and 43 Eli. when that consummate lawyer sir Edward Coke was attorney-general to that renowned queen ix. 313

Lord-keeper Somers observed, that sir Edward Coke, in his Reports, does not confine himself to the case before the court, but does generally lay together all the learning in the law which comes under that title, so as to make them in nature of common-places xi. 151, 152

The encroachment of the church of Rome on the king's ecclesiastical jurisdiction is historically discussed in lord Coke's case of the king's ecclesiastical law, in 5th rep. xi. 75

His active zeal as attorney-general in the prosecution of the conspirators in the gunpowder plot, gave occasion to a volume of animadversions by the famous Jesuit, the father Parsons; but the asperity with which lord Coke was treated did not provoke a reply, only a short notice of the work in the preface to the 6th report xi. 75

C O K E, Lord,

His speech on lord Levat's trial for treason ix. *629

* C O L E, J O H N,

* His trial for the murder of doctor Clenche, Sept. 2, 1692, 4 W. and M. iv. 506

* The indictment. [See the trial of Harrison] iv. 488

* The witness deposes what her deceased husband told her iv. 507

* Which is contradicted by another witness iv. 507

* Mr. justice Dalben directs the jury iv. 509

* The prisoner is acquitted iv. 509

* C O L E M A N, E D W A R D,

* His trial for high-treason at the King's-Bench bar, Nov. 27, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 660

* The prisoner makes no challenges to the jurors ii. 660

* Indictment for compassing the death of the king, and conspiring to subvert the established religion and government ii. 660

* The overt-act, writing to Le Chaise to procure the French king's assistance in it ii. 661. See vi. 330

* Mr. serjeant Maynard opens the evidence in general ii. 662

* Sir William Jones, attorney-general, his speech before evidence ii. 663

* The people greatly prejudiced against the papists at this time ii. 665

* Oates deposes that he carried the letters which Coleman wrote into France ii. 666

* Oates's evidence of the consult at the White Horse tavern ii. 667

* The design of murdering the king communicated to mr. Coleman ii. 667

* The Irish in the conspiracy ii. 668

* Coleman privy to the design of murdering the king at Windsor ii. 668

* To the design of poisoning the king by sir George Wakeman ii. 669

* Coleman's commission to be secretary of state ii. 669

* Coleman objects, that Oates said before the council he did not know him; and now deposes he was very intimate with him ii. 670

* Oates's answer to that objection ii. 670

* Bedloe deposes he had carried letters from Coleman to Le Chaise ii. 673

* Coleman's letters and papers proved ii. 674

* Mr. Coleman's first long letter to Le Chaise, of the state of affairs in England ii. 675

* Penial laws, how they came to be put in execution so severely in king Charles's reign ii. 678

* Le Chaise's letter to Coleman, in answer to Coleman's long letter ii. 681

* Another letter prepared by Coleman in the name of the duke ii. 684

* Coleman tells Le Chaise, they have great hopes of subduing the northern heresy ii. 685

* Mr. solicitor sums up the evidence ii. 687

* The chief justice's directions to the jury ii. 689

* Coleman is convicted ii. 692

* Receives sentence the day following ii. 692

* Before it is pronounced, the chief justice makes a speech to the prisoner ii. 693

* Shews him, that he who brings in popery, consequently brings in a foreign authority; and that he who enters on an ill action, is answerable for all the consequences ii. 693

* Shews him, that there was no hope of pardon, the nation was so alarmed ii. 694

* Mr. Coleman makes a speech in answer to the chief justice's ii. 694

* Denies any design against the king's life, or to subvert the government ii. 695

* His behaviour at execution ii. 695

* The record of his conviction in English at large iii. 120

C O L L A T E R A L S. S.

Resolved by all the judges of England, that the chiefs were to attend the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high steward, in their collars of S. S. vii. 421. See ROBES.

C O L L A T E R A L I S S U E S.

No peremptory challenges on collateral issues ix. 582, 583

Counsel allowed upon collateral issues ix. 582, 583

* C O L L E D G E, S T E P H E N,

* His trial for high-treason before the lord Norreys, the lord chief justice North, mr. justice Jones, mr. justice Raymond, and mr. justice Levins, at Oxford, August 17, 1681, 33 Car. II. by a special commission of oyer and terminer iii. 341. See iv. 173

* His petition to his majesty while he was in the Tower, that Smith and West might come to him, and that he might have pen, ink, and paper, in order to prepare for his trial iii. 340

* An order of council that he should have what he petitioned for iii. 341

* His petition that he may have a copy of his indictment, and counsel and a solicitor assigned him iii. 340

* An order of council that his friends and relations may come to him iii. 340

* The indictment for conspiring the king's death, and the subversion of the government; the overt-acts, his providing arms at Oxford, and declaring his intentions to seize the king's person, &c. iii. 341, 342

* Notice of trial not necessary in capital cases iii. 343

* His papers which he had prepared for his defence, taken from him as he was brought into court iii. 343

* The court tell him they knew nothing of it, but that nobody had any thing to do to give him papers; and that no one can solicit for one accused of high-treason, unless he be assigned by the court iii. 344

* He urges, that if he had his papers, he should offer some matter of law as to the sufficiency of the indictment; and says, the keeper who took them from him, took them under a pretence of bringing them to his lordship iii. 345

* A person standing mute in high-treason, shall have judgment as a traitor iii. 345

* One indicted of high-treason, for soliciting for one who was accused of high-treason iii. 347

* Colledge objects, that he is indicted with the addition of carpenter, whereas in truth he is a joyner; but it was pretended, the law knows no difference between a carpenter and a joyner iii. 347

* Having insisted strenuously for a long time that he might have his papers again, and the court persisting in refusing them; at length he pleads not guilty iii. 348

* Having pleaded, he renews his request for his papers, and the court command them to be brought into court, that they might peruse them; and finding directions in them from a third hand for what he should insist on as to matter of law, and several libels upon the government, they ordered them to be lodged in the hands of the sheriff's son; and that the prisoner should have recourse to such of them as were necessary to his defence, and might take copies of them, but not of the libels: and Aaron Smith, the prisoner's solicitor, who brought them to him, is made to give security to attend the court during the trial, and to answer the misdemeanour; and Starkey, his other solicitor, is sent for into court iii. 349

* The court adjourn till the afternoon iii. 350

* Mr. North opens the indictment, and mr. attorney the evidence iii. 351

* The king's witnesses called iii. 352

* They are ordered to be examined apart, at the prisoner's request iii. 352

* Dugdale's evidence iii. 352

* Evidence of the prisoner's affirming the king himself was concerned in the popish plot, and in Godfrey's death iii. 353

* The prisoner gave the king the nickname of Rowley iii. 353

* Ribbons wore by the conspirators, with the words 'no popery, no slavery,' in them iii. 354

* Several ballads and libels of the prisoner's upon the government produced in evidence against him iii. 354

* Smith's evidence of several warm expressions used by the prisoner iii. 359

* Haynes's evidence to the same purpose iii. 360

* Turberville's evidence that he said, if the king began, they had several at Oxford ready to secure him iii. 363

* Mr. Masters and sir William Jennings's evidence iii. 364, 365

* Colledge enters upon his defence iii. 365

* He objects that the witnesses prove facts done in another county iii. 366

* The opinion of the court thereupon iii. 366

* He calls his witnesses iii. 368

* To the discredit of Haynes iii. 368

* To the discredit of Turberville iii. 372

* Dr. Oates testifies against all the king's witnesses iii. 374

* Which they all contradict upon their oaths iii. 375

* Evidence against Smith iii. 376

* The chief justice tells him, he must not call one witness to disprove what another of his witnesses had deposed iii. 373

* Colledge demands of the court, if the king's counsel may whisper among themselves iii. 390

* The king's counsel call more witnesses iii. 390

* He makes his observations on the evidence iii. 391

* The court order him to keep to the point, and not open things he had no evidence of iii. 393

* The facts may be proved either before or after the time laid in the indictment iii. 394

* The prisoner justifying the rebellion of the parliament, was told by

- the court they were declared rebels by act of parliament iii. 396
- * The prisoner's design to assist in seizing the king at Oxford, proved by Dugdale and Turberville iii. 398
 - * Mr. solicitor sums up the evidence for the king iii. 399
 - * Mr. serjeant Jefferies's observations of the evidence for the king iii. 403
 - * Evidence given of facts out of the county where the indictment is laid iii. 403
- Oates* produced as a witness for the prisoner to invalidate the testimony of Dugdale, Turberville, and Smith, who were formerly brought to support his own credit as to the popish plot iii. 404
- * Mr. serjeant Jefferies observes, that, notwithstanding the cry of the Irish and popish evidence against the prisoner, the king's witnesses were all protestants, and but one of them an Irishman iii. 405
 - * The chief justice directs the jury iii. 406
 - * He tells them, that whoever imagine to depose the king, or to imprison him, are in law guilty of imagining the king's death iii. 406
 - * That if one witness gives evidence of an overt-act of treason in the county where the criminal is indicted, and another witness gives evidence of another overt-act of the same treason in another county, these are two witnesses, as the law requires, and sufficient to support the indictment iii. 407
 - * Colledge complains that mr. attorney and mr. solicitor were an hour and a half with the grand jury iii. 408
 - * The jury have two bottles of sack at the bar before they go out iii. 408
 - * He is convicted iii. 408
 - * Lord chief justice's speech before sentence iii. 408
 - * Judgment is pronounced on him as a traitor iii. 409
 - * He is executed a fortnight after iii. 409
 - * His behaviour at execution, and dying speech iii. 410. See viii. 64. n.
- Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 173, 176, 177, 185, 186, 190, 191, 194, 203, 204, 205
- Colledge* was tried on a vicious indictment iv. 177. See iii. 769
- "That innocence would defend," was a saying as mortal to him as was the letter Θ amongst the Greeks iv. 177. See ix. 310
- His trial was signed for publication by lord chief justice North iv. 189
- The case of Colledge every one hath thought hard and barbarous vi. 428. See iii. 343. n.
- COLLIER, JEREMY, a Nonjuring Parson, Proceedings against him, for absolving sir W. Parkins and sir John Friend at Tyburn, 3 Ap. 1696, 7 Will. III. x. 43. Ap.
- COLLINS, DARBY. See GOLDING.
- COLLINS, JOHN. See POTE Sir GEOFFREY.
- COLPEPER. See DENEW.
- COMBAT. See REA, Lord.
- COMBES, ———, iii. 329
- His speech before evidence, on Busby's trial
- COMINES, PHILIP, xi. 54, 61
- Passages from that French historian
- COMMENTARIES.
- The commentaries of Plowden ascertain of what authority those ancient writers, Bracton, Glanville, and Hengham, are in the law vii. 235. See BRACON. GLANVILLE. HENGHAM.
- The commentaries of mr. justice Blackstone commended xi. 251
- They give the rise, and a short history of the doctrine of amendments xi. 332
- COMMISSIONS.
- The commission of Mary queen of Scots to try James earl Bothwell, for the murder of her husband Henry lord Darnley i. 77
- Commission for the trial of Mary queen of Scots i. 145
- Commission for the execution of Mary queen of Scots i. 161
- Peer may be tried by commission, during prorogation of parliament iv. 212
- Lord high steward to be judge on trial by commission iv. 215
- On trial by commission lords cannot adjourn or separate, till they have given a verdict iv. 232
- Commissions wherein the masters in chancery are joined with the judges, to hear and determine causes in absence of the chancellor, to punish contempt, to execute and administer the jurisdiction in the Chancery iv. 505, 506
- Commissions of judges v. 421. ix. 280
- COMMISSIONS of HIGH STEWARDS.
- The commission of Edward earl of Clarendon, lord chancellor, for the trial of Thomas lord Morley, for murder, in Latin vii. 422
- The commission to Thomas marquis of Carmarthen, president of the council, for the trial of Charles lord Mobun, for murder, in Latin iv. 510
- The commission of John lord Somers, chancellor, for the trial of Edward earl of Warwick, and of Charles lord Mobun, for murder, in Latin v. 137
- The commission of William lord Cowper, chancellor, for the trial of James earl of Derwentwater, William lord Widdrington, William earl of Nithisdale, George earl of Winton, Robert earl of Carnwath, William viscount Kenmure, and William lord Nairn, upon an impeachment of the commons for treason, in Latin v. 5
- His lordship's commission for the trial of Robert earl of Oxford, upon impeachment for treason, in Latin v. 102
- The commission of Philip lord Hardwicke, chancellor, for the trial of William earl of Kilmarnock, George earl of Cromartie, and Arthur lord Balmorino, upon a special act of parliament, for treason, in English ix. 590
- His lordship's commission for the trial of Simon lord Lovat, upon an impeachment of the commons, for treason, in English ix. 621
- The commission of Robert lord Henley, keeper, for the trial of Lawrence earl Ferrers, for murder, in English x. 479
- The commission to his lordship, as earl of Northampton, and chancellor, for the trial of William lord Byron, for murder, in English x. 517
- The commission to Henry earl Bathurst, chancellor, for the trial of Elizabeth duchess dowager of Kingsen, for bigamy, in English xi. 198, 199
- * COMMITMENT.
- * A peer impeached for treason generally, the lords refuse to commit him ii. 567, 725
 - * One committed by the house of peers refused to be bailed by the King's bench ii. 622, 754
 - * The cause of commitment ought to appear ii. 618
 - * A peer may be committed for treason, felony, or a breach of the peace iv. 315
 - * Whether a commitment to the custody of a messenger be legal iv. 557. See KENDALL.
- For publishing seditious, too general i. 210
- Though commitment by lords is ill, it cannot be examined by court of K. B. ii. 622
- In case sessions of parliament be concluded, peer committed by house of lords may be discharged ii. 622
- Every commitment presumed to be pursuant to power of party committing iv. 311
- Commitment always upon accusation made on oath in hearing of party accused iv. 177, 181
- The remedies for an illegal commitment Em. Pref. iv.
- Chancellor, or keeper of the great seal, cannot commit iv. 555
- Several copies of commitments x. 71. Ap. See CROSBY BRASS, mayor of London.
- COMMON COUNCIL.
- Act of common council not act of corporation iii. 572
- Common council chosen by non-freemen as well as freemen iii. 572
- COMMON FAME.
- Whether common fame be sufficient for a parliamentary accusation ii. 559. See ii. 641.
- Common fame is but of little weight vi. 414
- COMMON LAW.
- Though acts of parliament may give a remedy, they take not away the common law remedy vii. 432, 440
- A general immemorial usage, not inconsistent with any statute, especially if the result of evident necessity, and tending to public safety, seems to be part of the common law of England xi. 350, 351
- COMMONS.
- Vote of commons cannot alter the law iii. 289. iv. 170
- Jury doubt whether they may try a matter which the commons voted should not be tried by any inferior court iii. 227, 228. See id. 288
- Their petition of grievances xi. 62. * See PARLIAMENT.
- COMPARISON OF HANDS. See SIDNEY ALGERGON.
- * COMPTON, Dr. HENRY, Lord Bishop of LONDON,
- * His trial before the High Commission Court, 1686, 2 Jac. II. iv. 247
 - * The ecclesiastical commission iv. 247
 - * The king's letter, enjoining him to suspend Dr. Sharp for disobedience to the king's orders iv. 249
 - * The bishop's answer iv. 249
 - * Dr. Sharp's petition iv. 249
 - * The bishop appears before the commissioners iv. 250
 - * Dr. Oldys's speech in behalf of the bishop iv. 252
 - * Dr. Hodges on the same side iv. 252
 - * Dr. Price for the bishop iv. 252
 - * Dr. Newton on the same side iv. 253
 - * The bishop suspended iv. 253. See v. 748
- COMPTON, Mr. Baron,
- His opinion respecting bailing Bambridge ix. 229
- CONFERENCE.
- A peer's speech at a free conference, resolved scandalous, and reflecting on the house of commons viii. 530
- CONFESSIONS.
- Confessions of attainted persons read i. 130, 136, &c.
- Prisoner's confession out of court will not convict him in Scotland ii. 629
- Confession strongest evidence against the party, in Scotland ii. 631
- Confession must be taken entire, or not at all iii. 474. n. See MAXIMS.
- Lord chancellor Bacon's confession of his bribery and corruption i. 382.
- * See ARNOLD EDWARD. * EVIDENCE.
- CONINGSMARK, CHARLES JOHN Count,
- Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial and of others iv. 199
- Though he was the most guilty, he escaped punishment iv. 199
- Count Coningsmark had a bad cause and a great deal of money v. 101.
- See * iii. 466. * BOROSKI.
- CONSCIENCE.
- The justification of Felton, who killed the duke of Buckingham, was, that he was persuaded in conscience that he did well in so doing v. 126. See FELTON.
- Ravaillac*, who killed Henry the IVth of France, justified the murder by his conscience, and said he had done a good thing v. 126
- CONSERVATORS OF THE PEACE.
- By common law, there were only conservators of the peace, whose power was very short of that of justices now-a-days iv. 562. n. xi. 319
- CONSPIRACY.
- Lane* and Knox were punished very mildly for a conspiracy iii. 220. iv. 171. vii. 477, 483
- Notorious conspiracy against the life and honour of the duke of Buckingham, in charging his grace with sodomy, punished only by a slight fine and pillory iii. 220. vii. 483
- An ambassador is not privileged for a conspiracy against the state, in the judgment of lord Bacon ii. 8
- A conspiracy to procure two persons to rob one of the conspirators, with intent to cause them to be convicted of, and executed for, the said robbery, in order to obtain the rewards for apprehending highwaymen, not a capital offence x. 448
- Indictment for assault and conspiracy with intent to wound and beat viii. 178. See ATTERBURY FRANCIS. BRITON RICHARD. DANEW

DANEW NATHANIEL. MEAD WILLIAM. MERRIAM JOHN. PEN WILLIAM. PLUNKETT JOHN. SCOTS, MARY Queen of.

CONSTABLE, Sir ROBERT,

Sir John Bulmer and his lady, Sir Francis Pigot, Sir Stephen Hamilton, Sir Thomas Percy and Ash, with the abbots of Whalley, Jervaux, Eridlington, Lenton, Woburn, and Kingstead, and Maekrall the monk, with sixteen more, were indicted of treason for the Lincolnshire rebellion xi. 24

Substance of indictments xi. 24

They were all found guilty, and had judgment of treason xi. 24

They were executed xi. 24

Lady Bulmer was burnt xi. 24

* CONSTABLE, JOHN, v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.

* CONSULT. See OVERT ACT.

CONTEMPT.

Prisoners fined for standing before court with their hats on ii. 611

Proceedings against the countess of Shrewsbury for refusing to answer before a select council, or to sign her examination i. 338. xi. 108

Proceedings against Whitelocke for contempt of prerogative xi. 106

In cases of contempt to courts of justice, no presentment is necessary, not even to convict; for if done in facie curiæ, a record may be made of it, and punishment judicially inflicted and executed immediately ix. 309

A peer was committed by the court for saying, "I am sorry to see rhetoric rule where law should" vii. 111. ix. 310. See ATTOR-

NIES AT LAW. DAWSON. DE BRUCE. HARRISON

THOMAS. LEECH BENJAMIN.

CONTRACT.

The rules of law are against slavery by contract xi. 344. See NE-

GRO. SLAVERY. SOMERSET. VILLENAGE.

CONVICTION.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for a second offence, indictment must recite record of first conviction, which must be proved, but matter of it shall never be re-examined x. 435. * See TRIAL.

CONVOCAATION.

The convocation, as the law now stands, may proceed in examining, censuring, and condemning such tenets as are declared to be heresy by the laws of this realm, together with the authors and maintainers thereof; as resolved by all the judges of England viii. 570

The address of the bishops to the queen, for the opinion of the judges, how far the convocation might go in examining, censuring, and condemning such tenets as were declared by law to be heresy, with the authors and maintainers of them viii. 569

The opinions of the judges delivered in to the queen, pursuant to that address viii. 570

CONYERS, TRISTRAM,

Of counsel for the crown on the trial of Charnock iv. 590

His speech before evidence on the trial of Hatbaway v. 483

COOK, Mr. Secretary of State,

His speech on sentencing Prynne for writing Histriomastix i. 426

COOK, JOHN, Solicitor General to the Commonwealth,

Maintained that all just power was derived from the people i. 998

That all princes who claim by conquest are tyrants, for that conquest and long descent cannot create a title; and that till people consent, and voluntarily submit to government, they are slaves, and may free themselves when they can i. 998

That possession is a vain plea when matter of right is the question, for right can never die i. 1002

That there cannot be two supreme or co-ordinate powers in one nation i. 1002

That the people are the king's liege lords, and that it is treason in his majesty to set up his standard against the people i. 1003. See RESISTANCE.

His speech as solicitor general for the commonwealth, which he intended to have delivered on king Charles the first's trial, if his majesty had pleaded i. 997

Opens the evidence on the trial of Love ii. 92

COOKE, JOHN,

His speech for Lilburne at the bar of the house of lords vii. 276. See

* ii. 341. * REGICIDES.

* COOK, PETER,

* His trial for high treason, at the Old Bailey, May 9, 1696, 8 W. III.

iv. 738

* The indictment for compassing the king's death, and adhering to the king's enemies iv. 753

* The overt-acts, consulting and agreeing to promote an invasion and insurrection, and sending Charnock to invite over foreign troops, and providing arms, &c. iv. 753

* Jurors examined whether they have a freehold iv. 738

* In London of ten pounds a-year iv. 750

* The trial put off for want of jurors iv. 741

* The prisoner's counsel object, that there ought not to have been a new panel, but a tales awarded iv. 741

* Which is over-ruled iv. 745

* Exceptions taken to the indictment iv. 745

* He offers to ask every man before he is sworn, whether he has said he believes him guilty iv. 748

* But upon debate the question is refused iv. 749

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence iv. 754

* Captain Porter's evidence, that he met Sir John Fenwick and others at two meetings, and agreed to invite King James over iv. 755, 756

* Goodman's evidence to the same purpose iv. 757

* Mr. serjeant Darnel's defence of the prisoner iv. 758

* A record of conviction read against Goodman, for conspiring to poison the dukes of Grafton and Northumberland iv. 759

* Evidence to prove that the company was broke up at one of the meetings, before Goodman came in iv. 761

* The king's and prisoner's witnesses confronted iv. 766

* Sir Bartholomew Shower's defence of the prisoner iv. 767

* The prisoner's own defence iv. 769

* Sir John Hawles, solicitor-general, his reply for the king iv. 770

* Lord chief justice's directions iv. 772

* The prisoner convicted iv. 775

* Receives sentence iv. 776

* Afterwards pardoned, upon condition of transporting himself for life iv. 776

COOK, the Reverend SHADRACK, a Nonjuring Clergyman,

Proceedings against him for absolving traitors at the gallows, April 3, 1696, 7 W. III. x. 43. Ap.

C O P I E S,

Never allowed as evidence, unless made by a proper sworn officer, known in the law, and to which any one may have access i. 744. vi. 517.

See viii. 464, 470, 471.

COPLEY, ANTONY. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

C O P Y O F I N D I C T M E N T.

Arguments on motion for copy of indictment iii. 1052

When court declare their opinion that a prosecution is malicious, they frequently order the prisoner a copy of his indictment ix. 385

CORBET, Colonel, one of the Regicides,

Seized at Delft, and brought to England viii. 370

His account of the proceedings against him at Westminster viii. 372

His speech at his execution viii. 377

CORBET, Sir JOHN. See DARNEL Sir THOMAS.

C O R B E T, R I C H A R D,

Proceedings against him on appeal for murder ix. 151

* CORKER, JAMES, ii. 919. See viii. 453. WAKEMAN, & al. ANDERSON, & al.

* CORNISH, HENRY, Esq. iii. 630. See EXAMINATIONS.

PILKINGTON, & al.; also viii. 64. n.

* CORNISH, HENRY, Esq.

* John Fernley, William Ring, and Elizabeth Gaunt, their arraignment, the 19th of October, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 130

* John Fernley indicted for high-treason, in harbouring and concealing John Burton, a traitor iv. 131

* William Ring indicted for high-treason, in harbouring Joseph Kelloway and Henry Lawrence, traitors and rebels iv. 131

* Henry Cornish set to the bar; he objected that he had not half a day's notice of trial; but was told he must plead, before he could offer any thing iv. 132

* The indictment read, being for high-treason, in promising to be aiding and assisting to the duke of Monmouth, lord Russell, and others attainted of treason iv. 132

* Ring's trial comes on iv. 134

* A copy of the record of the conviction of Kelloway and Lawrence, whom the prisoner harboured, produced and sworn, and proved he received them between the time of the treason committed, and their conviction iv. 134

* Ring's examination before the lord mayor read against him iv. 135

* Richardson proves that the persons convicted were the same persons that the prisoner harboured iv. 136

* The prisoner in his defence said, he did not know the persons so harboured were rebels iv. 136

* Fernley's trial comes on iv. 137

* The record of Burton's outlawry for high-treason, whom the prisoner harboured, was produced iv. 137

* Burton himself an evidence that Fernley the prisoner harboured him iv. 137

* Burton's pardon produced, to qualify him to be an evidence iv. 139

* He pleads in his defence, that he intended to discover Burton, and get the reward iv. 139

* Elizabeth Gaunt arraigned iv. 142

* She was indicted for high-treason, in concealing the said Burton, assisting him to escape, and giving him 5l. in money iv. 142

* Ring and Fernley convicted iv. 142

* Mr. Cornish moves to put off his trial, having had but short notice; and is told by the court, that a prisoner cannot insist upon any notice iv. 143

* Pen and ink never allowed the prisoner, but upon petition iv. 143

* The court tell him they cannot defer the trial, without the king's counsel consent iv. 143

* Mr. Cornish is set aside iv. 144

* Mrs. Gaunt's trial comes on iv. 144

* Burton's account of his concern in the Rye-House plot, and of Mrs. Gaunt's assisting him to escape iv. 144

* Mrs. Gaunt's defence iv. 146

* She is convicted iv. 147, 156

* Mr. Cornish's trial comes on iv. 147

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iv. 147

* Rumsey deposes he saw the prisoner at the consult with the duke of Monmouth, lord Russell, &c. at Mr. Sheppard's; and that the declaration was read to him, and he approved it, and said, That poor interest he had he would join with it iv. 148

* An accomplice in treason a good witness, till he is indicted iv. 149

* Goodenough, who was outlawed and pardoned, allowed to be a witness, though the prisoner objected, nothing could restore him to his credit but an act of parliament, unless the outlawry were reversed iv. 149

* Goodenough deposes, that, talking of an insurrection, and seizing the Tower, the prisoner said he would do what he could iv. 149

* Mr. Cornish's defence iv. 150

* He calls witnesses to his reputation iv. 151

* A trial printed by authority not admitted as evidence iv. 153

* Sir Thomas Jones, lord chief justice, his charge to the jury iv. 154

* A witness examined, after the jury had withdrawn and returned iv. 156

* Sheppard deposes the prisoner was at his house but once when the duke of Monmouth was there; and then no paper was read to him, for they did not take him to be one of the company iv. 157

* And

- * And that he knew nothing of the design iv. 157
- * Rumsey swears, on the contrary, that mr. Sheppard held the candle while the declaration was read to him iv. 157
- * Cornish convicted, and the jury find 140l. due to the prisoner from mr. Sheppard iv. 159
- * Eliz. Gaunt receives sentence iv. 159
- * Sir Thomas Jenner, recorder, his speech before judgment iv. 160
- * Sentence pronounced upon Ring, Fernley, and Cornish iv. 160
- * The dying speeches of mr. Cornish and mrs. Gaunt iv. 160
- Sir John Hawles's* remarks on his trial iv. 177, 186, 200
- * "That innocence would defend" was a saying as mortal to him, as was the letter Θ among the Greeks iv. 177
- His trial was signed by lord chief justice Jones for publication iv. 189
- The usage of Cornish was very rigorous iv. 204
- The legislature declared, that the treason committed by mr. alderman Cornish was a pretended treason, that being arraigned on Oct. 19, on commitment Oct. 13, having notice of trial the 17th of the same month, and being kept close prisoner from the time of commitment to that of trial, he could not possibly prepare himself for his defence; and that he was convicted on the evidence of an incompetent and incredible witness viii. 474

* CORNWALLIS, CHARLES Lord,

- * His trial for murder, 30 Car. II. 1678 ii. 725
- * Earl of Nottingham, lord high steward, his speech to the prisoner ii. 725
- * His charge to the peers ii. 726
- * The fact stated by sir William Jones, attorney-general ii. 726
- * Persons indicted for the same offence and acquitted, good witnesses ii. 728
- * My lord's defence ii. 728
- * Sir Francis Winnington, solicitor-general, his speech ii. 728
- * Mr. serjeant Maynard's speech ii. 729
- * The counsel urge that my lord, being present, and not shewing he either disapproved or endeavoured to prevent the murder, ought to be deemed guilty of it ii. 729
- * That where many are engaged in an unlawful design, and one of them murder a man, the rest are guilty, though at a distance ii. 729
- * Where any question in point of law arises, it ought to be put in the prisoner's presence ii. 729
- * Many persons doing an unlawful act, whereby a manslaughter ensues, all who are engaged in that unlawful act are as guilty as the person who kills the man ii. 730
- * The prisoner is acquitted ii. 730

CORONER. See EVIDENCE. WITNESSES.
CORPORATION.

- Record on a mandamus for admission into the freedom of a corporation x. 138, 139. Ap.
- Corporation-man, though he votes, is a legal witness as to the election of mayor x. 150. Ap.

CORRECTION.

- If parent or master be provoked to a degree of passion by some miscarriage of the child or servant, and he corrects with a moderate weapon, and chances to kill, it is but misadventure; but if he uses an improper instrument in the correction, and kills the child or servant, it is murder ix. 64

* CORRUPTION of BLOOD. See PARDON.COSTS.

- The crown pays no costs xi. 271, 329, 333
- Costs recovered bear no proportion to the expence of civil suits Em. Pref. iii.
- COTTINGTON, FRANCIS Lord, Chancellor of the Exchequer,
- His speech on passing censure on Prynne, for writing Histrionastix i. 423
- The sentence proposed by him on Prynne i. 424
- On Buckner i. 424, 425
- On Sparkes i. 425

* COTTON, EDWARD, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.COTTON, Sir ROBERT,

- Proceedings against him in Star-chamber, May 29, 1630, 6 Car. I. for publishing a seditious writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD, earl of.

* COVENTRY ACT.

- Two tried and convicted on it vi. 212. See WOODBURNE JOHN.
- COVENTRY, THOMAS, Lord Keeper,
- His speech as high steward on the trial of Mervin lord Audley, earl of Castlehaven, for rape and sodomy, to the noble prisoner, previous to the examination of the witnesses i. 390
- His lordship's reply i. 390
- His charge to the lords i. 390
- His advice to the prisoner i. 392
- His speech to him after the examination of the witnesses i. 394
- His lordship's further speech and exhortation to the prisoner previous to pronouncing sentence upon him i. 394, 395
- Dialogue between him and William Prynne i. 483
- Dialogue between him and John Bastwick i. 484
- Dialogue between him and Henry Burton i. 486
- Parliament resolve, that warrant under the hand of Thomas lord Coventry, lord keeper of the great seal of England, whereby William Prynne was imprisoned, is unjust and illegal, and that he ought to give him satisfaction for damages sustained by his imprisonment i. 504
- His speech for a mild sentence on Hen. Sherfield, Esq. convicted by information in Star-chamber for breaking a painted glass window in a church i. 417
- His charges to the judges in the case of ship-money i. 505, 507
- Speech by the king's command to both houses of parliament vii. 189
- Ordinance of lords and commons for raising 3000l. out of the late lord Coventry's estate, for the reparation of John Lilburne, thrown out on second reading vii. 281, 305. See vii. 303, 306, 307

* COUNSEL.

- * One may not be of counsel with a criminal in treason or felony, till he is assigned ii. 826. iv. 416

- * Counsel assigned to a peer impeached of high-treason, who are permitted to be in court and hear the evidence iii. 122. ix. 618.
- * Counsel not admitted to argue concerning the law and course of parliaments iii. 208
- * Counsel assigned a prisoner cannot be discharged but by his client's consent iii. 233
- * A prisoner shall not have any instruction from counsel in writing, or otherwise, for the management of his defence in capital cases iii. 263
- * One permitted to advise with counsel, who is accused of high-treason iii. 706
- * Where one is allowed counsel, he ought not to speak himself iii. 875
- * Counsel not to be assigned in treason or felony to argue a point of law, but where the court is in doubt iv. 417, 601
- * A prisoner may not advise with counsel in capital cases, unless he assign some point of law which the court think fit to be argued iii. 1003. iv. 601
- * Where the prisoner may have counsel, the court will not be of counsel with him iv. 705
- * Counsel assigned a pirate to advise with v. 289
- Assigned by court ii. 39
- Not to be assigned till plea, and evidence given ii. 88, 91
- Not heard at the bar, till they had taken the engagement ii. 159
- Their assistance desired i. 86
- King's counsel may privately manage evidence to grand jury ii. 302
- If counsel are allowed to argue law, fact must be admitted iii. 722
- Counsel may be had in appeal ii. 253
- A counsellor at law should be a man of knowledge, able to advise; a minister of justice, assist the court wherein he pleads, and ought to be a person of untainted fidelity, that he may keep his client's secrets ii. 828
- One reason why prisoners for capital offences are not allowed counsel for matter of fact ii. 349, 726. iv. 174
- Sir Bartholomew Shower* was one of the first counsel that was assigned by the court under stat. 7 William III. chap. 3. iv. 663
- A counsel, even against his client (provided it be not of a secret communicated to him by his client) may be a witness iv. 202
- Messrs. Maynard, Hales, Twisden, Wilde, Philips, Baldwin, Drury, and Boynton, of counsel for the commonwealth vii. 346
- Messrs. Windham, Latch, Lechmere, and Haggat, pleaded in Oliver Cromwell's courts of justice vii. 349
- Though a counsellor at law may plead his client's cause against the king, yet if, under colour of that, he takes upon him to vent sedition, he is to be punished ix. 312
- Counsel should be ready to maintain by law the advice they give iii. 204
- Counsel have the protection of courts of justice for the advice they give in point of law iii. 204
- The unjust and upright counsellor characteristically distinguished i. 213. iv. 176. Em. Pref. i.
- Fees to counsel exorbitant Em. Pref. iii.
- Exceptions to insufficient indictment refused, not being signed by counsel vii. 366
- Prisoner desired counsel upon a point of law iii. 983. n.
- Counsel for the prosecution have a right to be the last speaker iii. 816. iv. 40, 162. ix. 162*, 742*. x. 517.
- Counsel allowed upon collateral issues ix. 582, 583
- Henry Blaunsford*, a counsellor at law, was committed to the Fleet, and fined, for false reporting the opinion of lord Leicester and secretary Cecil, in these words, "humanum est errare" vii. 111. ix. 310
- Lord chancellor Nottingham occasionally said, counsel should not speak as if they would abet the guilt of their clients; rather than as advocates for their innocence iii. 567. ix. 309
- The gentlemen at the bar did pray that the gown of one of the long robe, who had been set in the pillory, might be pulled over his ears; which was ordered, and executed in court ix. 309
- Lord chief justice North said, that it is a great credit and benefit to the profession, that the members of it who offend in their practice, should be dealt with more severely than others ix. 309. See READING NATHANIEL.
- A counsellor's extraordinary manner of pleading for his fee iii. 766
- Opening counsel should open no more than the record ix. 208
- Counsel may examine witnesses for prisoner in felony xi. 239
- But not permitted to examine them in treason ix. 638*
- Counsel threatened if they spoke to points of law ii. 744
- Their characters may be found in this collection of trials Em. Pref. i.
- Prejudice Fitzbarris received from not having counsel iv. 169
- Counsel should not be admitted to grand juries iv. 173
- In appeal for capital matters counsel are allowed on trial iv. 174
- Sir Robert Atkyns* always thought it a severity in our law, that a prisoner for his life is not allowed the assistance of a lawyer to make his defence for him, even as to fact as well as law; he knew it is said, the court is of counsel for the prisoner; but for his part, he should never desire to depend upon that only; he knew what it was by experience iii. 758. See iv. 130, 174.
- Counsel who have been arrested in Westminster-hall, committed, degraded, prosecuted, expelled, executed, or otherwise censured, proceeded against, or punished, for mal-practices or crimes:

Andrews, EusebiusPage, FrancisAshley, sir Francis, serjeant at law*Peck, EdwardAtwood, WilliamPemberton, Francis*, serjeant at law*Churchill, sir JohnPorter, CharlesCowper, SpencerPrynne, WilliamDenton, ThomasReading, NathanielHeath, sir RobertRotheram, ThomasHudson, WilliamSaunders, EdmundLoyer, ChristopherSherfield, HenryLechmere, NicholasWallop, RichardMorgan, DavidWhitelock, JamesMountague, JamesWilliams, William*

See their respective Names. EVIDENCE. HAMILTON, Duke of. KING'S COUNSEL. RUSSELL Lord. STRAFFORD, Earl of. COUNTER, JAMES. See BERNARDI JOHN. COURT of the LORD HIGH STEWARDS of ENGLAND for the TRIAL of PEERS of this Realm. The lord high steward after verdict given may take time to advise for any point of law; and though his office continues till judgment, it is but a commission pro hac vice notwithstanding. So resolved by all the Judges. i. 388

The lord high steward, when he sits by commission, has no vote iv. 211, 233
Lord high steward consulted by lords in absence of prisoner i. 394
During a prorogation the proceedings are always by commission, before the lord high steward iv. 213
The lord high steward is sole judge, and need not advise with the peers about the method or order of trial, or about a plea to the jurisdiction iv. 211, 215, 233. x. 209

All questions to be directed to and propounded by the lord high steward, in this court iv. 216

Question to the judges, whether court can legally adjourn after evidence given iv. 231

The lords cannot legally adjourn or separate after evidence given, till they have given a verdict, they being in nature of a jury in this court iv. 231, 232

The lords triers can ask no questions of the lord steward in prisoner's absence, nor can he withdraw with them iv. 232

It is not usual for the lord high steward to repeat or observe upon the evidence iv. 246

If error be committed in the proceedings of this court, they shall be reversed by error in the court of King's-Bench vii. 248

The distinction between the proceedings in the court of the high steward, and that before the king in parliament x. 209. Ap.

Resolutions of all the judges of England in respect of the proceedings in this court:

1. That in this court the peers are the triers vii. 421
2. That the former are to attend upon the letter of the lord high steward in their scarlet robes, and the chiefs in their collars of S. S. vii. 421
3. That in case, after the evidence given, the prisoner withdrawn, and the peers gone to consult of their verdict, they should send for them, if the lord steward requires it, they are to go to them; but not to deliver any opinion without conference, and only openly in court vii. 421
4. That if the lord steward should in open court demand any of their opinions, though in the absence of the prisoner, they were to give it vii. 421
5. That the demand of any question is referred to the direction of the high-steward vii. 421

Peers who have presided in this court.

Buckhurst, Thomas lord i. 197	Jefferies, George lord iv. 211
Clarendon, Henry earl of vii. 422	Norfolk, Thomas duke of xi. 5, 10, 12, 26
Conventry, Thomas lord i. 390	Nottingham, Heneage earl of ii. 725
Darby, Henry earl of i. 164. xi. 27	Shrewsbury, George earl of i. 82
Ellesmere, Thomas lord i. 348, 351
Trials in this court.
Anna Boleyn , queen xi. 10	Norfolk, Thomas duke of i. 82
Arundel, Philip earl of i. 64. xi. 27	Northampton, William marquis of xi. 26
Audley, Mervin lord i. 390	Northumberland, John duke of xi. 26
Buckingham, Edward duke of xi. 4	Somerset, Robert earl of i. 351
Cornwallis, Charles lord ii. 725	—, Frances countess of i. 348
Dacres, William lord xi. 10	Warwick, John earl of xi. 26. See
Delamere, Henry lord iv. 211	HIGH STEWARD.
Effix Robert, Southampton Henry, earls of i. 197
Morley, Thomas lord vii. 422

COURTS of JUSTICE.

Our courts of justice, contrary to those of other countries, are held publicly and in open view Em. Pref. iii.

The higher a court is, the more just it ought to be, to give example to inferior courts ii. 201, 208. v. 83, 106, 107. xi. 25

Whoever obeys a court that exceeds its jurisdiction is punishable ii. 328

Court of justice misdirecting a grand jury, punishable iv. 184

Improper adjournment of court of justice, censured iv. 176

The difference between the high court of justice in the time of the usurpation, and that of Oyer and Terminer ii. 87

How one court of justice asks the opinion of another iii. 47

COURT of ROME. See POPE.

COURTNEY, HUGH.

Lord Abbot complained that Hugh Courtney, chief justice, had confederated to give judgment against him; and the abbot, because a lord, escaped punishment vii. 108

COWARDICE.

* Cases of cowardice i. 816. See CONSTABLE JOHN. FIENNES NATHANIEL. FOGG CHRISTOPHER. KIRBY RICHARD. VINCENT SAMUEL. WADE COOPER.

COWLAND, JOHN, Gent.

Was tried on three indictments for the murder of Mr. Andrew Slanning, bart. and found guilty only on the statute of stabbing, and executed ix. 534

COWPER, SPENCER,

Of counsel for the crown, on the trial of Charnock and others for treason iv. 590

His reply on the trial of Mr. John Friend for treason iv. 622

His speech on the trial of Mr. William Parkyns, for treason in assassination plot iv. 653

His way of arguing in house of commons, on debating Mr. John Finwick's bill of attainder, gave dissatisfaction v. 133

VOL. XI.

The lords wished him to supply Mr. John Hawles the solicitor-general's place, on the trial of lord Mohun, on account of Mr. John's weak voice v. 191

His argument in maintenance of the second article in the impeachment exhibited by the commons to the lords, against Henry Sacheverel, D. D. for preaching seditiously v. 691

His reply to the defence of the second article v. 812

Sums up the evidence in the house of peers on the trial of earl Wintoun for treason, and rebellion vi. 44, 53

His reply on the trial of Francis for treason vi. 96

His parliamentary speech relative to Atby and White viii. 114

* COWPER, SPENCER, Esq.

* John Marjon, Ellis Stevens, and William Rogers, their trial for murder at Hartford affizes, July 16, 1699, 11 Will. III. before Mr. baron Hatfield v. 194

* The indictment for strangling and murdering Mrs. Sarah Stout v. 194

* The prisoners agree to join in their challenges; and are tried together v. 195

* The counsel for the king having challenged a juror, and the pannel being gone through, and there wanting jurors, Mr. Cowper desired the counsel for the king might shew their cause of challenge v. 195

* Mr. baron Hatfield was of opinion, the king's counsel ought to shew cause; but Mr. Cowper not insisting on it, another was sworn v. 195

* Mr. Jones opens the evidence v. 196

* The witnesses for the king called v. 197

* Evidence that Mr. Cowper was last in the deceased's company v. 197

* Evidence of the manner in which she was found v. 199, 214

* The physicians and surgeons called, who inspected the body of the deceased v. 203

* Evidence of sailors about the floating of dead bodies v. 207

* Evidence against Marjon, Stevens, and Rogers v. 208

* The examination of Marjon (before the lord chief justice Holt) read as evidence against him v. 210

* Mr. Cowper enters upon his defence v. 211

* He calls his witnesses v. 214

* Dr. Garth, doctor Sloane, &c. examined as to the floating of a dead body in the water v. 217

* Mr. William Cowper, the anatomist, his evidence and learned observations in behalf of the prisoner v. 219

* Mr. Cowper the prisoner's attempts to prove by further evidence that Mrs. Stout drowned herself x. 221

* Mrs. Sarah Stout's letter to Mr. Cowper the prisoner (directed to Mr. Marshall) v. 224

* Mr. William Cowper attests her fondness for his brother v. 225

* Mr. Marjon, Mr. Stevens, and Mr. Rogers enter upon their defence v. 228

* Mr. baron Hatfield directs the jury v. 231

* All the prisoners were acquitted v. 232

His case, for the murder of Sarah Stout, published by them viii. 485

The appeal sued out in the name of an infant, without notice to the mother, its guardian viii. 486

The infant and its mother demand the writ from the sheriff, who was fined 200 marks for delivering it viii. 487

The judges of opinion, that the Chancery has power to renew a writ of appeal, if just so to do, but in this case refused viii. 487

The case of Mrs. Mary Stout viii. 488

The Hertford Letter, containing some observations on the printed trial for the murder of Mrs. Sarah Stout viii. 490

Observations concerning drowned bodies admitting water viii. 491

Why bodies, thrown dead into the water, do not sink viii. 491

The certificate of the surgeons who opened her body viii. 496

Reply to the Hertford Letter, wherein Mr. Cowper is vindicated vi. 497

Some observations on their trials viii. 506

Account of the acquaintance of Mr. Cowper and Mrs. Stout viii. 507

What passed the night of her death viii. 508

Some observations on the evidence viii. 510

COWPER, WILLIAM, Lord Chancellor,

His procession as lord high steward to the trials of James earl Derwentwater, William lord Widdrington, William earl Nithisdale, Robert earl Carnwarth, William viscount Kenmure, and William lord Nairn vi. 5

His majesty's commission of appointment to that high office vi. 5

His address to the noble prisoners on their confession, previous to passing judgment vi. 14

His commission in Latin, as lord high steward, on the trial of Robert earl Oxford and Mortimer, on an impeachment for high treason, and other high crimes and misdemeanors vi. 102

His procession on doctor Sacheverel's trial v. 641

His address to the prisoner v. 641

King's commission appointing him lord high steward on trial of George earl of Wintoun, before the house of peers, on impeachment for treason vi. 28

His speech to him previous to his trial vi. 28

His speech before judgment vi. 56

His declaration, signed by him, shewing, that some matters contained in some hearsays in Christopher Layer's examination, are false and groundless viii. 571

He is said to have been a great encourager of charitable collections x. 88. Ap.

COX,

Extracts from his History of Ireland xi. 17

* CRANBURN, CHARLES,

* His trial for high treason, Tuesday, April 21, 1696, 8 Will. III. iv. 608

* He was indicted together with Knightsley, Lowick, and Rookwood, for the assassination; but besides the overt-acts they were charged with, he was particularly charged with carrying a list of the conspirators names from one to another iv. 661

The indictment vi. 56. Ap.

* The prisoner's irons ordered to be taken off during the trial iv. 608

* Exceptions taken to the indictment after plea pleaded iv. 608

* Five

5 I

- * Five exceptions taken to the indictment, and argued iv. 698
- * But over-ruled iv. 701
- * Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iv. 706
- * Captain Porter's evidence of the prisoner's carrying a list of the conspirators from the one to the other iv. 707
- * Pendergrass's evidence to the same effect iv. 712
- * The defence made by the prisoner's counsel iv. 713
- * Lord chief justice Holt sums up the evidence iv. 716
- * He is convicted iv. 717
- CRAWLEY, Sir FRANCIS, Judge of the Common Pleas, His argument and reasons for his opinion for the king, in the cause of ship-money i. 615
- Mr. Waller's speech in the house of commons, on impeaching Sir Francis for the above opinion i. 717
- The articles of impeachment i. 717. viii. 566
- CREIGHTON, ROBERT. See SANQUHAR Lord.
- CRESWELL, RICHARD, His speech in parliament, on the liberty of the subject vii. 144
- CREW, Sir RANULPH, The cause of his removal from the office of lord chief justice of the court of King's-Bench; and who succeeded him vii. 114, & n.
- Mr. Hollis's speech in the house of commons, for a reward to be voted to Sir Ranulph Crew, chief justice B. R. for his loss in being removed on giving his voice against the loan in Charles the first's reign i. 715, 716
- CREW, Sir THOMAS, King's Serjeant, His charge against the prisoner, on the trial of lord Audley i. 390
- CRIMES. Of their punishments in general Em. Pref. ix. x. xi.
- No statute of jeofail extends to criminal cases viii. 58. See ADULTERY. MURDER. THEFT.
- CRIMINAL CONVERSATION. Jury had severe reprimand from court, for giving his grace of Norfolk only one hundred pounds damages on a verdict for crim. con.; they were so small and scandalous, that the slightness of the satisfaction was considered almost as great a reproach as the crime itself viii. 36
- It seems, that facts alledged as proof of incest would not be admitted as proof of crim. con. to entitle the husband to damage on an action of trespass x. 518. n.
- There does not seem in our law any presumption of crim. con. which operates in any circumstance, but that of being plus cum sola, and nudus cum nuda x. 518. n. See ADULTERY. NORFOLK Duke of, and GERMAINE Sir JOHN.
- CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS. The excellency of the English laws consists in them Em. Pref. iii.
- Our law has provided no paper search in criminal cases to help forward the conviction xi. 323
- CRISP and DALMAHOY, Their case reported from the lords journals vii. 458
- CROFTS, GEORGE. See POTE Sir GEOFFREY.
- CROKE, Sir GEORGE, Justice B. R. His argument and opinion for the defendant, at the suit of the king, in the cause of ship-money, with his reasons i. 638, 644
- He subscribed the opinion in ship-money for conformity only, because the major number of the judges had subscribed i. 711
- His report of the case of Sir John Elliot, Denzil Hollis, and Benjamin Valentine, in Cro. Car. 30, is censured as unfairly stated vii. 252, 253.
- See vii. 250. BERKLEY Sir ROBERT.
- CROKE, Sir JOHN, King's Serjeant at Law, Opens the charge against Garnet for high treason, in promoting the Gunpowder-plot i. 248
- CROMARTIE, GEORGE Earl of, The whole proceedings in the house of peers, upon the indictment against him, for high treason, in levying war against his majesty, in July and August, 1746, 10 Geo. II. ix. 587
- The lord high steward's speech to the prisoner ix. 595
- Pleads guilty ix. 595
- Lord Cromartie's speech on the lord steward's asking him, why judgment of death should not pass upon him ix. 611
- Lord steward's speech previous to his passing judgment ix. 611
- His case as laid before the king x. 186. Ap.
- He is pardoned x. 187. Ap.
- CROMWELL, THOMAS Lord, Was attainted without being heard v. 97
- Was the first man that promoted attainders in Hen. VIIIth's reign, and the advice he gave his master for the ruin of others proved fatal to himself v. 125. See ATTAINDER.
- CROMWELL, OLIVER. It was said, that had the protector taken upon him the name of king, no treason would have been committed against the king de jure, out of possession ii. 445
- In his days, all law proceedings were in the vulgar tongue Em. Pref. vii.
- See WHITFORD Sir PAUL.
- CRONE, MATTHEW, Proceedings against him for treason, May 19, 1690, 1 W. and M. x. 40. Ap.
- The jury found him guilty, after sitting up all night x. 40. Ap.
- Prisoner being asked why sentence of death should not be passed upon him, said, there was an error in the indictment before the grand jury, that the bill was indorsed billa verba, instead of vera x. 40. Ap.
- His plea argued and over-ruled, and he received sentence of death x. 41. Ap.
- Received several reprieves x. 41. Ap.
- Lay a long time in prison x. 41. Ap.
- Pardoned x. 42. Ap.
- Some account of him x. 42. Ap.
- * CROOK, JOHN, Tried at the Old-Bailly, with Isaac Grey and John Bolton, for refusing to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, June 25, 1662, 14 Car. II. ii. 463
- * He is tendered the oaths the first day of the sessions ii. 463
- * He complains of his long imprisonment, and will give no other answer ii. 463
- * He is brought again to the bar, and will not swear ii. 464
- * He is indicted for recusancy ii. 465
- * He wrangles with the court, and refuses to plead to his indictment ii. 466
- * He pleads not guilty ii. 467
- * Isaac Grey and John Bolton being tendered the oaths, and refusing to swear, are also indicted ii. 468
- The indictment vi. 11. Ap.
- * They plead not guilty ii. 468
- * They are brought to trial ii. 468
- * After making a great noise and clamour in the court, they are found guilty ii. 470
- * They receive sentence of præmunire ii. 470
- CROSBY, His case for high treason x. 42. Ap.
- Debated, whether Aaron Smith should be admitted an evidence against him, because he had stood in the pillory x. 42. Ap.
- Was admitted x. 42. Ap.
- But the principal point of treason charged on the prisoner was writing treasonable papers, which was endeavoured to be proved by similitude of hands (having no other evidence); on which the prisoner produced the act for reversing the attainder of Algernon Sidney, esq. in which it is declared, that the comparison of hands is not legal evidence; on which he was found not guilty x. 42. Ap. See vi. 402, 415
- CROSBY, BRASS, Esq. Lord Mayor of London, His case on a commitment by the house of commons, C. B. E. Term. II. Geo. III. 1771 xi. 335
- Hab. Corp. and return xi. 335
- Argument for discharge of prisoner xi. 335
- Lord chief justice De Grey's argument on giving his opinion xi. 337
- Mr. justice Gould's xi. 338
- Mr. justice Blackstone's xi. 338
- Mr. justice Nares's xi. 338
- The lord mayor was remanded to the Tower xi. 338
- CROWN. The first usurpation of the pope upon the liberties of the crown of England, began in the time of king William the conqueror xi. 71. See JOHN, king of ENGLAND. ROYAL FAMILY.
- The right of impressing mariners for the public service is a prerogative inherent in the crown xi. 350
- CROWN PRISONERS. See PRISONERS.
- * CUFFE, HENRY, His trial i. 209. vii. 47
- Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general, his unfeeling conduct towards him on his trial for treason vii. 59. * See BLUNT Sir CHRISTOPHER.
- CURL'S CASE, On an information against him for publishing an obscene book, intituled, "Venus in a Cloyster, or, the Nun in her Smock," x. 92. Ap.
- The opinion of the court, whether an obscene book is punishable as a libel x. 93, 94. Ap.
- Judgment given for the king, and he stood in the pillory x. 94. Ap.
- * CURTIS, MARY, Her trial for publishing a libel against the government, reflecting chiefly upon my lord chief justice Scroggs, 31 Car. II. 1679 ii. 1042.
- * She submits, and is convicted iii. 220. vii. 484
- CUSTOMS. There were no customs by common law but of three things, wool, wool-fel, and leather vii. 495. See IMPOSITIONS.
- CUTTING OFF THE HAND. See KNEVET Sir EDMUND.
- D. DACRES, WILLIAM Lord, of the North, His trial for treason, July 9, 1535, 26 Hen. VIII. xi. 19
- Arraigned xi. 19
- Found not guilty xi. 19
- DALGLEISH, GEORGE, His deposition concerning the murder of lord Darnley, husband to Mary queen of Scots viii. 328
- He is condemned viii. 332
- DALMAHOY. See CRISP.
- * DAMAGES. Damages directed to be given according to the mischief intended, and not according to what the plaintiff sustained iii. 1094
- The first outrageous damages that were taken notice of, were those given to Bolworth; yet in a little time for matters of like kind, were quickly improved, in the reign of the Stuart family, to 10,000l. 20,000l. 40,000l. and 100,000l. iv. 165
- Where a man is injured, if he cannot bring his action to recover the thing itself, the law will always give him damages in lieu thereof viii. 131
- Parliament never gives damages viii. 98
- Lord Holt severely reprimanded a jury for giving trifling damages to a peer on a cause for crim. con. viii. 36. See OATES TITUS. PAPILLON THOMAS.
- DAMMAREE, DANIEL, His trial for high treason, in levying war, &c. under pretence of pulling down meeting-houses, 9 Ann. 1710 viii. 218
- Pleads not guilty viii. 219
- Mr. Thompson opens the indictment viii. 221
- Mr.

Mr. attorney-general's speech	viii. 221
Tolbo's evidence of their intention to pull down the meeting-houses	viii. 222
Captain Orrel's evidence of Dammarce's leading the mob in Lincoln's-inn-fields	viii. 223
Collier's evidence of Dammarce's bringing a branch out of the meeting-house	viii. 224
Evidence of his hallooing and rejoicing round the fire	viii. 225
Mr. Whitaker for the prisoner	viii. 227
Mr. Darnell on the same side	viii. 228
That the prisoner was forced to halloo	viii. 228
That the case does not amount to levying war	viii. 228
Evidence for the prisoner	viii. 230
And to his character	viii. 236
Mr. Whitaker's speech; that being forced to comply with the mob, will not make him guilty of high treason	viii. 237
Desires the point, whether it shall be esteemed levying war, may be saved, it not being settled in Keyling's Reports	viii. 239
Mr. Darnell, that this case comes short of the cases in Keyling's Reports , the intention of Dammarce not being proved	viii. 239
Mr. attorney-general's reply	viii. 239, 240
That the intention of every man that acts with an assembly of people, shall be judged to be the same as the design of that meeting	viii. 241
Mr. solicitor general's reply	viii. 241
Mr. Thompson on the same side	viii. 242
Lord chief justice Parker sums up the evidence	viii. 243
The nature and proper weight of evidence to any one's reputation	viii. 246
That the intention was general, therefore not a riot; but levying war	viii. 247
The jury find him guilty	viii. 248
Serjeant Richardson's speech at pronouncing sentence	viii. 249
Dammarce afterwards pardoned	viii. 249
Solemn argument on his case	viii. 289
* DANBY, THOMAS Earl of,
* Proceedings against him on an impeachment for high-treason before the house of lords, the 23d of December, 1678, 30 Car. II.	ii. 731
* Two letters of the earl's	ii. 731
* The six articles against him	ii. 731
* The earl's speech upon bringing up the articles	ii. 732
* Mr. Powle's speech and motion that the earl be committed	ii. 734
* A message to remind their lordships of the earl's impeachment, and that he might be committed	ii. 735
* A message from the lords that the earl was withdrawn	ii. 735
* Sir Francis Winnington's speech on the question, if a pardon may be pleaded to an impeachment?	ii. 735
* Address for a proclamation to apprehend the earl	ii. 736
* He pleads his majesty's pardon	ii. 737
* The earl surrenders on a bill brought in to compel him to appear, and is committed	ii. 739
* The commons question if a pardon can be pleaded in bar of an impeachment	ii. 739
* The commons resolve, that no commoner shall be of counsel with the earl to maintain his pardon	ii. 740
* Reasons given by the commons, at a conference, why they could not proceed to the trial of the earl and the five lords, at the times appointed by the house of peers	ii. 740
* The commons deny a high steward is necessary at a trial upon an impeachment	ii. 740
* The lords resolve that the bishops may vote in matters previous to trials in capital cases	ii. 742
* The earl's argument at the King's-Bench bar, why he ought to be admitted to bail	ii. 743
* An indictment against the earl as accessory to the murder of sir Edmond-bury Godfrey	ii. 744
* The earl shews the hardness of his case	ii. 744
* Accused without oath	ii. 744
* No particular treason specified	ii. 744
* Counsel threatened, if they spoke to matter of law	ii. 744
* Urges that he has his majesty's pardon	ii. 744
* And his majesty's declaration of his innocence	ii. 744
* Kept prisoner forty months without prosecution	ii. 744
* The king directs the attorney-general to consent to his being bailed; and yet he is refused	ii. 744
* Appeals, writs of error, and impeachments, need not be begun de novo on calling of a new parliament, but remain in the same state they were at the dissolution of the old	ii. 747
* But inferior courts may proceed to grant execution, &c. on a prorogation or dissolution, notwithstanding	ii. 748
* And the house of lords never proceed ex officio , without the parties petition to revive the cause	ii. 748
* Said that the king may impeach	ii. 749
* Whether an order of parliament is of any force after a prorogation or dissolution?	ii. 749
* Persons accused of capital offences discharged from their imprisonment, by the king's writ to the King's-Bench declaring them innocent	ii. 750
* On a defective pardon, the court order the criminal to procure another, in regard to the king's intentions	ii. 750
* The lord chief justice Pemberton delivers his opinion	ii. 752
* That though this court could bail for treason, yet the earl being imprisoned by a higher hand, they could not meddle with it	ii. 752
* Resolved by all the judges, that the king could not permit the earl to go to his country-house with a guard	ii. 753
* The judges resolve, that the popish lords could not be bailed by the King's-Bench	ii. 753
* Whether, if a man pleads a defective pardon, he may plead over? ii. 754

* Three of the judges of opinion the earl could not be bailed	ii. 754
* The other doubted	ii. 754
* The earl is remanded to the Tower	ii. 754
* He is brought to the King's-Bench bar a second time	ii. 754
* His speech	ii. 754
* He is remanded	ii. 760
* But afterwards bailed	ii. 760
* DANEGETT,
* The tax so called	i. 571, 580, 584
DANGERFIELD, THOMAS,
His repeated pilloryings and whippings were punishments monstrously cruel	Em. Pref. xii.
And as they were against law, so they were without precedent	iv. 166.
See iv. 681.
DARBY, LEONARD. See MORRIS JOHN.
DARCY, Lord,
Was tried for the Lincolnshire rebellion by his peers, the marquis of Exeter sitting steward	xi. 24
DARNELL, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
His speech on arguing special verdict against Oneby for murder	ix. 17
His speech for Corbet , on appeal of murder	ix. 167
His speech in favour of William Hales	x. 112. Ap.
Of counsel for the king, on an information against John Gibbon	x. 119, 120. Ap.
For the defendant Richard Elles	x. 129, 134, 136. Ap.
His defence of Giles , for attempting to commit a murder	iii. 71
His speech before evidence, on the trial of Harrison for murder	iv. 489
His defence of Cok	iv. 758
Opens the evidence, on the trial of Haagen Swensden , indicted for a forcible marriage	v. 450
Opens the evidence on Denew's trial	viii. 179
Is of counsel for Dammarce	viii. 228
His speech for Willis , on a charge of treason	viii. 256, 261
His speech for Purchase , charged with a similar offence	viii. 273, 280
DARNELL, Sir THOMAS,
Proceedings upon the Habeas Corpus brought by him, sir John Corbet , sir Walter Earl , sir John Heveningham , and sir Edmund Hampden , 3 Car. I.	vii. 114
Imprisoned for refusing to lend upon the commissions for loans	vii. 114
The return of the Habeas Corpus , that he is detained by warrant of two privy counsellors, signifying the special command of his majesty	vii. 115
Desires time to consider, and is remanded	vii. 116
The other four brought to the bar, and the returns read	vii. 116
Serjeant Bramstone takes exceptions to the return, and moves to have them bailed	vii. 116, 117
That the return is insufficient, both as to the cause, and time of the first imprisonment	vii. 117
To the matter of the return, viz. speciale mandatum domini regis	vii. 118
Precedents of persons bailed upon commitments by the special command of the king, or by king and lords together	vii. 118
Mr. Noy's argument for sir Walter Earl	vii. 119
The writ and return	vii. 119
That the return must be of an officer's own act, or the act of another, not what he is certified of by another	vii. 119
Mr. Selden's argument for sir Edmund Hampden	vii. 121
That the return is contradictory, therefore void	vii. 121
The meaning of the words, per legem terræ	vii. 122
Mr. Calthrop's argument for sir John Corbett	vii. 122
Imprisonment by command of the king, where utterly unlawful, and where, though lawful, yet continuance without bail unlawful	vii. 123
Per speciale mandatum regis , how to be expounded	vii. 125
The jurisdiction of the privy council, a limited jurisdiction, and therefore the cause of their commitment ought to appear	vii. 126
The counsel ordered to attend with precedents	vii. 128
Mr. attorney-general's reply to the form of the return	vii. 128
To the matter	vii. 129
That a person committed per speciale mandatum domini regis , is not bailable	vii. 132
Answers the precedents of persons bailed, who were committed by the special command of the king	vii. 134
Lord chief justice Hyde's speech at delivering the opinion of the court,	vii. 136
Denies the precedents of persons bailed, or delivered, when imprisoned by the king's special command, and no cause shewn	vii. 137
Precedents e contra	vii. 139
They are remanded	vii. 140
They are released by the king's command, and returned to serve in parliament	vii. 140
Opened in the house as a grievance to be redressed. Sir Francis Seymour's speech thereon	vii. 140
Sir Thomas Wentworth and sir Benjamin Rudyard's speeches	vii. 141
Mr. secretary Cook's	vii. 142
Sir Robert Philips's	vii. 142
Sir Edward Coke's speech, relating to the liberty of the subject	vii. 144
Cites precedents, that the command of the king is not sufficient to imprison a man, without cause shewn	vii. 144
Mr. Creswell's speech	vii. 144
Lord chief justice Anderson's report read, and the articles, to which all the judges subscribed their names	vii. 147
Mr. Selden's speech	vii. 148
Resolutions of the house of commons relating to the liberty of the subject	vii. 150
Conference between the lords and commons on the same subject	vii. 150
Sir Dudley Digges's speech	vii. 150
Sir Edward Littleton's argument, made by command of the house of commons	vii. 151
Difference

- Difference between rep'eviable and bailable vii. 153
 Mr. Selden's argument on the same occasion vii. 155
 Precedents cited by him, that persons committed by the king's command are bailable vii. 156
 Answers precedents brought against him vii. 158
 The true copy of the precedents of record vii. 162
 True copy of the records not printed, which were used by Mr. Edward Littleton vii. 167
 Sir Edward Coke's argument on the same occasion vii. 169
 The attorney-general's objections to the arguments vii. 172
 Serjeant Ashley's speech on behalf of his majesty vii. 179
 Objections by the king's counsel, and answers thereto vii. 180
 Earl of Suffolk charged with speaking scandalously of Mr. Selden; and proceedings thereon vii. 182
 Mr. Noy's answer to the attorney's objections vii. 183
 The judges of the King's-Bench called to give an account of the judgment passed vii. 184
 The earl of Warwick's speech vii. 186
 Five propositions offered by the lords, to be presented to his majesty vii. 187
 Mr. Selden's speech about them vii. 188
 Disliked by the commons vii. 189
 The lord keeper's speech, by the king's command, to both houses of parliament vii. 189
 Sir Benjamin Rudyard's speech vii. 190
 Bishop of Exeter's letter to the house of commons vii. 191
 Mr. Hackwell's speech vii. 192
 Mr. Mason's speech concerning the bill for magna charta vii. 194
 The speaker's speech to the king, in answer to several messages vii. 196
 The petition of right presented to the lords by Mr. Edward Coke vii. 197
 A letter from the king to the lords, by the lord keeper, communicated to the commons at a conference vii. 198
 The lords propose an addition to the petition of right vii. 199
 Several speeches thereon vii. 199
 Mr. Mason's speech, taking the lords additions apart vii. 200
 Mr. Glanvill's speech thereon vii. 202
 Sir Henry Martin's speech vii. 208
 The lords agree to the petition vii. 211
 The petition, and the king's answer vii. 212
 Not approved of by the commons vii. 213
 Both houses join in a petition to his majesty, to give a satisfactory answer to the petition of right; and his majesty's answer vii. 215
 The king's speech at proroguing the parliament vii. 216
DARNLEY, HENRY Lord, Husband to Mary Queen of Scots.
 See BOTHWELL JAMES Earl of. POWRIE WILLIAM.
DAVENPORT, HUMPHRY, Serjeant at Law,
 His argument for return of habeas corpus in William Stroud's case vii. 223
 The house of commons resolve, that Mr. Humphry Davenport his subscribing his name to an information exhibited in the court of Star-chamber against Mr. Hollis and the rest for matters done by them in parliament, and the same so appearing in the information, is guilty thereby of the breach of privilege of parliament vii. 250
DAVENPORT, Sir HUMPHRY, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,
 His argument and opinion for the king against Hampden, in the cause of ship-money, with his reasons i. 672
DAVENPORT. See WILKES JOHN.
DAVENTRY, HENEAGE, Lord FINCH, Baron DAVENTRY, Lord Chancellor.
 His procession as lord high steward on viscount Stafford's trial for treason iii. 101
 His address to the noble prisoner before examination of witnesses iii. 102
 His lordship's speech to the prisoner previous to his pronouncing judgment on him iii. 213
 Over-rules motion for habeas corpus to Francis Jenkes vii. 471
 Refuses him a writ of mainprize vii. 474. See FINCH Mr. HENEAGE.
NOTTINGHAM earl of.
 * DAVERS, Sir CHARLES,
 His trial i. 209. See BLUNT Mr. CHRISTOPHER.
DAVIS, Sir JOHN,
 His trial i. 209. See BLUNT Mr. CHRISTOPHER.
DAVIS, Sir JOHN, King's Serjeant at Law,
 So justly admired for his writings about Ireland, composed a treatise to prove the right of the crown respecting impositions on merchandizes by prerogative xi. 29
 Transcript of part of his argument xi. 34
 His reports cited vii. 146
 Extracts from them xi. 65, 69
DAVISON, Mr.
 His arraignment in the Star-chamber for contempt and misprision, 30 Eliz. vii. 20
 Accused of delivering the warrant for the execution of the queen of Scots to the lords, without her majesty's privy vii. 21
 His defence vii. 21
 The trial by another hand vii. 21
 Sir Walter Mildmay, one of the commissioners, his speech vii. 23
 The speeches of the rest of the commissioners touching his punishment vii. 24, &c.
 Is fined 10,000 marks, and imprisoned during her majesty's pleasure vii. 24, 27
Davison's excuse, in an apologetical discourse to Walsingham vii. 28
 A letter from Walsingham and Davison to Mr. Amias Pawlett and Mr. Drury, blaming their want of zeal in relation to the queen of Scots death vii. 29
 The answer vii. 29
DAVY, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
 His speech to the court on behalf of the Abbotsbury witnesses, who swore on the trial of Mary Squires, indicted for perjury x. 246
 Opens case against William Barnard, tried on the Black Act for sending a letter in a fictitious name to Charles duke of Marlborough, demanding a genteel support for life x. 447
 His reply on same trial x. 460
 States the case, and opens the evidence, as counsel for the prosecution against Elizabeth Canning x. 211
 Objects to Mr. Salt's evidence, as also to the confession of mother Wells, in same prosecution x. 367
 His reply and observations on said prosecution x. 374
 Argument as counsel for Macdaniel and others x. 438
 Of counsel for Timothy Murphy x. 188
 His complimentary speech respecting the conduct of Mr. Crispe Gascoigne, lord mayor of London, in procuring a pardon for Mary Squires, a gypsy, convicted of robbing Elizabeth Canning x. 248
 * DAWSON, JOSEPH,
 * Edward Forefeith, William May, William Bishop, James Lewis, and John Sparkes; their trials for piracy at the Old-Bailey, Oct. 19, 1696, 8 Will. III. v. 1
 * The indictment for piratically taking the ship Gunsway in the East-Indies v. 1
 * Dawson pleads guilty v. 2
 * The rest are acquitted v. 2
 * Charge to the grand jury by Mr. Charles Hedges, upon other indictments preferred against the prisoners v. 2
 * Probable evidence sufficient to induce them to find a bill v. 3
 * The former petty jury occasionally reflected upon v. 3, 5, 6, 14
 * A second indictment found against the prisoners for piratically taking the Charles the Second, captain Gibson commander v. 4
 * Dawson pleads guilty v. 5
 * Two other indictments found against the prisoners; one for taking a Moorish ship; the other for taking two Danish ships v. 5
 * Evidence of their abetting and assisting Captain Avery in running away with the Charles the Second v. 6
 * And of their running away with the James boat v. 6
 * Want of wages the occasion of their turning pirates v. 8
 * Evidence of all the piracies laid in the several indictments to have been committed by the prisoners v. 8, &c.
 * They burn the town of Meat in the Red Sea v. 9
 * Five other English pirates join them there, and they lie in wait for the Mocha fleet, and surprise some of them, and share the treasure v. 9
 * Negroes who come to trade with them robbed of their gold, and made slaves v. 10
 * The prisoners enter upon their defence v. 11
 * Lord chief justice Holt directs the jury, that those on board a pirate-ship are to be presumed to concur with him, unless they can make the contrary appear v. 14
 * They are convicted, and the jury commended v. 15
 * The same prisoners tried and convicted on the two other indictments, for piracy on the Moorish ship and the two Danish ships, by the same evidence as in the trial for taking the Charles the Second v. 15
 * They all receive sentence; and are executed v. 17
DEACON, THOMAS THEODORUS,
 His trial for treason, July 17, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 558
 Evidence against him ix. 558
 His case stated by Mr. J. Foster, on all points ix. 558
 Lord chief justice Willis declined giving any opinion on the second point ix. 558
 Executed at Kennington-Common ix. 559
 Some account of him ix. 559
 Part of his dying speech ix. 565
 * DEAGLE, JOHN iii. 650. See PILKINGTON, & al.
DEATH.
 The reason why in criminal matters persons by ordinary course of law cannot be convicted after their deaths iv. 205
 Depositions of persons executed for same treason admitted in proof in treason by the law of Scotland vii. 34
 Citing dead persons is among the legal forms prescribed both by the laws of Scotland and those of several other nations vii. 86
DEATH-BED,
 Declarations upon it, as to an actual fact, is evidence x. 161
 If record avers death of party, court will not admit his appearance to falsify the record x. 433
DE BRUCE,
 Of noble family, was ordered to go loosely attired and bare-headed, from the court of King's-Bench, in Westminster-Hall, when full, to the Exchequer, and there ask pardon of Roger de Higham, one of the barons of the said Exchequer, for taxing him with injustice in giving judgment against the said De Bruce, who was then committed to the Tower during the king's pleasure i. 722. See HARRISON THOMAS, clerk.
WRAYNHAM.
DECLARATIONS.
 Declaration in an action of false imprisonment, in cause of Pritchard and Papillon vi. 50. Ap.
 Declaration between Paty and White concerning the election of members of parliament viii. 135
 Lord Coke advises defendant never to demur to declaration, if there be hopes of matter of fact vii. 450. See PLEADING and PLEAS.
DECREES.
 Instance of a lord keeper reversing his own decree vii. 109
DEED.
 His argument in behalf of doctor Sacheverell, as to the first article in his impeachment for preaching seditiously v. 727
 As to the second article v. 756
 As to the third article v. 767
 As to the fourth article v. 779
DEED.

D E E D.

- Contents of a deed or writing are not to be given in evidence, without producing the writing, or true copy of it iv. 194. vi. 293
 Deed of entail humourously described iv. 194
 Necessary that deed should be delivered x. 476

* D E F E N C E. See TRIAL.

D E G R A D A T I O N of a C L E R G Y M A N.

- The proceedings on performing that clerical ceremony vii. 648

D E G R A D A T I O N of a K N I G H T of the G A R T E R.

- The publication at the degrading Edward duke of Buckingham, knight of that most noble order, for treason, and the method of proceeding on that occasion xi. 6

D E G R E Y, Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas,

- His speech on motion for new trial, where 3000*l.* damages had been given against a plantation governor, for falsely imprisoning and banishing a subject of this country, accompanied with circumstances of peculiar hardship and cruelty xi. 184. See SOLICITOR-GENERAL. WILKES JOHN.

D E H A R T L E Y, C O N S T A N T I N E. See G O L D I N G, & al.

* D E L A M E R E, H E N R Y Lord,

- * His trial for high-treason, 1685, 1 Jac. II. lord Jefferies lord high steward iv. 210
 * Lord high steward's speech to the prisoner iv. 211
 * The prisoner insists that a peer need not hold up his hand when he is arraigned iv. 211
 * Lord high steward is judge, and has no vote among the lords triers, where the trial is by commission out of parliament iv. 211
 * The indictment for high-treason, in conspiring the death of the king, raising a rebellion, &c. iv. 211. vi. 55. Ap.
 * The prisoner delivers a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, setting forth that he ought to be tried by the whole body of the peers, the parliament not being dissolved iv. 212
 * And for that the house of lords were already possessed of the cause iv. 212
 * The king's counsel insist, that during a prorogation, the proceedings are always before the lord high steward by commission iv. 213
 * And that the house of lords were not possessed of the cause, they having only petitioned his majesty that the prisoner might be brought to his trial iv. 213
 * Also, that his plea was in paper, and in English, without counsel's hand, and therefore not necessary formally to demur to it iv. 214
 * The prisoner desires counsel, and time to draw up his plea iv. 214
 * He is answered, that in a plea to the jurisdiction, the party ought to be ready to maintain it presently iv. 214
 * The lord high steward insists that he is sole judge in this court, and need not advise with the peers about it iv. 215
 * The plea is over-ruled; and he pleads not guilty iv. 215
 * Lord high steward's charge to the peers iv. 215
 * All questions to be directed to and propounded by the lord high steward, where the trial is by commission iv. 216
 * Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iv. 216
 * Lord Howard gives a general account of the lord Shaftesbury's plot iv. 218
 * Lord Grey's evidence of the same plot, and the duke of Monmouth's progress into Cheshire iv. 221
 * Lord Grey's evidence concerning Monmouth's rebellion, and the dependence he had on the prisoner's assistance iv. 221
 * Evidence of some suspicious circumstances against the lord Delamere iv. 226, &c.
 * Saxon's evidence of the prisoner's employing him to stir up the people, and sending him to the duke of Monmouth in the west iv. 229
 * The prisoner moves the court to adjourn till the next morning, that he might review his notes, and prepare for his defence, it growing late iv. 230
 * The lord high steward proposes it to the judges, whether the court can legally adjourn after evidence given iv. 231
 * The lords withdraw, and the judges likewise, to consider of it iv. 231
 * The judges declare, there has been no precedent of the peers separating after the evidence given iv. 232
 * That a jury, once charged, are not to be discharged till they have given their verdict iv. 232
 * That indeed, at the trial of a peer in parliament, the house may, and often has adjourned; but there the lords are judges: in this case, they are in the nature of a jury iv. 232
 * The lords triers may consult the judges in the prisoner's absence; but they can ask no questions of the lord high steward in his absence, nor can he withdraw with them iv. 232
 * At a trial in full parliament it is otherwise iv. 233
 * In a full parliament the lord high steward has a vote; but when he sits by commission he has none iv. 233
 * The lord high steward refuses to adjourn; and directs the prisoner to proceed in his defence iv. 233
 * The prisoner permitted to charge the king's evidence with particular crimes iv. 234
 * The prisoner proves that sir Robert Cotton, mr. Offley, and himself, were none of them at his house when the king's evidence deposed they were iv. 236, &c.
 * Mr. solicitor-general Finch sums up the evidence iv. 243
 * It is not usual for the high steward to repeat, or observe upon, the evidence iv. 246
 * One witness who swears directly to the treason, and another to a circumstance, affirmed to be two witnesses in law iv. 246. See vi. 427
 * The prisoner is acquitted iv. 246. v. 204
 * Lord Delamere the only person who escaped in a trial of treason, where there was a design against his life; and if he had not had witnesses to have proved the persons mentioned to be with him at the place and time swore against him, to be in other places, his denial would not have served his turn; or had he been tried by a jury of commoners packed, as in reign of Jac. II. they usually were, he had not escaped iv. 177

D E L A P O L E, M I C H A E L. See vi. 566. SUFFOLK

Earl of.

D E L M A H O Y. See C R I S P E Sir N I C H O L A S.

* D E M U R R E R. See P L E A and P L E A D I N G S.

D E N E W, N A T H A N I E L,

John Meriam, and Richard Britton; their trials for a conspiracy and assault on mr. Colepeper, 1703-4 viii. 178

The indictment against them viii. 178

Mr. serjeant Darnell opens the evidence viii. 179

Mr. Colepeper's evidence viii. 180

Sir Jacob Banks ordered by the queen to be prosecuted, for striking mr. Colepeper at Windsor viii. 180

Sir George Rook challenges mr. Colepeper, and they agree to meet on the coast of Holland viii. 181

Mr. Denew assaults mr. Colepeper viii. 182

Other evidence for the queen viii. 185

Mr. Wells for the defendants viii. 189

Several lords called to the defendants characters viii. 191

Meriam found not guilty; Britton not guilty of the conspiracy and assault, but guilty as to the rest; Denew not guilty of the conspiracy, but guilty of the rest of the indictment viii. 194

Denew fined two hundred marks; Britton one hundred pounds viii. 195

D E N H A M, Sir J O H N, Baron of the Exchequer,
 His opinion, with his reasons, for Hampden, in the cause of ship-money i. 672

D E N I S O N, Sir T H O M A S, Justice B. R.

Was free from connections and ambitions of every kind xi. 338

D E N T O N, A L E X A N D E R,

Ordered into custody, for pleading on return of hab. corp. on parliamentary commitment viii. 139

Writ of hab. corp. served on serjeant at arms, on behalf of mr. Denton, to bring him before the lord keeper viii. 142

His argument on hab. corp. brought by the Aylebury men viii. 159

* D E P O S I T I O N S. See E V I D E N C E.

D E R B Y, H E N R Y S T A N L E Y Earl of,

His procession as lord high steward of England on the trial of Philip Howard, earl of Arundel i. 164. xi. 27

* D E R W E N T W A T E R, J A M E S Earl of,

* Proceedings on an impeachment of high-treason against him, William lord Widdrington, William earl of Nithisdale, Robert earl of Carnwarth, William viscount Kenmure, and William lord Nairn, 1715. 2 Geo. I. vi. 1

* Mr. Lechmere's speech in the house of commons upon his motion for the impeachment vi. 1

* They are impeached, with George earl Wintoun, and articles sent up vi. 5

* All plead guilty, except the earl of Wintoun vi. 5

* The king's commission, appointing William lord Cowper lord high steward vi. 5

* The articles read vi. 6

* Earl of Derwentwater's answer vi. 8

* Lord Widdrington's answer vi. 9

* Earl of Nithisdale's answer vi. 10

* Lord Nairn's petition vi. 11

* Earl of Derwentwater's speech vi. 12

* Lord Widdrington's speech vi. 12

* Earl of Nithisdale's speech vi. 13

* Earl of Carnwarth's speech vi. 13

* Lord Kenmure's speech vi. 14

* Lord Nairn's speech vi. 14

* Lord high steward's speech before judgment vi. 14

* Sentence passed upon them, as in cases of high-treason vi. 16

* Earl of Derwentwater's dying speech vi. 16

* He is beheaded, with the lord Kenmure vi. 17

D E V I L.

Whether the devil can enable a man to fast beyond the time nature allows v. 501

D E V O N S H I R E, W I L L I A M Earl of

His case, on information in B. R. A. D. 1687, for assaulting colonel Culpeper in the king's palace xi. 133

Occasion of the assault xi. 133

Obliged to give bail for his appearance in B. R. xi. 133

His appearance recorded xi. 133

The earl pleads to the information his privilege as a peer of England xi. 133

This plea is over-ruled xi. 133

He pleads guilty to the information xi. 133

Is fined 30,000*l.* and committed till paid xi. 133

Argument to shew, that the earl's plea of privilege ought not to have been over-ruled xi. 133, 134

That the fine was excessive xi. 133, 134

That the commitment was illegal xi. 133, 135

Proceedings in the house of lords thereon after the Revolution xi. 135

D I A R Y.

Archbishop Laud's diary was printed in folio, and given to every lord i. 933

Extracts from lord Clarendon's diary x. 40. Ap.

* D I G B Y, Sir E V E R A R D i. 244. See W I N T E R R O -

B E R T, & al.

D I G E S T of the L A W concerning L I B E L S.

An extract from that publication xi. 304

* D I S A B I L I T Y. See W I T N E S S.

D I S C O N T I N U A N C E of P R O C E S S.

Disfranchis tested day after return of venire, a discontinuance v. 347

* Whether this be amendable v. 574. See D I S T R I N G I N G.

S R

D I 2

- DISGUISE viii. 313. See ARNOLD EDWARD.
DISNEY, WILLIAM, Esq. vii. 611
 His trial for high treason, 1685
 Evidence of his having printed the duke of Monmouth's declaration vii. 611
 His speech at his execution vii. 611
DISPENSING POWER. See iv. 399. ix. 292. xi. 91. n.
 Dispensing with the test and penal laws, was as mischievous as illegal iv. 166, 172
 Eleven judges agree to the dispensing power vii. 616. See v. 747
 If the penalty forfeited upon a penal statute, be given to the poor of the parish where the offence is committed, the king cannot dispense with the penalty for that offence, because the poor have an interest therein; but if the penalty be given part to the king, and part to the poor, the king may dispense with his own part, but not with the part of the poor i. 662. See ATKINS Sir ROBERT. ATWOOD WILLIAM.
 * BISHOPS the SEVEN, their Trial, iv. 304. HALES Sir EDWARD.
DISTRINGAS.
Distringas tested day after return of venire, discontinuance of process, and not amendable in a criminal case. iv. 568, 569, 570, 571. See WRITS.
DIVORCE.
 A verdict at law, a previous step necessary in order to obtain a divorce in parliament viii. 35. n. See v. 239
 Whether divorce for impotency authorizes a second marriage x. 23. Ap.
 Queen Anna Boleyn's divorce and attainder for adultery contradictory xi. 12. See ADULTERY. CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.
ESSEX, ROBERT Earl of, and Lady FRANCES his Countess.
 * HOWARD, Lady FRANCES, Countess of ESSEX, and ROBERT Earl of i. 315. NORFOLK, HENRY Duke of, and Lady MARY MORDAUNT, his Duchess.
DODD, SAMUEL.
 His speech on the bill of divorce between Henry Howard, duke of Norfolk, and lady Mary Mordaunt his duchess, in the house of commons v. 277
 His argument in defence of doctor Sacheverel, on the first article of his impeachment before the lords, for preaching seditiously v. 717
 As to the second article v. 752
 As to the third article v. 762, 763
 As to the fourth article v. 775
DODDERIDGE, Sir JOHN.
 His speech, when one of the justices of the court of King's-Bench, to the house of lords, for remanding four gentlemen on their babeas corpus, who were committed for refusing to pay the loan to king Charles the First vii. 185, 186
DOLBEN, Sir GILBERT.
 His speech in the case of Abby and White viii. 119
DOLBEN, Sir WILLIAM, J. B. R.
 Declines giving his opinion on earl Danby's case, who moved, on commitment by lords, to be bailed ii. 754
 Refused to bail his lordship ii. 760
 Shews the reasonableness of making statute 27th Eliz. chap. 2. and of putting it in force at that time ii. 1018
 Made a speech as recorder of London, previous to B. Harris's trial ii. 1037
 Doubted whether the plea of Fitzharris, to oust court of jurisdiction, was sufficient iii. 261
 On the trial of lord Gray, for seducing, carrying away, and adulterously soliciting lady Henrietta Berkley, sir William held, no court of justice could dispose of a man's wife; and questioned whether the court had power to commit a peer on an homine replegiando iii. 544
 He directs the jury on the trial of sir Miles Stapleton, baronet, for treason iii. 327
 Directs the jury, on the trial of Towyn and Prefficks, for treason iii. 87
 Examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 42
 His charge to the jury on the trial of John Cole iv. 509
 What was declared by him in King's-Bench court, concerning the many libellous pamphlets published in 1679, 30 Car. II. viii. 457. See ANDERSON LIONEL. TASBOROUGH JOHN.
 * DONN, HENRY i. 128. See BABINGTON, & al.
DORMER, ROBERT.
 His speech before giving the evidence on the trial of Elizabeth Collier, for a libel iii. 91
 His parliamentary speech relative to Abby and White viii. 108, 109
 Justice of the Common Pleas, his argument in the Prince's case xi. 295, 296, 299
 His opinion xi. 300, 302
DORSET, EDWARD Earl of,
 His speech on censuring and sentencing William Prynne and others, in Star-chamber, for writing Histriomastix i. 427
 Characterizes Catherine queen to Car. I. i. 428
 Parliament resolve, that warrant under his hand for imprisonment of William Prynne, is illegal i. 504.
DORSLAUS. See WHITFORD Sir PAUL.
DOUBLE TOM, returned out of the Country; or, the true Picture of a modern Whig.
 Censured as false, scandalous, and tending to disturb the peace of the kingdom vii. 80
 * DOVER, SIMON ii. 529. See TWYN, & al.
 * DOWNES, JOHN ii. 396. See REGICIDES.
DRAKE, Dr.
 Acknowledges himself author of a book entitled, "The History of the last Parliament, begun 1700," viii. 78
 Preface censured as false and scandalous, and doctor ordered to be prosecuted viii. 79
DROWNING. See COWPER SPENCER. STANDFIELD PHILIP.
DRUNKENNESS.
 The law reputes a drunkard voluntarius demon, and he is not at all the less excusable for committing a crime ii. 7
DUCK, ARTHUR. See REA Lord.
DUDLEY, Sir ANDREW. See GATES Sir JOHN.
DUDLEY, EDMUND, Esq.
 His trial for treason, at Guildhall, London, July 16, 1509, 1 Hen. VIII. xi. 3
 He was a gentleman of birth, and speaker of the parliament house xi. 3
 Is committed to the Tower xi. 3
 Accused in general for endeavouring to subvert the government xi. 3.
 See vii. 488. xi. 45
 Found guilty xi. 3, 4
 His head struck off xi. 4. See xi. 45
DUDLEY, JOHN. See NORTHUMBERLAND Duke of.
DUELS.
 In a set duel, there are mutual passes made between the combatants; yet if there be original malice between the parties, it is not the interchange of blows will make an alteration, or be any mitigation of the offence of killing ix. 63. By Holt, ch. j.
 If two be fighting a duel, though upon malice prepense, and one comes and takes part with him who he thinks may have the disadvantage in the combat, or that he is most affected to, not knowing of the malice, it is but manslaughter ix. 65. * See MURDER.
DUNNING, JOHN. See KINGSTON Duchess Dowager of.
DURESSES.
 A man dies by it, it is murder in the gaoler ix. 177
DYER, Sir JAMES.
 A person was punished for depraving the good judge sir James Dyer vii. 111
 Famous Dyer gave judgment in C. B. which was reversed in B. R. yet he discharged his conscience, and the reversal indicated no injustice in the judge vii. 109
E.
EARL, Sir WALTER.
 Imprisoned for not subscribing to a loan, brings his hab. corp. vii. 114.
 See DARNEL Sir THOMAS.
 * EARLES, JOHN, ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
EAST INDIA COMPANY. See MONOPOLIES.
ECCLESIASTICAL AFFAIRS. See COMPTON HENRY.
ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.
 The excellency of the English laws is not to be found in them Em. Pref. iii.
 When the distinction of ecclesiastical and spiritual causes, from civil and temporal causes, began in the world xi. 74. See APPEAL. CONVOCATION.
 * EDMONDSTON, PATRICK v. 634. See STIRLING JAMES, & al.
EDUCATION. See ROYAL FAMILY.
EDWARD the FIRST.
 King Edward the first opposed the pope's usurpation xi. 73
EDWARD the SECOND.
Edward the second suffered the pope to usurp after Edward the first's opposition xi. 73
EDWARD the THIRD.
 This king resisted the usurpation of the pope xi. 74
EDWARD the SIXTH.
 The commons had no journals before his reign xi. 54. n.
EGAN, JAMES. See MACDANIEL STEPHEN, & al.
EGERTON, THOMAS, Solicitor General,
 When made attorney-general i. 194
EGERTON, THOMAS Lord, Lord-keeper,
 His declaration on trial of the earls of Essex and Southampton, for treason, against Essex i. 200. See ABINGTON EDWARD. ELLES-MERE.
EJECTMENT. See IVY Lady. NEAL THOMAS.
ELECTION OF MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT. See PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.
ELIZABETH, Queen.
 * A noble saying applauded by her, concerning disrespectful words spoken of princes i. 197
 Lord Bacon remembered for the efficacy of the phrase, what was said by a principal judge, viz. "That he would never allow that queen Elizabeth should be a statute queen, but a common law queen xi. 80
 The prerogative grew arbitrary, and increased very fast towards the end of this queen's reign xi. 318
 The famous saying of queen Elizabeth best explains the words for the king, in the opinion of sir John Hawles; for the lord Burleigh, seeing sir Edward Coke, the then attorney-general, coming towards her, he said, Here is your attorney-general, qui pro dominâ reginâ sequitur. Nay, says she, I'll have the words altered, for it shall be, qui pro dominâ viritâ sequitur iv. 176. Em. Pref. i.
ELOQUENCE.
 This collection of trials affords many instances of eloquence Em. Pref. i.
ELLES, RICHARD.
 His trial on information in nature of quo warranto, by the king's attorney against him, to shew by what authority he claims to be mayor of New Romney, at the relation of B. Mann, at Maidstone assizes, Aug. 6, 1734, before lord chief justice Eyre x. 127. Ap.
 Mr. Knowler opens the information, and acquaints the jury, that the first issue they were to try, is, whether Richard Elles was one of the jurors of

- of New Romney in manner and form as alledged by his plea; and 2.
Whether the major part of the jurats and commonalty did chuse him mayor x. 128. Ap.
Serjeant Darnell, for the defendant, complains of the art used against him
x. 129. Ap.
Mr. serjeant Baynes, on the same side, mentions this information was granted by the court of King's-Bench, to be tried on five issues
x. 129. Ap.
Debate about what is a jurat x. 129. Ap.
Corporation books produced and read x. 130. Ap.
List of voters at the election of mayor x. 130. Ap.
Mr. Marsh's objections to the evidence x. 131. Ap.
Mr. Lacy states the issue to be tried x. 131. Ap.
Lord chief justice Eyre and Mr. Papillon had a dispute, whether the shorthand writer should take notes x. 132. Ap.
Mr. Papillon says he ordered him, but his lordship might do as he would
x. 132. Ap.
Chief justice then bid him go on x. 132. Ap.
Several witnesses examined x. 132. Ap.
Mr. serjeant Darnell, in support of the election x. 134. Ap.
Mr. serjeant Baynes, on same side x. 135. Ap.
Mr. Marsh mentions a point of law, which he desired might be saved
x. 135. Ap.
Mr. Lacy against it x. 136. Ap.
Mr. Smith on the same side x. 136. Ap.
Lord chief justice states the question to the jury, who find for the defendant x. 136. Ap.
Mr. serjeant Darnell, on the next issue, that he was not duly sworn
x. 136. Ap.
Evidence relating to it x. 136. Ap.
A man is guilty of perjury, if a clerk will administer an oath when a court forbid him x. 137. Ap.
Lord chief justice states the question on this issue to the jury, who find for the king x. 138. Ap.
ELLESMERE, THOMAS, Lord Chancellor,
His procession, as lord high steward of England, to the trial of the countess of Somerset i. 349
His charge to the peers on the trial of the earl of Somerset i. 351
His grace's directions to the king's counsel i. 351
His address to the countess on passing sentence of death on her i. 352
His address to the earl on his arraignment i. 352
Passes sentence of death on him i. 365
His speech in the Exchequer-chamber in the case of the postnati xi. 97
He says, that power and might of some potent persons oppressed justice and faithful judges, in Richard the second's time, for expounding the laws foundly and truly xi. 99. See vii. 238. EGERTON
THOMAS.
* ELLIOT, EDMUND, iv. 410. See GRAHAM Sir RICHARD. PRESTON Lord.
ELLIOT, Sir JOHN,
Proceedings against him, Denzil Holles, and Benjamin Valentine, esqrs.
for seditious speeches in parliament vii. 242
The words for which the information was brought vii. 242
They plead to the jurisdiction, and the attorney-general demurs vii. 242
Mr. Mason for the defendants, that the speeches contained matter of accusation against some great peers of the realm, therefore not cognizable out of parliament vii. 242
That the king cannot adjourn the house by verbal message, so no contempt in disobeying it vii. 244
That the detaining the speaker is only punishable in parliament vii. 244
Mr. Calthorp for Mr. Valentine vii. 244
The king shall not have his election of court, where the common law makes a prohibition vii. 246
Sir Robert Heath, attorney-general, for the king vii. 246
The judges agree, they have a jurisdiction to punish offences committed in parliament vii. 247
Their several speeches at delivering their opinions vii. 248
Defendants refuse to put in any other plea, and judgment upon a nihil dictum vii. 249
Defendants imprisoned during the king's pleasure; Sir John Elliot fined 2000l. Mr. Holles 1000 marks, and Mr. Valentine 500l. vii. 249
These proceedings resolved a breach of privilege vii. 249
Five thousand pounds awarded to each for his damages vii. 251
The judgment resolved illegal vii. 251
The information, plea, and demurrer, and writs of error vii. 253
Reversed by the lords vii. 259
ELLIS, Sir WILLIAM, Judge of the Common-Pleas,
His argument in the Exchequer-chamber, for affirming the judgment of the court of King's-Bench in the cause of Sir Samuel Barnardiston and Sir Wil- liam Seame vii. 431
* ELWES, Sir JERVIS,
* His trial as accessory before the fact to the murder of Sir Thomas Over- bury, Nov. 16, 1615, 13 Jac. I. i. 341
* Sir Jervis's defence i. 342
* He urges, that, though he did suspect a design of poisoning the deceased, the concealing of such suspicion would not make him accessory before the fact i. 343
* Franklin's confession read against him i. 344
* He is convicted, and sentence passed i. 344
* His execution i. 344
* EMBASSADOR. See AMBASSADOR.
EMLYN, SOLLOM, Counsellor at Law,
Was editor of Hale's Hist. Plac. Cr. and of State Trials, 6 volumes, folio edition, 1742; and of the admirable preface prefixed to that edition
x. 406. n.
His opinion on the case of Elizabeth Canning x. 406, 407
EMPSON, Sir THOMAS, Knight,
His trial for high-treason, at Guildhall, London, Oct. 1, 1509; 1 Hen. VIII.
xi. 3
His speech to the counsel xi. 3
Answer to it xi. 3
Reported to be a sieve-maker's son xi. 3
He is committed to the Tower xi. 3
Accused in general for endeavouring to subvert the government xi. 3.
See vii. 488. xi. 45.
Found guilty xi. 3, 4
His head struck off xi. 4. See xi. 45
* ENEMIES.
* Where the subjects of a foreign prince shall be deemed enemies, though the prince himself be in amity with this crown i. 115. v. 34
* Lawful for private men to arm themselves to oppose a common enemy
ii. 593
* What shall be construed an adhering to the king's enemies i. 733
ENGLESHIRE.
The law called 'Engleshire' explained ix. 61
ENGLISH.
All law proceedings must be in the English language, and wrote in a common legible hand and character, and in words at length Em. Pref. vii. n.
* ENQUEST. See JURY.
ENTICK, JOHN, Clerk,
Against Nathan Carrington and three others, messengers in ordinary to the king, court of C. B. Mich. Term, 6 Geo. III. 1765 xi. 313
Trespass for breaking and entering plaintiff's house, &c. xi. 313
Special justification under the warrant of the secretary of state xi. 313
Replication of his own wrong xi. 313
Special verdict xi. 313
Information before a justice of peace xi. 314
Secretary of state's warrant to take plaintiff and his books and papers
xi. 314
Delivered to defendants to be executed, who did execute the same without a constable xi. 314
They carried the books and papers to the law clerk, a justice of peace
xi. 314
Like warrants have issued since the Revolution xi. 314
No demand made by plaintiff of copy of warrant xi. 314
No action brought within six months xi. 314
Conclusion of special verdict xi. 314
Damages found, and last issue for plaintiff xi. 314 Arguments on special verdict by serjeant Leigh and Glynn, counsel for plaintiff xi. 314
Arguments thereon by Burland and Nares, king's serjeants, counsel for defendants xi. 315
Replication of counsel for plaintiff xi. 315
Observations of the lord chief justice xi. 315, 316
Arguments of counsel for the defendants on the second argument xi. 316 Argument of lord chief justice Camden, on delivering the judgment of the court xi. 316
Judgment for plaintiff xi. 316
ENVY.
Envy properly is a repining or being grieved at the happiness and prosperity of another. By Holt, chief justice ix. 63
ERROR.
No writ of error but in parliament, till stat. 27 Eliz. chap. 8. h. 553
Writ of error in treason vi. 42. Ap.
If error be committed in the proceedings on the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high steward, they shall be reversed by error in the court of King's-Bench vii. 248
Why writs of error lie in B. R. of England, to reverse erroneous judgments in the courts and parliament of Ireland viii. 347 Writ of error for the reversal of a judgment in felony or treason, is the right of the subject, and ought to be granted at his desire, and is not an act of grace or favour, to be denied or granted at pleasure iii. 986
Error lies not in proceedings on habeas corpus viii. 157 Error lies from B. R. to parliament, only for error in point of law, not in matter of fact viii. 62
Error lies in the King's-Bench in England to reverse a writ of error in parliament in Ireland i. 664. xi. 93. See ASHBY and WHITE.
LEACH DRYDEN.
Attainder of treason reversed for error in omitting words in the entry of the judgment iii. 752
ESCAPE.
Bringing up witnesses in execution is an escape iv. 2
Prisoner not to be shackled, but for fear of escape Em. Pref. xv.
Royal licence for prisoner in execution for debt, being a man very necessary for war, to go for defence of a place, held by all the judges not good
i. 530, 531. See PRISONERS.
* ESSEX, ARTHUR Earl of,
His death in the Tower. See BRADDON.
* ESSEX, ROBERT Earl of, and HENRY Earl of SOUTHAMPTON,
* Their trial for high-treason in conspiring the destruction of the queen, and raising an insurrection, Feb. 19, 1600, 43 Eliz. i. 197
* No challenge to a peer i. 198
* Serjeant Yelverton's speech i. 198
* Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general, aggravates the charge i. 199
* Witherington's deposition read as evidence, and the earl's answer i. 200
* Lord-keeper, earl of Worcester, and lord chief justice, their declaration
i. 200
* Sir Walter Raleigh's evidence i. 201
* Sir Ferdinando Gorges' confession read i. 202
* Evidence

- * Evidence of the prisoner's design to surprize the court, take the Tower, &c. i. 202
- * Devers's and others confession to the same effect i. 203
- * Essex designs to call a parliament i. 203
- * And to have altered the government i. 203
- * Essex's pretence that England was sold to the Spaniards i. 203
- * Essex charges sir Robert Cecil with saying, that none but the infants of Spain had a right to the crown of England; upon which ensues a severe expostulation between them i. 205
- * The earls conclude their defence i. 206
- * The terms Essex surrendered upon i. 207
- * The judges deliver their opinion to the peers after they were withdrawn i. 207
- * The prisoners are convicted i. 207
- * Sentence passed i. 208
- * Earl of Essex's execution i. 208
- * ESSEX, ROBERT Earl of, and his Wife,
- * Their divorce i. 315. x. 4. Ap. See HOWARD lady FRANCES.
- E S T O P P E L.
- Wherever a deed operates by way of estoppel, and the jury find it prout in a special verdict, it must be considered as an estoppel x. 433. See PLEA and PLEADINGS.
- E V I D E N C E.
- * Depositions of a person absent read in evidence, in a capital case i. 172
- * Contra v. 118
- * Circumstantial evidence allowed as good proof against a puritan minister i. 183
- * Urged in like manner by sir Edward Coke against sir Walter Raleigh i. 220
- * Allowed and urged by the court against a popish priest ii. 997
- * Verbal confessions of criminals may be offered as evidence against them ii. 1005
- * A letter read in evidence that was neither written to or by the prisoner ii. 714
- * A popish priest performing the function of a priest, evidence of his being in orders ii. 802, 962, 966
- * A solemn resolution, that in a case of treason there must be two witnesses believed by the jury iii. 56
- * What was sworn against a criminal at the trial of another, ought not to be given in evidence against him ii. 863. v. 73, 118
- * Evidence given that had no relation to the prisoners in particular, but only to the plot in general iii. 109, 798
- * Letters or certificates on a prisoner's behalf cannot be read as evidence ii. 1010
- * In case one witness proves an overt-act in one county, and one in another, it is good proof in either iii. 366
- * Two witnesses to every overt-act not necessary iii. 419
- * The hand-writing of a criminal proved, by comparing it with other writings of his; and by the witnesses swearing they believed it to be the prisoner's hand iii. 802. iv. 337, 447
- * Bail cannot be a witness for his principal iii. 842
- * What the defendant has said, no evidence for him iii. 843
- * In an indictment for forgery, another forgery was not allowed to be given in evidence iii. 844
- * A trial printed by authority no evidence iv. 29, 153
- * Where the prisoner would give in evidence any thing that was said or done at another trial, he ought to produce the record iv. 41
- * A narrative sworn in the house of peers admitted in evidence iv. 46
- * The journals of the lords and commons, votes, and addresses, given in evidence iii. 152. iv. 376, 388
- * All people shall be allowed copies of such records as may be evidence for them iv. 417
- * Treasonable papers found on a person, the jury may from the circumstances judge of the party's being privy to the design, though there be no direct evidence of it iv. 481
- * Evidence may be given of facts done before or after the time laid in the indictment, so it be before the indictment preferred iii. 394. iv. 569
- * No exception can be made to the proof after verdict iv. 596
- * Evidence may be given of treason committed in another county than that where the indictment is found iii. 403. iv. 639, 640
- * No evidence ought to be given without first opening it iv. 692. ix. 385
- * So the evidence be probable, it is sufficient for the grand jury to find the bill iii. 419. v. 3
- * No evidence ought to be given in capital cases, but in the prisoner's presence v. 85, 118
- * Whether there ought not to be as full evidence on a bill of attainder as in other cases? v. 124, 124, 132
- * The same evidence required on impeachments as in inferior courts v. 119
- * No evidence ought to be given of an overt-act not laid in the indictment, unless it tend to prove some overt-act that is laid in the indictment iv. 691, 697. v. 22
- * No evidence ought to be given of the contents of a letter, unless the letter be produced iv. 194. v. 31
- * The examination of a criminal before a magistrate given in evidence against him at his trial iv. 135
- * The grand jury may not send for other evidence than is produced on the part of the king v. 423
- * The actions of another given in evidence against the defendant v. 488
- * Evidence given of facts done after the information exhibited v. 492
- * A printed proclamation not to be admitted in evidence v. 510
- * Extracts out of printed books admitted to be given in evidence v. 728
- * Examinations of witnesses, who might have been produced visa voce, frequently given in evidence against a criminal anciently i. 95, 315, 347
- * Contra v. 64.

- * Examinations taken in another court where they shall be read in evidence ii. 945. iii. 152
- * Examination of a witness withdrawn read in evidence against a criminal iv. 496. v. 68
- * Examination of a witness before the coroner read at the trial against the prisoner, though the witness gave his evidence visa voce in court ii. 534
- * In what cases a juror may be examined by the prisoner iv. 748
- * If an examination in writing be taken by a justice of peace, no evidence can be given of what passed at that examination, unless the writing be produced vi. 203
- * The confession of a prisoner can only affect himself, and not any person joined with him in the accusation iii. 474. iv. 195. vi. 218
- * Examinations of others and of prisoner read against him i. 330. ii. 547
- Examination not signed by party adjudged evidence against a third person i. 218
- Wife's actions given in evidence against her husband i. 361
- An old prophecy given in evidence i. 100
- Wife may be a witness against her husband in rape; so resolved i. 388; but not otherwise v. 476
- Examinations taken without oath, unless of the party to be tried, cannot be used; so ruled by all the judges i. 388: See i. 360.
- Earl Somerset's petition to the king, read in evidence against him on his trial i. 358
- * Persons convicted on circumstantial evidence. i. 182. ii. 968. v. 115
- One witness, with concurring circumstances, sufficient in treason ii. 8
- * Hearsay not to be admitted in evidence ii. 279. iii. 757, 841, 883. vi. 414, 415, 475, 644
- * Admitted i. 222. ii. 251, 387, 881. iii. 98. vi. 803
- Hearsay evidence admitted for the king, but not for the prisoner iii. 78, 723
- Hearsay evidence admitted to confirm another's testimony iv. 48
- A peer may give evidence, though a judge in the cause iii. 141
- Any act discovering imagination to depose, destroy, or imprison the king, is evidence of compassing his death iii. 817. See TREASON.
- Justices who took examination of prisoners, not allowed to read examination as evidence iii. 474, 476
- Votes of the house of commons no evidence iv. 39
- Examination of witness before privy council, shewn him to refresh his memory at the trial iii. 478
- Any thing under the great seal is evidence iv. 335
- Rules of evidence dispensed with by court and counsel iii. 842, 843
- A printed history is no evidence in a court of law vii. 601
- No authority that any thing should be permitted to be given in evidence on the trial of civil matters, which should not be permitted to be given in evidence in treason iv. 194
- Indictment must express, that party published writing, in order to give it in evidence in treason iv. 197
- When books, papers, writings, deeds, letters, or any written or printed matters are read in evidence, they should be wholly and not partially read iv. 198, 202
- Examination of prisoner read in evidence against him on trial iv. 135. v. 210
- Of all evidence, the finding of papers in party's possession, the weakest iv. 182
- Papers found in custody of party accused, read in evidence as overt act of treason he is charged with. See Holt 190. x. 77. n.
- Circumstantial evidence admitted of high-treason in Scotland iv. 295
- Though examinations are no evidence against any but the examinant, they are not yet to be suppressed, because naming others; but ought to be read, with above caution to jury iii. 474. n.
- Lord chancellor Cowper's speech, where evidence depended on circumstances x. 56
- Evidence admitted of what was done after information exhibited v. 492
- To convict a person upon the evidence of probabilities, in capital matters, especially in treason, is most dangerous and unwarrantable iv. 204
- Bare opinion, no proof iii. 757. See WITNESSES.
- The nature and weight of the evidence of character viii. 246
- On plea of the statute of limitations of actions, lord Holt said, matters before six years may be given in evidence, to explain occurrences since, but to no other purpose viii. 35
- Quere*, the evidence of London Gazettes viii. 213
- Prisoner may give in evidence what was sworn at another trial in his defence v. 74
- Likeness of hands no evidence of a man's hand-writing in criminal cases iv. 342. v. 79. See SIDNEY.
- Unless letter be produced, no evidence ought to be given of contents thereof v. 31
- Examination taken by justices of peace as entered in lords journal, read as evidence for prisoner iii. 156
- Persons convicted on presumptive evidence in inferior courts v. 115
- Care of legislature to no purpose in providing two witnesses, if bill may attain upon one only v. 118
- No two nations agree in manner of proof v. 120
- Evidence may be legal in parliament, that is not so in courts below v. 134
- Letters though not particularly laid in indictment, may be given in evidence to prove high-treason vi. 77
- Violent presumption, what i. 220. viii. 69
- Improbability not of weight against positive evidence iii. 28
- Whether what deceased said on his death-bed, examination not being produced, may be given in evidence? vi. 203. ix. 161. x. 504
- How far confession may be given in evidence of treason viii. 255
- Sentence in spiritual court against a marriage in suit of jactitation of marriage, is not conclusive evidence xi. 262

Examination of witnesses taken by coroner, they being since dead or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of coroner, that it is the same without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421. See Id. 424

Examination of a witness taken by coroner, the former being absent by means of prisoner, upon proof that witness was so detained, the same may be read; but oath that all endeavours used to find out such witness were vain, is not sufficient to authorize the reading such examination vii. 421. See Id. 424

The king's counsel may privately manage the evidence to the grand inquest, in order to the finding the bill of indictment ii. 302

Whether paper signed by prisoner may be read against him ix. 702, 703
No other evidence being given against prisoner, but similitude of hands, to convict him of writing treasonable papers, he produced the act for reversing Sidney's attainder, wherein the legislature declared that comparison of hands was not legal evidence in treason; which was read; and prisoner acquitted x. 42. Ap.

If original corporation book is produced, copy thereof cannot be read x. 142

No law can force evidence out of the owner's custody by process xi. 323
Where adversary has got possession, by force or fraud; of your own proper evidence, there is no way to get at it, but by action xi. 323

Lord Bacon observed, that evidence was the lantern of justice i. 352

A direct sentence in a suit upon promise of marriage against the contract, is evidence against such contract, in an action upon the promise for damages. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

A sentence of nullity of marriage is conclusive evidence in a personal action, against a defence founded upon a supposed coverture. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

Sentence of nullity, and sentence in affirmance of marriage, conclusive evidence on a question of legitimacy, arising incidentally upon a claim to a real estate. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

Sentence in cause of jactitation is, upon a title in ejectment, evidence against a marriage; and so it is in personal actions immediately founded on a supposed marriage: So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261. See EXAMINATIONS. OVERT ACT. TREASON. WITNESSES.

EVIOT, PETER. See GOWRIE Earl of.
EXAMINATIONS.

Examinations upon oath, before a committee of lords, concerning the prosecution of lord Ruffel, Algernon Sidney, sir Thomas Armstrong, Henry Cornish, alderman, &c. viii. 476. * See EVIDENCE. POWRIE WILLIAM.

* EXCEPTIONS

* To an indictment ought to be taken before plea pleaded ii. 89. v. 18

* Exceptions taken to an indictment, after plea pleaded iv. 694

Why prisoners should be permitted to make even captious exceptions Em. Pref. viii.

Exceptions to indictments for treason must be taken before plea pleaded, tho' stat. 7 W. III. chap. 3, says before jury sworn v. 18

EXCEETER, Marquis of;

Tried by his peers, 2 December 1539, 30th Henry VIII. xi. 24

Sent to the Tower xi. 24

Accused xi. 24

Pleaded not guilty xi. 25

Found guilty xi. 25

Judgment xi. 25

His counsels attainted for treason xi. 25

She died a natural death xi. 25

EXCHEQUER and EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

Case of the bankers, in Exchequer xi. 138

In Exchequer-chamber xi. 141

Sir Francis Bacon's speech for Calvin (postnati cause) in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 79

Lord chancellor Ellesmere's speech in same cause xi. 97. See BANKERS

CASE. BATES JOHN. BATHURST CHARLES. POSTNATI.

EXCOMMUNICATION.

This punishment was formerly greatly dreaded; but now, from the abuse of it, slighted and despised Em. Pref. iii.

* EXECUTIONS.

* Three gentlemen tried and fined for tampering with a prisoner at the place of execution i. 333

The trumpets were ordered to sound, to prevent sir Henry Vane being heard on his addressing the people on the scaffold, just previous to his execution ii. 461. See ii. 640

Execution Dock, the usual place for the execution of pirates v. 18

Writ for the execution of sir John Fenwick, in Latin v. 136

An account of what passed at the execution of sir William Parkyns and sir John Friend, on their being absolved at Tyburn x. 43. Ap.

Mr. sheriff Janssen commended for refusing the assistance of the military in the execution of criminals xi. 282

In foreign countries, magistrate always present at execution of sentence, and gives directions Em. Pref. xii.

After a traitor had been hung six minutes, he was cut down, and having life in him as he lay upon the block to be quartered, the executioner gave him several blows on the breast; which not having the desired effect, he immediately cut his throat; after which he took his head off, then ripped him open, and took out his bowels and heart, and threw them into a fire which consumed them; then he slashed his four quarters ix. 552

A traitor was cut down and bowelled with great cruelty while he was alive; another was taken down from the gallows alive too, and cut up; a third broke the rope, and fell down from the gallows, and was presently seized on by the executioner, his privities cut off, and his bowels taken out while he was alive; four others were executed with equal cruelty i. 141

Queen Elizabeth being informed of the severity used in the above execution. Vol. XI.

tions, and detesting such cruelty, gave express orders for more favourable usage; and accordingly other traitors were permitted to hang till they were quite dead, before they were cut down and bowelled i. 142

One of the regicides was cut down alive; for after he was opened, he mounted himself; and gave the executioner a box on the ear ii. 407, 408

One of the sheriff's men, by orders, brought a regicide; that he might see another who had been just cut down and brought to be quartered; and the hangman came to him all besmeared in blood, and rubbing his bloody hands together, tauntingly asked him how he liked this work ii. 413

Execution in different county to that wherein crime was committed i. 197, 209, 211; 227. vi. 332. x. 378

If prisoner after sentence passed is respited, he cannot be executed by virtue of any warrant from the king; but a new rule must be made in the court of King's Bench for his execution vi. 332

The earl of Essex was not dispatched till the third stroke i. 210

Nor lord Balmerino x. 185

If a man die in execution, the law is satisfied, and his creditor is without remedy vi. 413

A convict, after he had hanged a pretty while, clapt his hands together aloud three times i. 314

Lord chief justice Tresilian, after being hanged, had his throat cut i. 13

A parricide was thus executed in Scotland; he was hanged on a gibbet till dead; his tongue cut out and burnt upon a scaffold; his right hand cut off and affixed on a public place; and his body hung in chains iv. 304

An extraordinary execution of a criminal by the mob in Scotland vi. 794

Charles's head would have been brought down to the block by violence, had he not patiently submitted i. 1044. See BEHEADING. BURNING.

The execution may vary from the judgment i. 63; 394. iii. 215. iv. 129.

vi. 16. See GRAY lady JANE. HOWARD CATHARINE, queen to Henry VIII. LISLE lady ALICIA. MORE sir THOMAS. SALISBURY countess of. STAFFORD lord viscount.

EXETER, Bishop of,

His letter to the house of commons on their debates relating to the liberty of the subject viii. 191

EXMENCE, WILLIAM. See MIDDLEMORE HUMPHRY.

EXTORTION.

Extortion is taken for any oppression by extort power; or by colour of pretence of right vi. 740. See MAGGLESFIELD Earl of.

EYRE, JAMES, Recorder of LONDON. See WILKES JOHN.

EYRE, Sir ROBERT, Solicitor General,

His speech in maintenance of the first article in the impeachment against doctor Sachverel for preaching seditiously, and of the insufficiency of the doctor's answer thereto v. 669

His reply to the doctor's defence of the charge contained in the said article v. 798

EYRE, Sir ROBERT, Justice B.R.

Censures resolution of judges in dr. Sachverel's case as erroneous and against law vi. 330, 331

His argument in the Prince's case xi. 296

His chancellor xi. 299

His opinion xi. 300, 302

EYRE, Lord Chief Justice C.B.

Sums up evidence on Bambridge's trial ix. 248

A charge against him presented to the house of commons, for personally visiting Thomas Bambridge, late warden of the Fleet, while prisoner in Newgate under a commitment of that house ix. 251

Honourably cleared ix. 254

His opinion on a question against John Gibbon, at the suit of the crown x. 119. Ap.

Sums up the evidence x. 126. Ap.

Disputes the right of taking notes by a short-hand writer x. 132. Ap.

States the question to the jury x. 136, 138. Ap.

EYRE, SAMUEL, Justice B.R.

Attends house of lords, and gives his reasons for receiving plea of Charles Knowles, that he was earl of Banbury, after the resolution of the house that he had no title to that honour viii. 55

EYRES, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law;

His speech for Corbet on appeal of murder ix. 168

Of counsel for Kinnerley, tried for forgery ix. 83, 92

Of counsel for Oneby on arguing special verdict for murder ix. 18

Moves in arrest of judgment for the rebels convicted in 1746 ix. 560

1. That the issue of the commission is not set forth in the caption of the indictment,

2. It is not alledged in the indictment, that the prisoners were in custody at the time of the indictment, agreeably to the words of the act of parliament ix. 560

Over-ruled ix. 560

F.

FABRICAS, ANTHONY;

Proceedings in action by him against lieutenant-general Mosyn, governor of Minorca, first in the Common-Plas, and afterwards in B. R. A. D.

1773 and 1774, for false imprisonment and banishment xi. 162

Names of counsel for Fabricas xi. 162

Names of counsel for Mosyn xi. 162

Names of the jury xi. 162

Mr. Pickham opens the declaration xi. 162

Mr. Serjeant Glynne's speech on behalf of the plaintiff xi. 162

Evidence on part of the plaintiff xi. 162

Mr. Serjeant Davy's speech on behalf of the defendant xi. 162

Evidence on part of the defendant xi. 170

Mr.

Mr. serjeant Glyn's reply xi. 177
Mr. justice Gould's charge to the jury xi. 180
Verdict 30bol. damages xi. 183

F A G G, Sir JOHN,

Proceedings in the house of commons on an appeal brought in the house of lords, against sir John Fagg, and other members, by dr. Shirley vii. 453
The commons send a message to the lords, to desire they will have a regard to their privileges vii. 453

Dr. Shirley ordered into custody, and lord Mohun forcibly takes away the serjeant's warrant vii. 454

The appeal resolved a breach of privilege, and whosoever shall appear at the bar of the lords house, to prosecute a suit against a member of the house of commons, deemed an infringer and breaker of privilege vii. 455

Sir Nicholas Staughton ordered into custody, for prosecuting an appeal against Mr. Onslow, during privilege of parliament vii. 455

The lords declare it their undoubted privilege to receive and determine in time of parliament, appeals from an inferior court, though a member of either house be concerned vii. 456

The commons resolve it their undoubted privilege, that none of their members be summoned to attend the house of peers during the time of privilege vii. 456

Conference upon the appeal against Mr. Onslow vii. 457

The appeal of Crisp against Dalmahoy, reported from the journals of the lords vii. 458

Counsel refuse to plead, in regard Mr. Dalmahoy was a member of parliament vii. 458

Ordered by the house of lords to appear, and plead vii. 458

Ordered into custody by the house of commons vii. 459

The lords complain of their commitment as a breach of privilege against the house of peers; order them to be set at liberty, and forbid the lieutenant of the Tower, and all keepers of prisons, to detain them vii. 460

The counsel arrested in Westminster-hall by a fresh warrant from the speaker, and committed to the Tower vii. 460

A conference with the lords upon that subject vii. 460

Both houses attend the king, and his speech to them vii. 461

Resolved, sir John Fagg should have the protection of the house, in the case of his appeal vii. 462

The lieutenant of the Tower, served with writs of habeas corpus to bring before the king and his parliament at Westminster the four counsel committed, forbid to make any return vii. 462

Resolved, that the order of the lords for issuing the writs of habeas corpus is illegal, and that no person committed by the commons be made to appear, and receive any determination in the house of peers, during that session vii. 462

The king's speech, and the parliament prorogued vii. 463

Lord Shaftsbury's speech in the house of lords vii. 463

A day appointed by the lords for hearing sir John Fagg's cause vii. 466

Resolution of the commons concerning appeals against members affixed in the lobby, Westminster-hall gate, and inns of court and chancery vii. 467

The parliament prorogued again vii. 467

Protestations and reasons of several lords, for the dissolution of the parliament, entered the day the parliament was prorogued vii. 467

F A L K L A N D, Lord,

His speech at presenting the articles of impeachment against lord-keeper Finch vii. 315

F A L S E I M P R I S O N M E N T.

Record of cause in action for false imprisonment vi. 50. Ap. See LEACH DRYDEN, and MONEY, & al. PAPILLON THOMAS, and Sir WILLIAM PRITCHARD. * PRISONERS.

F A L S E R E T U R N.

The court of King's Bench adjourned a case on a false return into the house of commons, propter difficultatem viii. 98. See PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.

FALSE TOKENS ix. 76. See HALES WILLIAM

* FARREL, RICHARD ii. 585. See MESSINGER, & al.

* FARWELL, JOHN iii. 501. See THOMPSON, & al.

F A U L C O N E R, R I C H A R D,

His trial at the King's Bench for perjury, 1652 vii. 343

The indictment for swearing before the commissioners for compounding estates, that the lord Craven was with king Charles at Breda vii. 343

That a petition was delivered to the said king, calling the commonwealth barbarous and inhuman rebels vii. 343

One of the witnesses against Faulconer imprisoned till the sessions was past vii. 344

Another indictment found against him in Middlesex, the former being vicious vii. 345

A copy of Faulconer's deposition produced, and proved to be the same, upon which votes of confiscation of the lord Craven's estate passed vii. 346

Proofs of the falsity of Faulconer's deposition vii. 347

The original petition presented at Breda (falsely related in Faulconer's deposition), produced vii. 348

Proofs against the credit of Faulconer vii. 349

Faulconer's defence, that the substance of his information was true, and proofs offered of his great service to the commonwealth vii. 350

Though a mistake in what he swore, yet not maliciously, nor corruptly done vii. 352

Reply of the counsel against him vii. 352

Found guilty vii. 353

* FAWKS, GUY, i. 232. See WINTER, and the Conspirators in the Powder-Plot.

F A Z A K E R L Y, T H O M A S,

Of counsel for Franklin ix. 260

His speech in defence of Franklin ix. 265

F E A R. See i. 8. n.

The fear of having houses burnt, or goods spoiled, is no excuse in the eye of the law for joining and marching with rebels

The only fear that doth excuse is the present fear of death; and this fear must continue all the time the party remains with the rebels ix. 567

It is incumbent on every man that makes fear his defence, to shew that he joined for fear of death, and that he quitted the service as soon as he could ii. 7. ix. 568

The common law does not require the circumstance of putting in fear in order to constitute the crime of robbery x. 434, 445. See BEL-

CHIER's CASE x. 438

F E E S.

Observations on those of gaolers Em. Pref. xiv.

Fees to counsel exorbitant Em. Pref. iii.

* F E L O N Y.

* One convicted of felony for impugning the queen's authority in causes ecclesiastical i. 176

* The person prostituting his body in sodomy, held guilty of felony

i. 396

* If the king kills a man, 'tis no felony in him i. 104

* Felony may be tried in any county whither the thief carries the stolen goods iv. 349. v. 524

* Marrying a woman while she is under a force, is felony, though the person marrying her is not the author of the force v. 477

Though the judgment in felony is always "to be hanged by the neck," yet the party may be beheaded, for that is no part of the sentence iv. 129.

See AUDLEY Lord. SOMERSET Duke of.

Observations on trials for felony Em. Pref. viii.

Maliciously shooting at a person, though death doth not ensue, is felony

viii. 290

Indictment against a peer of the realm for treason and felony vii. 16, 17

Counsel permitted to examine the witnesses on behalf of a peer in a case of felony xi. 239

On indictments for felony, prisoner is not allowed copy thereof, nor list of jury, nor assistance of counsel, as to matter of fact Em. Pref. viii.

A man convicted of felony, having got the king's pardon, allowed a legal witness, though not burnt in the hand x. 75. Ap. See CAVE-

NAGH MORRIS, & al. ARNOLD EDWARD. HAWKINS RO-

BERT. LEWIS JAMES. MAY WILLIAM. TURNER JAMES.

UDALL JOHN.

F E L T O N, J O H N,

Though he stabbed a prime minister in the execution of an high commission, and though he confessed the fact both before the council and court of King's Bench, and justified it as a public service to the nation, in the most daring and impious manner, he was yet brought to trial, without superfeding any of the ordinary methods and circumstances of justice

vi. 408. See CONSCIENCE.

* F E N W I C K, Sir JOHN,

* His case on a bill of attainder brought into the house of commons against him, Nov. &c. 1696, 8 W. III. v. 40

* The introduction, shewing how the bill of attainder came to be brought in v. 40

* The house put sir John upon making a discovery to them v. 40

* He insists that they should secure him that his confession should not be made use of against him; which they decline v. 40

* He desires time to recollect himself, which they refuse him; and vote a bill of attainder v. 41

* Fuller, the impostor, offers to give evidence against sir John Fenwick

v. 42

* Counsel and solicitor assigned sir John v. 42

* Agreed that the serjeant with the mace should stand by the prisoner at the bar during the hearing v. 43

* The bill read v. 44

* Mr. serjeant Gould opens the charge in the indictment, and shews the methods used by sir John to protract his trial v. 44

* Mr. serjeant Lovel, recorder, shews the nature of their evidence v. 45

* Sir John's counsel desire time for their defence v. 46

* And are allowed till the Monday following v. 57

* Resolved, that the counsel for the bill may examine witnesses as to the reasons contained in the indictment, as well as to the allegations in the bill v. 57

* The indictment against sir John read v. 58

* Porter produced, to prove the facts laid v. 58

* Sir John's counsel oppose Porter's being examined as to my lady Fen- wick's practising with him about his evidence; for that what the wife says or does can be no evidence for or against her husband v. 59

* And for that there was no suggestion in the bill, of Porter's being tampered with by sir John himself v. 60

* Resolved, that Porter should be examined as to his being tampered with

v. 62

* Roe examined as to his being dealt with to discredit Goodman's testimony v. 63

* Sir John's counsel oppose the reading of Goodman's examination taken by Mr. Vernon, a justice of the peace, as illegal evidence v. 64

* Admitted that, where a witness could be produced, his examination ought not to be read against a prisoner v. 64

* Sir Thomas Trevor holds, that an examination before a justice may be read, where the witness cannot be had v. 68

* Resolved, that Goodman's examination should be read v. 71

* Sir John's counsel oppose the calling a grand jurymen to give an account of the evidence Goodman gave, to induce them to find the bill against sir John v. 72

* Which is over-ruled without debate v. 72

* Sir John's counsel oppose the reading the record of Cook's conviction

v. 73

* What is sworn against the prisoner at the trial of another, is no evidence against him v. 73

* But a prisoner may make use of what was sworn at another trial in his defence v. 74

* Resolved,

- * Resolved, that the record of Cook's conviction be read v. 76
- * Sir John's counsel oppose the calling a juryman to depose what evidence Goodman gave at Cook's trial v. 76
- * Resolved, that witnesses might be examined to what Goodman said at the trial of Cook v. 78
- * Likeness of hands no evidence of a man's hand-writing v. 79
- * Moved to take Mr. Dighton, Sir John's solicitor, into custody v. 81
- * Sir John's counsel enter upon his defence. Sir Thomas Powis's argument; he shews the hardship of making an act to condemn a man ex post facto v. 82
- * Shews, that even the regicides were admitted to a trial by a jury v. 82
- * No evidence can be given against a man on a trial for his life, but in his presence v. 85
- * Sir John Hawles's opinion, that a conspiracy to levy war was not an overt-act of compassing the king's death v. 85
- * Sir Bartholomew Shower's arguments against the bill v. 86
- * He urges, that the most that could be done in justice, was to supply the want of the absent witness v. 87
- * That a consult, in my lord Ruffel's case, was held to be no overt-act; and that was all that was pretended to be proved here v. 88
- * Mr. serjeant Gould's reply v. 89
- * One witness sufficient in some species of treason v. 89
- * Resolved by the judges, that consulting to levy war was treason v. 89
- * Mr. serjeant Lovel's reply v. 89
- * Mr. Vernon's evidence of the artifices used by Sir John to delay his trial v. 93
- * Debates upon the second reading the bill v. 95
- * Judges ought not to go according to their private knowledge v. 96
- * The lord Preston pardoned on making a pretended discovery, which he afterwards denied v. 96
- * One boiled alive for poisoning people v. 97
- * Lord Cromwell and Mortimer attainted without being heard v. 97
- * A judge ought to be a witness for the prisoner, if he knows any thing that may acquit him; and contra v. 98
- * Bills of attainder universally branded, where the offender was forthcoming v. 98
- * Suggested by the court-party, that they had no design against Sir John's life, but to bring him to a confession v. 100
- * The lord Delamere acquitted, because there was but one witness against him v. 104
- * A bill of attainder against one for killing a foreign minister, ten years after the fact, and after he had been tried at common-law v. 105
- * The senate of Venice executed conspirators against the state, after they had promised them pardon v. 108
- * Nothing but an absolute necessity could justify the passing this bill v. 109
- * The parliament are to declare what's treason only, when the cause comes before them from inferior court, by 25 Edw. III. v. 110
- * And the judgment to be given in the house of lords v. 111
- * Bills of attainder used to begin by impeachment; and then the witnesses were upon oath v. 111
- * Whether it be just in the parliament to take away a man's life on less evidence than in inferior courts v. 114
- * Persons convicted on presumptive evidence in inferior courts v. 115
- * Whether the parliament acted according to law in declaring the throne vacant on the abdication; or whether they went upon that principle, that the people might constitute a new government for their preservation? v. 116
- * Whether the law of God requires two witnesses in treason, as was asserted? v. 117
- * The care of the legislature, in providing there should be two witnesses, to no purpose, if a bill of attainder may be brought in when there is but one v. 118
- * Neither depositions taken when the party was not present to cross-examine the witness, nor any thing that was sworn at another's trial, ought to be produced in evidence against a criminal v. 119
- * The bill ordered a third reading v. 119
- * Debates on the third reading v. 119
- * The same evidence is required to convict a man on impeachments as in inferior courts v. 119
- * No two nations agree in their manner of proof v. 120
- * Lord Cutts presses the passing of the bill, from the danger the government was in v. 122
- * Young's plot against the bishop of Rocheſter v. 123
- * It is affirmed, that two witnesses were required in treason by the laws of God, and the laws of all nations v. 123
- * Never any man before taken out of the hands of inferior courts, after plea pleaded and issue joined there, and cut off by an act of attainder v. 124
- * Instances of several attainders reversed, because they were against law; which shews that the law ought to be the rule, even in bills of attainder v. 125
- * If they were to be guided by one statute, as to the nature of the fact, why not by another, as to the evidence required to prove the fact v. 125
- * These bills of attainder observed to be fatal to the promoters of them v. 125
- * If it be a good reason to reverse attainders, because the party had not the benefit of the laws, the same reason holds against the enacting them v. 125
- * This the first bill of attainder began in the house of commons, except the duke of Monmouth's v. 125
- * Objected, if they were to have two witnesses in treason, according to the Yewish law, why not in murder too? v. 126
- * That if it were the eternal law of God to have two witnesses, where was that law before Edw. VI. and why was it otherwise in some species of treason still? v. 127
- * Admitted, that in treason there ought to be two witnesses v. 127
- * Whether the attainder of a commoner can begin in the house of peers v. 127
- * The bill brought in, not because of any danger the government was in, but to vindicate a person of honour v. 129
- * The danger of the government but a pretence v. 130
- * Though Sir John's prevaricating till a witness was withdrawn, &c. was not a sufficient reason to put him to death, it was sufficient to justify their proceeding in this manner against him v. 133
- * It is urged, that the evidence given might be legal evidence in parliament, though not in the courts below; as appeared by the very acts they insisted upon on the other side v. 134
- * The bill passed by the commons v. 136. See vi. 409
- * The writ for his execution v. 130
- * His dying speech v. 136. See PORTER captain GEORGE.
List of the lords who voted for and against Sir John Fenwick's bill of attainder x. 63. Ap.
- * FENWICK, JOHN ii. 696. See * IRELAND, & al.
* ii. 829. * WHITE, WHITEHEAD, & al.
- The jury discharged of him ii. 719. See ii. 830
- * FERNLEY, JOHN iv. 130. See CORNISH.
FERRERS, LAWRENCE Earl,
- His trial for the murder of John Johnson, in full parliament, in April, 1760 x. 478
- The lord high steward's (Robert lord Henley) procession x. 479
- His commission x. 480
- Certiorari* and return x. 481
- The lord high steward's speech to the prisoner x. 482
- Mr. Perrot opens the indictment x. 482
- Mr. attorney-general (Charles Pratt) states the charge most fully and most impartially x. 482
- The evidence x. 485
- Instance of the attorney-general's strict justice towards the prisoner x. 504
- The defence read x. 508
- The solicitor-general's observations thereon x. 509
- His remarks on insanity x. 513
- Prisoner found guilty of murder x. 515
- His address thereon to the lords read x. 515
- The lord high steward's speech to the prisoner on passing sentence of death x. 516
- His case, with opinion of judges relating to respiting his execution x. 208. Ap.
- Account of his behaviour on the day of his dissolution x. 213. Ap.
- Hanged at Tyburn x. 215. Ap.
- His body dissected at Surgeons-Hall x. 216. Ap.
- Buried at St. Pancras x. 216. Ap.
- F E T T E R S. See IRONS.
F E T T I P L A C E,
- Of counsel for F. Smith ii. 1042
- FILMER, BEVERSHAM*,
Opens appeal against Corbet ix. 152
- * FIELDING, ROBERT, Esq.
- * His trial for bigamy, at the Old-Bailey, December 4, 1706, 5 Ann. v. 610
- * The indictment, for feloniously marrying Barbara duchess of Cleveland, Mary Wadsworth, his first wife, being then alive v. 610
- * Mr. Raymond opens the indictment v. 611
- * Sir James Montague opens the evidence v. 611
- * Mrs. Villars's evidence of her imposing Mrs. Wadsworth on Mr. Fielding for Mrs. Deleau; and of their marriage by a popish priest v. 612
- * Mr. Fielding admits his marriage with the duchess v. 615
- * Mrs. Deleau's evidence of Mr. Fielding coming to see her garden v. 616
- * Three letters from Mr. Fielding, directed to the countess of Fielding, produced to prove he acknowledged his marriage with a person whom he took for Mrs. Deleau v. 620
- * Mr. Fielding enters upon his defence v. 621
- * He endeavours to prove Mrs. Wadsworth married to another man, before the time she was said to be married to him v. 621
- * Sir James Montague's observations on the evidence, and on Mr. Fielding's defence v. 624
- * Another letter of Mr. Fielding's produced in evidence against him, directed to Anne countess of Fielding v. 625
- * Evidence that Mrs. Wadsworth's pretended marriage with another person was a sham v. 625
- * Mr. justice Powell directs the jury v. 625
- * He tells them, that though Mrs. Villars's character was but indifferent, he thought her evidence well supported; but however, if they thought Mrs. Wadsworth's marriage with another man before she married Mr. Fielding proved, they must acquit him v. 628
- * Mr. Fielding is convicted v. 628
- * The judges do not give judgment till next sessions; and accepted bail for his appearance then v. 628
- * January 15, judgment is given, and Mr. Fielding prays his clergy, and produced the queen's warrant to suspend the burning in the hand v. 628
- * The duchess institutes a cause of nullity of marriage in the Court of Arches against Mr. Fielding, and obtains a decree that she was free from any bond of marriage with the said Robert Fielding, and was at liberty to marry with any other person v. 628
- * Mr. Fielding renounces all benefit of appeal v. 629
- * FIENNES, Colonel NATHANIEL,
His trial before a council of war for cowardice, Dec. 14, 1643, 19 Car. I. i. 766
- * William Prynn and Clement Walker, his prosecutors i. 766
- * They insist strenuously that the trial may be public and open i. 766
- * Which is over-ruled, after long debate i. 768
- * Ten articles exhibited against him; charging him with cowardly surrendering the city of Bristol i. 768
- * His answer i. 770
- * The hearing on the three first articles i. 775
- * The

- * The hearing on the five following articles i. 779
- * The defendant's general defence, and mr. Prynne's reply i. 784
- * The peroration of the defendant, and mr. Prynne's reply i. 814
- * The defendant is condemned to die; but afterwards pardoned i. 815
- * Cases at large, which were cited in the trial i. 816

FINCH, Sir HENEAGE,

He was voted guilty of a breach of privilege of parliament, by the commons, for subscribing his name to the information exhibited to the court of Star-chamber against mr. Holles, and the rest, for matters done by them in parliament, being members of parliament, and the same so appearing in the information vii. 250

FINCH, Sir HENEAGE, Solicitor-General,

In his charge against Harrison the regicide, he said, that to doubt or hesitate in a point of allegiance, was direct treason and apostacy ii. 314
His reply to John Cook's (another of the regicides of king Charles I.) defence ii. 349

Said a pardon in law for high-treason could not be without the broad seal, nor by implication, but by positive words only ii. 350

His observations on the trial of Hugh Peters; another of the regicides of king Charles I. ii. 367

Sums up the evidence for the king, on the trial of Thomas Tonge and others, for treason ii. 492

His speech before evidence, on Ireland's trial for treason ii. 700

Reply to lord Ruffel's defence ii. 726

His reply for the king, on the argument of Edward Fitzharris iii. 255

Sums up the evidence against Edward Fitzharris, for a treasonable libel iii. 584

Moves for judgment against Edward Fitzharris, convicted of a treasonable libel iii. 289

Sums up the evidence on the prosecution of dr. Plunket iii. 309

Solicitor-general opens indictment against lord Grey, for seduction iii. 520, 521

His argument for the king, on the proceedings against the city of London, on the quo warranto iii. 548

Opens the evidence on Pilkington's prosecution iii. 635

Opens the evidence on the trial of Thomas Pilkington, and Samuel Shute, esqrs. sheriffs, Henry Cornish, alderman, Ford lord Grey of Werk, sir Thomas Player, chamberlain of London, Slingsby Bethel, esq. Richard Goodenough, and eight others, on information for a riot, in continuing the poll for the election of sheriffs, after the common-hall was adjourned by the lord-mayor, and for assaulting his lordship iii. 635

His reply to defence of sir Patience Ward, informed against for perjury iii. 680

Sums up the evidence on the trial of captain Walcut, indicted for conspiring the king's death, and for raising rebellion in Rye House plot iii. 700

His reply on challenge for want of freehold, on the trial of William lord Ruffel, indicted and tried for treason, in conspiring the king's death iii. 710

His reply to the defence of Algernon Sidney, indicted and tried for high treason, in conspiring the death of the king iii. 813

His reply, and arguments in arrest of judgment, on the conviction of Thomas Roswell, for speaking treasonable words iii. 1062, 1065

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Titus Oates, D.D. on an indictment for perjury at the King's Bench iv. 54

His reply to Oates's defence iv. 94

Sums up the evidence on the trial of lord Delamere, for treason, in the court of the lord high steward iv. 243

Denies the right of the subject to petition out of parliament, concerning matters of government iv. 387

He insists that votes and addresses are not evidence, and cannot be filed declarations in parliament iv. 389

That the king may make constitutions in matters ecclesiastical iv. 389

That the bishops denying that prerogative was in diminution of the prerogative, as laid in information iv. 39

His speech on summing up the evidence for the crown, in Thomas lord Morley's trial, for murder vii. 425

He observed, that murder was a cheaper sin than theft in some places abroad; and that the same people who would rise up in arms as one man, to pursue a pilferer, would yet make a lane through the midst of them for the manslayer to escape vii. 426, 427

His argument in cause of East-India company and Sands, for the company vii. 507

FINCH, Sir HENEAGE, Attorney-General (afterwards Lord Chancellor and Earl of Nottingham),

Had the thanks of the house of commons, for applying himself to the searching the records, and with indefatigable labour and study discovering such precedents, and so strenuously supporting and maintaining their rights and privileges, at a conference between the two houses in 1671, concerning the commons sole right of giving money viii. 564

FINCH, HENEAGE, Lord Chancellor,

His speech as lord high steward on earl Pembroke and Montgomery's trial ii. 641

His address to his lordship ii. 656

FINCH, HENEAGE Lord, Baron DAVENTRY, Lord Chancellor,

Lord high steward on the trial of William viscount Stafford, impeached for high-treason before the house of peers, for being concerned in the popish plot iii. 101

His speech to the prisoner before evidence iii. 102

His speech to the prisoner after conviction and before judgment iii. 213

James Francis Yarker hab. corp. and writ of mainprize vii. 471, 474

See NOTTINGHAM earl of.

F F N C H, Sir J O H N,

Was of Gray's Inn, of the king's counsel, chief justice of the Common Pleas, and lord keeper vii. 309

He was sworn chief justice, 16 October, 1634 vii. 310

He was chosen speaker of the house of commons, 17 March, 1628 vii. 140

He reviles John Holt for signing Henry Burton's plea i. 482

Ill treats William Pryn i. 483

His condemnation of him i. 486

His encomium of Catharine, queen to Charles I. i. 428

His arguments, opinions, and reasons for the king, in the cause of ship-money i. 679

He does not agree that Fortescue was ever lord chancellor of England i. 683

Lord Finch procured the opinions of the judges, in the case of ship-money, by solicitation; and they were enjoined secrecy by him, on his procuring their hands to them; these he delivered to the king; by his procurement, a letter was directed from his majesty to the judges for their delivering their opinions i. 700, 706

His speech as speaker of the house of commons to the king, in answer to several messages vii. 196

His majesty's answer vii. 196

Held in the chair by some members, while some protestations were published in the house vii. 217

Proceedings against him, when lord Fordwich, and lord keeper, for high treason vii. 309

Sends a letter to the house of commons, to desire to be admitted to speak for himself; his speech vii. 309

Justifies himself for his behaviour as speaker vii. 310

Justifies himself as to the affair of ship-money vii. 310

Also for his argument in mr. Hampden's case, in the Exchequer-chamber vii. 311

Concerning the forest business vii. 312

Mr. Rigby's speech in answer to him vii. 312

Voted a traitor, and impeached i. 708. vii. 313, 488. viii. 566

Retires to Holland vii. 313

His letter from the Hague to the lord chamberlain vii. 313

The articles of impeachment presented to the lords vii. 313

Lord Falkland's speech at presenting them vii. 315

He was in possession of an original MS. treatise of the court of Star-chamber xi. 329

F I N E S.

When the house of commons, in the parliament 1680, took exorbitant fines into consideration, and intended to impeach several persons for the same; the highest fine at that time complained of was but 1000*l.*

See iii. 219. vii. 482, 483; and yet in a few years they were heightened to 10,000*l.* 20,000*l.* 30,000*l.* and 40,000*l.* iv. 165. See iv. 172.

Em. Pref. xii. iii. 223. vii. 486

Instances of exorbitant fines imposed during the reigns of the Stuart family iv. 165. See BARNARDISTON sir SAMUEL. DEVON-

SHIRE earl. HAMPDEN JOHN.

F I S H. See SINDERCOMBE.

F I S H E R, Sir C L E M E N T. See L A N E J A N E.

F I S H E R, J O H N, Bishop of Rochester,

His trial before commissioners of oyer and terminer at Westminster, for treason, 17 June, 27 Henry VIII. 1535 xi. 7, 23

Names of the commissioners xi. 7

Arraigned xi. 7

Effect of indictment xi. 7

Pleads not guilty xi. 8

Names of the jury xi. 8

Mr. Rieb's evidence xi. 8

The bishop's answer to it xi. 8

The judges opinion xi. 8

The bishop's defence xi. 8

The commissioners aggravate the prisoner's offence, and threaten the jury xi. 8

He is found guilty xi. 8

Sentence of a traitor passed on him by lord chancellor Audley xi. 8

His speech thereon xi. 8

His behaviour under condemnation xi. 8, 9

An odd circumstance about the cook's not preparing him a dinner as usual xi. 9

Ordered to be beheaded only xi. 9

His speech on the scaffold xi. 9

He is beheaded xi. 9, 23

 F I T Z - H A R R I S, E D W A R D,

* His arraignment in the King's Bench for high-treason; with his pleas and the counsel's argument thereon, in Easter term, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 224

* Proceedings in parliament relating to him iii. 224. See vi. 408

* The grand jury doubt whether one who is impeached for high-treason may be indicted for it iii. 227

* The court resolve that he might be indicted, though the commons had impeached him generally; and voted he should not be tried by any inferior court iii. 228

* The indictment read iii. 228

* Fitz-harris offers a plea in paper, that he is impeached for the same treason iii. 228

* The court assign him counsel, and give him time to amend his plea iii. 229

* A rule made, that his counsel and his wife might come to him iii. 230

* He is examined concerning the murder of Godfrey iii. 230

* Fitz-harris puts in another plea to the jurisdiction of the court iii. 234

* Mr. Attorney argues that the plea was defective, both as to matter and form iii. 234

* He shews there was no precedent of the king's counsel being put to demur in a capital case before iii. 235

* Mr.

* Mr. attorney demurs to the plea iii. 237
 * The prisoner joins in demurrer iii. 237
 * Time is given the prisoner's counsel to maintain the plea iii. 240
 * A copy of the indictment denied iii. 241
 * Mr. Williams's argument for the prisoner iii. 241
 * He compares an impeachment to an appeal iii. 242
 * He doubts if the king can pardon one impeached iii. 242
 * Sir Francis Winnington for the prisoner iii. 248
 * Mr. Wallop's argument for the prisoner iii. 251
 * Mr. Pollexfen's argument for the prisoner iii. 252
 * Mr. Attorney answers the arguments of the prisoner's counsel iii. 254
 * The indictments against the five popish lords removed by certiorari into the house of peers iii. 255
 * Mr. Finch, solicitor-general, his reply for the king iii. 255
 * Mr. serjeant Jefferies for the crown iii. 259
 * Sir Francis Wythens on the same side iii. 259
 * The court declare, they should not meddle to determine whether a commoner might be impeached for treason, or whether an impeachment should stay the proceedings of an inferior court; but only consider the sufficiency of the plea to oust them of their jurisdiction iii. 260
 * The chief justice, mr. justice Jones, and mr. justice Raymond, of opinion the plea was insufficient; mr. justice Dolben doubted iii. 261
 * The court award the prisoner shall plead over iii. 261. See vi. 406
 * The prisoner pleads not guilty iii. 261
 * He has time to prepare for his trial till next term iii. 262
 * Fitz-harris brought upon his trial in Trinity-Term, June 9, 1681 iii. 263. See iv. 165
 * The court refuse to examine the prisoner before his trial, as to the murder of Godfrey iii. 263
 * The indictment for a treasonable libel, called "The true Englishman speaking plain English" iii. 265
 * Mr. Heath opens the indictment iii. 266
 * Mr. attorney opens the evidence iii. 267
 * The king's witnesses called iii. 267
 * Evidence that Fitz-harris prompted Everard to write the pamphlet iii. 267
 * Papers delivered to the prisoner in court; which the king's counsel objected to iii. 269, 272
 * Smith swears he over-heard Fitz-harris dictate to Everard iii. 270
 * Which is confirmed by sir William Waller iii. 272
 * The prisoner calls his witnesses iii. 277
 * Oates deposes that Everard said this was a design of the court, and the libel was to be conveyed into the Whigs pockets iii. 277
 * Evidence that sir William Waller said, the king was in a great passion with him, and said, he had broken all his measures by discovering Fitz-harris iii. 278
 * A petition of mrs. Fitz-harris to his majesty, and the king's letter to the duke of Omond concerning them, read in court iii. 280
 * Lord Howard's evidence iii. 280
 * Hearsay evidence refused iii. 282
 * The duchess of Portsmouth subpoenaed by the prisoner as a witness; she is desired to stand up while she gives her evidence iii. 283
 * Mr. Fitz-harris enters upon his defence; complains of his close confinement, that he had not an opportunity of preparing for his defence; intimates that his witnesses concealed their knowledge; and affirms that the money he received of the government was for secret service, and not in charity, as the witnesses deposed iii. 283
 * Mr. solicitor sums up the evidence; he takes notice, that the prisoner's defence consisted in some insinuations that he composed this libel by the king's directions iii. 284
 * Mr. serjeant Jefferies's observations on the evidence iii. 286
 * The chief justice's directions to the jury iii. 287
 * He shews the improbability that the king should be in a design to blacken his own family, and incite a rebellion against himself iii. 287
 * The jury doubt whether they may try this matter, the commons having voted that it should not be tried by any inferior court iii. 288
 * But the court tell them, they are only to try the fact. As to the plea to the jurisdiction, that is the business of the court, and they have determined that matter already iii. 288
 * That if there was a vote of the commons, it could not alter the law, any more than a letter or mandate from the prince. The judges were upon their oaths, and must do justice according to the laws of the land, notwithstanding iii. 289
 * Fitz-harris is convicted iii. 289
 * Mr. solicitor moves for judgment; but the court tell him, they will take time for that iii. 289
 * Sentence passed upon the prisoner iii. 290
 * A writ issued out of the King's-Bench, June 22, directed to the lieutenant of the Tower, to deliver the body of Fitz-harris to the sheriff of Middlesex the first of July, in order to his execution iii. 290
 * Another writ, of the same date, to the sheriff of Middlesex, to receive Fitz-harris, and cause him to be executed according to the sentence iii. 291
 * Fitz-harris executed accordingly, July 1 iii. 291
 * His behaviour at execution; and his dying speech iii. 292
 * His trial generally held illegal iv. 166, 172
 * Sir John Hawles's remarks on his trial iv. 165, 186, 199, 205
 * "That innocence would defend," was a saying as mortal to him as the letter Q amongst the Quakers iv. 177
 * His trial was published by the express authority of lord chief justice Pemberton iv. 189
 * FITZJAMES, Sir JOHN.
 In the time of Hen. VII. sir Richard Terrett was committed, fined, sent to the pillory, and adjudged to lose both his ears, for his slanderous complaint exhibited to the king, in a written book, against the chief justice Fitzjames vii. 111. ix. 314
 * FITZPATRICK, LAURENCE i. 396. See AUDLEY, MERVIN Lord. Vol. XI.

* FLEETWOOD, GEORGE ii. 302. See REGICIDES.
FLEETWOOD, WILLIAM, Recorder of LONDON. See i. 127.
FLEMING, Sir THOMAS, Chief Baron,
 His argument in the case of impositions xi. 31
 F L E T A.
 So called because the author lay in the Fleet when he made the book vii. 154
FLETCHER, GEORGE,
 His trial for treason, July 16, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 552
 Evidence against him ix. 552
 Cross-examined by serjeant Wynne ix. 553
 His defence ix. 554
 Executed at Kennington-common ix. 555
 Some account of him ix. 555
 A singular anecdote in his story ix. 555
 His behaviour in Newgate ix. 555
 Account of the papers delivered to the populace at the place of execution ix. 555
 F L I G H T.
 A person's flying from justice a presumption of guilt v. 115. vi. 405, 409. x. 406. n. xi. 328
 * FOGG, CHRISTOPHER v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.
FORBES, Lord President of SCOTLAND,
 His letter to lord Lowat against going into the rebellion x. 189. Ap.
 F O R C E. See viii. 237:
 The only force that doth excuse, is a force upon the person; this force must continue all the time the party remains in rebellion ix. 568
 It is incumbent on every man who makes force his defence, to shew an actual force, and that he quitted the service as soon as he could ix. 568.
 See FELONY.
FORCIBLE MARRIAGE. See FELONY. MARRIAGE.
FORD, JOHN,
 Argues the insanity of Bradshaw ix. 577
 Argues that attainted person is liable to a civil suit ix. 586
 His argument that an attainted person is not a competent witness ix. 653*
 His speech, arguments, and defence of Owen the bookseller, prosecuted for publishing "Murray's Case" x. 205. Ap.
 His learning and accuracy in reporting cases commended xi. 224, 227. 229
FORD, THOMAS,
 His account of the behaviour of the lords Kilmarnock and Balmerino x. 182
 His answer to many reflections cast on the above Account x. 185. Ap.
 * FORD, WILLIAM ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
FORDWICH, Lord. See FINCH Sir JOHN.
 F O R E I G N E R S.
 Prisoners being foreigners, an interpreter sworn iii. 466
 Substance of indictment interpreted to prisoners in their own language iii. 467
 The jury half foreigners and half English iii. 468
 No foreigners on juries to be Roman-catholics iii. 465
 First an Englishman, then a foreigner, called and sworn on jury iii. 465
 Foreigners challenged for the king, counsel insist they need not shew cause, unless they want jurymen iii. 465
 Evidence interpreted to aliens upon jury, by sworn interpreters iii. 472
 Foreign peer intitled to a jury of considerable merchants iii. 468. * See ALIEN.
 * FORFEITURE.
 * Judgment in treason must be in the usual form, to entitle the king to his forfeitures iii. 213
 * Forfeitures on a conviction for manslaughter v. 170
FORFEITURE OF CHARTERS. See CHARTERS.
LONDON CITY. QUO WARRANTO.
F O R G E R Y.
 A person who sets his hand to a bond said to be sealed and delivered, not having seen it sealed and delivered, is guilty of little less than forgery iv. 185
 When forgeries became more frequent, proof of hand-writing by similitude was not allowed of at all, unless the writing had been acknowledged by the party, or proved by two witnesses who saw him write it vi. 418
 Offered in favour of such a criminal, that no prejudice, money being repaid ix. 73
 Whether making use of a man's name to a different purpose to what designed, be forgery ix. 83. See BUTLER MARY. DARTY LEONARD. HALES ROBERT. HALES WILLIAM. HARRIS JOHN. IVY Lady. KINNERSLEY THOMAS. MORRIS JOHN. MURPHY TIMOTHY. PHILIP and MARY. SMITH ISABEL * v. 232. viii. 48, 49
FORREST, an Observant Friar,
 Tried for holding heretical opinions xi. 24
 Submits to the church xi. 24
 Refusing to abjure, judged an obstinate heretic xi. 24
 Hanged in a chain about his middle and burnt xi. 24
FORRESTER, ALEXANDER,
 His argument in support of the objection, that an attainted person is not a competent witness ix. *652, *662
 * FORSEITH, EDWARD v. 1. See DAWSON.
F O R T E S C U E, ADRIAN,
 Thomas Dingley, and Robert Grauceler, attainted for treason, 1539. Hen. VIII. xi. 25
F. Fortescue and Dingley suffered xi. 25
FORTESCUE - ALAND, Sir JOHN. See ALIND-FORTESCUE Sir JOHN.
FORTESCUE, Sir JOHN, Chief Justice and Chancellor,
 Was called by sir Walter Raleigh, the bulwark of the law of England xi. 208
 The

The case between sir John Fortescue and sir Francis Goodwin about the election for Bucks vii. 67

FOSTER, MICHAEL, Recorder of BRISTOL,

Sums up the evidence in Goodwin's case for murder vi. 823
His charge to the jury on Charles White's prosecution for murder vi. 832
His speech to all the prisoners previous to pronouncing the judgment of the court vi. 833
His state of Berwick's case ix. 559
Of Deacon's case ix. 558
His argument in the case of the Kinlochs for treason ix. 572
His opinion on Macdonald's case for treason ix. 586, 587
Macgrowther's case stated by him ix. 566
His opinion on Ratcliffe's case for treason ix. 583
His speech on a case of murder ix. 716
His charge to the jury against smugglers for murder ix. 732
Townly's case for treason stated by him ix. 550
Sir John Wedderburne's case for treason stated by him ix. 581
His observations upon murder and petit treason, and indictments thereon x. 37, 38, 39

Delivers the opinion of the judges upon the special verdict found against Macdaniel and others x. 442
His opinion upon process and arrests x. 476
He pronounced judgment of the court against Macdaniel and others x. 442
His observations on Mary Jones's case x. 416, 417
His opinion relating to Algernon Sidney's case x. 42. Ap.
His opinion on Gregg's case x. 77. Ap.
His account of doctor Cameron's case, attainted of treason x. 203
Mr. justice Foster applied himself particularly to the crown law, was a strict adherer to legal forms, and had more experience of business proper to be done out of court than any other judge xi. 332
Mr. justice Foster truly called the magna charta of the liberty of persons, as well as fortunes xi. 338
His argument, when recorder of Bristol, in the case of Broadfoot, respecting the pressing of mariners xi. 349

FOSTER, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Justice B. R.

Directs the jury on the trial of Tonge and others, for treason ii. 493
Wrought upon king Charles the second (notwithstanding his majesty's engagement to both houses of parliament to the contrary) to sign a warrant for the execution of sir Henry Vane ii. 459

FOWLIS, Sir DAVID,

Proceedings in Star-chamber against him, sir Thomas Layton, and Henry Fowlis, esq. on charge of opposing the king's service, and traducing his officers of state, Hil. 9 Car. 1. 1633 xi. 131

The information xi. 131
Sir David Fowlis's answer xi. 132
Sir Thomas Layton's answer xi. 132
The court's declaration as to sir David xi. 132
Their order of punishment against him xi. 132
Their punishment of Henry Fowlis xi. 132
Sir Thomas Layton dismissed xi. 132

FOWLIS, HENRY. See FOWLIS Sir DAVID.

FOX, SOMERSET,

* His trial before the High Court of Justice, for high-treason against Oli-ver Cromwell, then lord protector, 30 June, 1654, 6 Car. II. ii. 212
* Fox pleads guilty ii. 212
* Prideaux, attorney-general for the commonwealth, opens the evidence ii. 213
* Mr. Vowell desires to be tried by a jury, but is refused ii. 212, 214
* John Wiseman's evidence, that there was a design to assassinate the pro- tector as he went to Hampton-court; and that Gerhard and Vowell were privy to it ii. 214
* Edward Hudson gives a soft evidence; upon which his examination is read against the prisoners, though the witness denied in court some things he then confessed ii. 214, 215
* Charles Gerhard's evidence against his brother ii. 215
* Other witnesses to the design in general ii. 216
* Gerhard and Vowell deny the fact ii. 216. iii. 217
* Are condemned ii. 217
* Fox reprieved; and the other two executed ii. 217. viii. 336

FRANCE. See BASTILE.

FRANCES, ROBERT,

His trial for the murder of Thomas Dangerfield, at the Old Bailey, July 16, 1685, 1 Jac. II. x. 34. Ap.
Found guilty x. 35. Ap.
His behaviour while under sentence x. 35. Ap.
His dying speech x. 35. Ap.

FRANCHISES.

Though inheritance of franchise be in body corporate, yet it is for the benefit of particular members, and enures to their advantage as pri- vate individuals viii. 127
Franchises defined vii. 141, 142

FRANCIA, FRANCIS,

* His trial for high-treason, at the Old-Bailey, Jan. 22, 1716, 3 Geo. I. vi. 58
* The indictment, for corresponding with the king's enemies vi. 60
* Sir Joseph Jekyll's speech before evidence vi. 61
* Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general, his speech vi. 62
* Evidence of a book and papers found in the prisoner's house on his ap- prehension vi. 65
* Lord Townshend's evidence vi. 68
* Mr. secretary Stanhope's evidence vi. 71
* The prisoner's examination read vi. 71
* Mr. Harvey's letter read vi. 72
* The prisoner's counsel object to the reading any letters that are not par- ticularly laid in the indictment vi. 73. See vi. 330, 331, 402
* Adjudged that writing treasonable letters is an overt-act of high-treason, and that any letters may be given in evidence to prove it, though not particularly laid in the indictment vi. 77

* Several letters read out of his copy-book vi. 78, &c.
* Sir Joseph Jekyll's remarks upon the evidence vi. 86
* The prisoner's defence vi. 87
* He proves himself a native of France vi. 87
* Mr. Ward's speech for the prisoner vi. 88
* Mr. Hungerford on the same side vi. 89
* Two women called to asperse lord Townshend and mr. Buckley vi. 90
* The evidence of those women positively contradicted upon oath vi. 91
* Evidence that none of the letters in the book were the prisoner's writing vi. 92
* Sir John Fortescue-Aland's reply vi. 93
* Mr. Spencer Cowper's reply vi. 96
* Sir Thomas Bury, lord chief baron, sums up the evidence vi. 98
* Directs the jury, if they find him guilty, to find specially that he is a Frenchman, and an alien vi. 101
* The prisoner acquitted vi. 101

FRANKLIN, RICHARD,

His trial for a libel, in printing and publishing a letter from the Hague, 3d Dec. 1731, 4 Geo. II. ix. 255
Mr. Parker opens the information against him ix. 255
Attorney-general (sir Philip Yorke) on the same side ix. 256
Evidence against defendant ix. 259
Mr. Fazakerly objects to the evidence ix. 260
Mr. attorney-general's further examination ix. 260
Mr. Bootle on the same side ix. 260
Lord Raymond's opinion upon it ix. 260
Mr. Fazakerly's objection ix. 260
Mr. attorney-general's answer ix. 260
Mr. solicitor-general (hon. mr. Talbot) on the same side ix. 260
Mr. Bootle objects to the proof ix. 260
Mr. Noel does the same ix. 261
Evidence against defendant continued ix. 261
Mr. Fazakerly and others cross-examine ix. 262, &c.
Mr. attorney-general's speech ix. 263
His opinion on the evidence ix. 265
Mr. Fazakerly's speech for defendant ix. 266
Lord Raymond's opinion ix. 267
Mr. Bootle's speech for defendant ix. 267
Lord Raymond's opinion, that it is not material whether the facts charged in a libel be true or false, if the prosecution is by indictment or in- formation ix. 269
Mr. Bootle, on the liberty of the press ix. 269
Mr. Strange opens the defence ix. 270
Evidence for defendant ix. 270
Mr. attorney-general opposes part of it ix. 270
Lord Raymond's opinion upon it ix. 271
Mr. attorney-general submits, whether evidence should be given to prove the news that was published, true ix. 271
Lord Raymond's opinion ix. 271
Mr. Noel's speech, in favour of defendant ix. 271
Mr. Taylor's on the same side ix. 271
Mr. attorney-general's reply to the whole ix. 272
Lord Raymond sums up the evidence, and observes, that juries are judges of fact, not of law ix. 275
Found guilty of publishing, and fined 100l. imprisoned one year, and to give security for seven years ix. 276

FRANK of a LETTER,

A promissory note of hand forged thereon. See HALES ROBERT.

FRANKLIN, JAMES,

* His trial as accessory, before the fact, to the murder and poisoning of sir Thomas Overbury, 27 Nov. 1616, 13 Jac. I. i. 346
* His own confession read in evidence against him, that he sold the poison, and knew for what i. 346
* Whereupon he is convicted, and sentence passed upon him i. 347

FREEDOM.

Record on a mandamus for admission into the freedom of a corporation x. 138, 139. Ap.

FREEHOLD. See JURY.

* FREEMAN, RICHARD iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

FREIND, Sir JOHN,

* His trial for high-treason, in conspiring the death of the king, and pro- moting an invasion and rebellion, March 23, 1695, 8 W. III. iv. 599
* The king's counsel will have none but freeholders upon the jury iv. 602, 606
* The attorney-general's, sir Thomas Trevor, speech before evidence iv. 604
* Sir John desires to ask the witnesses whether they be papists; which is refused iv. 605, 606
* Porter's evidence, that the prisoner was at two meetings, and agreed to invite king James over iv. 606
* Blair's evidence, that he was to be an officer under the prisoner iv. 607
* Bertram's evidence, that Blair told him he was to raise a regiment iv. 612
* Courtney's evidence against Blair iv. 613
* Witnesses to sir John's reputation iv. 616
* The prisoner insists, that a conspiracy to levy war is not treason iv. 619
* The solicitor-general's, sir John Hawles, reply iv. 620
* Mr. Cowper's reply iv. 622
* Lord chief justice sums up the evidence iv. 623
* The prisoner is convicted iv. 626
* See the sentence and his dying speech, in the trial of sir William Par- kins iv. 659, 660. See PORTER Captain GEORGE.

FULLER, WILLIAM,

Confined to the Flint, and ordered to be prosecuted, for publishing two books, books, viz. "Original Letters from the late King," and "Twenty-Six Depositions of Persons of Quality," 1701-2 viii. 78

Peer Buck, and mrs. Baldwin, ordered to be prosecuted for printing and publishing the same viii. 78
 * His trial for forging false and scandalous libels, May 20, 1702, 1 Ann. v. 441
 * Fuller acknowledges the books to be his v. 443
 * Pretends he can make out the truth of them v. 443
 * He is convicted v. 445
 The record vi. 58. Ap.
 His sentence, and the execution of it viii. 78, n.
FULTHORPE, Sir ROGER, Justice C. B.
 Was arrested sitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and sent prisoner to the Tower i. 5, and n.
 He was tried, and convicted of treason i. 14
 Confesses, and begs mercy i. 14
 He was banished to the city of Dublin, with the yearly allowance of 40l. during life, with liberty of going three miles for his recreation i. 14, and n. * See BRAMBRE.

G.

* GAGE, ROBERT i. 134. See ABINGTON, & al.
GALLOWES. See EXECUTIONS.
GAOL DELIVERIES.

The design of them, and ill consequences of being defeated Em. Pref. xiv.

GAOLS and GAOLERS.

Observations on them Em. Pref. xiv.

On their fees Em. Pref. xiv.

The ill consequences of the management of gaols Em. Pref. xiv.

The use of chains and fetters in gaols Em. Pref. xiv.

The oppressions and extortions of gaolers in some measure remedied, by stat. 2 Geo. II. chap. 22 Em. Pref. xiv. n.

It is an abuse, that prisoners pay for entering into, or coming out of gaol Em. Pref. xiv. n.

The reason that the law requires coroner to sit on persons dying in gaol Em. Pref. xvi. n.

No imprisonment lawful but in common gaol Em. Pref. v.

Instance of gaol distemper in time of Elizabeth Em. Pref. xiv.

The resolutions of the commons, in the report of their committee appointed to inquire into the state of the gaols, as far as relates to the cruel usage of the prisoners. See ACTON WILLIAM. BAMBRIDGE THOMAS. PRISONS.

GAPPER, Serjeant at Law,

Of counsel against Annesley and Redding ix. 317

* GARLAND, AUGUSTINE ii. 398. See REGICIDES.

* GARNET, HENRY, Superior of the Jesuits,

* His trial for high-treason, in promoting the gunpowder-plot, March 28, 1606, 4 Jac. I. at Guildhall i. 248

* See the indictment in Winter's trial i. 232

* Sir John Croke opens the charge i. 248

* Sir Edward Coke shews the aggravations this crime was attended with i. 249

* Gives an historical relation of all the popish plots in queen Elizabeth's reign i. 250, 251

* And of the gun-powder plot i. 253

* Garnet formerly a corrector of the press i. 255

* His defence as to their doctrine of equivocation; as to their deposing doctrine; and absenting themselves from church i. 257

* He owns he knew of the powder plot; but denies he consented to it i. 258

* Sir Edward Coke's reply to Garnet's defence i. 260

* Earl of Northampton's speech i. 261

* The prisoner says, that if a man in sacramental confession owns he has a design to commit murder, the priest is bound to conceal it i. 264

* The prisoner is convicted i. 266

* Earl of Northampton's second speech i. 266, 308

* Garnet receives sentence i. 308

* His execution i. 309

GARTER. See KNIGHTS of the GARTER.

* GASCOIGNE, Sir THOMAS, Bart.

* His trial for high-treason, the 11th of February, 1679, 32 Car. II. iii. 1

* Sir Thomas arraigned iii. 1

* The indictment for conspiring the death of the king, and the subversion of the established religion and government iii. 1

* Sir Thomas is brought upon his trial iii. 3

* Mr. serjeant Maynard and mr. attorney-general (sir Creswell Levinz) open the evidence iii. 4

* Bolton's evidence of the prisoner's making a collusive conveyance of his estate, to prevent a forfeiture iii. 4

* Of sir Thomas's design to erect a nunnery in Yorkshire iii. 6

* The Jesuits hold it damnation to take the oath of allegiance iii. 7

* Bolton swears the prisoner offered him 1000l. to kill the king iii. 8

* Bolton's evidence repeated, particularly to sir Thomas, he being very thick of hearing; and his several answers iii. 10

* Mowbray's evidence of sir Thomas's concern in the plot iii. 11

* Mowbray's evidence repeated to sir Thomas, in the same manner as Bolton's iii. 12

* Sir Thomas's almanack given in evidence iii. 13

* A letter directed to sir Thomas, and found among his papers, produced as evidence iii. 15

* Forty papists convicted at once of not taking the oath of allegiance in Yorkshire iii. 15

* The prisoner calls witnesses to shew Bolton's malice against him iii. 17

* Further evidence of Bolton and Mowbray's malice against the prisoner iii. 19

* Evidence of Bolton's swearing falsely against others iii. 20

* Bolton's character iii. 21

* Bolton calls his wife and grandmother to give him a good character iii. 26

* Mr. serjeant Maynard, and sir Francis Winnington solicitor-general, sum up the evidence iii. 27

* Mr. justice Jones directs the jury, and tells them, that improbability is not of weight against positive evidence iii. 28

* Sir Thomas Gascoigne acquitted iii. 31

GASCOIGNE, Sir CRISP, Lord Mayor of London,

Quitted the chair at the Old-Bailey, on the trial of the Abbotsbury men, for perjury on the trial of Mary Squires x. 243

Mr. serjeant Davy his complimentary speech respecting this mayor's conduct, in procuring the said Squires her pardon x. 248

GASCOYNE, BAMBER,

Opens indictment against Eliz. Canning, for perjury x. 211

GATES, Sir JOHN,

Sir Henry Gates, sir Andrew Dudley, and sir Thomas Palmer, their trial at Westminster, for high-treason, Aug. 19, 1553, 1 Mary xi. 26

They were all condemned and executed xi. 26

* GAUNT, ELIZABETH,

Sentenced to be hanged for treason iv. 160. See CORNISH.

* GAVAN, JOHN ii. 829. See WHITE, alias WHITEBREAD, & al.

GAWDIE, THOMAS, Queen's Serjeant at Law,

His speech on the arraignment of Davison in the Star-chamber vii. 22

GAZETTES, LONDON,

Quere, the evidence of them viii. 213

GENEVA.

People allowed their recreations at Geneva on Sundays i. 899

GENERAL WARRANTS.

They were declared illegal and bad by the court of B. R. xi. 312

* GERHARD, JOHN ii. 212. See FOX SOMERSET.

GERMAINE, Sir JOHN. See NORFOLK Duke of.

* GERMAN PRINCESS,

* Mary Moders, alias Stedman, her trial for bigamy at the Old-Bailey, June 4, 1663, 15 Car. II. ii. 498

* The indictment for felony, in marrying John Carlton, Thomas Stedman her first husband being then alive ii. 498

* The witnesses for the king to the first marriage are called ii. 499

* No entry of the first marriage in the register-book ii. 500

* She owns her second marriage ii. 500

* The prisoner's defence ii. 500

* She calls her witnesses ii. 501

* Recorder Hewel directs the jury, and tells them, that if they found her guilty, she must die by law; for that a woman could not have the benefit of clergy; but he intimates to them, that he thought the proof of the first marriage very defective ii. 502

* The prisoner is acquitted ii. 498

GERRARD, Sir GILBERT, Master of the Rolls,

His speech on the arraignment of Davison vii. 25, 27

GERRARD, JOHN,

His behaviour and speech at his execution, on Tower-Hill, 1654, for treason against the protector viii. 366. See vii. 212.

GIBBON, JOHN,

His trial upon information, in nature of a qui warrant against him, to shew by what authority he claimed to be freeman of New Romney, at the relation of William Jarvis, at Maidstone assizes in Kent, August 6, 1734, 7 Geo. II. before chief justice Eyre x. 118. Ap.

Mr. Smith opens the pleadings on behalf of the king x. 118. Ap.

Mr. Marsh's observations for the defendant Gibbon x. 119. Ap.

Swearing and admitting members of corporation same thing x. 119. Ap.

See Id. 123.

Evidence on behalf of the defendant x. 119. Ap.

Mr. serjeant Darnell's speech on behalf of the crown x. 119, 120. Ap.

Lord chief justice Eyre's opinion on a point of law x. 119. Ap.

The assembly books produced x. 119. Ap.

Mr. serjeant Baynes's speech on same side x. 121. Ap.

Evidence on behalf of the king x. 122. Ap.

Mr. Marsh's speech on behalf of mr. Gibbon x. 123. Ap.

Evidence on same side x. 124. Ap.

Debates about the plea x. 126. Ap.

Lord chief justice Eyre sums up to the jury x. 126. Ap.

Verdict for the king x. 128. Ap.

* GIBBONS, JOHN,

* His trial for high-treason for being concerned in Love's plot, before the high court of justice in Westminster-Hall, July 18, 1651, 3 Car. II. ii. 183

* Impeachment for high-treason and other crimes, preferred by Prideaux, attorney-general of the state ii. 184

* The prisoner insists on his being tried by a jury, according to the ancient constitution ii. 184

* The evidence ii. 184

* He alleges, that the notes taken for him at his trial, were taken away from him; which prevented his making a defence ii. 186

* He objects to the incompetency of the witnesses ii. 187

* And that there was but one witness to any one fact ii. 187

* Sentence passed upon the prisoner ii. 191

* His behaviour at execution ii. 191

* GIBBS, NATHANIEL ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

* GILBERT, Sir JEFFERY, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer in Ireland.

* Proceedings against him, John Pocklington, esq. and sir John St. Leger, two of the barons of that court, in the house of lords in Ireland, for a contempt

- contempt of that house, 1719, 5 Geo. I. vi. 188
- * The high sheriff of Kildare's petition to the house of lords, complaining that he had been fined in the Exchequer for obeying the lords order vi. 188
- * Report of the committee vi. 189
- * Orders of the lords in England relating to the cause vi. 189, 191, 192
- * Oath of a baron of the Exchequer vi. 193
- * The lords censure the barons vi. 194
- * And commit them into custody vi. 195
- His history of the Common-Pleas cited as a decisive authority xi. 192
- * G I L E S, J O H N,
- * His trial for an assault on John Arnold, esq. 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 65
- * The indictment iii. 65
- * Mr. Holt, of counsel for the king, opens the evidence iii. 65
- * And is seconded by Mr. Thompson iii. 66
- * Mr. Arnold's evidence of his being assaulted iii. 67
- * Several corroborating circumstances given in evidence iii. 69
- * Giles's defence by Mr. Darnell iii. 71
- * Witnesses to prove the prisoner was at another place when the fact was committed iii. 73
- * Sir George Jefferies's observations on the evidence iii. 75
- * Giles is convicted iii. 78
- * The judgment iii. 79
- * Proceedings against Mr. Herbert for taking his part iii. 79
- GLANVILLE, JOHN*, Serjeant at Law,
- His speech concerning the petition of right, at a conference of both houses vii. 202
- GLANVILLE, RANULPH DE*,
- Wrote in the time of Hen. II. vii. 151
- He was a learned and famous judge to Hen. II. but living 500 years since, and the particulars of which he writes being so different from the practice and established laws of the ensuing ages, his authority is of slight or no moment for direction in judgment of law at this day, tho' it be very considerable in examination what the law was in his time; and that way it is sometimes used as an ornament in argument only vii. 235. See ii. 565. xi. 298, 301
- * GLEN, GEORGE v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
- G L E N C O E.*
- An account of the barbarous massacre of the laird of Glencoe, his lady, and vassals x. 65. Ap. xi. 280.
- GLYNN, JOHN*,
- Replies to earl Strafford, impeached of treason by the commons, and tried before the lords i. 757
- GLYNN, JOHN*, the King's eldest Serjeant at Law,
- Opened the indictment on lord Morley's trial vii. 424
- GLYNN, JOHN*, Serjeant at Law,
- His speech in behalf of Anthony Fabrigas, against governor Mystyn xi. 162
- His reply xi. 177
- His argument on moving the court of Common-Pleas for the discharge of John Wilkes, esq. member of parliament, committed to the Tower as a libeller of his king; when he was discharged on account of parliamentary privilege xi. 303, 304, 305. See WILKES JOHN.
- G O D D A R D, J A M E S,*
- Is apprehended for robbing a Jew at his inn of 554 ducats x. 411
- He is tried and acquitted x. 411
- Indicts Simons for perjury x. 412. See SIMONS.
- G O L D I N G, J O H N, & al.*
- For piracy, acting under king James the second's commission, 5 W. & M. viii. 73
- Dr. Oldys order to proceed against them as pirates, gives his opinion in writing that they were no pirates viii. 73
- Gives his reasons before the council, that the colourable authority still remaining in king James will excuse them; the abdication never having been published in France viii. 74
- Sir Thomas Pinfold of the same opinion viii. 75
- Dr. Newton and Dr. Walker desire time to consider viii. 75
- Dr. Lyttleton's opinion; made king's advocate; tries and condemns them viii. 75
- Appeal to the house of peers, by petition, that they ought to have been treated as enemies, and prisoners of war, not as pirates viii. 75
- Set forth their case viii. 76
- Are executed viii. 78
- G O L D W E L L, T H O M A S.* See POLE Cardinal.
- GOOD BEHAVIOUR.*
- Heretofore, when swords were not usually worn but by soldiers, if a man was bound to his good behaviour, the wearing of one might be a breach of it iv. 198
- Security for good behaviour ordered to be taken by justice of peace xi. 334
- * GOODENOUGH, RICHARD iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
- * GOODERE, SAMUEL, Esq.
- * Matthew Mahony, and Charles White, their trials for murder, at the sessions of peace held in the city of Bristol, begun the 17th of March 1740, and continued by adjournment to the 26th of the same month, 1741, 14 and 15 Geo. II. vi. 795, 829
- * The indictment of Mahony, for choking, strangling, and murdering of Sir John Dineley Goodere (brother to the said Samuel Goodere) on board the Ruby man of war; and of Samuel Goodere for abetting him in it vi. 829
- * They plead not guilty to this indictment; and to that on the coroner's inquest vi. 796
- * Mr. Goodere's counsel moves for an adjournment of the trial, and appeals to Dr. Middleton (a physician) whether the prisoner's ill state of health will admit of it now vi. 796
- * The doctor is sworn, and declares it will not; the trial is therefore put off for a week vi. 796
- * Both prisoners complain of the loss of hearing; and are allowed to be brought nearer the witnesses vi. 796
- * The jury is sworn vi. 797
- * Mr. Vernon opens the evidence vi. 797
- * The witnesses for the king called vi. 801
- * Mr. Smith's evidence, that at Mr. Goodere's request, he made a seeming reconciliation between him and Sir John; that they met at this witness's house, kissed, and drank to love and friendship vi. 801
- * That Sir John went away; and Mr. Goodere hastened after him, and was joined by some sailors from the White Hart ale-house vi. 802
- * Hear-say evidence admitted vi. 803
- * It is moved in behalf of the prisoner, that he may have counsel to put his questions to the court, and that the court put them for him to the witnesses; but refused vi. 803
- * Mr. Smith's evidence after the murder vi. 803
- * Baronetage, how derived, and its institution vi. 804
- * Arguments upon omission of the title in the indictment vi. 804
- * A person may have divers surnames; yet a purchase by either of them is sufficient vi. 804
- * Lord Preston's case cited vi. 804
- * Hobbs, the landlord of the White Hart ale-house, his evidence of the prisoners meeting there with ten men, for consultation; and of Sir John's passing by, and the men's rushing out after him vi. 805
- * Several witnesses of the seizing Sir John, and ill-treatment of him in the barge vi. 806
- * Circumstantial evidences of the murder of him, on board the Ruby vi. 809
- * Positive evidences of it vi. 812
- * Goodere orders Mahony and White to be put on shore vi. 813
- * The examination of Mahony read vi. 817
- * Mr. recorder tells the jury, that this confession is evidence only against Mahony; and not against Goodere vi. 818
- * The place where the Ruby lay proved to be within the liberty of the city of Bristol vi. 818
- * Goodere, in his defence, calls witnesses to prove that his brother was a lunatic; and that he was doing his best to take care of him vi. 819
- * Brings other evidence that he did not send Mahony and White away vi. 819
- * Insists that he was not present at the death of Sir John Dineley vi. 820
- * Is answered by Mr. recorder and by Mr. Vernon vi. 821, 823
- * Calls witnesses to his character vi. 821
- * Some of them contradict his charge of lunacy upon his brother vi. 822
- * A person engaged in a design of murder, and posted so as to give any assistance to those that actually commit it, is, in the eye of the law, present at the fact, though not upon the very spot where the murder is committed, nor even in sight or hearing of it vi. 822, 828
- * The case of lord Dacre vi. 822
- * And of Berry, in the murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey vi. 823
- * Mr. recorder sums up the evidence vi. 823
- * Matthew Mahony and Samuel Goodere convicted of wilful murder vi. 829
- * The trial of Charles White for the said murder vi. 829
- * The jury sworn, and charged with the prisoner vi. 829
- * Mr. Vernon opens the charge vi. 829
- * The witnesses for the king called vi. 830
- * Evidence that after Mahony and White had murdered Sir John, they rifled his pockets of his watch and money vi. 830
- * The examination of White read vi. 831
- * He retracts his former confession; says he was in liquor and out of his senses when he made it; and that he never laid a hand near the deceased vi. 832
- * Calls witnesses to his character vi. 832
- * Mr. recorder directs the jury vi. 832
- * Charles White is convicted of wilful murder vi. 833
- * Mr. recorder's speech to all the prisoners vi. 833
- * They are condemned, and executed vi. 834
- * The body of Mahony hung in chains vi. 834
- * Charles Bryan, Edward Macdaniel, and William Hammon were indicted, tried, and convicted, at the same court, for a misdemeanour, in forcibly seizing Sir John, and carrying him on board the Ruby barge; fined and imprisoned vi. 834
- G O O D W I N, Sir FRANCIS,*
- The case between him and Sir John Fortescue, concerning the election for the county of Bucks, 1 Jac. I. vii. 67
- Ordered to be printed from the journal of the house vii. 67
- His return refused by the clerk of the crown, as an outlaw, but voted duly elected, and to be received de jure vii. 68
- The lords desire a conference on the subject, and are refused vii. 68
- A message from the lords, that his majesty desired there might be a conference thereon vii. 68
- The speaker and a committee attend his majesty, to relate the reason of the house's proceedings vii. 69
- Prec. dents of persons outlawed, yet privileged by the house, and returned to serve vii. 69
- That a general pardon is good for outlawries against all, saving the party at whose suit vii. 69
- His majesty's answer, that they should admit a conference with the judges who had resolved outlawry a sufficient cause of dismissal from the house, and that Sir Francis Goodwin stood outlawed vii. 69
- The three great objections answered vii. 70, 71
- Committee appointed to put in writing their reasons for their proceedings vii. 72
- Delivered to the lords in the council-chamber vii. 75
- The king commands a conference with the judges, in the presence of him and his council vii. 75
- Sir Francis Bacon reports the conference vii. 76
- Resolved,

Resolved, that both for John Fortescue and for Francis Goodwin should be excluded, and a new writ directed vii. 76
Sir Francis Goodwin's letter to the speaker vii. 76
Address of thanks to his majesty, and his majesty's answer vii. 77
The warrant for a new writ vii. 77

G O R D O N,

Doctor John Bastwick and Henry Burton pray he may be assigned their counsel i. 502, 503

GORDON, HAMILTON,

His argument in support of the objection made by lord Lowat; that an at-tainted person is not a competent witness ix. *655

GOVERNMENT.

The reasons for the disaffection of the nation to the government during the reigns of the Stuart family iv. 165
All civilized governments have punished calumny with severity xi. 323
The worst of governments is more tolerable than no government at all
xi. 323. * See LIBELS.

GOULD, HENRY, Serjeant at Law,

Opens the charge in the indictment, and shews the methods for John
Fenwick took to protract his trial v. 44
Reply on bill for attainting for John v. 89

GOULD, Sir HENRY, Judge Q. B.

Of opinion that mistake in proceedings against John Tutchin, who was convicted for publishing "The Observators," might be amended, on motion in arrest of judgment, Mich. 3 Ann. v. 568
His argument on giving his opinion, that the Aylesbury men were not bailable viii. 159

GOULD, Sir HENRY, Justice C. B.

His charge to the jury, in the cause of Fabrigas and Moslyn xi. 80
Mr. justice Gould was pleased to say, he much doubted, whether the precedents in the crown office of returns to writs of habeas corpus, were like the present return, as had been asserted by the king's serjeants; and said, if the precedents were not so, he should be of opinion, "that at the time of the coming of this writ to us, the within named John Wilkes was not, nor at any time since hath been, in our custody, or in the custody of either of us," was an insufficient return; because he thought, that from what appeared in evidence in the case, the court had a right to know what is become of the king's subject Mr. Wilkes, since he was in the messenger's custody on the day the writ was granted; whereupon (hujusmodi curia) the writ and return were not permitted to be filed of record xi. 303

GOWRIE, Earl of,

Proceedings against him and others for high-treason, at Edinburgh, 1600
vii. 33
Cited to appear, but do not vii. 34
The depositions of the witnesses, to prove the summonses of treason
vii. 34
Earl of Gowrie, and Alexander Ruthven, condemned to be hanged, and the rest declared guilty of treason and lese majesty vii. 43
The surname of Ruthven abolished forever vii. 43
The fifth day of August, being the anniversary of the king's deliverance from the earl of Gowrie's conspiracy, was celebrated, says lord chancellor Bacon, by him with his neighbours the townsmen of St. Albans, as an happy day vii. 43. n.

* GRAHME, Sir RICHARD. See PRESTON Viscount.

GRAND-CHILDREN.

The king's grand-children are children xi. 296, 299. See xi. 301
They are so styled in records xi. 298. See ROYAL FAMILY.

* GRAND JURY.

* Twelve of the grand jury must find the bill v. 423
* Grand jury-men may not send for other evidence than is produced on the part of the king v. 449
* The king's counsel may manage the evidence before the grand jury
ii. 302. iii. 418
* Evidence may be given the grand jury in open court iii. 421
* Grand jury-man admitted to give evidence of what a witness, who was withdrawn, had sworn before them v. 72
Grand jury insist they ought to examine witnesses in private, notwithstanding the king waves it iii. 420
Admitted their debates ought to be in private iii. 421
Credibility of witnesses how to be considered by grand jury iv. 184, 201
Grand jury may notice any thing they know or believe iv. 185
Discharging a grand jury, before they have finished their presentments, tends to the subversion of the law iii. 223. vii. 479, 481, 482, 485 Instance of a grand juryman laying violent hands upon himself, for the injury he did a prisoner, in urging his fellows to find a bill against him ix. 227
* Probable evidence sufficient for them to find a bill upon ii. 806.
iii. 419. v. 3. See iv. 184

* They are not to examine to the credit of the king's witnesses iii. 420,
433. See iv. 184

* Counsel should not be admitted to them iv. 173
King's counsel cajoled the grand jury in private for some hours, in Fitz- harris's case iv. 173

Sir John Hawles's remarks on the earl of Shaftesbury's grand jury iv. 183
The cause of their institution, and their use iv. 184

The king's counsel privately manage the evidence to the grand inquest, in order to finding the bill of indictment ii. 302

* GRANT, JOHN i. 232. See WINTER ROBERT, & al.

GRAY, Lady JANE.

She was beheaded, though sentenced to be hanged iv. 129

* GREAT SEAL.

* Taking it from one writing, and putting it to another, adjudged to be high-treason i. 74

* That judgment reprov'd i. 74
The great seal adds not to a man's sense, learning, or honesty iv. 206

VOL. XI.

Keeper of the great seal cannot commit iv. 555. See CHANCELLORS.
CHANCERY.

* GREAVES, JOHN ii. 494. iii. 978. See SACHEVEREL
WILLIAM.

* GREAVES, WILLIAM iii. 978. See SACHEVEREL
WILLIAM.

G R E E K S.

Tully was well read in the Greek history iv. 172

"That innocence would defend," was a saying as mortal to Fitz-barris, to Colledge, to colonel Sidney, to alderman Cornish, and to others, as was the letter Θ among the Greeks iv. 177

A remarkable law in one of the wisest of the Grecian governments, arising from their dread and abhorrence of a corrupt judge vi. 546

When a man said the poet, the Grecians understood him to mean Homer
vii. 181

* GREEN, ROBERT iii. 978. See SACHEVEREL
WILLIAM.

* GREEN, ROBERT,

* Henry Berry, and Laurence Hill, their trial at the King's Bench bar, for the murder of for Edmundbury Godfrey, February 10, 1678; 31 Gar. IL

* Arraigned the 5th February ii. 760

* The indictment ii. 760. vi. 12. Ap;

* Sir William Jones, attorney-general, gives the evidence ii. 762

* Oates's evidence, of the danger for Edmundbury Godfrey thought himself in from the papists ii. 764

* Prothonotary Robinson to the same effect ii. 765

* Prance's evidence, of his own part in the murder ii. 765

* Richardson's evidence, of Prance's denying what he had sworn, and then affirming it again ii. 769

* Bedloe's evidence, of his being solicited by the priests to murder a gentleman ii. 770. See viii. 449

* Brown's evidence, how the corpse was found ii. 772

* The surgeon's evidence, who viewed the corpse ii. 772

* Evidence of Green's enquiring for for Edmundbury Godfrey, the day before he was missing, and Hill the same day ii. 773

* Evidence of their meeting at the Plough Alehouse ii. 774

* Sir Robert Southwell's evidence of Prance's shewing the committee of council the places where the body was laid ii. 775

* Berry, the porter, says, he had orders to let nobody into Somerst- house, the 12th, 13th, or 14th days of October ii. 776

* The prisoner's defence ii. 777

* Evidence of Hill's being within always at eight o'clock at night ii. 777

* Hill shews that the corpse could not be in his chamber, and the rest of the family be ignorant of it ii. 778

* The court intimate that the prisoner's witnesses were privy to it ii. 779

* Hill urges it as an argument of his innocence, that he did not go out of the way when he was told he was suspected ii. 781

* The corporal and centinels depose, that no sedan went out of Somerst- house that night the king's evidence say for Edmundbury Godfrey was carried out ii. 783

* Mr. attorney's observations on the evidence ii. 784

* The chief justice directs the jury against the prisoners ii. 785

* The prisoners are convicted ii. 789

* And receive sentence the next day, though they were tried at bar ii. 789

* The tipstaff demands their clothes as his fee ii. 789

* But not allowed ii. 789

* They make protestations of their innocence ii. 790

* Denied priests to come to them ii. 791

* They are executed i. 791. viii. 441. * See ATKINS SAMUEL.
ii. 792

* GREEN, Captain THOMAS, and his Crew.

* Their trial before the high court of admiralty, in Scotland, for piracy, robbery, and murder, March 5, &c. 1705, 4 Anna v. 572

* Some of them pardoned, to be made witnesses against the rest v. 572

* Two indictments v. 573, 574, 575, 576

* Exceptions to the indictments v. 578

* The exceptions are over-ruled by the court v. 594

* A jury of fifteen sworn v. 595

* Ferdinando's evidence of taking a ship, and destroying the men v. 595

* May the surgeon's evidence, of the Worcester's taking a ship v. 596

* Francisco the captain's servant's evidence of the taking a ship v. 597

* Evidence of some words that Haines, one of the Worcester's crew, had let fall since their coming to Scotland v. 598

* Evidence that the bale-goods on board the Worcester were not marked
v. 599

* Evidence of Madder's having the seals of the Scotch African and East-
India company in his possession v. 600

* The instructions given to the captain by the English East-India company, to use an extraordinary caution and privacy in the letter they sent home, used as an argument that the English East-India company fitted out this ship on purpose to destroy the Scotch ships v. 602

* Sir David Dalrymple shews the nature of the crime, and makes his observations on the evidence v. 603

* The jury withdraw, and chuse their foreman and clerk v. 604

* The verdict is given in writing, and signed by the foreman and clerk
v. 604

* Most votes determine the fact v. 604

* They are all convicted but Reynolds v. 604

* Judgment pronounced by an officer appointed for the purpose v. 605

* Linstead recommended to the queen's mercy v. 606

* The confessions of some of the prisoners v. 606

* Appendix v. 609

* GREEN, WILLIAM ii. 585. See MESSANGER, & al.

GREGG, WILLIAM,
Proceedings against him at the Old-Bailly for high-treason, Jan. 10, 1707-8, 6 Ann. x. 77. Ap.
Report

Report of committee of lords, appointed to examine him, to the house

- x. 77. Ap.
 Bishop Burnett's account of the matter x. 77. Ap. n.
 Mr. justice Foster's observations on Gregg's case x. 77. Ap. n.
 Lords petition the queen to have him exemplarily punished x. 82. Ap.
 Mr. Hoffman's letter to ordinary of Newgate concerning Gregg, with the answer x. 82. Ap.
Gregg is executed x. 82. Ap.
Gregg's dying speech, wherein he clears the right honourable Robert Har-ley, esq. of all suspicion of being concerned in the traitorous correspondence x. 83. Ap.

* GREGORY, GEORGE, esq. iii. 949, 978. See SACHE-VEREL WILLIAM.

GREGORY, WILLIAM, Baron of the Exchequer, and Speaker of the House of Commons,

Examined as a witness on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41

* GREY, FORD Lord iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

* GREY, FORD Lord,

- * Robert Charnock, Ann Charnock, David Jones, Frances Jones, and Rebecca Jones, their trial on an information by the attorney-general, for a misdemeanour, in seducing and carrying away the lady Henrietta Berkeley, from her father the earl of Berkeley, being under 18 years of age, and under his government, and soliciting her to commit adultery with the said lord Grey, 34 Car. II. 1682 iii. 519
 * Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, and Mr. Finch, solicitor-general, open the evidence iii. 520, 521
 * Evidence of lady Arabella Berkeley iii. 522
 * And of the countess of Berkeley iii. 523
 * Evidence of lady Henrietta's being moved from place to place iii. 527
 * Mr. Williams's speech for the defendants iii. 533
 * Lord Grey's own account of the affair iii. 535
 * My lord Grey committed till he produced the lady Henrietta iii. 535
 * The lady Henrietta admitted to be sworn as a witness in this cause, though it was strongly opposed by the king's counsel, her evidence tending to excuse her unlawful love, &c. iii. 539
 * She denies upon her oath that ever my lord Grey advised her to, or had any hand in her escape, or knew any thing of it iii. 539
 * Lady Henrietta being asked who assisted her to make her escape, it is ruled by the court, that if he was no party to the information, she was not bound to discover him; for though one is sworn to speak the whole truth, that is to be understood only in relation to the point in issue iii. 540
 * And ruled, that if the court will ask her no questions, she is not to tell a story of herself iii. 540
 * The chief justice, in summing up the evidence, tells the jury, the charge was double. (1.) The soliciting the lady to unlawful love. (2.) The carrying her away from her father, under whose tuition she was iii. 541
 * There having been a writ de homine replegiando issued against my lord Grey for the lady Henrietta, she is examined in court whether she is under any restraint iii. 543
 * To which she answering, she was not, the lord chief justice orders her to be delivered to her father the lord Berkeley iii. 543
 * Whereupon she affirmed she was married to one Turner; and judge Dolben held, they could not dispose of another man's wife iii. 544
 * My lord Grey's counsel insists on his being discharged from his imprisonment, the lady being produced; to which the court agreed. Per cur. no judgment could be given that term, there being not four days left iii. 543
 * Mr. justice Dolben questions whether the court had power to commit my lord Grey on the homine replegiando, he being a peer iii. 543
 * The personessoigned is properly the plaintiff in a homine replegiando; and the court directed my lord Grey should give security to answer the lady's suit upon that writ iii. 543
 * Which he did, and is admitted to bail iii. 543
 * The lord Berkeley demands his daughter again; and there being a scuffle about her in the hall, the chief justice ordered a tipstaff to carry her and Turner, her pretended husband, to the King's-Bench: but the last day of the term the court ordered her to be discharged iii. 544
 * The jury find all the defendants guilty, but Rebecca Jones: but the matter being compromised in the vacation, the attorney-general entered a nolle prosequi before the next Hilary-term iii. 544
 The record vi. 16. Ap.

GREY, Lady JANE. See DUDLEY JOHN, Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND.

* GREY, ISAAC. See CROOK JOHN.

GREY, LEONARD Lord,

- His trial for treason, June 25, 1540, 33 Hen. VIII. xi. 17
 The articles laid to his charge xi. 17
 His answer xi. 17, 18
 Commission sent to Ireland to examine witnesses xi. 17
 Tried by a common jury, being only an Irish peer xi. 17
 Confessed the indictment xi. 17
 Ordered to be beheaded xi. 17
 Executed xi. 17

GRIEVANCES.

Bacon's speech on presenting to the king, Jac. I. petition of grievances from the commons xi. 65

GRIMSTONE, HARBOYLE,

His remarkable speech made against archbishop Laud, in the house of commons, upon his impeachment for treason i. 824

* GRINDALL, Archbishop,

- * His character and conduct v. 689
 * The queen's letter to the bishops, and his to the council v. 762
 * Remarks on them v. 820

* GROVE, JOHN ii. 696. See IRELAND.

GROVES,

GUARDS.

- His execution and speech viii. 440
 The law of England takes no notice of the king's guards iii. 760. See iii. 770
 The militia and trained bands are the legal guards iii. 760
 The king is guarded by the protection of God; by the love of his subjects; by the law, and courts of justice iii. 760
 The judges are the king's guards iii. 760
 All meetings, consultations, and agreements, to rise in rebellion and seize upon the king's guards, which are his defence against force, and to invite the aid and assistance of the king's subjects of any other of his dominions, are plain overt-acts of compassing the king's death, and so have been adjudged in all times viii. 467, 468

GUILT.

A person's flying from justice is a presumption of guilt x. 406. n.
GUISCARD, Marquis DE. See LEGISLATURE.

* GUNPOWDER-PLOT i. 232.

- * The quality of the conspirators i. 237
 * The principles of the jesuits i. 237
 * An exact and particular account of the plot, by Sir Edward Coke i. 235
 * Their defence as to their doctrine of equivocation; the deposing doctrine; and absenting themselves from our churches i. 257

GYPSY. See SQUIRES MARY.

H.

* HABEAS CORPUS.

- * The return of a habeas corpus, not signed by the keeper, void ii. 204
 * An alias habeas corpus in the name of Oliver the protector ii. 204
 * The return thereof ii. 205
 * An escape, to bring a prisoner in execution out of the rules of the prison without a habeas corpus, though to be a witness, and by order of the court iii. 97. iv. 2, 599
 * Remarks of an omission in the habeas corpus act iii. 906
 * The arguments on the return of the habeas corpus, by which the seven bishops were brought from the Tower to the King's-Bench bar iv. 304
 * A prisoner brought into the King's-Bench by habeas corpus, may be remanded to the county-gaol where he was indicted, or sent to any prison in the county where the King's-Bench sits iii. 1000. See ROSEWELL.
 * No habeas corpus or distingas issues in capital cases, unless the trial be in the King's-Bench iv. 667
Habeas corpus act infringed iv. 166
 The writ of habeas corpus explained Em. Pref. v.
 Error lies not in proceedings on habeas corpus viii. 157
 Petitions to the throne and queen consort to be discharged under acts for suspending habeas corpus in several reigns x. 71. Ap.
 Not to be granted to remove any person committed by the house of commons for a breach of privilege during that session vii. 462
Habeas corpus, a writ of right for the liberty of the subject ix. 440. See BERNARDI major JOHN.
CORBET Sir JOHN.
CROSBY BRASS, lord mayor of London.
DARNELL Sir THOMAS.
EARL Sir WALTER.
HAMPDEN Sir EDMUND.
JENKS FRANCIS.
KENDAL THOMAS.
LONG WALTER.
SELDEN JOHN.
SHAFTESBURY earl of.
STREATER JOHN.
STROUD WILLIAM.

* HACKER, FRANCIS ii. 382. See REGICIDES.

HACKWELL, WILLIAM,

- His speech concerning the bill for magna charta vii. 192
 Delivered a learned and able argument in same parliament lord Bacon did, against prerogative of crown imposing duties without consent of parliament xi. 29, 36
 * HAINES, GEORGE v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

HALE, MATTHEW.

- Mr. Hale (since the much renowned lord chief justice of the King's-Bench) spoke elaborately and at length for his grace the duke of Hamilton ii. 5
 When of high rank at the bar, took the engagement to be true and faithful to the commonwealth of England, without king or house of lords ii. 159, 173
 Of counsel for Love, impeached of treason for corresponding with, and conspiring to bring in, king Charles the second; is permitted to argue his exceptions ii. 159
 Argues that two witnesses were necessary to one overt-act in treason ii. 173
HALE, Sir MATTHEW, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,
 His observations at the trial of the reverend Robert Hawkins for felony, 1668, 20 Car. ii. 605
 His charge to the jury ii. 608
 Lord chief baron Hale of opinion, in a point of law, relative to high-treason, contrary to the rest of the judges, on the trial of Peter Messinger and others, for levying war against the king ii. 593
HALE, Sir MATTHEW, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
 His opinion, "That it is unlawful to print any man's private case, while it is depending in a court of judicature;" quoted by Heneage Finch, solicitor-licitor-general, in the quo warranto cause against the city of London

iii. 553
His lordship, and his encomium on the trial by jury, cited with great respect vi. 407. See xi. 251
Lord chief justice Hale, the term before he surrendered his judicial character, expressed himself thus: "He gave thanks to God, that he had spared him to that time, that he was able to keep his cushion, and declare his conscience in that place" viii. 109
Hale's Summary of the Pleas of the Crown said to be a very faulty, incorrect piece, never revised by him, nor intended for the press ix. 573
HALES, Sir EDWARD, Antiquary
His trial for neglecting to take the oaths of supremacy and allegiance,
1686 vii. 612
Action for 500l. upon the statute of 25 Car. II. vii. 612
Defendant pleads his majesty's dispensation, and plaintiff demurs vii. 613
Mr. Northey's argument for the plaintiff vii. 613
Sir Thomas Powis for the defendant vii. 614
Sir Edward Herbert, chief justice, his speech in giving his opinion for the defendant vii. 615
Eleven judges agree to the king's dispensing power vii. 616
The chief justice's vindication of himself, and his opinion vii. 617
Sir Robert Atkins's argument on the pleadings in this cause vii. 623
His animadversions on the chief justice's vindication vii. 625
The chief justice's vindication examined by Mr. Atwood vii. 630
The arguments at the bar in the above case were so ludicrous, as to be rather a farce, and fitter for a mock trial in a play, than such as became men of learning in so important a matter vii. 616. n.

HALES, ROBERT;

Was tried Jan. 27, 1728-9, at the King's-Bench bar, by a special jury, on indictment for a misdemeanour, for that he would have defrauded
S. E. of 800l. by means of a note upon the frank of a letter; which trial lasted seven hours, and he was found guilty, but pardoned ix. 68. n.

HALES, WILLIAM;

His trial for forgery at the Old-Bailey, December 7, 1728; 1 Geo. II. ix. 68
The note of hand whereon he was indicted for a misdemeanour ix. 68
Evidence for the crown ix. 69
Counsel for the prisoner ix. 71
Found guilty ix. 72
Indicted for fraudulently and by false tokens procuring notes of other persons, and found guilty on the same evidence as given on last trial ix. 72
Judgment respited ix. 72
His trial for a misdemeanour in obtaining 450l. from W. Harle by false tokens ix. 76
Mr. Strange opens the indictment ix. 76
Mr. Hungerford calls the evidence ix. 76
Mr. Lacy, counsel for the prisoner, makes no defence ix. 76
Lord chief baron sums up the evidence to the jury ix. 77
Found guilty ix. 77
His trial for forging a promissory note for 6400l. in name of T. G. and partners, and for publishing same as true, knowing it to be counterfeit, at the Old-Bailey, Dec. 9, 1728; 1 Geo. II. x. 94. Ap.
Serjeant Baynes objects to some of the jurymen being related to the prisoner x. 94. Ap.
Sir Philip Yorke (attorney-general) desires the trial may be conducted fairly, and therefore waves the person objected to x. 95. Ap.
The indictment x. 95. Ap.
Mr. Strange opens the indictment x. 96. Ap.
The attorney-general states the evidence x. 96. Ap.
The evidence x. 99. Ap.
Mr. serjeant Darnell's speech for the prisoner x. 112. Ap.
Mr. serjeant Baynes speaks on the same side x. 113. Ap.
The evidence for the prisoner x. 114. Ap.
Mr. justice Page gives the prisoner in charge to the jury x. 115. Ap.
They find him guilty x. 117. Ap.

HALES, WILLIAM, and THOMAS KINNERSLEY,
Clerk,

Their trials at the Old-Bailey, Jan. 20 and 21, 1728-9, 1 Geo. II. for forgery ix. 67
Names of the jury ix. 67
Attorney-general (Sir Philip Yorke) desires jurymen summoned and not sworn, to stay ix. 67
Substance of indictment ix. 67
Mr. Strange opens indictment ix. 67
The attorney-general opens the cause ix. 68
Witnesses called ix. 69
No defence ix. 73
Lord chief baron Pengelly's charge to the jury ix. 73
Found guilty ix. 77
Their trial for forgery ix. 77
Jury called over and sworn again ix. 77
Indictment read ix. 77
Indictment opened by Mr. Strange ix. 77
Attorney-general's speech for the king ix. 77
Evidence against them ix. 78
Serjeant Whitaker's speech against them ix. 82
Serjeant Darnell's and Mr. Lacy's for him ix. 82
Serjeant Eyre for Mr. Kinnersley ix. 83
Whether the making use of a man's name to a different purpose from what he designed, is a forgery ix. 83
Lord chief baron Pengelly's opinion on the cases quoted ix. 83
Evidence for the prisoner ix. 84
Serjeant Whitaker's observations on what had been said ix. 85
Mr. Strange on the same side ix. 85
Lord chief baron's summing up the evidence ix. 87
Clergyman tried by the same law as others ix. 92
Found guilty ix. 93

Fourth indictment, for obtaining from Thomas Bird 750l. by false tokens
ix. 93

Mr. Strange opens the indictment ix. 93
Serjeant Eyre objects that the facts in the indictment are laid illegally ix. 93
His objection over-ruled ix. 94
Lord chief baron's summing up ix. 94
Found guilty ix. 94
Fifth indictment (with William Kinnersley), for forging a promissory note, &c. in the name of Samuel Edwards, for 1650l. and publishing the same, knowing it to be forged ix. 94
Mr. Strange opens the indictment ix. 94
Attorney-general on the same side ix. 95
The evidence against them ix. 95
Judge Reynolds sums up the evidence ix. 100
Found guilty ix. 103
Sixth indictment, for forging and counterfeiting a promissory note of Samuel Edwards, Esq. to Samuel Lee, for 4000l. ix. 103
Serjeant Whitaker opens the indictment ix. 103
Evidence against him ix. 104
Serjeant Raby's charge to the jury ix. 105
Found guilty ix. 106
The note ordered to be returned by Sir Biby Lake, bart. ix. 106
Serjeant Whitaker moves; on the statute of Henry VIII. for corporal punishment ix. 106
Sir William Thomson answers, what corporal punishment? to be sure he will be pilloried ix. 106
Serjeant Whitaker observes, the prisoner hath endeavoured to get several thousand pounds, and now only to look through a wooden casement ix. 106
Sir William Thomson's reply, that he would be imprisoned, as well as set in the pillory ix. 106
Serjeant Whitaker would have the punishment extend farther ix. 106
Sir William Thomson is not for extending it to torture, there being no precedent, and he would not begin one; and said, the king himself is limited by the law ix. 106
The sentence against Hales and Kinnersley, viz. to stand twice in the pillory each: Hales to pay a fine of 50 marks, imprisoned for five years, and give security for seven years afterwards; Kinnersley fined 200l. to suffer two years imprisonment, and give security for his good behaviour for three years ix. 106

HALES, Mr. See KNIGHTLEY Sir RICHARD.
* HALIFAX, CHARLES Lord v. 339. See PORTLAND earl of.

HALL, EDWARD,

Extracts from his history of Henry VII. xi. 1
Extracts from his history of Henry VIII. xi. 19
HALL, L. a secular Priest;
And Robert Feron, their trial in Westminster-Hall, by commission of Oyer and Terminer, for treason, Easter-Term, 27 Henry VIII. xi. 23
Substance of indictment xi. 23
At first pleaded not guilty, but afterwards confessed xi. 23
Judgment xi. 23
Hall hanged xi. 23
Feron pardoned xi. 23

HALL, BARTHOLOMEW,

His reply on the trial of Christopher Love, impeached of high-treason for corresponding with, and conspiring to bring in, Charles II. ii. 141

HALL, L. Attorney-General for Cheshire;

Opens Stevenson's case and evidence for murder x. 463
His reply x. 474. 476

HAMILTON, ANDREW. See ZENGER PETER.
* HAMILTON, JAMES Duke, and Earl of Cambridge,

* His trial for high-treason before the High Court of Justice, Feb. 9, 1648 ii. 1
* The charge for levying war in behalf of the king; against the kingdom and people of England ii. 1
* The duke's plea ii. 1
* Moves for time to send for his witnesses; but is denied ii. 1
* Counsel assigned him ii. 2
* Evidence of the duke's surrendering upon articles; one of which was, that his life should be secured ii. 2
* The commissioners who treated with him deposed, they intended only to secure his life from the soldiers, and not from the civil power ii. 2
* The governor of Windsor-Castle deposes, that the duke made his escape, though he had given him his honour he would not attempt it ii. 3
* The duke's defence ii. 3
* He insists upon the articles ii. 3
* The duke's counsel speak to points of law ii. 5
* They urge, that the two kingdoms were independent; and the duke, being a native of Scotland, could not be a traitor to England ii. 5
* Mr. Steel's argument for the commonwealth ii. 7
* The earl born after king James's accession ii. 8
* All who are born in Scotland since king James's accession, deemed as natives of England to all intents. Calvin's case ii. 9
* So the natives of Gascogne deemed denizens of England, when it was under the dominion of the king of England ii. 9
* Ligeantiam naturalem nemo ejurare potest, nec patriam exuere ii. 9
* Object. That the nations were again divided at this invasion ii. 9
* Answer. That the acts of union stood unrepealed ii. 9
* That allegiance was due to the king in his politic capacity, and consequently to the kingdom ii. 9
* The oath of allegiance permitted to be taken, therefore, to the king till his death ii. 9
* Authorities cited for charging the duke as earl of Cambridge, and not as duke ii. 10
* Scots tried for treason here before the union, on account of the homage that kingdom owed to this ii. 11
* The duke a traitor by the local allegiance he owed ii. 11
* That the act for naturalizing the father, extended to his issue born before

- fore the act, without special words ii. 12
- * Not so in the case of denization ii. 12
- * A native of England may travel without a licence ii. 12
- * The earl's sitting in a judicial capacity in the English parliament, made another argument of his denization ii. 12
- * Treason for the earl to join English rebels, while the nations were in amity ii. 13
- * It was not material, whether the English rebels fought under his standard, or he under theirs ii. 13
- * Articles entered into by military officers, could not pardon treason committed against the civil power; for that the power of pardoning is incommunicable ii. 14
- * The intention of the parties in all compacts was to be considered; nor could the commissioners have bound the civil power, if they had stipulated to do it ii. 15
- * That the duke had lost the benefit of his surrender, by making his escape ii. 15
- * That the duke had received some benefit by his articles, by being allowed a fair trial; and not being put to the sword immediately ii. 15
- * The duke's plea rejected, and he found guilty ii. 16
- * Sentence passed ii. 16
- * Put to the vote, if the duke should be reprieved ii. 16
- * His behaviour at execution ii. 16. See BAILLIE DAVID. REA lord.
- HAMILTON, Marquis.
- Mr. Justice Whitelocke's memorial concerning the lord Rea's discovery of the marquis of Hamilton's conspiracy xi. 126
- HAMMOND, JOHN. See JACKSON WILLIAM.
- HAMPDEN, Sir EDMUND,
- Imprisoned for not lending upon the commission for loans, brings his habeas corpus vii. 116
- HAMPDEN, JOHN, Esq.
- * The trial between the king and him in the case of ship-money, 13 Car. I. i. 505
- * Lord keeper Conventry's charge to the judges i. 505
- * His second charge i. 507
- * The king's letter, state of the case of ship-money, and the judges opinion i. 509
- * The whole record in English i. 510. vi. 5. Ap.
- * Mr. St. John's argument for mr. Hampden i. 515
- * His second day's argument i. 537
- * Sir Edward Littleton's, solicitor-general, his argument i. 544
- * His second day's argument i. 550
- * His third day's argument i. 558
- * Mr. Holborne's argument i. 562
- * He makes an apology for arguing against the king's power; but is directed by the court to proceed i. 565
- * Writ of mandamus rogantis, the nature of it i. 568
- * Mr. Holborne's second day's argument i. 568
- * Danegelt, the tax so called, the nature of it i. 571, 580
- * Mr. Holborne's third day's argument i. 574
- * His fourth day's argument i. 580
- * His answer to the arguments of the king's counsel i. 585
- * Sir John Banks's, attorney-general, his argument i. 586
- * His second day's argument i. 594
- * His third day's argument, wherein he answers the objections of the defendant's counsel i. 603
- * The opinion of mr. baron Weston, for the king; with his reasons i. 609
- * The opinion of mr. justice Crawley, for the king; with his reasons i. 615
- * The argument and opinion of mr. justice Berkley, for the king i. 619
- * The opinion of mr. justice Vernon, for the king i. 637
- * The opinion and reasons of mr. baron Trevor, for the king i. 637
- * Mr. justice Crooke gives his opinion and reasons, for the defendant i. 638
- * His reasons, as they were presented to the king i. 644
- * All the records that had been produced, stated i. 656, &c.
- * Mr. justice Jones's argument i. 663
- * His opinion that the defendant should be charged, with this limitation, that none of the money should come to the king's purse: if it does, he is against it i. 667
- * Mr. justice Hutton's argument and opinion, for the defendant i. 667
- * Mr. baron Denham's opinion, for the defendant i. 672
- * Chief baron Davenport's argument and opinion, for the king i. 672
- * Lord chief justice Finch's argument and opinion, for the king i. 679
- * Lord chief justice Bramston's argument and opinion, for the king i. 691
- * The order, and judgment i. 695
- * Mr. Waller's speech in the house of commons i. 696
- * Copy of the judgment entered against him i. 695, 696. vi. 9. Ap.
- * Lord Falkland's speech i. 698
- * Mr. St. John's speech at a conference i. 699
- * Mr. Hild's speech i. 709
- * Articles of impeachment against justice Berkley i. 709
- * Mr. Pierpoint's speech i. 713
- * Mr. Hollis's speech for a reward to lord chief justice Crooke i. 715
- * The judgment censured by the house of lords i. 716
- * Mr. Waller's speech against justice Crawley i. 717
- * Hampden's trial for a misdemeanour, Feb. 6, 1683, 36 Car. II. iii. 824
- * The indictment, for combining and confederating with others of the king's subjects to raise a rebellion iii. 824
- * The having an employment under the king no cause of challenge iii. 825
- * Sir Robert Sawyer's, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iii. 827
- * The reason why the court waved prosecuting the prisoner for treason iii. 827
- * The duke of Monmouth called for a witness; but did not appear iii. 828
- * The lord Howard's evidence of my lord Shaftesbury's plot iii. 828
- * His evidence concerning the Cabal, or council of six, of which the prisoner and himself were members iii. 830
- * The Scotch invited into the conspiracy iii. 830
- * Aaron Smith sent into Scotland iii. 831
- * Sir Andrew Foster deposes, that the Scotch agents came to London; and, to disguise their design, pretended to come about making a purchase in Carolina iii. 833
- * My lord Russel wrote the letter to invite them hither iii. 834
- * The defence made by mr. Hampden's counsel iii. 834
- * They endeavour chiefly to invalidate my lord Howard's testimony iii. 837
- * And shew that mr. Hampden is not of a seditious, turbulent disposition, as laid in the indictment iii. 841
- * The bail cannot be witness for the defendant; but the king's counsel admitted it in this case iii. 842
- * What the defendant has said can be no evidence for him; but the court admitted such evidence to be given iii. 843
- * One who would have deposed that my lord Howard, the king's witness, had been guilty of some atheistical expressions, not permitted to be examined iii. 845
- * The counsel on both sides leave it to the court to sum up and make observations on the evidence iii. 845
- * The defendant is convicted ii. 854
- * Salvo contentamento in magna charta, said to be meant only of amercedments, and not of fines, for great offences iii. 854
- * A fine of 40,000*l.* set upon the defendant iii. 855
- The record vi. 45.
- * Hampden's trial for high-treason, Dec. 30, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 207
- * The indictment, for conspiring the death of the late king Charles II. and consulting and agreeing to raise an insurrection in order thereto iv. 208
- * The prisoner objects, he had been tried before, and fined for the same fact iv. 208. See vi. 405, 406
- * Pleads guilty, and throws himself on the king's mercy iv. 208
- * Receives sentence iv. 209
- * He procured a pardon; but afterwards laid violent hands upon himself iv. 209
- The record vi. 51. Ap.
- His close imprisonment, as it was against law, so it was without precedent iv. 166. See Id. 177, 205
- An account of it, and of his sufferings, related by himself viii. 280
- His fine monstrously extravagant Em. Pref. xii. See iii. 855
- HAND-WRITING.
- * What is sufficient proof of a man's writing, and what not, argued at large iv. 337
- Similitude of hands not evidence of hand-writing in capital cases iv. 447
- v. 79. vi. 418, 419. See EVIDENCE. NOTE of HAND. PROMISSORY NOTE. WRITING.
- HANGING IN CHAINS.
- Before stat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37, great difficulty in getting a prisoner convicted of petit treason to be so hung x. 39
- Regency petitioned on the occasion x. 39
- Now settled how to be x. 39
- A murderer hung in chains in pursuance of the above act, in Scotland x. 138
- HANGMAN.
- Not usual in the reign of Charles I. to burn books in England by the hands of the common hangman i. 424
- A criminal sentenced to be whipped lies at the mercy of a vile executioner; and it is left in the power of a common hangman to make that whipping severe or favourable, as he pleases Em. Pref. xii.
- The lords resolve a libel to be burnt by the common hangman in 1702 viii. 80
- Doctor Sacheverel's sermon was ordered to be burnt by the hands of the common hangman v. 831. ix. 278
- Hangman has not a discretionary power to execute a man according to his conscience v. 133
- Hangman of Calais being more expert at beheading than any in England, was brought over to cut off the head of Anna Boleyn, queen to Henry VIII. xi. 13
- HANOVER.
- * Reasons for addressing his majesty to invite the electress dowager and elector of Hanover, censured by the lords viii. 82
- HARBOURING TRAITORS. See TREASON.
- * Two tried thereupon i. 139, 140. iv. 131, 132
- * Whether the record of the conviction of the traitor harboured, be not necessary to be produced, to convict the person charged with harbouring of him? iv. 122, 135, 137
- * The person harboured made an evidence against the person harbouring him iv. 137
- * Ruled by the court, that a person harbouring a rebel may be convicted of treason, though the rebel himself be not convicted iv. 127
- * In order to convict one of harbouring a traitor, evidence must be given that the party harbouring knew him to be such iv. 127
- HARCOURT, Sir SIMON, Solicitor-General.
- Opens the evidence on the trial of Svensden, indicted for forcibly marrying Mrs. Rawlins v. 449
- Opens the evidence on the trial of Mrs. Baynton, for forcibly taking Mrs. Rawlins away, and procuring her to be married to the said Svensden v. 465
- His speech on Lindsay's prosecution for treason v. 524
- His speech and argument on the first article, in defence of Henry Sacheverel, D. D. impeached by the commons, before the lords, for sedition v. 710
- His parliamentary speech relative to Abby and White viii. 107
- HARCOURT, Sir SIMON, Attorney-General.
- His speech on the trial of Daniel Dammaris, for treason viii. 221
- His reply viii. 239, 240
- His speech on prosecution of Francis Willis, for treason viii. 251
- His reply viii. 268
- His speech on the prosecution of George Purchase viii. 268

His reply viii. 281
HARCOURT, WILLIAM ii. 829. See WHITE, alias WHITEBREAD, & al.

HARDING, FILIAR. See HENDLEY WILLIAM.

HARDING, ———,

Opens indictment against William Acton ix. 181

HARDWICKE, Lord, Chief Justice B. R.

Trial before him, on a mandamus for admission to the freedom of the port of Hastings x. 138. Ap.

Of opinion, if an original corporation book is produced, copy cannot be read x. 142. Ap.

Orders an ancient book to be read x. 142. Ap.

His notion respecting a fine certain, and a reasonable fine x. 162. Ap.

Sums up the evidence, and states the case to the jury x. 172. Ap.

Observed that reasonableness of fine must be saved for opinion of court x. 175. Ap.

"Cases in the time of lord Hardwicke," is a book of good authority, and the cases well and correctly taken xi. 213

His procession on the trials of earls Kilmarnock and Gromartie, and of lord Balmerino ix. 599*

His commission of lord high steward on that occasion ix. 599*

His lordship's address to the noble prisoners, previous to their trial ix. 595*

His lordship's address to the noble prisoners, previous to judgment ix. 613*

His lordship's procession on the trial of lord Lowry ix. 621*

His lordship's commission of lord high steward ix. 621*

His lordship's address to the noble prisoner previous to his trial ix. 622*

His lordship's address to the noble prisoner after trial, and before judgment ix. 750*

HARGRAVE, FRANCIS,

Gives us hopes that he will favour the public with the history of the long contest about taxes out of parliament, from the accession of the Stuart family, till finally decided against the crown, in 1641 xi. 29

He corrects an historical mistake of lord Herbert, mr. Hume, and the writers of the Parliamentary History, respecting the attainders of Empton and Dudley xi. 3

He corrects a mistake in sir William Dugdale's baronage, respecting the attainder of Edward duke of Buckingham xi. 6

Notifies to those who are allied to the noble families of Stafford and Stafford Howard, that the barony of Stafford is not extinct xi. 6, 7

Supplies omission of two acts of parliament, relative to trials of crimes committed out of the realm xi. 17

His observation on bishop Burnet's History of the Reformation, respecting denying the supremacy xi. 23. n.

His argument on behalf of Somers, in the famous negro cause xi. 340.

See NEGRO. SLAVERY. SOMERSET JAMES. VILLENAGE.

HARLEIAN MSS.

Extracts from this manuscript xi. 10. See BOLEYN ANNA, Queen of England DACRES Lord WILLIAM, of the North. DUDLEY JOHN, Duke of NORTHUMBERLAND. HOWARD PHILIP, Earl of ARUNDEL.

HARLEY, Sir ROBERT, the Speaker,

His speeches in the house of commons, in the case of the Aylesbury men viii. 92, 113

This right honourable privy counsellor cleared by the traitor Gregg, in his dying speech, of all suspicion of privity to his correspondence x. 83. Ap. See LEGISLATURE.

* HARRIS, BENJAMIN,

* His trial for a libel, 32 Car. II. 1679 ii. 1037. See iii. 219, 220. vii. 483

* The libel, entitled, "An appeal from the country to the city," &c. ii. 1037

* Evidence of the defendant's publishing it ii. 1038

* The pamphlet proposes the setting up the duke of Monmouth for king, after the death of king Charles ii. 1039

* The chief justice's directions ii. 1039

* The jury not permitted to have the book out with them ii. 1039

* Harris is convicted ii. 1039

* And committed to the King's Bench ii. 1039

* His sentence ii. 1039

HARRIS, Doctor. See KINGSTON, Duchess Dowager of.

HARRIS, JOHN. See MORRIS.

* HARRISON, HENRY,

* His trial for the murder of Andrew Glenche, M. D. April 6, 1692. W. & M. iv. 488

* The indictment iv. 488

* Mr. Darnell's speech before evidence iv. 489

* Witnesses for the king called, to prove that the prisoner bore malice against the deceased iv. 491

* Proof of the prisoner's often changing his lodgings, and pretending he came out of the country iv. 493

* The coachman's evidence of the murdering dr. Glenche in his coach iv. 494

* Ashe's evidence, that she saw Harrison in the coach with dr. Glenche iv. 496

* The evidence before the coroner, of a boy who was withdrawn, read in court, to prove that the prisoner was in the coach iv. 496

* Harrison's defence iv. 497

* The prisoner calls witnesses, who depose he was at another place when the fact was committed iv. 497

* Other witnesses examined for the king iv. 499

* The prisoner's witnesses proved to be people of no credit iv. 500

* Lord chief justice Holt's charge to the jury iv. 502. See viii. 484

* The prisoner is convicted, and sentence passed iv. 505

* His examination before the lord chief justice Holt and aid mortiv. 505

* His speech at execution viii. 484

* HARRISON, THOMAS, Clerk,

* His trial at the King's Bench, for a misdemeanour, in speaking reflecting words of mr. justice Hutton, of the Common Pleas, 14 Car. I. it. 38 i. 720

* The indictment for saying, "I accuse mr. justice Hutton of high-treason" i. 710

* Mr. serjeant Heath's speech i. 721

* The defendant's examination read, wherein he owns and justifies the words i. 721

* Sir John Banks, attorney-general, his speech i. 721

* The defendant convicted and censured i. 722

The record vi. 16. Ap. See DE BRUCE. WRAYNHAM.

* HARRISON, THOMAS ii. 314. See REGICIDES.

HARRISON, THOMAS,

Appears, who was supposed to be murdered, and for whose supposed murder no less than three innocent persons were executed vi. 425.

x. 29. Ap. ii.

HARTINGTON, Marquis of,

His speech in the case of Ashe and Whits viii. 103

* HARTWELL, JOHN v. 469. See SWENSSEN.

* HARVEY, EDMOND ii. 390. See REGICIDES.

HASTINGS. See MOORE HENRY.

* HATHAWAY, RICHARD,

* His trial, for being an impostor, pretending he was bewitched by Sarah Morduck, at Surrey assizes, March 24, 1702, 2 Anna v. 482

* The information v. 482

* Mr. Conyers's and mr. Broderick's speech before evidence v. 483

* Mr. Phipps on the same side v. 485

* Where the actions of another may be given in evidence against the defendant v. 488

* He is detected as to his pretence of vomiting pins v. 489

* He is detected as to his pretence of fasting v. 491, 492

* Evidence admitted to be given of what was done after the information exhibited v. 492

* Mr. serjeant Jenner's speech for the defendant v. 494

* Witnesses examined to prove that he was really bewitched v. 495

* Sir Thomas Lane's evidence v. 500

* Whether the devil can enable a man to fast beyond the time that nature allows? v. 501

* Lord chief justice Holt directs the jury v. 501

* He is convicted v. 503

The record vi. 59. Ap.

* HATHAWAY, WELLING, and WILLOUGHBY,

* Their trial for a riot, and assault upon Sarah Morduck, who, they pretended, had bewitched Hathaway, March 26, 1702, 2 Anna v. 504

* All the defendants are convicted v. 505

The record vi. 59. Ap.

HATRED.

Hatred is a rancour settled in the mind of one towards another, which admits of several degrees; it may arrive to so high a degree, and may carry a man so far as to wish the hurt of him, tho' not to perpetrate it himself ix. 63

HATS.

Women not permitted to wear their hats, on trials i. 339

Prisoner fined for wearing his hat at his trial ii. 611

One colonel Martin, it is said, at his trial, at Reading, after the jury was sworn, caused them all, before the judges sitting upon the bench, to put on their hats as their right, being they were then the chief judges in the court, and the others inferior to them ii. 69. n.

High sheriff sits covered on his being present in court, on executing writ of enquiry iii. 987

King Charles I. did not at all move his hat at his trial i. 985, 1017, 1038

A prisoner sitting covered whilst his impeachment was reading; the lord president commanded his hat to be taken off; which the prisoner observing, took it off himself ii. 281

HATSELL, Sir HENRY, Baron of the Exchequer,

Was of opinion, that the king's counsel, on challenging a juror, ought to shew cause vi. 195

His charge to the jury on the prosecution of Spencer Cowper, a gentleman at the bar, for murder vi. 231

HATTON, Sir CHRISTOPHER,

Sat as one of the commissioners on the trial of Babington and others, for treason i. 127, 134

And on the trial of Abington and others; for same offence i. 135

* HAWERSHAM, JOHN Lord v. 339. See PORTLAND.

HAWKINS, ROBERT, Clerk,

* His trial for felony, at the assizes at Aylesbury, 20 Car. II. 1668 ii. 595

* The indictment ii. 595

* Larimore the prosecutor, one of his parishioners, deposes he saw him rifle a box in his house, and steal his money, &c. ii. 596

* The prosecutor's endeavour to prove felonies not laid in the indictment ii. 601

* Mr. Hawkins's defence ii. 602

* The chief baron observes, that the warrant the prosecutor had procured to search for his goods, was dated the day before he pretended the robbery was committed ii. 605

* Evidence of a conspiracy by sir John Croke the prosecutor, and others, to lay felony to the prisoner's charge, because he sued them for his tithes ii. 606

* The chief baron directs the jury ii. 608

* Mr. Hawkins is acquitted ii. 610

* The jury commended by the court for their verdict ii. 610

* HAWKINS, Sir JOHN,

* His remarks on Fitz-barris's trial iv. 162

* On Colledge's trial iv. 173

* On the earl of Shaftesbury's grand jury iv. 181

* On mr. Wilson's bovine replegiando iv. 185

* On

- * On the lord Ruffel's trial iv. 187
 * On colonel Sidney's trial iv. 196
 * On the award of execution against sir Thomas Armstrong iv. 198
 * On the trial of count Coningsmark, and others iv. 199
 * On mr. Cornish's trial iv. 200
 * On mr. Bateman's trial iv. 204
 Had his education at one of the three great schools, and at the university; resided 25 years in an inn of court, and attended 20 years in Westminster-hall iv. 206
 The fulsome but injurious stuff vented for crown law, first put him on writing his remarks iv. 206
 Wrote reply to Shewer's "Magistracy of England vindicated" vii. 63, 227. See iii. 766, 783. v. 86, 97.
 His reply on the trial of Charnock and others for treason iv. 589
HAWLES, Sir JOHN, Solicitor-general, iv. 620
 His reply on the prosecution of sir John Friend, for treason iv. 620
 His reply to the defence of sir William Parkyns, for treason, in promoting the assassination plot iv. 652
 His reply for the king against Peter Cooke for treason iv. 770
 His speech before evidence on the trial of captain Vaughan, indicted before the Admiralty for assisting the king's enemies and levying war v. 19
 Was of opinion, on sir John Fenwick's bill of attainder, that a conspiracy to levy war was not an overt act of compassing the king's death v. 85
 Sums up the evidence for the king upon the trial of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, before the house of peers for murder v. 176
 He seems to have laboured under a disorder of the lungs v. 175, 191. See vi. 76.
 His observations on the evidence for the king, on the trial of Charles lord Mahon, for murder, before his peers v. 191
 His argument in maintenance of the first article in the impeachment exhibited by the commons against doctor Henry Sacheverel, for preaching seditiously v. 676
 His parliamentary speech in justification of the lords, in the case of Abby and White viii. 100
HAY, Sir GEORGE, Judge of the Prerogative-court, xi. 221, 229, 235
 Encomium passed on him
HAY, JOHN,
 His deposition concerning the murder of lord Darnley, husband to Mary queen of Scots viii. 329
 He is condemned viii. 332
 * HAYES, JOSEPH,
 * His trial for high-treason, at the King's-Bench bar, at Westminster, 36 Car. II. 1684. iii. 1067
 * His indictment for corresponding with sir Thomas Armstrong, an outlaw for high-treason iii. 1067. vi. 50. Ap.
 * Evidence against him, that a bill drawn by him for 161l 15s. was found about sir Thomas Armstrong iii. 1068
 * His defence iii. 1070
 * He is acquitted iii. 1071
HAYWARD, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,
 His speech against Mary Blandy on her trial for parricide x. 7
HEARN, JOHN,
 His argument in defence of William Prynne for writing Histrionastix i. 423
HEARSAY. See EVIDENCE.
HEATH, MARY,
 Her trial at the court of King's-Bench, in Ireland, for perjury in the great cause in ejectment, between James Annesley, esq. and Richard earl of Anglesea, Feb. 8, 1744, 17 Geo. II. ix. 432
 The several proceedings and affidavits previous to the trial ix. 432, &c.
 Lord chief justice Marley's opinion relating to the granting a habeas corpus ix. 440
 Commits persons for falsifying their affidavits ix. 440
 Mr. justice Ward's opinion on the same case ix. 440
 Motions for putting off mrs. Heath's trial ix. 441, &c.
 Mr. justice Blennerhasset delivers his opinion upon them ix. 448
 Mr. justice Ward delivers his ix. 449
 Lord chief justice Marley delivers his opinion ix. 450
 The indictment against mrs. Mary Heath ix. 452
 Officer of the court delivers to the jury the five assignments of perjury ix. 454
 Mr. solicitor-general opens the evidence ix. 454
 The evidence against her ix. 455, &c.
 Court mentioned to jury to go out to take refreshment, which they declined ix. 497
 Mr. recorder opens the evidence for the defendant ix. 497
 Witnesses examined for the defendant ix. 498
 Mr. justice Blennerhasset sums up the evidence against her ix. 523
 Lord chief justice Marley does the same ix. 524
 Jury acquit her ix. 524
HEATH, JOHN,
 Opens the indictment against Fitz-barris for a treasonable libel iii. 266
HEATH, RICHARD,
 He was excepted by name out of the act of indemnity that passed in the year 1690, 1 W. and M. x. 41. Ap.
HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Serjeant at Law,
 His speech on the trial of Thomas Harrison for reflecting on sir Richard Hutton, justice C. B. i. 721
HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Attorney-general,
 Proposed questions to the judges, relative to the trial of lord Audley i. 387
 His charge against the noble prisoner i. 390, 393
 His reply to the form of the return of hab. corp. by persons committed for refusing to lend upon commissions for loans vii. 128
 His objections to the house of commons arguments on that occasion, at a conference with the lords vii. 192
 His argument for return of hab. corp. in case of William Stroud and others vii. 236
 Like for the king against sir John Elliot and others, in information for seditious speeches in parliament vii. 246, 247
 The house of commons resolved, that sir Robert Heath, in subscribing his name to the information exhibited in the Star-chamber against mr. Hollis and the rest, for matters done by him in parliament, being a member of parliament, and the same so appearing in the information, is guilty thereby of the breach of privilege of parliament vii. 250
HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Justice C. B.
 His speech for a mild sentence on Henry Sherfield, esq. convicted by information in the Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glass-window in a church i. 409
HEATH, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
 His speech to John Lilburne, on his being arraigned before him at Oxford for high-treason against king Charles the first ii. 20
HEIGHAM DE, one of the Barons of the Exchequer. See DE BRUCE.
 H E I R E S S .
 Prosecution and conviction for forcibly marrying an heiress v. 550
HENDLEY, WILLIAM, the Reverend,
 His trial for preaching a charity sermon at Chislehurst, in Kent; and of George Campman, Robert Hicks, Filiat Harding, and Walter Pratt, the schoolmaster, and trustees for the charity children of St. Anne's, Aldersgate, London, for collecting the money at Rocheester assizes, July 15, 1719, 5 Geo. I. x. 86. Ap.
 The case x. 86. Ap.
 Tenor of the indictment in Latin x. 87. Ap.
 Purport of it in English x. 87. Ap.
 Plead not guilty x. 88. Ap.
 The names of the jury x. 88. Ap.
 The counsel for the prosecution x. 88, 89. Ap.
 The counsel for defendants x. 88, 89. Ap.
 Mr. Marsh, of plaintiff's counsel, his argument x. 88. Ap.
 The evidence for the prosecution x. 88, 89. Ap.
 The argument of serjeant Darnell and mr. Baynes, plaintiff's other counsel x. 88, 89. Ap.
 Sir Constantine Phipps, of counsel for defendants, his argument x. 88, 89. Ap.
 Sir Littleton Pouys, judge B. R. sums up the evidence x. 88, 89. Ap.
 Found guilty and fined x. 88, 91. Ap.
 The judge's letter to lord chancellor Parker, giving an account of the above trial, and other matters on that circuit x. 89. Ap.
HENGHAM,
 However he was a learned and famous judge in his age, yet he lived so long since, and the particulars of which he writes are so different from the practice and established laws of the ensuing ages, that his authority is of slight or no moment for direction in judgment of law at this day; though it be very considerable in examination what the law was in his time, and that way it sometimes is used as an ornament in argument only vii. 235
 He died about 450 years past vii. 235
HENLEY, ROBERT,
 Argues that attainted persons are liable to civil suit ix. 586
HENLET, ROBERT, Lord-keeper of the Great Seal,
 His procession, as lord high steward, on earl Ferrers's trial x. 478
 His commission of lord high steward x. 479
 His address to the noble prisoner previous to the evidence ix. 481
 His lordship's address to the noble prisoner after trial and before judgment x. 516*. See NORTHINGTON Earl of.
HENRY the FIRST.
 In the time of king Henry the first the pope usurped the donation of bishopricks xi. 71
HENRY the SECOND.
 In the time of king Henry the second, the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the secular power xi. 72
HENRY the SEVENTH.
 This king set up the band of pensioners iii. 760
HENRY the EIGHTH.
 His character observed upon xi. 25
 The attainders in Henry the eighth's time were for acts in that reign, which were questionable whether or no within the statute of Edw. III. and were for such actions as perhaps were not for the honour of the prince, or good of the government to disclose, by public trial v. 86, 125
HEPBURNE, JOHN,
 His deposition concerning the murder of the lord Darnley, Mary queen of Scots husband viii. 330
 He is condemned viii. 332
HERBERT, Sir EDWARD.
 He was impeached when attorney-general for exhibiting articles against the five members of parliament viii. 566
HERBERT, Sir EDWARD, Lord Chief-Justice B. R.
 His speech on giving his opinion for sir Edward Hales at the suit of Godwin vii. 615
 His vindication of himself, and justification of his opinion in the above cause for the king's dispensing power vii. 617. See ATKINS Sir ROBERT. ATWOOD WILLIAM.
 He is excepted by name in the act of grace that passed at the Revolution in the year 1690, viz. 2 W. and M. chap. 10. iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.
 The house of commons resolved, that the judgment given against Samuel Johnson in the King's-Bench, wherein sir Edward then presided, upon an information for a misdemeanor, was cruel and illegal vii. 647
HERBERT, Lord.
 This historian is mistaken respecting the attainders of Emmison and Dudley xi. 3
 Extracts from his history of Henry the eighth xi. 3, 4, 10, 18
HERBERT, Mr.
 Proceedings against him for taking Giles's part iii. 79
 "HERE"

"HEREDITARY RIGHT."

A libel so called vi. i. viii. 682. n. ix. 679. n.
 * HERESY and HERETICKS.

- * Heresy antiently tried before the archbishop i. 16, 37
- * Deemed heresy antiently to hold that the sacrament of the altar, after consecration, was material bread i. 20
- * Or that images ought not to be worshipped i. 20
- * Or that men ought not to go on pilgrimages i. 20
- * Or to deny the necessity of penance and confession i. 41
- * Or to deny the authority of the church i. 41
- * Or to read the Bible i. 49
- * Hereticks antiently excluded the benefit of sanctuary by act of parliament i. 49
- Short account how the law formerly stood in relation to this crime vi. 1
- Form of warrant for issuing writ de hæret. combur. vi. 2
- The writ vi. 2, 3
- An erroneous opinion may make an heretick, but not a traitor iv. 182
- Sauvres* executed in the year 1401, 2 Hen. IV. was the first burnt for heresy vi. i. n. Ap. See OLDCASTLE Sir JOHN. PORTAGE JOHN. THORPE WILLIAM.

HERON, Mr.

Spoke cursorily and elegantly on behalf of his grace James duke of Hamilton ii. 5

HERTFORD LETTER. See COWPER SPENCER.

HERTFORD, Marquis of,

His case on a bill in parliament to restore him to the title of duke of Somerset viii. 19

HEVENINGHAM, Sir JOHN,

Imprisoned for not subscribing to the loans, brings his hab. corp. See DARNELL Sir THOMAS.

* HEVENINGHAM, WILLIAM ii. 302. See REGICIDES.

* HEWET, JOHN, D.D.

* His trial for high-treason, before the High Court of Justice, in Westminster-hall, June 1, 1658, 10 Car. II. ii. 281

* Impeached of high-treason against the lord protector and the state ii. 281

* The doctor sits covered before the court ii. 281

* He says he is not to own every man for his judge who would assume that office; and demands of the court that he might hear their commission read ii. 282

* The doctor questions if the commons had power to erect that court; especially since 150 of their members were excluded ii. 285

* The doctor's refusal to plead is recorded ii. 286

* The plea and demurrer drawn up by the doctor, with intention to present it to the court ii. 286

* His judgment of death ii. 299

* He is beheaded ii. 300

* His speech and behaviour at execution ii. 300

* HICKFORD, ROBERT, Servant to the Duke of Norfolk;

* His arraignment and confession the 9th of Feb. 1571 i. 117

* The chief justice's speech before judgment i. 118

* HICKMAN, ROBERT v. 337. See KID & al.

HICKS, ROBERT. See HENDLEY WILLIAM.

HIDE, EDWARD,

His speech at a conference i. 709. See HYDE.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

The difference between this court and that of Ofer and Terminer ii. 87

HIGH STEWARDS.

Peers who have held this great office.

Arundel, Thomas earl of i. 736 Hardwicke, Philip lord ix. 590*

Batburs, Henry earl of xi. 198

Buckhurst, Thomas lord i. 197 Henley, Robert lord x. 478

Carmarthen, Thomas marquis of iv. 510 Jeffries, George lord iv. 211

Clarendon, Henry earl of vii. 422 Norfolk, Thomas duke of xi. 5, 6, 10, 26

Codrington, Thomas lord i. 390 Northampton, Robert earl of x. 517*

Cowper, William lord vi. 5, 18, 102 Nottingham, Heneage earl of ii. 641,

Darenton, Heneage lord iii. 101

Derby, Henry earl of i. 164, xii. 27 Shrewsbury, George earl of i. 82

Ellesmere, Thomas lord i. 348, 351 Somers, John lord v. 137

The commons denied the necessity of a lord high steward on a trial by impeachment ii. 740. See x. 209. Ap.

Address to the king ordered by the house of peers for appointing a lord high steward to continue during the trial of a Scotch nobleman, upon an impeachment of treason by the commons ix. *618. See

COURT OF THE HIGH STEWARD. * TRIAL.

HILL, GEORGE, Serjeant at Law,

His collection of parliamentary cases is esteemed a most valuable treasure, being the most perfect of any existing xi. 137

HILLIARD, JOHN. See POLE Cardinal.

* HILL, LAWRENCE, ii. 700. See GREEN ROBERT,

& al.

Account of paper found in his pocket at his execution viii. 441

* HIND, JAMES. See TONGE, & al.

HISTORY.

This collection of trials will illustrate many parts of history Em. Pref. i

Sir Edward Coke says, chronicle law is not much to be regarded i. 558

No historian that Sir Edward Littleton, solicitor-general to Charles I. ever knew, ever read the records, and therefore no true history; for the most part are taken up in Paul's, or in the street i. 558

Lord chancellor Ellesmere says, that some of the chroniclers talk idly, and understand little of Richard II.'s judges xi. 99, 101

All our kings have been libelled in history ix. 293

Instance from the Roman history, of a father being considered as accessory to murders committed by his son, without ever speaking to or seeing him x. 425

Bishop of Salisbury's History of the Reformation approved by the house of commons, and the author of it received the thanks of parliament v. 86

A printed history is no evidence in a court of law vii. 601

HISTORIOMASTIX.

Proceedings against William Prynne, in the Star-chamber, for writing and publishing a book, entitled "Hystriomastix; or, a Scourge for Stage Players," &c. against Michael Sparkes, for printing, and against William Buckner, for licensing the said book i. 418, 497

HOADLEY, BENJAMIN. See SACHEVEREL HENRY.

HOBERT, Sir HENRY, Baronet, Lord Chief Justice C. B.

His speech on sentencing Wraynham, for slandering lord chancellor Bacon viii. 140. See WRAYNHAM.

Lord chief justice Vaughan observes, that his predecessor's, the lord chief justice Hobart's, judgment is always accurate for the reason of the law vii. 636. n.

HOBERT, Sir MILES,

His case on Hab. Corp. See STROUD WILLIAM.

* HOE, JOHN iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

HOLBOURN, ROBERT,

His argument in defence of William Prynne, in Star-chamber, on his prosecution for writing Hystriomastix i. 422

His argument for John Hampden, esq. at the suit of the king, in the cause of ship-money i. 562, 568, 574, 580, 581

HOLDING up the HAND.

It is not necessary for prisoner to hold up his hand at the bar, on his arraignment iii. 28. iii. 212, 213. iv. 211, 512

The earls of Essex and Southampton were arraigned twice, and bid to hold up their hands at the bar twice; which they both accordingly did i. 197, 198

The earl of Somerset was ordered to hold up his hand, both on arraignment and on receiving sentence i. 351, 305

In France and other countries, the very holding up the hand is an oath xi. 126

HOLLAND, ———,

Opens indictment against Bambridge ix. 146, 235

His speech on opening indictment against Huggins, for murder ix. 113

HOLLINGSHEAD,

Extracts from his Chronicle xi. 17

HOLLIS, DENZIL. See ELLIOT Sir JOHN.

* HOLLIS, Sir JOHN,

* Proceedings against him, Sir John Wentworth, and Mr. Lumden, in the Star-chamber, for traducing the public justice, 13 Jac. I. 1615 i. 333

* Sir Francis Bacon, attorney-general, his speech i. 333

* An account of the conversation they had with Weston at his execution i. 335

* Mr. Lumden's defence i. 336

* Sir John Wentworth's defence i. 336

* Sir John Hollis's defence i. 337

* Sir Edward Coke's speech before sentence i. 337

* Their sentence i. 338

* HOLLOWAY, JAMES,

* Proceedings on an outlawry against him for high-treason, 36 Car. II. 1684 iii. 943. See iv. 198, viii. 470, n.

* The court make the prisoner an offer of a trial, though he stood outlawed for high-treason iii. 943

* The prisoner replies, he has confessed the crime, and therefore to no purpose to offer a defence iii. 944

* His petition for a pardon iii. 944

* His behaviour at execution iii. 945

* His paper delivered to the sheriffs iii. 947

HOLLOWAY, Sir RICHARD, Justice B. R.

Declares his opinion, that the petition of the seven bishops is not a libel iv. 394, 395

He is excepted by name, in the act of grace and indemnity which passed at the Revolution, in the year 1690, viz. 2 W. and M. chap. 10 iii. 669. x. 41. Ap.

Was ordered to attend the parliament, to give an account of his proceeding as a judge against Sir Thomas Armstrong; and a bill was brought in, but never passed, to subject his estate to reparation to Sir Thomas's family iii. 986, 987

The house of lords declared, that the court of King's-Bench, at which time Sir Richard was one of the justices thereof, over-ruling the earl of Devonshire's plea of privilege, was a breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136

The house of commons resolved, that the judgment given against Samuel Johnson, in the King's-Bench, in Trinity-Term, 1686, at which time the said Sir Richard was one of the justices there, was cruel and illegal vii. 647

HOLT, JOHN, Justice C. B.

Was arrested sitting in his place, immediately removed from his office, and sent prisoner to the Tower i. 5 and n.

He was tried for treason i. 14

Confesses and begs mercy i. 14

Life saved, but transported to the village of Dromore, not to live as a justice, but as a banished offender; nor to go out of town above the space of two miles, upon the pain of death; but the king out of his bounty was pleased to give a yearly annuity of twenty marks, during his life i. 14. and n. See BRAMBRE.

HOLT, JOHN,

Refuses to sign William Prynne's plea, though he had his fee i. 482, 484

Censured by Sir John Finch, lord chief justice C. B. for signing Henry Burton's plea i. 482

Charged by William Prynne with breach of promise, in his profession i. 496, 501

Of counsel for Henry Burton i. 503

Opens the indictment, as counsel for the king, against John Gize, for an assault iii. 66

His

- His defence for John Lane, for a misdemeanour ii. 990
 His argument on behalf of William lord Ruffel, indicted for compassing the king's death, on challenge of juryman for want of freehold iii. 709
 Of counsel for crown, on prosecution of Francis Smith, and opens the information ii. 1039
 Opened information against Jane Curtis ii. 1041
 His defence for Lane, charged with endeavouring to defame king's witnesses ii. 990
 His argument in the case of monopolies vii. 493
 Opens the evidence against Slingby Bethel, esquire iii. 413
 Sums up the evidence for the king iii. 417
 The unbiased judgment of the recorder of London, for John Holt, ought to outweigh the whole bench vii. 640
HOLT, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
 Sums up to the jury on John Astton's trial iv. 481
 His charge to the jury, on the trial of Henry Harrison, for murder iv. 502
 His directions to the jury, on the trial of Hathaway, for a cheat v. 501
 His directions to the jury, on the trial of William Parkyns, for treason, in assassination plot iv. 655
 His directions to the jury, on the trial of Richard viscount Preston (alias Richard Grahme, baronet) indicted for high-treason, in compassing the death of their majesties, and adhering to their enemies iv. 448
 His argument in the bankers case xi. 143
 Sums up the evidence on trial of Mary Butler v. 237
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of Charnock, for treason iv. 591
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of John Friend, for treason iv. 623
 His speech before judgment on Alexander Knightly, for treason iv. 779
 His directions to the jury, on the trial of captain Vaughan, indicted and tried before the Admiralty, for high-treason, in assisting the king's enemies, and levying war v. 34
 His charge to Peter Cook's jury iv. 772
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of Charles Cranborne v. 716
 On his charge to the jury, on the trial of Joseph Dawson, &c. observes to them, that all on board a pirate ship, are presumed to concur unless the contrary appears v. 14
 Commends the jury for their conviction of pirates v. 15
 Instance of his lordship's remarkably strict adherence to law iv. 630, 631
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of the indictment against Ambrose Rookwood, tried for high treason, in conspiring the death of the king iv. 694
 Directs the jury on the trial of John Tutchin, informed against for a libel, in writing "The Observators," at Guildhall, London v. 541
 Of opinion that the mistake in the proceedings against John Tutchin could not be amended v. 569
 Directs the jury on the trial of John Astton iv. 481
 Of opinion against David Lindsay, arraigned for high-treason, in returning from France without licence v. 523
 Shews the reasonableness of the statute on which the prisoner was indicted, and pronounces sentence against him v. 527
 His charge to the jury, on the trial of major Robert Lowick for high-treason, in being concerned in the assassination-plot iv. 734
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of Hägen Swensdén, indicted for a forcible marriage v. 463, 477
 His speech at delivering his opinion that the Aylsbury-men were bailable vii. 161
 His speech on summing up the evidence, in the cause of the duke of Norfolk against John Germain viii. 35
 Severely reprimands the jury viii. 36
 His argument in the controverted point of peerage, in Charles Knowles earl Banbury's case viii. 62, viii. 58
 Attends the house of lords, and is heard his reasons for allowing Charles Knowles his plea of peerage, contrary to an order of that house adjudging him to have no title to the honour viii. 55
 His chief justice ordered an appeal himself ix. 152
 His popularity arose from his doing right upon all occasions xi. 293
HOMICIDE. See MURDER.
 The old writers on homicide to be read with great caution x. 446, 447
HOMINE REPLEGIANDO.
 Sir John Hawles's remarks on this writ iv. 186
 Whether a peer can be committed on this writ iii. 544
Wilmer was illegally prosecuted for not giving a verdict against his conscience, by an homine replegiando
 Any person upon suggestion, backed by an affidavit, may have an homine replegiando granted iv. 185
 Sheriff may return, that person supposed to be in custody, being of full age, was by mutual agreement sent beyond sea, by the person in whose custody, by the writ, he is supposed to be iv. 186. See HONE, WILLIAM, M. P.
 * His trial, July 12, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 702
 * Indicted for a design to assassinate the king, and preparing arms for that purpose iii. 702
 * Confesses the conspiracy, but denies the preparing arms iii. 703
 * He is told he cannot plead guilty to part, and not guilty to the rest iii. 703
 * Evidence against him of another conspiracy to kill the king with cross-bows iii. 705
 * He is convicted iii. 706
 * Receives sentence with Waleot and Rouse iii. 745
 * His behaviour at execution iii. 745
HOOPEER, Serjeant at Law,
 His speech in the case of Abby and White viii. 122
HORNBY, JOSEPH. See BANKERS CASE.
HORNE, JOHN, Esquire,
 Proceedings against him, on information in B. R. for a libel, by attorney-general, 4 July, and 19 and 24 November, 1777 xi. 264
 The ex officio information xi. 264
 Names of the special jury xi. 266
 Mr. Buller opens information xi. 266
 Defendant objects to attorney-general's making reply, unless he examines witnesses in his defence xi. 266
 Mr. attorney-general in support of the prosecution xi. 268
 Evidence for the prosecution xi. 268
 The defence xi. 270
 Evidence on behalf of defendant xi. 283
 Attorney-general's reply xi. 284
 Lord Mansfield's charge to the jury xi. 287
 Declares, that if any man dare give orders to murder a subject, or to execute those orders; or to make any subject a slave, he is as high a criminal as can exist in this state xi. 288
 The jury find defendant guilty xi. 288
 The defendant's speech in arrest of judgment xi. 289
 Mr. attorney-general's answer xi. 289
 The defendant's reply xi. 289
 Lord Mansfield's speech upon the occasion xi. 290
 The attorney-general's speech on moving for judgment xi. 291
 Cites lord chief justice Holt's authority, in support that the pillory is a proper punishment for defendant's offence xi. 293
 The defendant's further speech xi. 293
 Mr. justice Aston's speech to defendant on passing sentence xi. 294
 The sentence xi. 294
HOSTILITY. See ENEMIES.
HOUGH, Doctor JOHN. See MAGDALEN COLLEGE.
HOUGHTON, JOHN, Prior,
Augustin Webster, Prior; Robert Lawrence, Prior; and Richard Reynolds, monk; their trial by commission of oyer and terminer, in Westminster-hall, for treason, Easter term, 27 Henry VIII. xi. 23
 Substance of indictment xi. 23
 They plead not guilty xi. 23
 Jury find them guilty xi. 23
 Judgment xi. 23
 Hanged xi. 23
HOUSE of COMMONS.
 The resolutions of the house of commons, in the report of their committee appointed to inquire into the state of the gaols, as far as relates to the cruel usage of the prisoners ix. 107
 A case on a false return of a parliamentary writ in the King's-Bench, was adjourned, propter difficultatem, by that court, into the house of commons viii. 98. See ASHBY and WHITE. CROSBY BRASS.
PARLIAMENT.
HOUSE of LORDS,
 Never proceed ex officio; the parties must petition to revive a cause ii. 748
 "Reasons for addressing his majesty to invite the electress dowager and elector of Hanover; and reasons for attainting and abjuring the pretended prince of Wales," censured by the lords viii. 82
 Extract from the journals of the lords, concerning the privilege in the case of libel xi. 305. See ASHBY and WHITE. PARLIAMENT.
PEERAGE.
HOWARD, Lady FRANCES,
 * Proceedings in the divorce between her and Robert earl of Essex, before the court of delegates, 11 Jac. I. 1613 i. 315
 * The allegations of the lady Frances, in order to obtain a divorce i. 315
 * The answer of the earl of Essex i. 315
 * The archbishop's reasons against the divorce i. 319. See ABBOT.
GEORGE, Archbishop of CANTERBURY.
 * King James answers them i. 321
 * Sentence given for the divorce i. 323
 * Five of the delegates dissent from the sentence i. 324. See x. 3. Ap.
HOWARD, KATHARINE, Queen to Henry VIII.
 Was beheaded, though sentenced to be hanged iv. 129
HOWARD, PHILIP. See ARUNDEL Earl of.
HOWARD, THOMAS. See NORFOLK Duke of.
HOWE, JAMES v. 287. See KIDD, &c. al.
HOWELL, JOHN, Recorder of London,
 In his directions to the jury, on the trial of Mary Moders, alias Stedman, alias the German Princess, for bigamy, observes to them, that a woman could not have the benefit of clergy ii. 502
 Directs the jury in the absence of the prisoners, on the trial of William Penn and William Mead, for a riot and conspiracy, which the jury object to, as unlawful ii. 613
HOWES.
 Extracts from his edition of John Stowe's chronicle xi. 5
 Extracts from his edition of John Stowe's annals xi. 16
HUBERT, NICHOLAS, commonly called PARIS,
 His examination and declaration, concerning the murder of Mary queen of Scots husband vii. 332
HUDSON, WILLIAM, of Gray's-Inn,
 Opens information against William Prynne, of Lincoln's-Inn, for writing and publishing Histriomastix, 7 Feb. 1632-3, 9 Car. I. i. 417, 418
 He was much practised and of great experience in the Star-chamber, and compiled a treatise concerning that court x. 329
 The commons resolve, that Mr. Hudson is guilty of a breach of privilege in parliament, in subscribing his name to an information exhibited in the court of Star-chamber, against Mr. Hollis and the rest, for matters done by them in parliament, they being members of parliament, and the same so appearing in the information vii. 255. See STAR-CHAMBER.
HUGGINS, JOHN, Esquire, Warden of the Flint,
 The report of the committee of the house of commons, appointed to enquire into the state of the gaols, against him ix. 197
 Resolutions

Resolutions of the house of commons in his case ix. 111
 His trial for the murder of Edward Arne, at the Old Bailey, May 21, 1729, 2 Geo. II. ix. 112
 Mr. Holland's speech on opening the indictment ix. 113
 Serjeant Chester's speech on the same side ix. 113
 Attorney-general (Sir Philip Yorke) on the same side ix. 113
 The evidence against him ix. 114, &c.
 His defence, and evidence to his character ix. 127, &c.
 Mr. justice Page refused to admit counsel replying ix. 132
 Mr. justice Page summed up the evidence to the jury ix. 133, &c.
 A special verdict in his case, and great debates about settling it ix. 139
 Lord chief justice Raymond delivers the opinion of the judges upon it ix. 142, &c.

H U M E, D A V I D,

This historian, a prerogative writer xi. 20
 He is mistaken respecting the attainders of Empson and Dudley xi. 3

H U N G E R F O R D, J O H N,

His speech for Francis, on prosecution for treason vi. 89
 His speech for Christopher Layer, esquire, charged with treason vi. 295
 Reprimanded vi. 329
 His reply on the trial of Reason and Tranter, sheriffs officers, for murder vi. 207
 Of counsel for Arnold, on the black act viii. 313
 His defence of Matthews, for treason ix. 696

H U N G E R F O R D, Lord, xi. 25
 Attainted and executed for treason

* H U R L Y, P A T R I C K,

* His trial at the King's-Bench, in Ireland, for perjury, and for a conspiracy to cheat the popish inhabitants of the county of Clare, &c. 31 May, 1701, 13 Will. III. v. 384
 * His indictment, for swearing he was robbed to a considerable value; when in truth he was not v. 384
 * The king's counsel open the evidence v. 384
 * His affidavit read v. 385
 * Evidence of his own servants of the whole contrivance v. 386
 * Evidence that he was very necessitous at the time he pretended to be robbed to so great a value v. 392
 * His own letters read to that purpose v. 393
 * Proved that the guineas he pretended to be robbed of, were only counters v. 395

* The prisoner's defence by his counsel v. 400
 * Some of his servants called to prove it a real robbery v. 402
 * Endeavours to prove subornation in the prosecutors v. 405
 * Which is denied upon oath v. 407
 * And their testimony confirmed by the bench v. 408
 * The defendant's witnesses proved guilty of perjury v. 410
 * Mr. justice Cooke's charge to the jury v. 412
 * The prisoner found guilty on both indictments v. 417
 * His sentence v. 418

H U S B A N D and W I F E.

If a femme covert together with her husband commits an act which in another would amount to felony, yet in her it shall not; but otherwise the law is in point of treason ii. 8
 Wife brought a writ without naming her husband, because he was banished vii. 229. xi. 101
 Wife cannot be convicted as accessory to felony committed by her husband ii. 524
 Cannot be a witness for or against her husband v. 62
 Except in treason ix. 402. n.
 When a man is taken in adultery with another man's wife, if the husband stab the adulterer, or knock out his brains, it is bare manslaughter ix. 66.
 See WIFE.

H U S S E Y, Chief Justice,

Said, that Sir John Markham told King Edw. IV. he could not arrest a man either for treason or felony, as a subject might, because that if the king did wrong, the party could not have his action against him vii. 120, 146, 171. See ii. 208, 212. vii. 129, 130, 219, 221

H U S S I E, Lord,

Was tried by his peers for the Lincolnshire rebellion, the marquis of Exeter sitting steward xi. 24

H U T C H E S O N, A R C H I B A L D, Esq.

A declaration signed by him to clear himself from Mr. Layer's hear-say evidence, that he was one of Burford's club viii. 571

* H U T C H I N S O N, C H A R L E S, Esq. iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

H U T T O N, Sir R I C H A R D, Justice C. B.

His argument, opinion, and reasons for Hampden, in the cause of ship-money i. 667
 He subscribed his opinion for conformity only j. 711. See B E R K L E Y Sir R O B E R T.

Thomas Harrison's trial for speaking reflecting words on Mr. justice Hutton i. 720

H Y D E, E D W A R D,

His speech on the judges who gave their opinions for the king in the cause of ship-money i. 709

H Y D E, E D W A R D, Earl of Clarendon,

Vindicates himself against parliamentary articles of treason viii. 387
 Articles of impeachment viii. 388. See H I D E.

H Y D E, Sir N I C H O L A S,

Succeeded Sir Ranulph Crew in the presidentship of the court of King's-Bench vii. 114. n.
 Speech at delivering his opinion on the habeas corpus brought by Sir Thomas Darnell and others vii. 136
 Vol. XI.

Sir Nicholas Hyde presided at a very remarkable trial of murder on appeal x. 31. Ap.

This chief justice declared, that for several reasons of state, the king might act contrary to law ii. 202

His speech when Lord Chief Justice of the court of King's-Bench to the house of lords, for remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for refusing to pay the loan to Charles I. vii. 186

The house of commons resolved, that Sir Nicholas was guilty of a delay of justice towards Mr. Hollis and the rest that appeared upon the habeas corpus, in that they were not bailed, in E. and T. Term, 5 Car. I. vii. 250

H Y D E, Sir R O B E R T, Lord Chief Justice B. R.

Directs the jury on the trial of Colonel James Turner and others of his family, for burglary ii. 524. See ii. 504, 505

Directs the jury on the trial of Twyn for treason, for printing a seditious and treasonable libel ii. 537

Directs the jury against Brewster for a misdemeanour in printing and publishing a libel ii. 541, 544

Directs the jury against Simon for a similar offence ii. 547

The like on Brooks's trial ii. 549

Sentences Keach for writing a seditious libel ii. 533

Resolved, that the asserting the people might resist their prince, and take up arms against him, was direct treason ii. 544. See R E S I S T A N C E.

H Y D E, Sir R O B E R T, Judge of Assize,

Ordered the execution of three persons for the supposed murder of a man whose body was not found or heard of at time of trial, upon the confession of a madman or enthusiast iv. 204. vi. 425. x. 29. n. Ap.

H Y T H E,

The mayor thereof, his case x. 132

I. J.

J A C K S O N, W I L L I A M,

William Carter, Benjamin Tapner, John Cobby, John Hammond, Richard Mills, father and son, for the murder of William Gally and Daniel Chater, Jan. 1748-9, 21 Geo. II. ix. 715

Names of the commissioners ix. 715

Names of the grand jury ix. 715

Mr. justice Foster's speech to them ix. 716

Names of the petty jury ix. 720

The indictments ix. 718

The prisoners plead not guilty ix. 718

Mr. justice Foster told the prisoners they might challenge twenty of the pannel without shewing cause; but if more, they must shew a reasonable cause; but if they agreed to join in their challenges, they might be tried together; if not, they would be tried separately ix. 720

Prisoners agreed to join, and are tried together ix. 720

Mr. Steele opened the indictment ix. 720

Mr. Bankes, king's counsel, his speech ix. 720

The witnesses for the crown ix. 725

The prisoners defence ix. 732

The judge's charge to the jury ix. 732

The prisoners are all found guilty ix. 734

Some of the prisoners were tried on another indictment, to which they pleaded not guilty ix. 732

Mr. justice Foster repeated to the prisoners the charge, and asked them what they had to say ix. 731

Their several answers ix. 732

Mr. Steele opened the indictment ix. 732

Mr. Bankes seconded him ix. 732

Mr. Smyth, king's counsel, his speech ix. 732, 733, 734

Witnesses for the crown ix. 733

Defence of the prisoners ix. 734

Found guilty ix. 734, 735

The judge's speech to the prisoners previous to passing sentence on them ix. 734, 735

This trial published by authority ix. 726. n.

Prisoners behaviour in gaol, and at their execution ix. 735, 736

Some account of them ix. 735

An extraordinary popish relic found in the pocket of Jackson ix. 736

Inscription on stone near the bodies of some of the prisoners ix. 736

J A M A I C A. See K I R K B Y R I C H A R D, & c.

J A M E S the F I R S T.

He promised chief justice Coke, that he would not pardon the murderers of Sir Thomas Overbury, and he did ii. 367. n.

His majesty broke his word with Sir Walter Raleigh i. 226

His letter to archbishop Abbot concerning the divorce between Robert Earl of Essex and lady Frances Howard x. 29. Ap.

* J A M E S, J O H N,

* His trial for high treason at the King's-Bench, Nov. 19, 1662, 13 Car. II. ii. 470

* The indictment, for treasonable words delivered in a sermon at a meeting ii. 470

* The jury sworn, and charged with the prisoner; the king's counsel open the indictment, and the evidence ii. 471

- * The witnesses called ii. 472
 * The evidence for the prisoner ii. 473
 * The prisoner's defence ii. 473
 * Reply of the king's counsel ii. 474
 * He is convicted ii. 475
 * Application made for his life to the king ii. 475
 * Judgment of high-treason passed upon him ii. 476
 * His behaviour at the place of execution ii. 476
- JAMES the SECOND
 Promised the chief justice Jeffries, that he would not pardon lady Alice Lisle, illegally convicted, and he kept his word iv. 130. n.
 The reign of James the second was a time of great heat and violence, and few things then done ought to be drawn into example ix. 584
 King James the second being terrified at the news of the prince of Orange's invasion, thought fit to restore the city of London their charter iii. 628
 A great deal of blood was shed in many places of the kingdom, by judges governed by James the second's evil counsellors, against all rules and forms of law, without so much as suffering the persons accused to plead in their own defence v. 749
 Juries were usually packed in this reign iv. 177. See STUART FAMILY.
- JANS, JOHN. See ANGLESEA, RICHARD Earl of.
- JANSSEN, Sir STEPHEN THEODORE Baronet,
 His refusal of the assistance of the military at the execution of criminals, commended xi. 282
- JAY and TOPHAM,
 Proceedings in parliament on that case viii. 1
Topham pleads the orders of the house of commons to the jurisdiction of the King's Bench, but not allowed, and judgment against him viii. 1
 That judgment voted illegal, and the judges ordered to attend viii. 1
 Sir Francis Pemberton, chief justice, justifies himself, that it is a good plea in bar, but not to the jurisdiction viii. 3
 Resolved, that the orders of the house being pleaded to the jurisdiction of the King's Bench, ought not to be over-ruled viii. 3
 Sir Francis gives his reasons for his judgment viii. 4
 Cites sir John Elliot's case viii. 4
 If an officer abuses the orders of the house, though they punish the officer, they never give damages viii. 5
 Sir Thomas Jones gives his reasons for his judgment viii. 5
 Where the entire matter is transacted in the house, there a plea at the jurisdiction proper viii. 5
 Both voted guilty of a breach of privilege, and taken into custody viii. 6
- JEFFERYS, ELIZABETH,
 Her case for the murder of her uncle, Joseph Jefferys x. 36
 Found guilty, confessed the fact, and was executed x. 36, 39
 Two bills of indictment found at different assizes against Swan and Jefferys; debates on which indictment they should be tried x. 37
 Determined to be upon the last, and the former quashed x. 38
- JEFFERIES, Sir GEORGE, Knight and Baronet,
 Recorder of London.
 His speech on opening the information on the trial of Henry Carr for a libel iii. 58
 His reply to defence made by defendant's counsel iii. 62
 His observations on the evidence given in the trial of John Giles, for an assault, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 75
 Pronounces judgment on Eliza Collier, convicted for a libel iii. 101
 When recorder of London, declared it to be the resolution of all the judges of England, that no person whatsoever could publish any thing concerning public affairs without licence from the king or his authority xi. 322
 The house of commons ordered an address to the king to remove sir George Jefferies, recorder of London, from all public offices, for traducing and obstructing petitioning for the sitting of the parliament of 1680 iii. 224
- JEFFERIES, Sir GEORGE, King's Serjeant at Law, for the Crown,
 On the argument of the plea of Edward Fitzharris iii. 259
 His observations on the trial of E. F. for a treasonable libel iii. 286
 His observations on the evidence on the indictment of doctor Plunket, tried at the King's Bench bar for treason, for conspiring the death of the king, and subversion of established religion and government in Ireland iii. 310
 His observations on the evidence for the king on Colledge's trial for treason iii. 408
 He observes, that notwithstanding the cry of Irish and Popish evidence against the prisoner, the king's witnesses were all protestants, and but one of them an Irishman iii. 405
 He was obliged to be the messenger to return the city their charter, the rape of which, among other his miscarriages, was the cause of his preferments iii. 628
 Gives a particular account of the manner of electing sheriffs and other officers on Midsummer-Day, on the trial of Pilkington and Saunders, sheriffs, Cornish alderman, Ford lord Grey, sir Thomas Player, Babell, Goodenough, and eight others, on information for a riot, in continuing poll for election of sheriffs after Common-Hall was adjourned by the lord mayor, and for assaulting his lordship iii. 635
 His speech on the trial of sir Patience Ward for perjury iii. 668
 His reply iii. 680, 681
 His speech on the trial of captain Wolton, indicted for high-treason, for conspiring the death of the king, and to raise rebellion in Yorkshire plot iii. 686
 His speech before judgment on Ireland and others for treason iii. 725
 His argument on challenge of want of frehold, on William lord Russell's trial for treason, in conspiring the king's death iii. 710, 711
 His reply to lord Russell's defence iii. 728
- Opens the evidence on the indictment of John Rouse for high-treason, tried for conspiring the king's death iii. 732
 On the first publication of "The Magistracy and Government of England vindicated," it was doubted, whether sir George Jefferies did not compose it iii. 788
JEFFERIES, Sir GEORGE, Chief Justice, B. R.
 Lord chief justice Jefferies approves the verdict, and passes sentence on Whitebread, convicted of treason in conspiring the death of the king and subversion of government and religion ii. 878
 He sums up the evidence on the trial of Sidney, indicted for treason, in conspiring the death of the king iii. 816
 His observations on the evidence on the trial of Braddon, for treason iii. 891
 Commends the verdict of the jury against Langborne ii. 910
 Makes a speech and pronounces sentence on him and the five Jesuits ii. 910, 911
 Observations and charge on the evidence at the trial of sir Samuel Barnardiston iii. 940
 Sums up the evidence to the jury, on the information against Sacheverel for a riot, in being unlawfully present at the election of mayor, where he had no concern iii. 976
 Bill brought into parliament (but never passed), that the executors of the late lord Jefferies should make reparation to sir Thomas Armstrong's family for the sentence he gave against the said sir Thomas, on his outlawry for treason iii. 986
 His observations on the evidence on the execution of the writ of enquiry between his royal highness James duke of York plaintiff, and Titus Oates defendant iii. 993
 Uses the witnesses of Roswall, indicted for speaking treasonable words, with great contempt iii. 918
 His reason iii. 1023
 His directions to the jury iii. 1039
 Instances several hard cases in the law iii. 1052
 Inclines to allow exceptions in arrest of judgment for treason iii. 1064, 1065
 Reprimands gentlemen at the bar iii. 1078. x. 38. Ap.
 His observations on the evidence in the cause of sir Richard Pritchard and Papillon iii. 1088
 Commends the verdict of 10,000l. damages iii. 1094
Titus Oates asked lord chief justice Jefferies, who presided at his trial for perjury, to be sworn as a witness iv. 29
 Lord chief justice Jefferies observed, that the worst of murders were those committed under the colour of the process of law iv. 33
 His directions to the jury on the trial of Titus Oates, for perjury iv. 58, 96
 Directs the jury on the trial of lady Alice Lisle, widow, for high-treason in harbouring a traitor iv. 123
 Tells the jury, the proof of the prisoner's guilt is plain iv. 127
 His speech before sentence iv. 127
 The legislature declared that the verdict against lady Alice Lisle was injuriously extorted, and procured by the menaces, violences, and other illegal practices of George lord Jefferies, baron of Wem, then lord chief justice B. R. iv. 130
 His cruelties acted in the West, enraged above one third part of the nation iv. 172
 Lord chief justice Jefferies signed colonel Sidney's trial for publication iv. 189
 His summing up the evidence against colonel Sidney was barbarous, being inectives and no consequences iv. 198
 The resolution of all the judges of England, respecting two witnesses of an overt-act, quoted by him on Sidney's trial, not to be found or credited iv. 198
 Eight or nine important points of law, which arose on the trial of colonel Algernon Sidney, were all over-ruled by the violence of the lord chief justice; and Sidney was frequently interrupted by him, whereby the whole method of his defence was broken, and he not suffered to say one tenth part of what he could have alleged in his own favour; so the jury were hurried by him into a verdict they did not understand viii. 470, 482
 He committed colonel Sidney's solicitor, for saying the jury were a logger-headed jury, that they found a verdict contrary to evidence viii. 482
 When the colonel's jury was withdrawn, the chief justice, under pretence of going to drink a glass of sack, went to the jury when they were consulting about their verdict viii. 482
 His speech on delivering his opinion in the cause of the East-India Company and Sandys vii. 555
 Sums up the evidence on lady Joy's trial vii. 604
 Though Jefferies was really an intemperate judge, yet his opinion respecting the law of libels, in the case of sir Samuel Barnardiston, would not have discredited the best mouth that ever spoke in the court of King's Bench ix. 303
Jefferies said to be one of the greatest monsters that ever presided in an English court of justice ix. 288
 This chief justice, with all his faults, has been ever esteemed a great lawyer x. 380
 His conduct on the first trial of Titus Oates for perjury, in not permitting a perjured person to be examined against him, though he would have been glad to have hanged him, is no dishonour to Jefferies's moral character x. 380, 390
- JEFFERIES, GEORGE, Lord Chancellor,
 His speech as lord high steward to Henry lord Delamere, on his trial for treason iv. 211
 Tells that he is sole judge of the court, and need not advise with the peers about a plea to the jurisdiction iv. 215
 His charge to the peers previous to the examination of the evidence iv. 215
 Puts question to the judges, whether court can legally adjourn after evidence given iv. 231
 He

- He refuses to adjourn, and directs the prisoner to proceed in his defence iv. 233
- His further charge to the peers iv. 246
- The opinion of lord Jeffries as high steward on the trial of lord Delamere, was cited in the house of commons by a member, on sir John Fenwick's bill of attainder v. 61
- His cruel treatment of Baxter, for publishing a paraphrase on the New Testament x. 38. Ap.
- * E K Y L L iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
- * E K Y L L, Sir J O S E P H,
His speech before evidence, on the trial of Francia, for treason vi. 61
- His remarks upon the evidence vi. 86
- His argument in maintenance of the first article in the impeachment of doctor Sacheverel, for preaching seditiously v. 666
- His argument, by way of reply to the doctor's defence, as to the first article v. 791
- His speech on the trial of earl Wintoun, impeached before the peers, for treason, in being in rebellion against king George I. vi. 28
- His parliamentary speech relative to Ashby and White viii. 110
- * J E N K E S, F R A N C I S,
Proceedings against him, for a speech made by him on the hustings at Guildhall, 27 Car. II. vii. 468
- His speech concerning the decay of trade, and to desire his majesty timely to call a new parliament vii. 468
- He is examined before the king and council vii. 470
- He is committed to the Gateshouse vii. 470
- The warrant for his commitment vii. 471
- Moves the lord chancellor for a habeas corpus, and the motion over-ruled vii. 471
- Moves the quarter sessions, as justices of the peace, to be bailed vii. 472
- Four of mr. Jenkes's friends petition the lord chancellor for a writ of mainprize vii. 473
- A precedent shewn to his lordship vii. 474
- The writ refused vii. 474
- His letter to the lord privy-seal, that he would be pleased to move his majesty, for a writ of mainprize, or that bail might be taken vii. 475
- He offers a habeas at the Old Bailey, to be signed, and is denied; but afterwards bailed vii. 476. See iii. 541, 630
- * J E N K I N S, _____ of Gray's-Inn,
Opens the answer of four defendants prosecuted in Star-chamber, for selling William Prynne's Histriomastix v. 287. See KIDD, & al.
- * J E N K I N S, W I L L I A M v. 287. See KIDD, & al.
- * J E N K I N S, F R A N C I S iii. 630. See JENKES. PILKINGTON, & al.
- * J E N N E R, Sir T H O M A S, Recorder of London,
His speech before evidence, on the information against sir Samuel Barnardiston iii. 934
- His speech before evidence, on the information against William Sacheverel, esquire, and others, for a riot, in being unlawfully present at the election of a mayor, when they had no concern in the election, tried at the King's Bench bar iii. 950
- His speech before judgment of treason pronounced upon Ring, Fernley, and Cornish iv. 160
- His speech before judgment of treason, on Elizabeth Gaunt iv. 160
- * J E N N E R, Sir T H O M A S, Serjeant at Law,
His speech for Richard Hathaway, a cheat v. 494
- He was excepted by name, in the act of grace passed in the year 1690, viz. 2 W. and M. chap. 10. iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.
- J E O F A I L S.
No statutes of jeofails extend to criminal cases iii. 1067. viii. 58
- * J E R M Y N, P H I L I P,
Judge Jermyn called the doctrine that the jury were judges of law as well as fact, a damnable doctrine ii. 26. n. 69
- * J E S U I T S.
Trial of the five jesuits ii. 696, 829, 910, 911. iv. 29. * See PLOT POPISH.
- * J E W. See SIMONS HENRY.
- * I M A G I N A T I O N. See TREASON.
- * I M P E A C H M E N T.
* Impeachments preferred by the attorney-general, during the rebellion ii. 83, 183, 277, 281, 292
- * The same certainty not requisite in an impeachment, as is required in an indictment ii. 160 vi. 56
- * A peer impeached of high treason generally shall not be committed ii. 56
- * Whether a pardon may be pleaded to an impeachment ii. 739
- * Bishops may vote in impeachments in capital cases, in all matters previous to the trial ii. 742
- * Impeachments remain in the same state at the meeting of a new parliament they were in at the dissolution of the old parliament ii. 742
- * The king may impeach ii. 749
- * Members of either house may be witnesses on an impeachment ii. 183
- * One impeached for high treason, indicted and tried in the King's Bench for the same fact iii. 261
- * An impeachment properly the king's suit, and not the commons' iii. 253
- * A peer, impeached of high crimes, shall not stand without the bar at his trial v. 364. viii. 528
- * The same evidence required on impeachments as in other trials v. 118
- * The commons insist, that where several are impeached, they may proceed to the trial of which they please first v. 357. viii. 526, 527
- * The lords insist on their right of appointing the day of trial, without any previous intimation from the commons of their being ready v. 361. viii. 546, 527
- * The proclamation made in the king's name on a trial by impeachment v. 376
- * A lord impeached for high crimes cannot be precluded from voting in the trial of another vi. 364. viii. 528
- The articles of impeachment against Michael de la Pole, earl of Suffolk, and chancellor of England i. 1
- The articles of impeachment against Thomas earl of Strafford, lord lieutenant of Ireland, for high-treason i. 723
- Articles of impeachment against colonel Nathaniel Fiennes, late governor of the city and castle of Bristol, touching his dishonourable surrender thereof i. 768
- Articles of impeachment against William Laud, archbishop of Canterbury, for high-treason i. 828
- Articles of high-treason, &c. against Edward earl of Clarendon, lord chancellor of England ii. 554. viii. 388
- Articles of impeachment against Thomas earl of Danby, lord high treasurer of England ii. 731
- Articles of impeachment against the five popish lords iii. 101
- Articles of impeachment against lord Somers v. 345
- Articles of impeachment against doctor Sacheverel v. 641
- Articles of impeachment against the earl of Derwentwater, and others vi. 6
- Articles of impeachment against Robert earl of Oxford, &c. v. 303, III, 112
- Articles of impeachment against lord chancellor Macclesfield vi. 477
- Articles of impeachment against sir Thomas Seymour, lord Sudley vii. 2
- Articles of impeachment against lord keeper Finch vii. 313
- Articles of impeachment against the lord chief justice Scroggs vii. 476, 477, 486
- Articles of impeachment against lord Levat ix. 623*
- Articles of impeachment against earl Portland, Orford, and others v. 339, viii. 512
- Resolved by the lords, that by the law and usage of parliament, in prosecutions by impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanours, by writing or speaking, the particular words supposed to be criminal are not necessary to be expressly specified in impeachment vi. 829. viii. 565. See vi. 75. 330, 331
- No axe to be carried before a prisoner impeached i. 736
- Acquittal pleadable to impeachment iv. 166
- No pardon under the great seal can discharge a judgment obtained upon the impeachment of the commons vi. 4
- The commons insist upon it as their right to exhibit articles when they see fit v. 357
- Whether commoner may be impeached for treason, or whether impeachment stays proceedings of inferior court iii. 260
- Commons deny high steward necessary at trial on impeachment ii. 740
- The power of impeachment the most valuable and useful privilege belonging to the commons vi. 4
- Impeachment differs from an indictment, but resembles an appeal iv. 167
- Extracts from journals of the house of lords concerning impeachments vii. 357. viii. 565
- Peers who have been impeached.
Arundel of Wardour, Henry lord Nithisdale, William earl of Orford, Edward earl of v. 339. viii. 512
- Bellasis*, John lord iii. 101
- Carnwarth*, Robert earl of vi. 5
- Clarendon*, Edward earl of, lord Patre, William lord iii. 101
- chancellor ii. 558
- Danby*, Thomas earl of ii. 731
- Derwentwater*, James earl of vi. 5
- Fordwich*, John baron, lord keeper vii. 309
- Hallfax*, Charles lord v. 339. viii. 512
- Kennure*, William viscount vi. 5
- Levat*, Simon lord ix. 621*
- Macclesfield*, Thomas earl of, lord chancellor vi. 477
- Nairn*, William lord vii. 5
- Orford*, Edward earl of v. 339. viii. 512
- Oxford*, Robert earl of vi. 102
- Portland*, William earl of v. 339. viii. 512
- Powis*, William earl of iii. 101
- Somers*, John lord chancellor v. 339. viii. 512
- Stafford*, William viscount iii. 101
- Strafford*, Thomas earl of i. 736
- Sudley*, Thomas lord vii. 2
- Suffolk*, Michael earl of, lord chancellor i. 1
- Widdrington*, William lord vi. 5
- Wintoun*, George earl of vi. 18
- Trials in the house of peers, upon impeachments from the commons, are not opened by king's counsel, as appears from the following instances:—
- Mr. Pym opens the charge against the earl of Strafford vii. 736
- Mr. Hampden opens the charge against the earl of Wintoun i. 25
- Sir William Young opens the charge against lord Levat ix. 625*
- * I M P L I C A T I O N. See TREASON.
- I M P O S I T I O N S.
Lord Bacon exercised his eloquence to reconcile parliaments to impositions by prerogative vii. 29
- His argument for them xi. 93. See BATES JOHN.
- * I M P O S T O R. v. 441, 482, 504. See FULLER WILLIAM.
- * HATHAWAY RICHARD.
- I M P R I S O N M E N T.
Observations on that punishment vii. 165
- Record of cause in an action of false imprisonment vi. 50. Ap.
- The close imprisonment of mr. Hampden, (See iv. 177.) sir Samuel Barnardiston, and of several other persons, as they were against law, so they were without precedent vi. 165
- Imprisonment by command of the king, where utterly unlawful, and where, though lawful, yet continuance without bail unlawful vii. 123. See Em. Pref. iv. v.
- A Scotch peer perpetually imprisoned for leasing-making and calumnies vii. 308
- Perpetual imprisonment allowed by the laws of Scotland vii. 286, 308
- Judgment of imprisonment to commence from and after determination of an imprisonment, to which defendant was before sentenced for another offence, is good in law xi. 324

So resolved by the judges, and upon error in the lords xi. 334
 Rule of court to prevent defendant lying in prison beyond his term, his imprisonment happening to expire in vacation xi. 334. * See PRISONERS.

* INCAPACITY. See WITNESS.
 INCEST. See GREY, FORD Lord. NAIRNE CATHERINE. OGILVIE PATRICK.

INDEMNITY.

Ministers of state indemnified by a special act of parliament, for saving the lives of the subject contrary to law xi. 282, 283

INDIA-COMPANY. See MONOPOLIES. PIRACY.

* INDICTMENT.

* If any one overt-act laid in the indictment be proved, it maintains the indictment ii. 314. iv. 722

* One cannot be convicted of treason where the treason is not formally laid in the indictment, though the crimes therein specified amount to treason ii. 808

* Overt-acts committed in other counties than that where the indictment is found, may be given in evidence ii. 873

* Indictment for a misdemeanour in defaming the king's witnesses; held, if any one of the facts laid in the indictment was proved, the defendants might be found guilty generally ii. 991

* One impeached for high-treason indicted for the same fact iii. 263

* An indictment for treason or felony generally, without specifying the overt-acts, is not good iii. 234. v. 21

* If one be acquitted on a faulty indictment, he may be indicted and tried again for the same fact iii. 255

* Auter Foitz arraigned, no bar to an indictment for the same fact iii. 252, 289

* One may be indicted and tried here for treason committed in Ireland iii. 293

* Facts may be proved to be done either before or after the time laid in the indictment iii. 394

* The indictment interpreted to alien prisoners in their own language iii. 467

* Where the prisoner apprehends the indictment to be vicious, he must either plead specially, or demur to it before he pleads the general issue iii. 795, 796

* Words permitted to be proved that were not laid in the indictment iii. 1010

* If a man commit treason in several counties, he may be indicted in any of them; and the facts committed in every county may be given in evidence iv. 640

* The grand jury need not find according to the bill presented them; but may present the bare matter of fact to the court, who will put it into form: and there needs no billa vera to be indorsed; for that signifies no more than owning what the court has drawn up iv. 670

* If one pleads to an indictment, whereof he has a copy given him, according to 7 W. III. chap. 3, he admits it to be a true copy iv. 668

* No exceptions can be taken to an indictment after a jury sworn, by virtue of 7 W. III. chap. 3. iv. 677

* The omission of the words, contra supremum naturalem legem dominum suum, in an indictment against a native, adjudged not sufficient to vitiate the indictment iv. 700

* An alien and a native to be indicted in a different form v. 527

* Exceptions must be taken to the indictment before plea pleaded v. 18

* The particular words on which a criminal is prosecuted, must be laid in the indictment; not so in an impeachment v. 828

* Though the prisoner by the act to regulate trials for high-treason, has a right to a copy of his indictment, he cannot demand to inspect the rest of the record, or to have it read to him vi. 324

Indictment, by law of Scotland, may contain crimes of different natures iv. 283

As treason and perjury iii. 443

Indictment setting forth that defendant murdered, or caused to be murdered, is not good by the law of England x. 518. n.

Indictment by law of Scotland, that the parties are guilty of both or one or other of the crimes of incest and murder, seems good x. 518. n.

Great difference between amending indictments and informations xi. 333

In indictments for levying war, the day is not necessary to be laid with precision ix. 550, 551. n.

Another indictment depending, not pleadable to a second x. 37

But the former may be quashed x. 38

Judge Foster's observations on indictments for murder and petit treason x. 38, 39

Indictment against Thomas Walcott for treason iii. 684

Indictment against William Hone for similar offence iii. 702, 703

Indictment against lord Russell for similar offence iii. 703

Indictment against Algernon Sidney for treason iii. 793

Indictment of William Ring for treason iv. 131

Indictment against John Hampden for treason iv. 208

Indictment against Robert Lowick for treason iv. 721

Indictment against Tasburgh and Price for subornation of perjury ii. 1017. vi. 12. Ap.

Indictment against Callier for a libel iii. 89. vi. 19. Ap.

Indictment against Hampden for a misdemeanour iii. 823

Indictment against Russell for treason iii. 997

Indictment against Hampden for treason iv. 208

Indictment against Vaughan for treason v. 17

Indictment against Boucher for treason v. 505

The like against Lindsey v. 508

The like against Woodburne and Coke on Country, &c., for raising a mob vi. 60. Ap.

Indictment against lord Mobun for the murder of Richard Cury, in Bayly vi. 181

Indictment against Spencer Cowper for murder v. 194

Indictment against Kidd and others for murder v. 289

The like against the same for piracy v. 297

Indictment against Swensden and others for forcibly marrying an heiress v. 450

Indictment against Fielding for bigamy v. 610, 611

Indictment against Francia for treason vi. 60

Indictment against Reason and another for murder vi. 195

Indictment against Laver for treason vi. 229

Indictment against Edward duke of Somerset, for treason and felony vii. 16, 17

Indictment against lord Sanquhar for murder vii. 86

Indictment against Faulconer in time of the usurpation for perjury vii. 343

Indictment for an assault and conspiracy, with intent to wound and beat viii. 178

Indictment against Arnold for shooting at lord Onslow viii. 290

Indictment against Thomas duke of Norfolk for treason viii. 336

See i. 82.

Indictment against Matthews for a treasonable libel, in Latin ix. 679

Indictment against Mary Blandy for parricide, by poison x. 1

Indictment against Elizabeth Canning for perjury x. 205

Indictment for collecting charity money x. 87. Ap.

Indictment for forging a promissory note x. 95. Ap.

Indictment for libellous words x. 32. Ap.

Indictment for a rape vi. 4. Ap.

Indictment for sodomy vi. 5. Ap.

Indictment for not taking the oaths vi. 11. Ap.

Indictments against peers for murder ii. 642. iv. 513. v. 137. x. 480*, 519

Indictments for murder vi. 12. Ap.

Indictment for an assault, and attempt to murder iii. 65

Indictments for libels vi. 13, 14. Ap. x. 37. Ap.

Indictments for treason iii. 422. iv. 565. vi. 31, 56, 57, 60. Ap.

Not material whether libel true or false, if prosecuted by indictment or information ix. 269

Of the form of indictments Em. Pref. vii.

Indictment containing treason and misdemeanour may be quashed iv. 176

Indictment against many is both joint and several iv. 199

Of capious exceptions to them Em. Pref. viii, ix.

If the word traitorously in an indictment for treason, burglariously in an indictment for burglary, or feloniously in an indictment for felony, be omitted, the indictment will be naught Em. Pref. viii.

In an indictment for a blasphemous libel, the words falsely and maliciously urute, are the very gist of the indictment Em. Pref. viii.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for second offence, indictment must recite record of first conviction, which must be proved; but matter of it is never to be re-examined x. 433

Indictments for high-treason ought to be drawn with great nicety vi. 233

Peers who have been indicted.

Balmerino, Arthur lord ix. 596* Mobun, Charles lord iv. 512.

Byren, William lord x. 517* Morley, Thomas lord vii. 222

Ferrers, Lawrence earl of x. 478 Pembroke, Philip earl of ii. 641

Kingston, Elizabeth duchess dowager Warwick, Edward earl of v. 137

of xi. 198

All peers tried in the court of the lord high steward of England were indicted. See COURT OF THE HIGH STEWARD.

Exceptions to indictments for treason must be taken before plea, notwithstanding 7 Will. III. c. 3, says before jury sworn v. 18. See TALES. VENIRE.

INFANT.

Infant cannot commit felony, because he cannot have any intent or design in his actions vi. 222

Infants admitted to declare what they know before a jury in Scotland without oath iv. 300

Infant permitted by the court to be nonsuited in a writ of appeal, without and against the consent of his guardian assigned to prosecute the same viii. 487

Petition of an infant convicted of murder, to the lords justices in absence of king, for a pardon ix. 539

INFORMATIONS.

The mode of prosecution by information is agreeable to law and constant usage, and has the approbation of the judges and lawyers of all ages, and in all reigns ix. 312, 313

Sir Bartholomew Shower was an eminent practitioner, and had studied the subject of informations well, and taken more than usual pains therein ix. 313

Informations began to be frequent about 42 and 43 Eliz. when Sir Edward Coke was attorney-general ix. 313

Information for writing, printing, and publishing "The Loyal Protestant Intelligence" iii. 505

Ex officio information against a peer for debauching a young lady of quality iii. 519. vi. 16. Ap.

Ex officio information against Pittington and others for a riot, assault, and battery iii. 629

Ex officio information against Sachverel and others for a riot iii. 949

Ex officio information against Braddon and Spoke for a misdemeanour iii. 855

Information against Fuller for a cheat v. 441

Ex officio information against Halbaway for a cheat v. 482, 483

Information against Tutbin for a libel v. 328

Information against Pranchan for a libel ix. 255

Information ex officio against Queen for a libel x. 197. Ap.

Information against lady Joy for forging deeds vii. 610

Ex officio information against John Horne for a libel vii. 264

Information

Information in nature of a quo warranto against the city of London vi. 16. Ap.
 Record of information amended xi. 332
 "Division" struck out, and "parish" inserted in an information xi. 332
 Great difference between amending informations and indictments xi. 333
 Order to amend information, miscalled an alteration of the record xi. 333
 Information amendable by judge at chambers xi. 333
 Information filed by solicitor-general during vacancy of attorney-general, is good in law. So resolved by the judges xi. 334. * See INDICTMENT.

INNOCENCE.

The abuse of it in the prosecution for the popish plot in Charles the second's reign iv. 177, 181
 It is better that twenty nocents escape, than one innocent suffer iii. 205.
 iv. 202
 A voluntary surrender to justice is a presumption of innocence x. 406. n.

INNUENDOS.

* The doctrine of innuendos learnedly debated, and at large iii. 1053, &c.
 Innuendos insufficient without positive averments iii. 1055
 They cannot give certainty where none before iii. 1055
 Innuendo without preceding colloquium or averment, cannot maintain action or indictment iii. 1059
 The law guards against all innuendos and forced constructions Em. Pref. iv. vi. 405, 415. See iv. 197. v. 53. ix. 295

INQUIRY, WRIT of.

High Sheriff sits covered on his being present in court at execution of writ of inquiry iii. 987

INQUISITION.

The manner of usage of state prisoners for treason concerning the popish plot, temp. Car. II. was rather worse than the practice of the inquisition iv. 177

INQUISITION in the EXCHEQUER. See BATHURST CHARLES.

INSANITY.

Mr. Solicitor-general Yorke observed on earl Ferrers's trial, that in some sense every crime proceeds from insanity; all cruelty, all brutality, all revenge, all injustice, is insanity; that there were philosophers in ancient times who held this opinion as a strict maxim of their sect, which opinion is right in philosophy, but dangerous in judicature; it may have an useful and noble influence to regulate the conduct of men, to controul their impotent passions, to teach them that virtue is the perfection of reason, as reason itself is the perfection of human nature; but not to extenuate crimes, nor to excuse those punishments which the law adjudges to be their due x. *513. See ARNOLD EDWARD. BATEMAN CHARLES. BRADSHAW JAMES. FERRERS Earl of. LUNATIC. MADMAN. NON COMPOS MENTIS.

* INSURRECTION. See TREASON.

* INTENDMENTS. See TREASON.

INTENT and INTENTION.

Quo animo a thing is done in all overt-acts of a design, is one of the main questions iv. 171. vi. 222. Em. Pref. viii. ix. 558

Intent shall be proved by an overt-act, and that proved by two witnesses iv. 181. Em. Pref. iii.

Intention of every man who acts with an assembly of people, shall be judged to be same as design of that meeting viii. 241

When intention is general, it is not to be considered or construed a riot, but levying war viii. 247

The law respects the intention x. 435

A counsellor at law's defence was, that he intended to murder, and not to maim vi. 219

Act done in the prosecution of an unlawful or felonious intent, is felony vi. 222, 497

Accidental killing of a man in shooting at tame fowl, wherein another hath property, with intention to steal, is murder vi. 222

Homicide in shooting at such tame fowl, without intention to steal, is manslaughter vi. 222

The intent of the party makes the crime vi. 222

Intent to be tried by the jury vi. 222

Breaking open an house in the night-time, though no felony be committed, yet if such was the intent, it is burglary vi. 222

Larceny or theft is taking away another man's goods with intent to steal them; without such intent, only trespass vi. 222

Intent is so necessary in all felonies, that person who hath no intent or design cannot commit felony, as madman, lunatic, infant, &c. vi. 222

If a man of malice intends to burn one house, and in execution of his designs happens to burn another, this is a malicious and felonious burning vi. 222

Acts done in prosecution of felonious intents, participate of the nature of their original vi. 222. ix. 51. n.

The law judgeth not of the fact by the intent, but of the intent by the fact vii. 48. n.

Intent is treason i. 190, 198. v. 634. vii. 59. See i. 447. viii. 274. ix. 385, 386, 424. DENEW NATHANIEL.

INTERDICTION. See JOHN King of ENGLAND.

INTERPRETATION of LAW.

If a matter be capable of two interpretations, the law says it shall be taken in mitiori sensu, in favour of life iv. 194, 198, 199

INTERPRETER.

He is sworn to interpret evidence to the jury iii. 472. See FQ-

REIGNERS. * TRIAL.

VOL. XI.

JO D R E L L, Mr.

Argues the insanity of Bradshaw ix. 577
 Argues in behalf of the Kinlocks for treason ix. 570

JOHN King of ENGLAND.

Four points of jurisdiction usurped upon the crown of England by the pope before the reign of king John xi. 72

The cause of the quarrel between king John and the pope xi. 72

King John's round and kingly letter to the pope xi. 73

The pope curseth the king and interdicteth the realm xi. 73

* JOHNSON, alias KELLY, GEORGE vi. 335. See AT- TERBURY Bishop.

JOHNSON, SAMUEL,

His trial for publishing two seditious libels against the government, 2 Jac. II. vii. 645

The humble and hearty address to all the English protestants in his majesty's army vii. 645

Evidence against him vii. 646

His sentence, to stand in the pillory, and be whipped vii. 646

Is degraded vii. 647

The parliament reverse the judgment, 1689 vii. 647

Is allowed three hundred pounds a-year out of the Post-Office vii. 648

His punishment, as it was against law, so it was without precedent iv. 166, 205. See viii. 466, 467

His repeated pilloryings and barbarous whippings were punishments monstrously cruel Em. Pref. xii.

JONES, Mr.

His speech before evidence on the information against Sacheverel and others for a riot, in being unlawfully present at the election of a mayor, when they had no concern in the election iii. 952

Opens the evidence against counsellor Cowper, for murder v. 196

* JONES, DAVID iii. 52. See GREYFORD Lord, & al.

* JONES, EDWARD i. 116. See ABINGTON & al.

* JONES, FRANCIS iii. 52.

* JONES, JOHN ii. 339. See REGICIDES.

* JONES, REBECCA iii. 52.

JONES, Sir THOMAS, Judge B. R.

Was of opinion, on the earl of Shaftesbury's motion to be bailed upon a commitment by the lords for a contempt, that though the commitment was ill, it could not be examined in B. R. and that the noble prisoner could neither be bailed or discharged by that court; but did not declare how his opinion would be, in case there had been a prorogation ii. 622

Declines to deliver his opinion in earl Danby's case ii. 753

Refused to bail his lordship on motion on commitment by the lords ii. 760

His charge to the jury on the trial of Tasborough and Price, for subornation of perjury ii. 1035

In his directions to the jury on the trial of Thomas Gascoigne, for treason, tells them, that improbability is not of weight against positive evidence iii. 28

Of opinion, that Fitzharris's plea to the jurisdiction of the court was insufficient iii. 261

His declaration on the bench respecting the many libellous pamphlets published at that time viii. 457

Gives his reasons at the bar of the house of commons, for his judgment in Jay and Topham viii. 5

Voted guilty of a breach of privilege, and taken into custody viii. 6

The commons resolved to impeach him for his conduct on the trial of Dart iii. 222, 224. vii. 485, 486

He discharged the grand jury illegally vii. 481

JONES, Sir THOMAS, Lord Chief Justice C. B.

His charge to the jury on the trial of Elizabeth Gaunt iv. 153

His charge to the jury on the trial of Cornish, for treason iv. 154

He signs the trial for publication iv. 189, 202

This trial censured by the legislature viii. 473. See CORNISH HENRY.

Lord chief justice Jones was subpoenaed on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 70. See ANDERSON. CURTIS. SMITH F.

JONES, THOMAS. See GOLDING.

JONES, Sir WILLIAM, Justice B. R.

His conditional opinion for either party in the cause of ship-money, with his argument, reasons, and opinion, i. 663, 667

His speech in his judicial character in the house of lords, in defence of his remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for not paying the loan to Charles I. vii. 185

The commons resolve, that he was guilty of a delay of justice towards mr. Holles and the rest that appeared upon the habeas corpus, in that they were not bailed vii. 250

JONES, Sir WILLIAM, Attorney-General,

His speech on earl Pembroke's trial, for murder ii. 643

The attorney-general being called by writ as assistant to the house of lords, he sat within the bar on the trial ii. 643

His speech on Staley's trial at bar, for treasonable French words ii. 650

His speech before evidence on Coleman's trial, for treason ii. 663

States the fact on lord Cornwallis's trial, for murder ii. 729

States the evidence on Green's trial, for murder ii. 762

His observations thereon ii. 784, 785

His speech on S. Atkins's trial, for murder ii. 794

Opens the evidence on Colledge's prosecution for treason iii. 351

Sums up the evidence for the commons on the trial of the viscount Stafford, impeached of treason in being concerned in the popish plot iii. 190

A story told about seizing his papers at his death iy. 155

The law adopted on Sidney's trial was called, Sir William Jones's law iv. 196.

See iii. 769.

JOURNALS.

The commons had no journals before Edward the sixth's time ii. 54. n.

Extract from the journals of the lords, concerning the privilege of parliament 5 Q ment in the case of libel xi. 305. See EVIDENCE. PEERAGE and PEERS. viii. 89, 90.

* I R E L A N D, W I L L I A M,

- * Thomas Pickering, John Grove, Thomas White, alias Whitebread, and John Fenwick, their trial for high-treason, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 696
- * The indictment, for being concerned in the popish plot ii. 697
- * Mr. serjeant Baldwin's speech before evidence ii. 699
- * Mr. Finch's speech before evidence ii. 700
- * Oates's evidence of the popish plot ii. 701
- * The conspiracy carried on in Scotland ii. 703
- * Oates swears he took the sacrament, and an oath of secrecy to conceal the plot ii. 705
- * Soubwark fired by Grove ii. 707
- * Oates ordered some refreshment by the court ii. 708
- * Bedloe's evidence of the popish plot ii. 708
- * Some noblemen to be assassinated as well as the king ii. 711
- * Oates gives further evidence of the conspiracy in Ireland ii. 711
- * James Bedloe's evidence of his brother's being employed by the Jesuits ii. 712
- * A letter read in evidence that was not written either by or to any of the prisoners ii. 714
- * The jury are told, it was read as evidence only of the plot in general, and not against any of the prisoners in particular ii. 714
- * The letter is a summons to appear at the consult ii. 714
- * The jury are discharged of Fenwick and Whitebread, there not being sufficient evidence against them ii. 715
- * This proceeding censured iv. 673
- * Ireland's defence ii. 715
- * Sarah Paine's evidence that Ireland was in London in August ii. 715
- * Ireland calls his witnesses to prove he was out of town in August ii. 716
- * Sir John Southcot's coachman deposes, that Ireland went down into Staffordshire, the 5th of August, with his master ii. 717
- * Ireland complains he was not allowed to send for his witnesses ii. 717
- * Mr. Gifford deposes, he saw Ireland at Wolverhampton the latter end of August, or beginning of September ii. 717
- * Sir Danny Ashburnham deposes, that Oates had an ill character for lying in his youth ii. 718
- * Ireland offers to prove he had more witnesses, but it was not admitted ii. 718
- * Pickering and Grove deny the whole, and complain they had not time to send for their witnesses ii. 719
- * The prisoners offer to prove that their relations had suffered much in the king's service ii. 719
- * The chief justice directs the jury ii. 719
- * He inveighs against the Jesuits principles ii. 721
- * The prisoners are convicted ii. 722
- * Sir George Jefferies, recorder, his speech before judgment ii. 723
- * Sentence passed ii. 724. See viii. 440
- * They are executed ii. 725
- Ireland's execution and speech viii. 440. See ii. 720

I R E L A N D.

- A peer of Ireland may be tried in England for treason committed in Ireland i. 188, 951. viii. 341
- No petit treason in Ireland iv. 403
- Murder high-treason in Ireland iv. 403
- The case of mixed-money in Ireland xi. 65
- The case of præmunire in Ireland xi. 69
- Sir John Davies wrote an excellent book upon the state of the kingdom of Ireland xi. 29
- Irish peers mere esquires in England viii. 348, 360
- What time magna charta extended to Ireland viii. 353
- The Irish formerly were considered very vindictive and bloody viii. 347
- Laws against provisors made in Ireland xi. 70
- Plea that party is a peer of Ireland i. 950
- The affair of the bills of settlement for Ireland explained viii. 408
- Letters patent extend not to Ireland, unless it be specially named viii. 62
- Contest in parliament about the Irish forfeitures xi. 137
- See ANTRIM Marquis of.
- CAVENAGH MAURICE.
- CRAIG CAMPBELL.
- GILBERT JEFFEREY.
- GREY lord LEONARD.
- HEATH MARY.
- HURLEY PATRICK.
- MACGUIRE Lord.
- PRYNNE WILLIAM. * TRIAL. viii. 341.

I R O N S.

- They are taken off on arraignment iv. 698. v. 18. viii. 207
- Refused vi. 231. See iv. 53. ix. 555
- Taken off on trial vi. 234
- On receiving judgment vi. 323
- Use of them in gaols Em. Pref. xiv.
- Prisoner laid in irons by command of the Star-chamber vii. 271
- Colonel Morris, upon being manacled with irons, exclaimed, "What, a martial man ironed!" vii. 322, n.
- Judge Heath ordered Lilburn's irons to be taken off ii. 34. * See PRISONER.

I S S U E.

- Whether issue born of a second marriage, first being annulled by a divorce for impotency, be lawful or not x. 23. Ap.

I S S U E S.

- No peremptory challenge to jury on collateral issues ix. 582, 583
- Counsel allowed upon collateral issues ix. 582, 583

J U D G E S.

- The names of such as have behaved impartially on the bench, without prejudicing the rightful prerogatives of the crown, or betraying the legal privileges of the subject, without bearing hard upon the innocent, or shewing unallowable favour to the guilty, will be remembered with honour, and left upon record, to their lasting praise and commendation Em. Pref. i. ii.
- Waller's speech against the judges, for their opinions in the cause of ship-money i. 696
- Lord Falkland's speech on the same occasion i. 698
- Oliver Saint John's speech, at a conference on same occasion i. 699
- Edward Hyde's speech thereon i. 709
- It is totally in the discretion of the judges to put off a trial iv. 190
- Cases of slanderous words spoken, and of persons being punished for same, against the king's justices iii. 603. vii. 111. ix. 314
- Several judges examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 40, 41. See ii. 384
- A peer may give evidence, though a judge in the cause iii. 141
- Resolution of judges on the statute of forcible marriages v. 464
- That is the best law that gives least liberty to the judge; he the best judge that takes least liberty to himself iii. 763
- The judges are upon their oath to do justice according to the law of the land, notwithstanding any letter or mandate from the prince iii. 289
- The judges designed to be instruments for subjugating their country to illegal taxation xi. 29
- Report of committee of house of commons appointed to examine proceedings of the judges iii. 218
- Opinion of judges respecting the king's dispensing power vii. 616
- It is as much the duty of judges to give the reasons why they doubt, as it is of them who are satisfied in the judgment iv. 168
- Pemberton, Dalben, Jones, and Raymond, were the judges on Fitzharris's trial iv. 168
- If a judge give judgment according to law, not knowing it to be so, tho' the judgment be legal, the pronouncing of it is unjust iv. 168, 169
- Judges will be influenced by the power of the crown iv. 183, 184. vii. 480
- Judges ought to be bound up by the reasons given in public, and not satisfy and make good their judgment by after-thought reasons iv. 169. See i. 218
- All the court assents to what one judge says, if they do not shew their dissent iv. 169
- Some judges were of opinion, that James II. had a right to nominate the president of Magdalen-college, Oxford iv. 187
- The delivering the sense of an absent judge, though sometimes practised, is not allowable, for oftentimes they deliver another opinion than what the absent judge is of iv. 187
- The judges differed in their reasons, why want of freehold was no challenge to a juror in treason, in lord Russell's trial iv. 189
- When judges ought to be astuti iv. 199
- No action will lie against a judge vii. 442. xi. 190
- Judges discharging grand juries before they had finished their presentments, violation of their oath vii. 480, 481
- A judge cannot take notice of any thing not proved iv. 185
- He may and ought to be a witness, if he knew any thing material of the matter tried before him and others iv. 185, 202. v. 98
- The parliamentary proceedings against the judges of Charles I. for their extra-judicial opinions in the case of ship-money i. 696
- If one draw a weapon upon a judge sitting in court, though he strikes him not, he shall be imprisoned during life, and forfeit his goods and lands, and lose his right hand i. 722
- The garment of a judge adds not to a man's sense, learning, or honesty iv. 206
- The judges not only vary from one another in their opinions, but even from themselves, in the judgment of the same case iv. 206
- The judges the keepers of the king's coronation oath vii. 488
- It is very rash in a judge to give his opinion in so great a cause as a man's life, without consideration iv. 206
- Judges of Car. II. actuated by their ambition, instead of by the law, and endeavoured to get promotion rather by obsequiousness than by doing justice vii. 479
- There do not want precedents of severe chastisements on judges vii. 479
- In former times judges were impeached and hanged vii. 480
- Judges are entrusted with magna charta by their oaths iii. 222. vii. 480
- In almost all ages, the judges, who ought to be preservers of the laws, have endeavoured to destroy them iii. 222. vii. 480
- The judges, by an extra-judicial opinion, gave the king power to raise monies upon an extraordinary occasion, without parliament, and made the king judge of the occasion iii. 222. vii. 480
- Charges against the judges of Charles II. vii. 481
- Said to be high-treason in judges to assume a legislative authority, and to dismiss grand juries, contrary to law vii. 489. See iii. 223
- Forty-four judges hanged in one year, by king Alfred vii. 306
- Corrupt and upright judges characteristically distinguished. Em. Pref. i. See iii. 222. iv. 206.
- The corruption of judges generally ends in their own ruin Em. Pref. i. vi.
- Resolved by the judges, that the consulting to levy war is treason v. 89
- * Judges ought not to go according to their private knowledge v. 96
- Judges formerly creatures of the crown Em. Pref. iv.
- Their opinion in the case of ship-money i. 509
- Their rule, that two witnesses are not necessary in treason, and that that 25 Edw. III. is not in force i. 218. iii. 204
- Eleven judges assist at Reading's trial ii. 806
- Judges resolve that any of king's counsel may privately manage evidence to grand jury ii. 302
- Judges resolve, that it is no cause of challenge for prisoner, who is to be tried tried on same indictment, to say, that juror hath already convicted on that indictment ii. 303

 They resolve, that all words and writings, supposed to be criminal, ought to be specified in the indictment or information v. 828
 This resolution censured vi. 330. See EYRE.
 Resolved by all the judges, that on a trial by peers, the prisoner cannot challenge any that are returned on his jury vii. 421. See RESOLUTION of all the JUDGES of ENGLAND.
 They bowed in token of their consent, that a peer should have the benefit of clergy and of the statute vii. 428
 Of the discretion of judges in inflicting the punishments of fine, imprisonment, pillory, or whipping Em. Pref. xi.
 By a law in one of the wisest of the Grecian governments, no man bred up to merchandize should be admitted into any office of judicature, till he had quitted that employment ten years at least vi. 596
 The judges not in scarlet on the duke of Hamilton's trial ii. 16
 The judges in 1571 and 1662, complimented iii. 775
 A quotation from lord Bacon's "Advancement of Learning" concerning the judges iii. 763
 Judges of 10 Rich. II. prosecuted i. 1
 Cited and approved i. 706
 Judges assuming to themselves a legislative power, formerly held high-treason vii. 489
 The judges of Car. II. illegally and partially imposed fines on offenders favouring papists vii. 483
 Resolved by all the judges, that act 4 Hen. VIII. chap. 8. concerning Richard Strode, was a particular act of parliament vii. 217
 Answers of the judges to some questions put to them, concerning offences committed by members of parliament in parliament vii. 218
 Where the judges agree, the lord chief justice gives the opinion of the court, and in matters of moment, he usually gives the reason vii. 6
 The judges are accounted the fathers of the law i. 199, 510. vii. 303
 The judges ought not to give their opinion before-hand, of any criminal case that may come before them judicially ii. 36. n. 439. v. 747, 748
 The judges speak upon their oaths, and therefore must deliver their judgments according to their consciences i. 638. ii. 466
 The judges must not give their judgments according to policy, or rules of state, nor convenience, but only according to law ii. 466
 Mr. baron Greger sworn as a witness in a cause vii. 580, 597
 Lord chief baron Mountague examined as a witness iv. 40
 Same judge appealed to as a witness by a prisoner ii. 998, 999
 Discretion of judges in inflicting punishment on small crimes and misdemeanours, defined Em. Pref. xi.
 Judges not to give counsel to prisoners i. 171, 189
 The opinion of the major part of them is considered as the act of the whole court i. 646
 A great deal of blood was shed by judges governed by James II.'s evil counsellors, against all law, the persons suffering not being allowed to plead in their own defence v. 749
 If a man, according to sincerity, give judgment, though he differs from another judge, it is no injustice vii. 109. See DYER for JAMES.
 Judges commission at New-York v. 421. ix. 280
 Judges should beware of hard constructions and strained inferences x. 56. n.
 The judges were secretly asked their opinion respecting sir Edward Hale's prosecution; and such as were not for the court were turned out vii. 616. n.
 Some of the above judges were weak and ignorant to a scandal vii. 616. n.
 They gave judgment for sir Edward without argument, as of course vii. 616. n.
 The judges of the court of King's-Bench, 26 Car. II. were a set of as learned judges as ever were before or since viii. 109
 The judges concurred in opinion, that the approbation of the marriages of the king's grand-children, and also of the presumptive heir to the crown, in whatever degree related to the king, belonged to his majesty; but to what other branches of the royal family this prerogative extended, they could not ascertain xi. 295
 Lord chancellor Ellesmere says, that power and might of some potent persons oppressed justice and faithful judges in Richard the second's time, for expounding the law soundly and truly xi. 99, 101
 Formerly the judges in cases of doubt or difficulty consulted the privy-council xi. 101
 The judges are a kind of council of the king's by oath and ancient institution xi. 112
 Three judges were of opinion, that the lord keeper was bound to give judgment according to the opinions of the majority of judges by him called to his assistance; but seven judges (and among them lord chief justice Holt), that he was not bound by such majority of opinions, but was at liberty to give judgment according to his own xi. 159, 160
 Judges are the prisoner's counsel vi. 224
 The judges of Geo. I. complimented vi. 409
 If judges take upon themselves to mould an unlawful power into a convenient authority by new restrictions, this is not a judgment, but legislation xi. 321
 It is a matter of impeachment for any judge to affirm a thing law to bind the whole kingdom, by a declaration that such is his opinion xi. 322
 The judges of Hen. VII. were learned men, and the three chiefs of the privy-council xi. 2
 Not more upright judges than in 34 Eliz. A. D. 1592 vii. 140
 Ten thousand pounds damages recovered for calling a judge traitor, and that too after defendant had been fined 50,000l. imprisoned, &c. i. 772
 None should be preferred to the office of a judge, but such whose abilities and integrity may be safely depended upon Em. Pref. vi.

Judges who have been censured, arrested on the bench, prosecuted, imprisoned, removed, executed, or otherwise proceeded against, or punished for mal-practice or crimes, arranged in alphabetical order.

Belknap sir Robert	Hyde sir Nicholas
Berkley sir Robert	Jeffries sir George
Bramstone sir John	Jones sir Thomas
Burgh sir William	Jones sir William
Carey sir John	Montague William
Coke sir Edward	North sir Francis
Crawley sir Francis	Pemberton sir Francis
Davenport sir Humphry	Powel sir John
Denham sir John	Saunders sir Edmund
Doderidge sir John	Trefilian sir Robert
Dudley Edmund	Trevor sir Thomas
Finch sir Henage	Vernon sir George
Finch sir John	Walcut sir Thomas
Fulthorpe sir Roger	Wayland sir Thomas
Gilbert Jeffery	Wston sir James
Heath sir Robert	Whitelocke sir James
Herbert sir Edward	Wright sir Robert
Holloway sir Richard	Wythens sir Francis
Holt John

See their NAMES for particulars. See ASHBY and WHITE. JAY and TOPHAM. DE BRUCE. COLLARS of S. S. RESOLUTIONS of the JUDGES. ROBES.

* J U D G M E N T.

* Judgment pronounced on lord Bacon by the house of lords in his absence, upon his representation that he was sick, and not able to attend i. 387
 * No judgment given the same term the trial was, because there were not four days of the term remaining iii. 544
 * No judgment to be pronounced after an outlawry for high-treason; but only a rule for execution iii. 944
 * The judgment against Pilkington, & al. reversed in parliament iii. 659
 * A week's time given a defendant convicted of perjury to move in arrest of judgment iv. 94
 * It is in the discretion of the court to pass what judgment they please on one convicted of perjury, saving life and member iv. 104
 * Where an indictment is removed into the King's-Bench, judgment ought not to be given till four days after conviction; if there be so many days remaining in the term iv. 779
 * The contrary proceeding, in Stayley's case, censured iv. 779
 Instance of a prisoner not being asked why judgment of treason should not be pronounced, till he had apprised the court of the omission. See AUDLEY, THOMAS Lord.
 Copy of the judgment as it is entered upon record against John Hampden, in the case of ship-money i. 695, 696. vi. 9. Ap.
 Judgment in treason must be in usual form, or the king loses his forfeitures, &c. iii. 213
 Judgment cannot be entered up when court is divided in opinion v. 570, 571
 Of mute judgments in Westminster-Hall iv. 169, 172
 The manner of pronouncing judgments in Scotland ii. 111
 If a man hath judgment to be hanged, and the sheriff do behead him, it is murder ii. 209. v. 126
 Instance of prisoner being asked why he should not have judgment three several times previous to the court pronouncing it ix. *747, *749, *750
 Judgment of imprisonment to commence from and after determination of imprisonment, to which defendant was before sentenced for another offence, is good in law. So resolved by the judges xi. 334
 The execution may vary from the judgment iii. 215. iv. 129. See GRAY Lady JANE. HOWARD CATHARINE, Queen to Hen. VIII. LISLE Lady ALICIA. MORE Sir THOMAS. SALISBURY Countess of. STAFFORD Lord Viscount.
 Though the judgment in felony is always, "to be hanged by the neck," yet the party may be beheaded, for that is no part of the sentence iv. 129. See AUDLEY MERVIN Lord. SOMERSET Duke of.

* J U R I S D I C T I O N.

* A plea to the jurisdiction, the party ought to be ready to maintain presently iv. 214
 * Whoever executes the judgment of a court in a cause where the court has no jurisdiction, is punishable ii. 328
 * The courts of Westminster may judge of privilege of parliament, where it is incident to a suit the court is possessed of; but not of a matter arising originally in parliament ii. 620
 * A court cannot bail, where they have not jurisdiction of the cause ii. 620
 If party pleads in chief, he cannot afterwards plead to the jurisdiction iv. 167
 Court of Common-Pleas has not ordinarily jurisdiction in criminal cases ix. 309
 The pope had no jurisdiction in England in the time of the Britons xi. 71. See JOHN King of ENGLAND
 Plea to the jurisdiction of the court of King's-Bench, that party stood impeached by the commons for the same treason iii. 228
 The jurisdiction of the privy-council a limited jurisdiction; and upon their commitment, the grounds and causes of it ought to appear vii. 126
 The court of King's-Bench declare, they have jurisdiction to punish offences committed in parliament vii. 247
 Resolved in parliament to be a breach of privilege, and illegal vii. 251
 Difference between pleading to the jurisdiction, and in bar viii. 3
 Where there is a plea to the jurisdiction, because the court cannot examine the fact, they swear to their plea viii. 3
 Justification by virtue of acts of parliament does not exclude the king's courts from their jurisdictions viii. 5
 Where several courts may have several jurisdictions of the same fact, notwithstanding there may be diversity of judgments viii. 112, 118. See COURT. PLEA.

* J U R O R S

 JURORS and JURY. See GRAND JURY.

- * A jury imprisoned and fined for giving a verdict contrary to the opinion of the court i. 78. xi. 3.
- * Twenty-four only returned upon a pannel to try a case of high-treason ii. 182
- * By a general verdict a jury take upon them the point of law as well as matter of fact ii. 69
- * A printer tried for high-treason in printing, is allowed to have half his jury of bookfellers or printers ii. 530. v. 530
- * The same jury sworn and charged with the prisoners again ii. 537
- * A juryman suffered to whisper the judge in open court ii. 553
- * A juryman threatened for saying he could not in his conscience find the prisoner guilty ii. 553
- * Jurors fined for going contrary to evidence, and sent to Newgate ii. 616
- * This proceeding afterwards adjudged illegal ii. 553
- * Jurors discharged of prisoners after the evidence given for the king, without giving a verdict ii. 713, 831, 953. ix. 572
- * This proceeding condemned iv. 673
- * Juryman, who knows any thing of the cause, shall give his evidence in court ii. 809
- * Jury can take no papers out of court with them that have been produced in evidence, but what are under seal, without prisoner's consent ii. 828. iii. 160. iv. 396. v. 517
- * One attainted of felony and pardoned, cannot be of a jury iii. 44
- * When one may be a witness, who cannot be of a jury iii. 45
- * In capital offences, a jury shall not be struck, as in civil causes iii. 262
- * If one superannuated appears on a jury, when he is warned, he must serve; but he might have had a writ of privilege to discharge him iii. 264
- * A juror challenged for the king, because he gave his dogs the names of the king's witnesses, Oates and Beales iii. 317
- * The jury allowed a refreshment before they gave their verdict in a capital case iii. 408. See iv. 65, 396
- * Refreshment refused the jury ii. 80. Em. Pref. vi. vii.
- * The evidence interpreted to the aliens on a party jury iii. 472
- * Juror let aside for want of freehold iii. 519. iv. 423, 602, 741
- * A person repelled from being a juror by the justiciary court in Scotland, for pre-judging the prisoner i. 471
- * Challenge to a juror for want of freehold in the city, disallowed in a capital case iii. 711, 820. See iv. 188, 206
- * No challenge to the favour against the king; as to say, the juror is a servant or dependant of the king's iii. 825
- * A jury (whether of peers or commons) ought not to be discharged in a capital case, till they have given their verdict iv. 232
- * Jurors discharged in a capital case for want of freehold iv. 423
- * Copy of the pannel a favour, and not the prisoner's right iv. 566
- * Six days between the precept for summoning the petit jury and the return iv. 662
- * If the prisoner hath a copy of the pannel before it be returned, the intent of the stat. 7 Wil. III. chap. 3. is satisfied iv. 667
- * What questions a juror shall answer iv. 748
- * The pannel called over in presence of the prisoner, before they are brought to the book v. 550. vi. 246
- * Two persons challenged for cause vi. 248
- Juries, judges of fact, not law ix. 275. See Em. Pref. iii.
- Pannel legal in London, tho' without parish, ward, or abode ix. 680
- Sheriff may return all new men on jury, without regard to those who appeared and were sworn, or challenged before ix. 587
- Prisoners may challenge twenty of the pannel, without shewing cause; but if more, they must shew a reasonable cause; but if they agree to join in their challenges, they may be tried together; if not, they must be tried separately ii. 308, 313. iv. 566, 663. ix. 10, 11, 720. x. 38
- Jury need not find fact committed, as laid in indictment i. 330
- Juries considered as witnesses coming out of neighbourhood where fact committed v. 38
- Court refuse verdict of jury; they are threatened by court, and locked up till next morning ii. 615. See Em. Pref. vi.
- Jury to determine law and fact ii. 76. See ix. 275
- Peremptory challenges to jurors observed upon iv. 188, 189
- Jury brought before council, to give reasons for their verdict, but refuse i. 78. ii. 81. vii. 370
- After jury struck in civil matter, each party to have copy of pannel iv. 191
- Having been on grand jury, good cause of challenge iv. 2. See x. 88. Ap. n.
- Jurors discharged for want of freeholds iv. 423
- Juryman may be examined as a witness ii. 809
- The king's possessions are subject to a trial by jury ii. 306
- Why so called Em. Pref. iii.
- Fifteen sworn on jury, for executing writ of inquiry iii. 987
- Having employment under the king, no cause of challenge iii. 825
- The judges differ in opinion, whether a trial after a jury have been sworn and charged with the prisoners, and discharged, without giving a verdict, though done in favour of them, is not a mis-trial, and the verdict a mere nullity ix. 576, 576. See ii. 711. iv. 232, 673. x. 407. n.
- Upon affidavit of jurymen, that they did not give the verdict entered up; court set aside the trial, and granted a new one, in a criminal case x. 407. n. See x. 411 and n.
- Packed juries in some measure removed by statute 3 Geo. II. chap. 25. Em. Pref. xiv. n.
- Jurors examined as to their freeholds iv. 738
- Tales pro defectu juratorum* iii. 57
- No friends or relations of deceased to be on jury, in case of murder iii. 468
- Court directs forty-eight to be returned on jury, which is to be struck

- in presence of attorneys on both sides
- Jury kept together all night, without fire or candle iv. 396. Em. Pref. vi.
- Juries frequently discharged after sworn iv. 202
- If jury do not agree, they undergo a greater punishment than the criminal himself Em. Pref. vi.
- Proposal for remedying the above inconvenience Em. Pref. v. vi.
- Lord Holt severely reprimanded a jury for finding small damages in the case of a peer, for crim. con. viii. 36
- The trial by jury is the honour of our government, the mark of our freedom, and envy of our neighbours v. 82
- Juries were usually packed in the reign of James II. iv. 177
- Lord chief justice Hales's encomium on the trial by jury, cited with great respect vi. 407
- Citizen of London shall not be drawn out of the city to be a jurymen iv. 191
- A nobleman shall not be on a jury vi. 191
- Prerogative of king, to grant charter of exemption from being on a jury iv. 191
- Jurymen formerly intitled to eight-pence for a trial iv. 191
- In criminal matters not capital, the jury were heretofore paid, if they acquitted prisoner; but not if they found him guilty iv. 191
- But on prosecutions for the popish plot in Car. II's reign, the jury had more, and were treated higher, if they convicted prisoner than if they acquitted him iv. 191
- In capital matters, it was never allowed to pay the jury, be their verdict which way it would iv. 191
- Petty jury must consider credibility of witnesses iv. 201
- Several, tho' no freeholders, admitted to be sworn on the jury iii. 265. n. See iii. 708, 820
- Copy of the pannel of the jury allowed lord Russell iii. 707
- Allowed count Cuningmark iii. 465
- Denied Colledge iii. 350. 707. n.
- Denied Cornish, till time of his trial, when it could be of no use to him iii. 707. n.
- The jury are judges of circumstances that are matters of fact. Resolved by all the judges vii. 422
- Jurymen examined on a voyer dire, as to their freehold ix. 550
- If freehold and copyhold put together amount to 10l. a year, a good qualification for a jurymen ix. 550
- At Reading, colonel Martin, after the jury were sworn, caused them all, before the judges sitting upon the bench, to put on their hats, as their right, being they were then the chief judges in court, and the other inferior to them iii. 69. n.
- Upon trial touching the identity of the person, on attainder, no peremptory challenge of jurymen allowed ix. 584
- The jury in Scotland consists of fifteen persons iv. 292. v. 595, 639
- And most votes of jury determine fact v. 604
- Jury having been on a trial in Scotland ninety-four hours, exempted from serving for five years ix. 680
- When a tales, and not a new pannel, ought to be awarded in treason by statute 7 Wil. III. chap. 3. iv. 741
- Jury fined by court for entering into an agreement among themselves in respect of their verdict ix. 536. n.
- What a good qualification of a juror, in trials for treason ix. 550
- Juror withdrawn in capital cases ix. 507
- Venire* awarded, and jury returned instantly, to try collateral issues ix. 582
- If justice cannot be obtained at the hands of juries, by the ordinary course of law, it may be a provocation to restrain that press which they refuse to regulate xi. 323. See CHALLENGES. LIL-BURNE'S JURY ii. 81. PEN and MEAD'S ii. 615. THROCK-MORTON'S i. 78

 J U S T I C E S.

- An account of a publication so called xi. 137
- * J U S T I C E S.
- * Justices of the peace, whether they may examine the king's evidence after the coroner iv. 530
- The nomination of them is in the chancellor only vi. 705
- They are not by common law, but appointed by statute, first of which is Edw. III. chap. 16. iv. 562. n.
- It is part of their duty to attend the assizes x. 92. Ap.
- Justice of peace permitted to take security for good behaviour, ordered by the court of B. R. xi. 334

J U S T I C E S R E G E N T.

- Petition to the lords justices, in the absence of the king, by an infant, for a pardon for murder ix. 539
- J. V. R.* Lady, vii. 571
- Her trial for great part of Shadwell, in the King's Bench, 1684 vii. 571
- The names of the special jury vii. 571
- Evidence of the plaintiff Moffam's title under the dean and chapter of St. Paul's vii. 572
- Evidence for the defendant Joy, that it was originally marsh ground, and never in the dean and chapter vii. 575
- Knowle*'s evidence for the defendant, to prove a lease, 2 and 3 Philip and Mary vii. 576
- Banister*'s evidence for the defendant vii. 581
- Evidence of the boundaries of the marsh vii. 589
- Evidence for the plaintiff vii. 594
- Evidence of the defendant's deeds being forged, from their being wrong in the title of the king and queen vii. 598
- Sir Charles Carter*'s evidence of the lady Joy's forging a mortgage vii. 599
- Mrs Duffet*'s evidence, of her husband's forging deeds for lady Joy vii. 600
- Lord chief justice Jessier sums up the evidence vii. 604
- Verdict for the plaintiff vii. 610
- The information against lady Joy, for forging these deeds vii. 610

K.

* KEACH, BENJAMIN.

- * His trial at the assizes at Aylesbury, in the county of Bucks, the 8th and 9th of October, 1664, 16 Car. II. before the lord chief justice Hyde ii. 550
- * The indictment, for writing and publishing a seditious and scandalous book, entitled, "The Child's Instructor against Infant-baptism," &c. ii. 550
- * The witnesses for the king called ii. 551
- * The prisoner's examination before the justice, read as evidence against him ii. 552
- * His opinion compared with the book of common prayer ii. 552
- * One of his jury permitted to whisper with the judge in court ii. 553
- * Another menaced, in case he did not agree with the rest ii. 553
- * He is convicted of all the paragraphs laid in the indictment, but one, which was wrong recited ii. 553
- * Sentenced to stand in the pillory three several days, and fined 20l. ii. 553

KEBLE, RICHARD.

- President of the court, informs the jury on Lilburn's trial for treason ii. 78
- Makes a speech to the traitor Love ii. 141

KEELING, JOSIAH.

- Examined concerning his being tampered with about the discovery of the plot, 1683, and being a witness viii. 477

KEEPER of the GREAT SEAL.

- Lord keeper Wright encouraged charitable contributions x. 88. Ap.
- Keeper of the great seal cannot commit iv. 555
- Lord keepers who have been proceeded against by parliament. Coventry for Thomas Finch for John

See CHANCELLORS.

- * KEIGLE, HENRY v. 872. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
- * KELLY, alias JOHNSON, GEORGE vi. 335. See ATTERBURY, Bishop.

* KENDAL, THOMAS, and RICHARD ROE.

- * Proceedings in the King's Bench, on a habeas corpus, upon a commitment for high-treason, 7 Gul. III. 1695 iv. 554
- * The warrant of commitment for being assisting to the escape of Sir James Montgomery out of the custody of a messenger iv. 554
- * Sir Bartholomew Shower moves, that the prisoners may be bailed iv. 554
- * Holds that a commitment by a secretary of state is illegal, and was never practised in England till 1678 iv. 555, 557
- * That the fact charged in the warrant is not high-treason iv. 555
- * That a messenger is not empowered by law to detain a man in custody iv. 556, 560
- * And therefore it is no crime to escape from him iv. 556
- * The king's counsel desire time to reply iv. 557
- * Sir Bartholomew Shower's second argument iv. 557
- * The opinion of the court iv. 561

KENMURE, WILLIAM Lord Viscount.

- His letter to a noble lord the day before his execution, giving the reasons why he pleaded guilty x. 84. Ap.
- His behaviour on Tower Hill x. 85. Ap. * See DERWENTWATER, JAMES Earl of vi. 1
- * KENN, Doctor THOMAS, Bishop of Bath and Wells,
- * His trial for publishing a libel iv. 304

KENNET.

- Extracts from his complete history of England xi. 2, 4, 10, 18
- His account of the reversal of the judgment against Titus Oates viii. 475

* KERNE, CHARLES.

- * His trial for high-treason, at Hersford assizes, the 4th of August 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 961
- * The indictment for high-treason, in taking popish orders, and coming into England, being a subject of this crown ii. 961
- * Evidence that the prisoner administered the sacrament after the manner of the papists ii. 962
- * The witnesses being confronted, contradict one another ii. 963
- * The prisoner calls his witnesses ii. 963
- * A priest saying mass, evidence of his being in orders ii. 964
- * The chief justice directs the jury ii. 964
- * The prisoner is acquitted ii. 965

KETTLERBY, Mr.

- His speech for Laver, on his prosecution for treason vi. 296
- Moves for damages for Bambridge and Corbet, on their acquittal on appeal for murder, but refused ix. 181
- His defence of Matthews for treason ix. 698

- * KEY, ROBERT iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

- * KEYES, ROBERT i. 232. See WINTER ROBERT, & al.

- * KEYES, THOMAS iv. 562. See CHARNOCK ROBERT.

PORTER Captain GEORGE.

KEYLING, Sir JOHN, Serjeant at Law.

- Opens the evidence against Hacker the regicide ii. 382
- King's counsel opens the indictment against Anderson, for treason ii. 995, 999

For a citation out of his reports, see DAMMAREE DANIEL.

* KIDD, Captain WILLIAM.

- * His trial for murder and piracy, upon six several indictments: as also the trial of Nicholas Churchill, James Howe, Robert Lamley, William Jenkins, Gabriel Loffe, Hugh Parrus, Richard Barlicorn, Abel Owens, and Darby Mullins, for piracy, at the Admiralty sessions, held at the Old Bailey, London, the 8th and 9th of May, 1701, 13 William III. v. 287

- * The first indictment against William Kidd, for the murder of William Moore, his gunner v. 289

VOL. XI.

- * Counsel assigned captain Kidd v. 289

- * The court order him part of his money and effects for his subsistence, &c. v. 290

- * Kidd's trial for the murder comes on v. 290

- * The witnesses for the king called to prove the murder v. 290

- * Kidd's defence v. 292

- * Kidd calls several of his accomplices in piracy, who are admitted to be witnesses for him in this case v. 292

- * The lord chief baron Ward directs the jury, and intimates, that the provocation given by the deceased, was too slight to extenuate the crime, and reduce it to manslaughter v. 294

- * Kidd is convicted of murder v. 296

- * Kidd, and the other prisoners, the indictment of them for piracy, in taking the Quedah merchant in the Indian seas v. 297

- * Their trial comes on v. 297

- * Churchill and some of the prisoners desire the benefit of the king's proclamation, on which they surrendered v. 297

- * They are told that they did not surrender to the persons the proclamation directed; and therefore the trial must proceed v. 298

- * The king's counsel, dr. Newton, opens the indictment and the evidence v. 299

- * The king's witnesses called to prove this piracy v. 300

- * Kidd's commission to make reprisals on the French, read v. 307

- * Kidd's commission for cruising against the pirates v. 308

- * Kidd's defence v. 309

- * Colonel Bajis, governor of West-Jersey, deposes, that Nicholas Churchill and James Howe, two of the prisoners, surrendered to him the 4th of June, 1699 v. 310

- * Lamley and Jenkins in their defence say, they were servants on board Kidd's ship v. 310

- * Loffe in his defence says, he was under Kidd's command v. 311

- * Parrot's defence v. 311

- * Barlicorn's defence v. 311

- * Mullins's defence v. 311

- * Kidd calls witnesses to his reputation v. 312

- * The lord chief baron Ward directs the jury v. 312

- * As to those three prisoners who appear to be servants, he tells the jury there must be a freedom of choice to determine one a pirate or a felon: but if a servant go voluntarily with a pirate, and accepts his share of the booty, he was to be accounted a pirate v. 314
- * That as to those who surrendered on the proclamation, they had not made out that they surrendered on the terms the proclamation required v. 315

- * As to their pretence, who would justify themselves as being under captain Kidd's command, that was no excuse for assisting him in such enterprizes as they knew to be unlawful; especially having been partakers of the spoil v. 315

- * Kidd, Churchill, Howe, Loffe, Parrot, Owens, and Mullins, convicted; Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn acquitted v. 315

- * A second indictment against Kidd and the other nine prisoners, for piratically robbing a Moorish ship in the Indian seas v. 316

- * A third indictment against them all, for piratically taking a Moorish ketch in the Indian seas v. 316

- * A fourth indictment against them all, for piratically taking another Moorish ship v. 316

- * The fifth indictment, for piratically robbing a Portuguese ship in the Indian seas v. 317

- * The trial of all the prisoners upon the second and third indictment begins v. 318

- * There being a new jury, the court direct the king's counsel to open the evidence again v. 318

- * The king's witnesses called v. 319

- * The prisoner's defence, as to these two indictments v. 325

- * Mr. justice Turton directs the jury v. 327

- * He tells them that Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn being servants, ought to be distinguished from the rest; for though they had their shares of the spoil, yet it was to be presumed they were to be accountable to their masters on board v. 328

- * Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn acquitted; the others convicted v. 330

- * The trial of the prisoners on the two last indictments v. 330

- * Churchill, Howe, and Owens retract their plea, and plead guilty v. 331

- * The other seven put themselves upon their trial v. 331

- * The king's witnesses called v. 331

- * Mr. justice Turton directs the jury v. 335

- * Lamley, Jenkins, and Barlicorn (the servants) are acquitted v. 337

- * Kidd and the other three are convicted on the last indictment v. 337

- * Robert Culliford, Nicholas Churchill, Darby Mullins, and John Eldridge, arraigned for piratically taking The Royal Merchant in the Indian seas, having pleaded not guilty (all but Eldridge,) afterwards retract their plea, and plead guilty v. 337

- * Eldridge convicted v. 337

- * Sentence passed on Kidd, Churchill, Howe, Loffe, Parrot, Owens, Mullins, Hickman, and Eldridge v. 338

KIDNAPPING.

- Selling criminals to the Moors or Spaniards abroad, a much more lawful method of making slaves than the practice of kidnapping Em. Pref. x.

- See vi. 834. ix. 386, 426

KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM Earl of.

- The whole proceedings in the house of peers, upon the indictment against him for high-treason, in levying war against his majesty, in July and August 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 387

- The lord high steward's speech to the prisoner ix. 595

- He pleads guilty ix. 595

- Lord Kilmarnock's speech on being asked by the lord high steward, why sentence of death should not pass upon him, according to law ix. 609

- Lord steward's speech previous to his passing sentence ix. 613

5 R

Account

Account of his behaviour after sentence, and on the day of execution x. 175. Ap.
 His conversation with lord Balmerino x. 179. Ap.
 Executed on Tower-bill x. 180. Ap.
 His petition to the king x. 181. Ap.
 His letter to his son x. 181. Ap.
 The paper left behind him x. 182. Ap.

* K I N G.

* He is king to all intents before his coronation, on the demise of his predecessor; and one may be attainted of treason committed against such a king i. 214
 * The people collectively or representatively have no coercive power over the person of the king ii. 305
 * One convicted of treason against a king out of possession of the throne, and out of the realm ii. 450, 453
 * The king cannot dispense with the laws iv. 369
 Kings have sat as judges in their courts of justice i. 553
 Reasons why the king cannot personally arrest a subject ii. 208, 212.
 See vii. 146.

The king does no legal act but by advice of his judges i. 638
 Had the protector Cromwell taken the name of king, no treason could have been committed against the king, de jure, out of possession ii. 453
 Execution of illegal act punishable, though by the king's command ii. 306
 The king cannot in person arrest any man, or be arrested ii. 306. See

HUSSEY. MARKHAM Sir JOHN.

The king cannot sit in judgment in his own person, and his possessions are subject to a trial by jury ii. 307

Endeavour to imprison the king, an overt-act of compassing his death ii. 323

What may be interpreted a design on the king's life iii. 722

By prerogative, tries his cause in what court he will, except prohibited by common law vii. 246

Whether a prisoner committed by his special command is bailable, or not. See DARNELL Sir THOMAS.

His power as to licensing trade. See MONOPOLIES.

His dispensing power. See HALES Sir EDWARD. DISPENSING POWER.

As the king is the fountain of honour, no honour can be taken from a peer, or transferred by him without the king's consent viii. 60

The kings of this realm have ever been entrusted with the care and approbation of the marriages of the royal family xi. 295

The approbation of the marriages of the king's grand-children, and also of the presumptive heir to the crown, in whatever degree related to the king, belongs to his majesty xi. 295

* K I N G C H A R L E S I.

* His trial in January, the 24th of his reign, Ann. Dom. 1648 i. 986

* The act for erecting the high court of justice i. 1009

* The first meeting of the commissioners i. 1010

* Proclamation made, by found of trumpet, of the holding the court, in order to the king's trial i. 1011

* Counsel appointed for the commonwealth i. 1011

* Bradshaw chosen president i. 1011

* Ordered to be styled lord president i. 1012

* Some matters ordered, preparatory to the trial i. 1012

* A search made under the painted chamber, to prevent their being blown up i. 1013

* Ordered, that the king be at sir Robert Cotton's house during the trial i. 1014

* A table appointed for the king, and another for the president i. 1014

* The sword of state carried before the president i. 1016

* Assistants to the president i. 1016

* The court sit, in order to the trial i. 1016

* The king is brought to the bar i. 1017

* The charge read i. 1018

* The king demands by what authority he was brought thither; and refuses to acknowledge their jurisdiction i. 1019

* He is remanded into custody i. 1019

* The king brought to the bar again, and offers to give reasons against their jurisdiction i. 1022

* Which they refuse to hear i. 1022

* What he designed to have spoke, if he had been permitted i. 1023

* He is interrupted i. 1023

* The king a third time brought to the bar i. 1024

* Refuses to own their authority i. 1026

* His contempt recorded a third time i. 1027

* The witnesses examined by a committee i. 1027

* The dean of Westminster's house furnished for the president i. 1028

* The witnesses acknowledge their depositions in court i. 1028

* The evidence against the king i. 1028

* Hostilities begun between the king and parliament i. 1029

* The king's standard set up at Nottingham i. 1029

* War proclaimed against the parliament, and the earl of Essex and lord Brook proclaimed traitors i. 1029

* Evidence of the king's being at Edge-hill i. 1029

* Evidence of the king's drawing up his army himself i. 1029

* Of the manner of erecting the king's standard at Nottingham i. 1029

* The standard taken, and retaken, at Edge-hill i. 1029

* Evidence of the king's rallying his forces, and making them stand, after they were routed i. 1029

* The king rides from regiment to regiment, at the fight at Newbury i. 1031

* Evidence of some transactions between the king and some of his pretended friends, during the treaty in the Isle of Wight i. 1032

* The independents betray the king's offers to them i. 1033

* Letters produced in evidence; but not published in the trial i. 1033

* Some resolutions previous to the sentence i. 1033

* The king brought to the bar again, to receive sentence i. 1035, 1037

* The president's speech before the sentence: he is interrupted by a lady i. 1038

* The king permitted to speak before the sentence i. 1038

* The king desires to be heard before the lords and commons i. 1038

* Downes, one of the members of the court, expresses some reluctance i. 1039

* The king is denied a hearing before the lords and commons i. 1039

* Conjures them to consider of his request once again; which they refuse i. 1040

* The president advises his majesty to be penitent, and prays for his soul i. 1040

* The sentence i. 1040

* The whole court rise up to express their assent i. 1040

* They refuse to hear him speak after sentence i. 1041

* Some indignity offered to his majesty by the soldiers i. 1041

* He is permitted to see his children i. 1041

* And bishop Juxon, who preaches before him i. 1041

* The warrant for the king's execution i. 1041

* Some dissenting ministers ordered to attend the king in his last moments; but he refuses to be troubled with them i. 1042

* His dying speech i. 1042

* And behaviour on the scaffold i. 1043

* The king is beheaded i. 1044

* The account of this trial, published by the authority of that time i. 986

* The president's speech to the king i. 986

* The king questions their authority i. 987

* The president's answer i. 987

* The second day's proceedings i. 987

* The president insists upon the authority of the commons of England i. 988

* The third day's proceedings i. 989

* The fourth day i. 991

* The king desires to be heard before the lords and commons i. 992

* Upon which the court withdraw i. 992

* And over-rule his motion i. 992

* The president's speech before sentence i. 992

* Mr. solicitor Cook's speech, which he intended to have delivered at the trial, if the king had pleaded i. 997

* He insists that England is a limited monarchy, where the king can take nothing from the subject without his consent i. 997

* That the king can only employ his power for the good of the people i. 998

* That all just power is derived from the people i. 998

* Conquest and a long descent can give no title i. 998

* That the oaths of allegiance and supremacy are not unconditionally binding to the subject i. 998

* Absolute monarchs permitted by providence, as the plague; but 'twas lawful for their subjects to break their yoke i. 998

* Charges the king as an accomplice with the duke of Buckingham in poisoning his father, king James i. 999

* With levying ship-money, under a pretence of necessity i. 999

* He holds that the king is answerable, as well as his ministers, for mal-administration i. 1000

* Charges the king as the author of the Scotch war i. 1000

* And the massacre in Ireland i. 1000

* And of a civil war in England i. 1000

* Holds, that the king has no right to command the militia i. 1001

* Or to dissolve parliaments; or to refuse his assent to bills i. 1001

* Denies that he has a power of making new lords, or new corporations i. 1001

* Or a power of pardoning offenders, or suspending executions i. 1001

* Or a power of raising or lowering the coin i. 1001

* Or of avoiding his grants i. 1001

* And says, that, if the king has these prerogatives, he is an absolute tyrant; and this the worst tyranny, as being established by law i. 1002

* But that indeed his prerogatives did not extend much beyond the privileges of the meanest subject i. 1002

* He holds that possession gives no title; right can never die i. 1002

* Two supreme powers, or two co-ordinate powers, cannot be in one nation i. 1002

* The people may take measures for their defence without the king, if he refuses to concur with them; and they are judges what tends to their advantage or destruction i. 1002

* That it was agreeable to the fundamental constitution of all kingdoms, that, where the king becomes a tyrant, he should die for it i. 1003

* The people his majesty's liege lords i. 1003

* Treason, to set up his standard against his dread sovereign the people i. 1003

* The king charged with betraying Rochel, and the French protestants i. 1006

* The king of great learning and dexterity in state affairs, and to be seduced by evil counsel i. 1007

* Says, the innocent blood of three kingdoms demanded justice against him i. 1007

* He is troubled for the king's eternal condition; and prays for the poor wretch i. 1008

* Is concerned that the cavaliers behave themselves so bravely at their execution i. 1008

* Says, God had afforded him great assistance in the management of this prosecution against his majesty i. 1008

* That the vices of all tyrants centered in his majesty i. 1008

* And

- And therefore he demands their justice i. 1008
- That other kings might hear, and fear, &c. i. 1009
- KING EDWARD iv. 562. See CHARNOCK, & al.

PORTER Captain GEORGE.

KING, Sir PETER,

His argument in maintenance of the second article in the impeachment against Henry Sacheverel, D. D. exhibited by the house of commons v. 683

His argument, by way of reply, to the defence set up by the doctor's counsel, to the charge contained in the second article v. 807

His parliamentary speech relative to Ashby and White viii. 121

KING, Sir PETER, Lord Chief Justice C. B.

His directions to the jury on the trial of Arundel Coke, esq. counsellor at law, indicted at Suffolk assizes, as accessory in maiming on stat. 22 and 23 Car. II. chap. I. vi. 220. See vi. 228

His opinion on stat. 6 Ann. chap. 7. ix. 708

Sums up the evidence on Matthews's trial for treason ix. 708

His argument in the Prince's case xi. 295, 296, 300

His opinion xi. 300, 302. See MACCLESFIELD Earl.

KING's - BENCH.

This court may examine parliamentary matters ii. 617

What things concerning parliament the court of King's-Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437

If error be committed in the proceedings on the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high steward, they shall be reversed by error in this court vii. 248

This court adjourns a case on a false return of a member of parliament into the house of commons propter difficultatem viii. 98

Thomas Wilbraham petitioned against the justices of the King's-Bench, that they had not done according to law and reason; which petition being delivered to the king and council, Wilbraham was indicted, convicted, fined, and ransomed in B. R. vii. 108, 109

Plea to the jurisdiction of the court of King's-Bench, that the party stood impeached by the commons for the same treason iii. 228, 229

KING's COUNSEL.

Lord chancellor Ellesmere's advice to the king's counsel how to demean themselves on capital prosecutions i. 351

The offices of attorney and solicitor-general have been rocks upon which many aspiring lawyers have made shipwreck of their virtue and human nature xi. 273

Their conduct on lord Ruffe's trial censured iv. 169

James the second misled by his counsel iv. 172

King's counsel generally act as parties iv. 173

King's counsel cajoled grand jury in private in Fitzharris's case iv. 173

King's counsel whispering with judge indecent and unjust iv. 176

King's counsel use means, and court permit them, to suppress truth, and to disable prisoner from making his innocence appear iv. 176

They urge things as evidence of the crimes whereof prisoner is accused, which by law are not evidence iv. 177

They insinuate facts as evidence, not proved, and wrest as evidence of facts, what in sense is not so iv. 177

They are always to have the last word iii. 816. iv. 40, 164. ix. 742

King's counsel may privately manage the evidence to the grand inquest, in order to find bill of indictment ii. 302

King's counsel who have been impeached, banished, or executed.

Blake John

Holt John

Herbert sir Edward

Lockton John

A king's counsel always opens proceedings on the trials of peers, except on impeachments from the commons, [See IMPEACHMENTS] as appears from the following precedents:

Serjeant Christopher Yelverton opened the indictment on the trials of the earls of Essex and Southampton i. 198

The attorney-general Bacon on counfels of Somerfet's i. 349

And on the earl's i. 552

Sir Thomas Crew on lord Audley's i. 390

John Glynn, the king's eldest serjeant, opened the indictment against lord Morley vii. 424

Sir William Dolben, king's serjeant, and recorder of London, opened the indictment on the trial of the earl of Pembroke ii. 643

Serjeant Maynard opened the indictment on lord Cornwallis's trial ii. 725

And on lord Stafford's, though on an impeachment from the commons iii. 104

Sir Thomas Jenner, recorder of London, opened the indictment against lord Delamere iv. 216

Serjeant Thompson opened the indictment on lord Mobun's trial v. 513

Serjeant Wright opened the indictment on the earl of Warwick's trial v. 143

Spencer Cowper opened the indictment on lord Mobun's trial v. 181

Mr. serjeant Skinner, king's serjeant, opened the indictment on lord Balmerino's trial ix. 597

Mr. Perrot opened the indictment against earl Ferrers x. 482

Mr. Cornwall opened the indictment against lord Byron x. 520

No opening counsel on the trial of the duchess of Kingston. See

COUNSEL. JUDGES.

KINGSTON, ELIZABETH Duchess Dowager of,

Her trial for bigamy in full parliament, April 1776, 16 Geo. III. xi. 198

Henry earl Bathurst, chancellor, lord high steward xi. 198

His grace's procession xi. 198

His commission xi. 198

Cartorari's and returns xi. 199

Caption of the indictment xi. 200

His grace's speech to the prisoner xi. 200

His grace's address to the lords xi. 200

See is arraigned, and pleads not guilty in an unusual manner xi. 201

Her grace offers the sentence of the Ecclesiastical Court, annulling her former marriage in bar of the prosecution xi. 201

The attorney-general (Edward Thurlow, esq.) objects to the reading it xi. 201

His reasons xi. 201

Mr. Wallace answers the objections xi. 201

Proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court read xi. 202

Mr. Wallace proceeds to shew them conclusive in bar of prosecution xi. 205

Mr. Mansfield on same side xi. 208

Doctor Calvert on same side xi. 211

Doctor Wynne on same side xi. 214

Mr. attorney-general proceeds to shew, that the ecclesiastical proceedings are not conclusive xi. 217

Mr. solicitor-general's (Alexander Wedderburne) his argument on the same side xi. 221

Mr. Dunning, his argument on the same side xi. 224

Doctor Harris, his argument on the same side xi. 227

Mr. Wallace's reply xi. 230

Doctor Calvert's argument on same side xi. 235

All the judges are unanimously of opinion, that such proceedings are not conclusive xi. 262

Mr. attorney-general's speech on stating the charge xi. 237

Marriage proved, and birth of a child xi. 239

Witness objects to disclosing any thing communicated to him in confidential trust in his profession xi. 243

Another witness, a peer, makes a like objection xi. 246

Not permitted to withdraw, though at the desire of the party's counsel against whom he was produced xi. 246

House adjourned xi. 247

Deposition of witness read to him at his request xi. 247

Her grace's speech in her defence xi. 250

Says the court is well represented by logic xi. 250

Commends Blackstone's commentaries xi. 251

Cites lord chief justice Hale xi. 251

Observes that she has rested on the seat where the poor blind Belisarius is said to have asked charity of every passenger, after having conquered the Goths, Vandals, Africans, and Persians xi. 252

Lord Camden's argument in respect of the admissibility of the examination of a witness absent by indisposition xi. 252, 253

Lord Mansfield's argument in respect of the obligation of a solicitor being examined against his client xi. 252

Evidence on the defence xi. 252

The solicitor-general's reply xi. 255

The prisoner is found guilty by all the lords except his grace of Newcastle, who found her guilty erroneously, but not intentionally xi. 256

Her grace prays the benefit of her peerage xi. 256

Mr. attorney-general makes a long argument in opposition thereto xi. 256

Answered by Mr. Wallace xi. 258

And by Mr. Mansfield xi. 258

Mr. attorney-general's reply xi. 259

The judges determine that a peeress is intitled to the privilege of peerage in respect to clergy xi. 264

Her grace is allowed the benefit of the statute, and discharged with an admonition from the lord high steward xi. 260

KINNERSLEY, THOMAS, Clerk. See HALES WILLIAM.

KINLOCK, ALEXANDER and CHARLES,

Proceedings against them at St. Margaret's-Hill, for treason, in Oct. Nov. and Dec. 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 568

Pleaded not guilty; withdraw their plea, and plead to the jurisdiction of the court ix. 568

Attorney-general demurs to it ix. 569

Their counsel argue their case ix. 569

Attorney-general's answer ix. 569

Opinion of the court ix. 570

Mr. Jodrell argues in behalf of the Kinlocks ix. 570

Counsel for the crown (Mr. attorney and Mr. solicitor-general, and Sir John Strange) answer the same ix. 571

Judges deliver their opinion seriatim ix. 571-2, &c.

Judgment given, as in cases of high-treason ix. 572

Mr. justice Foster's argument in this case ix. 572

Prisoner pardoned, on condition of going abroad ix. 575

KNEVEY, sir EDMUND, Knight,

His trial at Greenwich, for striking a person within the king's palace there, June 10, 1541, 33 Hen. VIII. xi. 16

Arraignment xi. 16

Found guilty xi. 16

Judgment to lose his right hand, &c. xi. 16

Persons employed in the execution xi. 16

The manner in which Sir Edmund obtained a pardon of his offence xi. 16

* KIRKBY, Colonel RICHARD,

* John Constable, Cooper Wade, Samuel Vincent, and Christopher Fogg, sea-captains, their trial for cowardice, at a court-martial held on board the Breda, in Port-Royal harbour in Jamaica, in America, the 8th, 9th, 10th, and 12th days of October, 1702, 1 Anne v. 445

* The charge and evidence against Kirkby v. 445

* He is convicted, and sentenced to be shot v. 447

* Captain Constable convicted of breach of orders, &c. and sentenced to be cashiered v. 448

* Captain Wade convicted of cowardice, and sentenced to be shot v. 448

* Captain Vincent and captain Fogg tried for signing a paper against fighting, and sentenced to be suspended v. 448

* KITCHEN, GEORGE v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

* KNIGHTLEY, ALEXANDER,

* His trial for high-treason, April 30, 1696, 8 Will. III. iv. 777

* The indictment removed by cartiorari into the King's-Bench iv. 777

* The

- * The overt-acts laid in the indictment, the consulting and agreeing to assassinate his majesty, and providing arms, &c. for that purpose iv. 778
- * And going to view the ground where the assassination was intended iv. 778
- * A venire issued for the jury, as in civil causes; and fifteen days between the teste and return iv. 778
- * The prisoner retracts his plea of not guilty, and pleads guilty iv. 779
- * Mr. attorney-general demands judgment the same day iv. 779
- * Which is denied by the court as irregular iv. 779
- * A censure of Stayley's case iv. 779
- * Lord chief justice Holt's speech before judgment iv. 779
- * The prisoner receives sentence the last day of the term iv. 780.

See x. 75. Ap.

K N I G H T.

Rafe, serjeant at law, pleaded, that he was a serjeant at common law, and not bound to be a knight, but he was forced to it i. 547

K N I G H T of the G A R T E R.

Ceremony of degrading him from that order xi. 6

K N I G H T L E Y, Sir R I C H A R D.

Arraigned in the Star-chamber, for maintaining seditious persons, books, and libels, 31 Eliz. 1589 vii. 29

His answer vii. 30

Mr. Hales's answer vii. 31

Mr. Wickstone and his wife, their answer vii. 31

Mr. Knightley fined 2000*l.* Mr. Hales 1000 marks, Mr. Wickstone 500 marks, Mrs. Wickstone 1000*l.* and imprisonment during pleasure vii. 32

K N O W L E R, Mr.

Opens information against Elles on quo warranto x. 128. Ap.

K N O W L E S, C H A R L E S, Esq.

Indictment found against him for the murder of Philip Lawson, at Hicks's-Hall, by the name of Charles Knowles, Esq. viii. 50

Removed by certiorari into the King's-Bench viii. 50

Defendant pleads misnomer in abatement, that he is earl of Banbury, and sets forth the letters patents, and the descents to himself viii. 51

The attorney-general replies, that the lords, upon his petition to be tried by his peers, had adjudged, he had no title to the earldom viii. 51

Demurrer, and joinder in demurrer viii. 51

Attorney-general, by order of the house of lords, delivers in an account of the proceedings in the King's-Bench against him viii. 52

All the judges ordered to attend the house, and the lords to be summoned viii. 53

Record of the King's-Bench brought in viii. 53

He petitions his majesty for a writ of summons, or to recommend his case to the examination of the lords viii. 54

His majesty refers his petition to the house viii. 54

Representation to his majesty, that five years before, on a former petition to the house, they had adjudged he had no title to the earldom, and dismissed his petition viii. 54

Lord chief justice, and mr. justice Eyre, heard viii. 55

Proceedings in the house relating to the title of earl of Banbury, before March 1693 viii. 55

The petition of Nicholas earl of Banbury, 1661, referred to a committee viii. 55

Report, that the house of peers should advise the king to send him a writ to come to parliament viii. 56

Act read the first time, declaring Nicholas earl of Banbury illegitimate viii. 56

Petitions the house for a writ of summons viii. 57

Question put, if all the judges should be heard in this case; resolved in the negative viii. 57

Resolved, that the petitioner hath no right to the earldom of Banbury viii. 58

The arguments of lord chief justice Holt, and judge Powell viii. 58

* K N O X, T H O M A S, and J O H N L A N E,

* Their trial for a misdemeanour, at the King's-Bench bar, Nov. 25, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 970. See iii. 220. vii. 483

* The indictment, for endeavouring to defame Oates and Bedloe, the king's witnesses; and thereby to stifle and obstruct the discovery of the popish plot ii. 970

* Evidence that Lane said he was seduced by Knox to betray his master Tissot Oates ii. 975

* Evidence that the lady Powis supported Knox with money ii. 985

* Knox's information read against him ii. 986

* The defence made by mr. Knox's counsel ii. 987

* That Knox was not in the contrivance; but that the information was brought him by Lane and Osborne ii. 987

* The defence made by mr. Holt, of counsel with Lane ii. 990

* The defendants convicted ii. 992

* Their sentence ii. 992

L.

L A C Y, J O H N,

Of counsel for Hales, for forgery ix. 73, 82.

States the issue to be tried in quo warranto cause against Elles x. 131. Ap.

See id. 135. Ap.

* LAKE, Doctor J O H N, Bishop of Chichester, iv. 304

L A L O R, R O B E R T,

Of what quality and credit he was xi. 69

His apprehension and first examination xi. 69

His first indictment and conviction xi. 69

His second examination xi. 69

His confession or acknowledgment xi. 69

The indictment of Lalor upon Stat. 16 Rich. II. chap. 5. xi. 69

The evidence against Lalor xi. 74

Lalor's confession publicly read xi. 74

The jury find him guilty xi. 75

Judgment of præsumptio xi. 75

* L A M L E Y, R O B E R T v. 287. See KIDD, & al. xi. 75

L A N E, J A N E, Mrs.

Who protected and conducted king Charles the second, after the battle of Worcester, to often mentioned in history, was married to sir Clement Fisher, of Packington, near the city of Canterbury x. 64. Ap.

* L A N E, J O H N ii. 970. See KNOX.

L A N E, R I C H A R D,

His speech for earl Stafford as to points of law i. 759

Extract from his book of reports xi. 30

* L A N G H O R N E, R I C H A R D, Esq.

* His trial at the Old-Bailey, for high-treason, June 14, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 878

* The indictment ii. 878

* The overt-acts, writing letters to solicit aid from the pope, &c. and sending them ii. 879

* Receiving commissions for civil and military officers from Rome, and distributing them ii. 879

* Consenting to the Jesuits conspiracy to kill the king, and procuring 600*l.* of the Benedictine monks for that purpose ii. 879

* And abetting Coleman's conspiracy iv. 879

* Evidence of the plot in general iv. 881

* Hear-say evidence admitted iv. 881. See vi. 414

* Oates's evidence of some letters mr. Langborne sent to St. Omers iv. 882

* Of his acquainting him with what passed at the consult, and his praying for the success of it iv. 882

* Of the commissions received from Rome iv. 883

* Bedloe complains that a papist took notes in court iv. 887

* Oates deposes, 800,000 crowns were raised at Rome for carrying on the popish plot, and mr. Langborne had notice of its being paid at Paris iv. 890

* Mr. Langborne objects, that an approver being pardoned, could not be a witness against the appellee; and the same reason holds as to another accomplice in the crime iv. 891

* The court over-rule the objection; and add, that the witnesses being maintained by the government is no objection to their testimony iv. 891

* Oates complains to the court, that papists came into court with their swords on iv. 892

* The prisoner produces many witnesses to prove Oates was at St. Omers when he pretended to be here at the consult iv. 892

* The prisoner is not admitted to prove what the witnesses swore against him at another trial iv. 899

* The witnesses who appear for the prisoner abused by the mob iv. 899

* The chief justice admits that a witness may be confronted by another, to prove what the witness swore at another trial relating to the prisoner was false iv. 900

* Oates acknowledges he conceals part of his evidence, though sworn to speak the whole truth ii. 901

* Bedloe takes the liberty of concealing part of his evidence too ii. 902

* The king's counsel call witnesses to prove Oates in London at the consult ii. 902

* The prisoner calls other witnesses to contradict them ii. 905

* Mr. Langborne's observations on the evidence ii. 909

* The chief justice's directions to the jury ii. 906

* He tells them that papists were not to be believed in their common cause ii. 907

* Charges them with most pernicious principles, and inveighs against them ii. 907

* His lordship has strong apprehensions of the plot ii. 908

* Speaks of a letter that was found, which he says was an undeniable evidence of the plot ii. 909

* The prisoner shews that was no evidence at all of it ii. 909

* The prisoner convicted; and the recorder commends the verdict ii. 910

* The five Jesuits are brought to the bar again; and mr. recorder makes a speech ii. 910

* He pronounces sentence on mr. Langborne and the five Jesuits ii. 911

* The dying speeches of Langborne, Whitebread, Harcourt, Fenwick, Gavan and Turner ii. 912, &c.

L A R C E N Y.

Essential to larceny and robbery, that the goods be taken against the will of the owner x. 443

If the owner takes his own goods from his bailee animo furandi, he will be guilty of larceny x. 443

L A T I M E R, H U G H,

Some passages out of his sermon touching lord Sudley's death vii. 10

* L A T I M E R, R I C H A R D ii. 585. See MESSINGER, & al.

* LAUD, WILLIAM, Lord Archbishop of CANTERBURY, His speech in the Star-chamber against William Prynne and others, for several libels i. 486

His extreme inveteracy towards Prynne i. 497. n.

* His trial, March 12, 1643, 19 Car. I. i. 824. See vi. 408

* Mr. Harbottle Grimstone's speech against him in the house of commons i. 824

* His grace impeached of high-treason generally i. 825

* He is committed to the black rod i. 825

* Mr. Pym's speech at delivering the articles i. 826

* His grace's speech upon bringing up the articles i. 828

* Fourteen general articles exhibited against his grace i. 828

* He is committed to the Tower i. 839

* Two ordinances, depriving him, before his trial, of the power of disposing of prisoners i. 830

* Ten

I N D E X.

* Ten additional articles exhibited against him, three years after his commitment	i. 831
* Counsel and a solicitor allowed his grace	i. 833
* He petitions, that they would distinguish between what was treason and what was misdemeanour	i. 834
* But to no effect	i. 834
* His grace's answer	i. 835
* The trial appointed the 16th day of January	i. 836
* No answer being put in to the first articles, the trial is put off	i. 836
* Mr. Maynard's speech on that occasion	i. 837
* His grace's answer to the first and further articles	i. 837
* He receives notice of trial again	i. 838
* The names of the managers for the house of commons	i. 838
* The method observed at the trial	i. 838
* The trial begins	i. 839
* Serjeant Wilde's speech at opening the charge	i. 840
* His grace replies to serjeant Wilde	i. 842
* His grace is charged with advising the king to use extraordinary ways for a supply	i. 846
* And saying the king might use his power	i. 846
* And asserting the legality of ship-money, &c.	i. 847
* Asserting proclamations to be of equal force with a statute	i. 848
* Advancing the prerogative above the law	i. 849
* Charged with saying, he hoped to see the canons and the king's prerogative equal to an act of parliament	i. 849
* The ordinaries power over school-masters	i. 849
* Where a canon will not be of force against a custom	i. 849
* Charged with preferring dr. Manwaring	i. 850
* Refusing to consecrate one elected bishop, a præmunire	i. 850
* Charged with granting subsidies in the convocation	i. 851
* The clergy had a power of granting their own subsidies	i. 851
* Charged with pulling down the houses about St. Paul's, to repair the church	i. 852
* Whether it be lawful to build on consecrated ground?	i. 853
* Charged with compelling the goldsmiths to inhabit either in Cherchside or Lombard-street	i. 853
* The oath ex officio used in the High Commission Court	i. 855
* Charged with being the cause of the censure of Burton, Prynne, and Bastwick	i. 856
* With administering the sacrament at the rails	i. 860
* Charge about placing the communion-table	i. 861
* Charged with prosecuting Bagshaw of the Temple , for saying bishops ought not to meddle in civil affairs	i. 864
* With countenancing wakes, &c.	i. 864
* With threatening those who brought prohibitions	i. 865
* With accepting bribes	i. 867
* His grace brought to the house, and remanded without any thing done; complains of the charge he is put to	i. 870
* Charged with making canons, after the dissolution of the parliament	i. 870
* The convocation sit, after the dissolution of the parliament	i. 870
* The lords did not permit his grace to shew that the canons were agreeable to law	i. 871
* Charged with assuming papal power	i. 871
* The titles given him by the university of Oxford	i. 871
* The title of Holiness given to primitive bishops	i. 871
* Charged that he would exempt the clergy from the civil power	i. 872
* Charged with making ecclesiastical persons justices of the peace, &c.	i. 873
* Whether a clergyman shall be taxed to contribute, in case of a robbery?	i. 874
* Justices of peace called before the High Commission for holding their sessions in the church-yard	i. 875
* Charged with a design of restoring impropriations to the church	i. 877
* With adding several exorbitant clauses to the High Commission	i. 878
* His grace petitions for an allowance out of his estate; but is denied	i. 879
* Charged with altering the statutes of the university of Oxford	i. 880
* With censuring Bastwick for writing against bishops	i. 882
* Bishops derive their power in temporals from the prince, but in matters purely spiritual from Christ	i. 883
* But may not exercise their spiritual power without leave of the prince	i. 883
* Charged with altering the communion-table, and putting up painted glass in his chapel	i. 883
* Bowing towards the altar	i. 884
* Organs, candlesticks, &c.	i. 884
* Consecrating the communion-plate	i. 885
* His Bible with the five wounds of our Saviour	i. 885
* Prayers at canonical hours	i. 885
* Pictures in his gallery	i. 885
* A piece of tapestry, with a crucifix wrought in it, hung up for an altar-piece	i. 886
* His grace is allowed 200l. out of his rents	i. 887
* The pictures in the windows of Lambeth-chapel	i. 887
* The ceremonies at the coronation charged with superstition	i. 887
* Charged with altering the coronation oath	i. 887
* The virgin Mary's picture at St. Mary's at Oxford	i. 890
* Dr. Brown's kneeling before the altar	i. 893
* The Stater and the king of Sweden prayed for before his majesty	i. 895
* Sherfield censured for defacing a church-window	i. 895
* A Bible printed with pictures	i. 895
* His grace is charged with expunging passages against popery out of books	i. 896
* Charged with consecrating churches	i. 897
* With publishing the Book of Sports	i. 899

* The people allowed their recreations at Geneva on Sundays	i. 899
* Ministers punished for not reading the Book of Sports	i. 899
* Charged with introducing arbitrary power	i. 901
* Causing ministers to leave their cures, and fly beyond sea, &c.	i. 901
* Stopping books at the press, and expunging passages out of them	i. 902
* Charged with altering prayers on the 5th of November	i. 906
* Lectures	i. 906
* Charged with maintaining transubstantiation	i. 908
* With licensing Papist and Arminian books	i. 909
* That his chaplains preached Arminian doctrine	i. 910
* A Bible with a papist table	i. 910
* His grace's books given to Hugh Peters	i. 910
* Charged with preferring only such as were papistly affected	i. 910
* That he hindered the buying in impropriations	i. 913
* Endeavouring to create a division between the church of England and the reformed churches	i. 914
* His grace receives abusive language at his trial	i. 915
* Episcopacy jure divino	i. 915
* Charged with projecting to reconcile the church of England to the church of Rome	i. 916
* And conversing with Jesuits and harbouring them	i. 916
* Praying for the queen and prince	i. 918, 919
* A cardinal's cap offered him	i. 921
* That he denied the pope to be Antichrist	i. 922
* And said Rome was a true church, &c.	i. 922
* The homilies don't make the pope to be Antichrist	i. 922
* That he relieved priests	i. 924
* Would not give the papists ill language	i. 926
* Papist books	i. 926
* Charged with endeavouring to subvert the rights of parliament	i. 927
* Hopes and fears concerning a parliament	i. 929
* Answer to the remonstrance	i. 930
* Earl of Strafford procures the house of commons in Ireland to be chosen half papists and half protestants	i. 931
* His grace finds his picture fallen on the face	i. 932
* His pretended dream	i. 932
* Is allowed the benefit of the act of oblivion, as to the Scotch affairs	i. 933
* His grace's diary printed in folio , and given to each lord	i. 933
* His recapitulation	i. 933
* The papers he had prepared for his defence taken from him, and all things necessary for his defence denied him	i. 933
* The happy state of the kingdom while his grace was concerned in the administration	i. 934
* His best actions made the foundation of a charge of high-treason	i. 934
* Charged with the acts of the respective courts wherein he sat	i. 934
* The church is to determine what is true doctrine, and not the parliament	i. 935
* If the actions themselves are not treason, the result of them cannot be treason	i. 937
* Mr. Browne sums up the evidence, and makes his observations on it for the commons	i. 937
* His grace's counsel shew that nothing charged in the articles amounts to high-treason	i. 938
* The uncertainty what was treason at common law	i. 938
* The statute of 25 Edw. III. to be taken strictly	i. 939
* The uncertainty of the word endeavour	i. 940
* The words to go about, or attempt to do a thing , adjudged void in a conveyance for the uncertainty	i. 940
* Cardinal Wolsey adjudged guilty only of a præmunire , for endeavouring to subvert the laws	i. 941
* His grace's counsel shew that none of the particulars contained in the articles are treason	i. 941
* The number of misdemeanours cannot alter their nature	i. 942
* The mob petition the parliament for justice upon his grace, at the instigation of their preachers	i. 942
* The house of commons command his grace to be brought before them	i. 942
* Mr. Browne delivers a summary of the charge against him there	i. 943
* His grace is admitted to hear it	i. 943
* His grace seems to object to his accusers becoming his judges, and that without hearing the evidence against him	i. 943
* Mr. Browne replies	i. 947
* The house of commons pass his attainder	i. 947
* The commons threaten the lords, to induce them to pass the ordinance for his attainder	i. 947
* The lords agree as to the fact; but the judges declare there was no treason in the articles	i. 947
* The lords of opinion there was no treason in them	i. 947
* Christmas-day enjoined to be kept as a fast	i. 947
* The lords pass the ordinance of attainder	i. 948
* He has a pardon from the king; which is rejected	i. 948
* Allowed but one chaplain to attend him; and he in the presence of a presbyterian teacher	i. 948
* His dying speech on the scaffold	i. 948
* His discourse with the standers-by	i. 949
* He is beheaded	i. 949

L A W S.

Fact must be established, not merely supposed by prisoner, before his counsel will be admitted to argue the law upon it
 Law implies a malicious and seditious intent, where one publishes a libel
 Common law may be antiquated, though statute law cannot Vote of commons cannot alter the law

I N D E X.

- How the penal laws came to be put in execution in king Charles the second's reign ii. 678
- The king cannot dispense with the laws iv. 369
- This collection of trials useful to the study of the law Em. Pref. i.
- Observations on the excellency of the English laws Em. Pref. iii.
- Observations on law proceedings being in Latin Em. Pref. vii.
- Observations on the voluminousness of the laws Em. Pref. xv.
- Instances of their being hard in several cases, even in the opinion of lord chief justice Jefferies iii. 1052
- The laws of England are in a great measure grounded upon immemorial customs and usages Em. Pref. i.
- Saving lives of the subject if contrary to law, the party must be indemnified by parliament xi. 282, 283
- Lord Bacon's encomium on the laws of England vi. 407
- Lord Bacon says, there is no worse torture than the torture of laws x. 56. n.
- If the legality of an action is not to be found in the books, the act must be illegal xi. 321
- ## L A W Y E R S.
- They argue one way when counsel, and another when judges i. 638, 645
- Lawyers gave their aid to the attempts made by the crown against the rights of parliament xi. 29
- To the great disgrace of the profession of the law, some of the brightest ornaments thereof [Bacon, Mr. Francis, and Davis, Mr. John] gave their aid to attempts against the rights of parliament xi. 29
- * L A Y E R, C H R I S T O P H E R, Esquire,
- * His trial at the King's-Bench bar for high-treason, 21 November, 1722, of George I. vi. 229
- * The indictment, for conspiring the death of the king, and to raise a rebellion in the county of Essex vi. 229
- * His counsel move that his fetters be taken off during his arraignment, and alledge Cranburne's case vi. 231
- * Which is refused by the court vi. 232
- * Four exceptions to the indictment vi. 232
- * All over-ruled vi. 237
- * His plea of misnomer in abatement vi. 237
- * Mr. attorney-general demurs to it vi. 238
- * The prisoner's counsel pray time to consider of it vi. 238
- * Which being over-ruled, after a long debate, he withdraws his plea, and pleads not guilty vi. 242
- * The trial begins vi. 244
- * The pannel called over in the presence of the prisoner vi. 246
- * Moved, that Mr. attorney might challenge first; but over-ruled vi. 247
- * Mr. Wearg opens the indictment vi. 249
- * Mr. serjeant Pengelly the evidence vi. 249
- * Is seconded by Mr. Robert Raymond, attorney-general vi. 254
- * Mr. Lynch called vi. 257
- * The prisoner's counsel move to examine him on a voyer dire, whether he has a pardon, or other reward, for giving his evidence vi. 257
- * Which is denied by the court, it not being sufficient to take off his testimony, but only to lessen his credit vi. 259
- * The question asked him after he had given his evidence, and denied by him vi. 265
- * His evidence that the prisoner engaged him in the design of the insurrection vi. 260
- * And gave him money to encourage him vi. 262
- * That he carried him to view lord Cadogan's house, in order to contrive how to seize him vi. 262
- * That he rode with him into Essex, and there read to him a declaration, exciting the nation to revolt vi. 263
- * The witness cross-examined vi. 265
- * Matthew Plunkett's evidence vi. 266
- * He swears that the prisoner acquainted him with the design, and engaged him to corrupt the serjeants and common soldiers vi. 267
- * And gave him money to encourage him vi. 268
- * He is cross-examined by the prisoner and his counsel vi. 269
- * Evidence of two messengers, of the finding papers in Mrs. Mason's lodging vi. 270
- * Of Mrs. Mason, that they were delivered to her by the prisoner vi. 272
- * Evidence that the scheme was written in the prisoner's hand vi. 275
- * And owned by him before the council vi. 276
- * The prisoner's counsel object to its being read vi. 276
- * The scheme ordered to be read; and read accordingly vi. 280
- * Receipts for money, under the Pretender's hand, read vi. 282
- * Evidence of his being examined before the lords of the council vi. 283.
- See viii. 571.
- * Several other letters and papers read vi. 284, &c.
- * Evidence offered to prove the prisoner's corresponding with the Pretender vi. 286
- * Which is objected to by his counsel, as being a species of treason not laid in the indictment vi. 286
- * Held, that it may be given to corroborate the evidence already given; but not to prove a new overt-act vi. 287
- * Objected for the prisoner, that the examination ought to be produced, and not parole-evidence given of it vi. 287
- * Which is over-ruled vi. 288
- * Mr. Stanyan gives an account of what he said before the council vi. 288
- * That the prisoner owned he had two conferences with the Pretender vi. 287, 289
- * Mr. Delafaye's evidence to the same purpose vi. 290
- * Evidence of arms being found in the prisoner's house vi. 290
- * Of his escaping from the messenger's custody vi. 291
- * The prisoner's defence by his counsel vi. 292
- * The prisoner's counsel argue, that the proof in Essex does not amount to an overt-act of treason vi. 292
- * Are directed to make all their defence at once vi. 295
- * Mr. Hungerford's speech for the prisoner vi. 295
- * Mr. Ketelbey's speech on the same side vi. 296
- * Witnesses called to impeach Lynch's credit vi. 297
- * Witnesses against Plunkett vi. 300
- * Against Mason vi. 302
- * The prisoner calls witnesses to give an account how the arms came to be found in his house vi. 304
- * And to prove that the scheme was not of his hand-writing vi. 304
- * He concludes his defence vi. 305
- * Sir Philip Yorke, solicitor-general, his reply vi. 305
- * He maintains the proof of an overt-act in Essex vi. 314
- * Witnesses called for the king to Mr. Lynch's credit vi. 317
- * Lord chief justice Pratt's directions to the jury vi. 318
- * The prisoner convicted vi. 322
- * He is called to sentence vi. 323
- * His counsel move that the venire be read vi. 323
- * Which is over-ruled vi. 325
- * Objected as an error, that the venire was made returnable the 19th, and the trial was not till the 21st of November vi. 325
- * Which is ruled to be according to the course of the court vi. 328
- * Objected as a fault in the indictment, that the words of the declaration were not set forth vi. 328
- * Mr. Hungerford reprimanded vi. 329
- * Adjudged by the court, that if one overt-act holds, the indictment is good vi. 329
- * The resolution of all the judges in Dr. Sacheverel's case, offered by the prisoner's counsel to maintain their objection vi. 330
- * This resolution censured as erroneous and against law vi. 331
- * And the prisoner's objection over-ruled vi. 331
- * The prisoner receives sentence vi. 332
- * His execution vi. 332
- L A Y T O N, Sir THOMAS.* See FOWLES Sir DAVID.
- L E A C H, B E N J A M I N,*
- Proceeded against at the Old Bailey, for a contempt of the court, 14 October, 1682, 33 Car. II. x. 31
- The indictment against him x. 31
- Offered a plea signed by counsel, that the jurors who found the indictment were not legally impanelled x. 32
- Court would not receive the plea x. 32
- Were of opinion it was a frivolous plea x. 33
- Defendant refused to plead any other plea, and was fined twenty marks, and committed to Newgate till he paid it x. 33
- L E A C H, D R Y D E N,*
- Proceedings on error in an action of false imprisonment, by him, against John Money, James Watson, and Robert Blackmore, three of the king's messengers, B. R. E. term, 5 Geo. III. and M. term, 6 Geo. III. 1765 xi. 307
- Bill of exceptions xi. 307
- Ceremony of the chief justice of C. P. acknowledging his seal thereto xi. 307
- Cause of action xi. 307
- Occasion of the bill of exceptions xi. 308
- Effect of the assignment of errors upon the bill of exceptions xi. 308
- Mr. solicitor-general De Grey*, his argument for the plaintiffs in error xi. 309
- Mr. Dunning's* argument contra for Leach, the plaintiff below xi. 310
- Lord chief justice Mansfield, his declaration previous to giving judgment xi. 311, 312
- The declaration of Wilmut, Tates, and Aston, the other three judges xi. 312
- The judgment affirmed xi. 312
- L E C H M E R E, N I C H O L A S,*
- Shews the nature and tendency of the facts doctor Henry Sacheverel is charged with, on the impeachment for preaching seditiously v. 651
- His argument in maintenance of the fourth article v. 708
- His animadversions on some expressions let fall by the doctor's counsel v. 802
- His speech in the house of commons, upon his motion for impeaching earl Derwentwater, lord Widdrington, earl Nithsdale, earl Carnwarth, viscount Kenmure, and lord Nairn, for treason vi. 1
- Characterizes the great duke of Mariborough vi. 1
- Ordered into custody, for pleading on return of habeas corpus, in a parliamentary commitment viii. 139
- Urges that the Aylesbury-men were bailable, and objects to return viii. 158
- Held, that the asserting the utter illegality of resistance on any pretence whatsoever, condemns the foundation on which our government stands v. 651
- That the subjects had not only a power and right in themselves to make that resistance at the Revolution; but lay under an indispensable obligation of doing it v. 651, 652. See RESISTANCE.
- L E C H M E R E, N I C H O L A S,* Attorney-General,
- His speech against Matthews for treason ix. 684
- His reply ix. 704
- L E E, Captain THOMAS,*
- For high-treason, 1600 vii. 44
- The indictment, for endeavouring to persuade Sir Robert Cross to lay hands on the queen, and thereby deliver the earls of Essex and Saundershampton vii. 144
- Sir Robert Cross's* evidence vii. 45
- Poyne's* evidence read, of captain Lee's pressing up to the privy chamber door vii. 45
- Found guilty, and executed vii. 47
- L E E, W I L L I A M,*
- Of counsel against Carbet, on an appeal for murder ix. 153, 154
- L E E, Sir WILLIAM,* Lord Chief Justice,
- His opinion as to plea of being forced into rebellion ix. 567
- His prudent conduct, on Mr. attorney-general Ryder wishing to put leading ing questions to a jury, after they had acquitted a bookseller prosecuted for publishing a libel x. 208. Ap.

* LEEDS, THOMAS Duke of. See DANBY Earl of v. 356, 383.

LEGGÉ, Sir HENRAGE, Baron of the Exchequer,
His charge to the jury on the trial of Mary Blandy x. 25
His speech on passing sentence on her x. 33
Would never suffer a person that had declared he was perjured in another affair, to be examined as a witness x. 390

L E G I S L A T U R E.

The legislative power ought to resent as an injury, an inferior court's snatching the exercise of it out of their hands, which only belongs to the supreme authority iv. 171
Courts of justice are to put the laws in execution, and to leave all considerations of inconvenience to the legislature ix. 569, 570
Upon what principle and rule of law the legislature by statute 9 Annæ, chap. 19, discharged the party who was supposed to have given the marquis De Guiscard, who stabbed mr. Harley sitting in council, the mortal wound, from prosecution, and declared the killing to be lawful and necessary ix. 63. n.

LEIGHTON, ALEXANDER, D. D.

Substance of information for a libel xi. 120
Doctor Leighton's answer xi. 121
Upon hearing, court of opinion that the particulars of information were proved xi. 121
The two lords chief justices of opinion that defendant might have been proceeded against for treason xi. 121
Unanimously adjudge defendant guilty xi. 121
A very severe sentence pronounced xi. 121
Ordered by court to be degraded xi. 121
Degraded accordingly xi. 121
Made his escape xi. 121
Hue and cry printed by order of the privy council xi. 121
Form thereof xi. 121
Retaken in Bedfordshire xi. 121
Memorial of Leighton's escape, and execution of his sentence, in the bishop of London's diary xi. 121
Severity of the punishment owing to the then juncture of public affairs xi. 121
Proceedings against those who procured Leighton's escape xi. 121
The commons resolved, that fine, corporal punishment, and imprisonment were illegal, and that he ought to have satisfaction for his sufferings and damages xi. 121. n.

L E T T E R S.

S. P. Q. R. explained i. 242
The lord president's excellent letter to lord Lowat, being a persuasive against his lordship's ruining himself and family, by running into the rebellion; and which is mentioned in lord Lowat's trial ix. 679.*
Lord Lowat's letter in answer to the above x. 189. Ap.
His lordship's letter to his son Simon, then prisoner in Edinburgh castle x. 190. Ap.
Another letter from his lordship to his son ix. 718*
Letter of lord Lowat to the Pretender's son ix. 714*
Another from his lordship to the laird of Lochiel ix. 715*
Earl Kilmarnock's letter to his son x. 181. Ap.
Lord Chancellor Bacon's letter to both houses of parliament, at the time of their proceeding against him for bribery and corruption i. 380
Sir John Fenwick's to his lady v. 80. n.
The judges letter to the king, concerning the trial of lord Audley's servants for rape and buggery i. 396
Sir Walter Raleigh's letter to James I. containing his defence for his Guiana actions i. 228
Sir Walter's letter to the king the night before his execution i. 228
Another to his wife i. 229
Letter of Thomas duke of Norfolk to Henry VIII. on his commitment for treason xi. 19, 20
Letter from Lieutenant of the Tower, concerning the carriage of queen Anna Boleyn, the day of her death, more faithful than copy in lord Herbert's history of Henry VIII. xi. 13
King James's letter to archbishop Abbot, concerning the divorce between Robert earl of Essex and lady Frances Howard x. 29. Ap.
Sir Lytleton Powys, judge B. R. his letter to lord chancellor Parker, giving account of parson Hendley's trial at Rocheſter assizes, for preaching charity sermon, and of other matters on that circuit x. 89. Ap.
King Charles I.'s to the house of commons, against passing earl Strafford's attainder i. 761
The earl's to his majesty i. 762
Bishop of Exeter's letter sent to the house of commons, in their debates relating to the liberty of the subject vii. 191
Queen Anna Boleyn's letter to king Henry VIII. xi. 14
Letter from Oliver Saint John to the mayor of Marlborough, which was the subject of the prosecution against the former xi. 110
Earl of Northumbreland's letter to Cromwell, denying any contract, or promise of marriage, between queen Anna Boleyn, wife to Henry VIII. and himself xi. 14
Queen Anna Boleyn's letter to Cromwell, testifying her religion xi. 15
Letter from sir Francis Goodwin, speaker of the house of commons, respecting the controverted election between him and sir John Fortescue vii. 76
Lord chief justice North's letter to sir Lionel Jenkins, secretary of state, respecting his examination of Bedloe viii. 461
Sir Francis Walsingham's letter to sir Amias Pawlet, relative to the death of Mary queen of Scots vii. 29

The duke of Somerset's letter to sir Thomas Hobby, declaring the traitorous proceedings of the admiral Seymour, lord Sudley vii. 2

Sir John Finch, lord Fordwich, his letter to the house of commons, to desire to be admitted to speak for himself, on a motion in that house to impeach him of treason vii. 309

His letter from the Hague to the lord chamberlain, on being impeached; and having fled to Holland in consequence of it vii. 313

No evidence ought to be given of contents of letter, unless letter produced v. 31

Letter read in evidence not written either by or to prisoner ii. 714

The earl of Somerset's obscure letter to king James I. i. 365. See

C H A R I T Y. E V I D E N C E. L E T T E R S P A T E N T.

LEVINZ, Sir CRESWELL, Attorney-General,
His speech on the trial of John Tasborough and Anne Price, for perjury ii. 1019

His speech before evidence, on the trial of Thomas White, alias Whitebread, for treason, in conspiring death of king, subversion of government, religion, &c. 13 June, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 834

His reply ii. 867

Opens the evidence against sir Thomas Gascoigne, for treason iii. 4

Opens the evidence on the trial of Roger earl Castlemaine, for high-treason, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 37

Sums up the evidence iii. 55

This lawyer characterised by sir John Howell iv. 106

* L E W I S, D A V I D,

* His trial for high-treason, the 28th and 29th of March, 1679, 31 Car. II. at Monmouth assizes ii. 801

* The indictment, for accepting popish orders ii. 801

* Evidence of the prisoner's saying mass, and performing the other functions of a priest ii. 801

* Popish utensils taken upon him ii. 802

* The prisoner objects the facts laid in the indictment were not proved ii. 802

* The court answer, it was sufficient to shew he exercised the office of a priest; and that it was not necessary to shew how he was ordained ii. 802

* The prisoner is convicted ii. 804

* Sentence passed ii. 804

* His speech at execution ii. 804

* L E W I S, J A M E S v. I. See DAWSON.

LEY, Sir JAMES, Lord Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, Pronounces judgment against lord chancellor Bacon i. 387

* L I B E L.

* One indicted and convicted of felony, for libelling and impugning the queen's authority in causes ecclesiastical i. 168

* Information in the Star-chamber for libelling the king and court, &c. i. 418

* One indicted of high-treason, and three of a misdemeanour, in libelling the government ii. 528

* Indictment for publishing a libel against infant-baptism, &c. ii. 550

* Libelling the government, or private persons, punishable ii. 1035

* Writing false news, though it be neither seditious nor scandalous, punishable ii. 1040. iii. 46, 57

* Publishing any news-books without licence, punishable; selling a libel, a publication of it iii. 92

* The publishing any thing reflecting on the government, or a private person, though it be true, is a libel; and the writer, or publisher, shall be punished for it iii. 96

* One attainted of high-treason for a treasonable libel iii. 287

* Indictment for a misdemeanour, in writing and publishing a libel reflecting on the justice of the nation iii. 505

* Indictment for a treasonable libel iii. 794

* Reflections on the government, sent in a letter by the post to a private friend, adjudged to be a framing and publishing a libel iii. 934

* Where an act is unlawful, it implies malice iii. 939

* What shall be deemed a libel, or a publication of it. See the SEVEN BISHOPS TRIAL iv. 304, &c.

* The petition of the city of London against dissolving the parliament, adjudged to be a libel iv. 392

* One cannot be adjudged guilty of writing a libel, unless it can be proved where he wrote it; but wherever he directs it to be printed, that is a publication in that county v. 538

* Transcribing a libel, makes one guilty of the libel v. 539

* It may be a libel, though no person in particular be reflected on v. 540

A rescript of Theodosius, concerning slander, applauded by queen Elizabeth i. 198

Court direct jury to consider only, whether defendant wrote the book, and to leave nature of offence to them i. 173, 176

Libel in indictment compared with the book published by defendant iii. 95

Concealing the author, as well as composing the libel, is capital in Scotland i. 431

When the word falsely is inserted in proceedings for defamatory libels, defendant ought not to be found guilty, if assertion be true. Em. Pref. viii.

Law implies malicious and seditious intent, where one publishes a seditious libel ii. 542

Putting libel in post, adjudged a publication of it iv. 353

Queen Anne's proclamation for restraining the printing and publishing libels v. 782

Truth may be a libel iv. 386, ix. 269

Seditious libel actual breach of the peace iv. 316. See WILKES JOHN.

Proceedings in Star-chamber against dr. Leighton, for a libel xi. 130

"Hereditary right" a seditious libel vi. 1, viii. 682. n.

In the case of libels, the specific charge must be set forth vi. 75

As the crime of a libel consists only in the words, therefore they must be laid in the indictment, and proved as laid vi. 77

If a man sets out a libel verbatim, he is tied up to the very words, and by a letter or syllable mistaken, he may be gone; therefore the best way is to set out the substance only vi. 77

Lord chief justice Holt said, that a libel might be described either by the sense and substance, or by the particular words, and that an indictment or information in either of those forms would be good vi. 330

Several libels censured, and the authors prosecuted by order of the house of peers viii. 78

Lord chief justice Scroggs's speech, occasioned by the many libels and pamphlets published viii. 457

Of blasphemous libels Em. Pref. vii. See WILKES JOHN.

Of defamatory libels Em. Pref. vii.

Of obscene libels x. 93, 94. Ap. See CURL EDWARD. INDICTMENTS. INFORMATION. RECORDS. WILKES JOHN.

Short history of punishment for libelling i. 496

Animadversions on two 30th of January sermons, resolved a villainous libel by the lords, and condemned to be burnt by the common hangman, in 1702 viii. 80

"Reasons for addressing his majesty, to invite the electress dowager and elector of Hanover, and reasons for attainting and abjuring the pretended prince of Wales," censured by the lords viii. 82

Libel prosecuted on information or indictment, not material whether true or false ix. 269. See ix. 287, 288

See remarks on the trial of John Peter Zenger ix. 299

A serjeant at law prosecuted for libelling an attorney ix. 311

Truth of a libel not to be given in evidence ix. 311, 312. See ix. 287, 288

Libelling a common strumpet is as great an offence as libelling an honest woman, and perhaps more dangerous to a breach of the peace ix. 312

An attorney at law fined for libelling a justice of peace ix. 313

The opinion of chief justice Holt cited both for and against, in the case of libels ix. 297

All our kings have been libelled in history ix. 295

Judge Pouys declared in all his charges on the summer circuit for Kent, in the year 1719, and the two last terms at Westminster, that the number of base libels and seditious papers was intolerable, and that a quicker course would be taken about them; for that government would not be so much troubling itself to find out the authors of them, but as often as any such papers were found on the tables of coffee-houses, or other news-houses, the master of the house should be answerable for such papers, and should be prosecuted as the publisher of them, and left to find out the authors or printers, and take care, at his peril, what papers he takes in x. 92. Ap.

Indictments for libels vi. 13, 14. Ap. x. 37. Ap.

There is no other word in the law but "libel," whereby to express the true idea of an infamous writing xi. 304

The severity of the law of libels pointed out xi. 322

Unjust acquittals in cases of libels, bring an odium on the press itself xi. 323

If juries will not convict libellers on clear proof, they may occasion the restraint of the press xi. 323

The word "purport" altered to "tenor," in a nisi prius record for a seditious libel xi. 324

Secretary of state's warrant for apprehending a libeller xi. 302

An extract from "Digest of the Law concerning Libels" xi. 304

Privilege of parliament does not extend to a prosecution for a seditious libel xi. 305

Member of parliament discharged without bail, being committed for writing a seditious libel xi. 302, 305

The case of the seven bishops, as to a libeller being bound to find surety of the peace, denied to be law xi. 304, 305. See

ANDERTON WILLIAM. KEACH BENJAMIN.

BAILEY DAVID. KENN THOMAS.

BISHOPS the Seven. KNIGHTLEY Sir RICH. & al.

BALMERINO JOHN lord. LAKE JOHN.

BASTWICK JOHN. LEIGHTON ALEXANDER.

BROOKS NATHAN. LILBURN JOHN.

BUCKNER WILLIAM. LLOYD WILLIAM.

CARR HENRY. OWEN WILLIAM.

CURTIS JANE. PAYNE WILLIAM.

DOVER SIMON. PRYNNE WILLIAM.

FARWELL JOHN. SACHEVEREL Dr. HENRY.

FULLER WILLIAM. SMITH FRANCIS.

FRANCKLIN RICHARD. SPARKES MICHAEL.

HALES THOMPSON NATHAN & al.

HARRIS BENJAMIN. TUTCHIN JOHN.

HOLLIS Sir JOHN. WICKSTONE and his Wife.

JOHNSON SAMUEL. ZENGER PETER.

LIBERTY of the PRESS.

The judges were of opinion, that printing news might be prohibited by law vii. 478, 480, 482, 486. xi. 322

An attorney fined 1000 marks for publishing "The long Parliament dissolved;" bound to his good behaviour for seven years, and his name struck out of the roll of attorneys, without any offence alleged in his practice iii. 219. vii. 482, 483

If an odium is brought on the press, it may be fatal to liberty xi. 323

If juries do not convict libellers when the proof is clear, it may tend to restrain that press which they refuse to regulate xi. 323. See iii. 223.

iv. 478. n. 486, 489. ZENGER PETER.

LIBERTY of the SUBJECT.

The excellency of the English laws consists principally in the provisions made for the liberty of the subject Em. Pref. iii.

Englishmen have the liberty to lash public and private vices, to caution the people against measures that may be hurtful to them, or to remonstrate against the evil practice even of those in power, without being exposed to the penalties of the law ix. 314

But see with what restrictions in point of law ix. 314

Parliaments and juries are the two great pillars of government, which give the title of freeborn Englishmen iii. 222, 223. vii. 480

Our freedom consists in being ruled by laws of our own making, and of being tried by men of our own condition iii. 222, 223. vii. 481

Sending the subject to remote and private prisons was complained of by the judges in 34 Elizabeth. Em. Pref. v. and n.

The principal branch of the laws of this nation concern the life and liberty of the subject Em. Pref. i.

The king of England cannot take up or detain the meanest subject at his mere free will and pleasure Em. Pref. iii.

British subjects have liberties which no other subjects can boast of Em. Pref. vi.

Resolutions of the house of commons relating to the liberty of the subject vii. 150

The liberty of the subject said to be the greatest point that ever was agitated in parliament vii. 143. n.

Mr. Criswell's speech thereon vii. 144

Instance of its great estimation among the Romans ix. 296. See iv. 146, 186. BAIL.

* L I C E N C E.

* A subject of England may travel without licence ii. 12

* Going to France, and returning without licence, made high-treason v. 506

L I C E N T I O U S N E S S.

When licentiousness is tolerated, liberty is in the utmost danger xi. 323

* L I G E A N C E. *See ALLEGIANCE.*L I G H T F O O T, Mr. of Gray's-Inn,

Opens Buckner's answer for licensing Prynne's Histriomastix i. 419

Of counsel for earl Strafford i. 759

L I L B U R N, J O H N.

The trial of him and John Wharton, for printing and publishing seditious books, 13 Car. I. in the Star-chamber vii. 260

Lilburn's examination at the attorney-general's chambers vii. 261

Refuses to take the Star-chamber oath, as also Wharton vii. 262

The information in the Star-chamber against them vii. 263

Sentenced to stand in the pillory, and Lilburn to be whipt from the Fleet to Westminster, and to pay 500l. a-piece vii. 264

His speech to the people from the pillory vii. 266

He is gagged in the pillory vii. 270

He is laid in irons by command from the Star-chamber vii. 271

The sentence voted illegal by the parliament, 1641 vii. 271

Two petitions to the house of commons, 1645 vii. 272

His fine taken off by the lords, and the hearing of his cause appointed at their bar; Mr. Bradshaw and Mr. Cooke being his counsel vii. 273

Mr. Cooke's speech vii. 276

The lords reverse his sentence, and the commons order him 2000l. out of the estates of several of the king's party vii. 278

His remonstrance delivered to every member of the house, 1648 vii. 279

His petition to the committee appointed to consider of his business vii. 280

An ordinance of the lords and commons, for raising 3000l. out of late lord Coventry's estate, for his reparation vii. 281

Thrown out of the house of commons, second reading vii. 282

Another ordinance for raising 3000l. out of Sir H. Gibbs, Sir H. Bellingham, and Mr. Bowes's estates vii. 282

* His trial for high-treason, by an extraordinary commission of Oyer and Terminer, at Guildhall, London, 24th, 25th, and 26th of October, 1649 ii. 19

* Lilburn shews he was taken at Brantford, and has been arraigned before the lord chief justice Heath at Oxford, for high-treason against the king ii. 20

* He objects, that extraordinary commissions of Oyer and Terminer are illegal ii. 21

* That it was illegal to keep him in prison seven months, and not bring him to trial ii. 23

* That he was apprehended by soldiers, and carried to Paul's, their main-guard; whereas he ought to have been put into the hands of the civil magistrate, if he had offended the state ii. 23

* That he was committed for refusing to accuse himself, which they themselves had censured as illegal practice in the Star-chamber ii. 23

* That his estate, of the value of almost 3000l. was taken from him without legal process ii. 24

* He demands of the court a sight of their commission; which is refused ii. 25

* The court tell him that the supreme authority was now in the commons, as they said it was also in the times of the Romans and Saxons ii. 26, 27

* He refuses to hold up his hand, till the court tell him what it meant ii. 27, 28

* Desires a copy of his indictment, and counsel; but to no effect ii. 31

* Urges that he had counsel assigned him by the judges who tried him at Oxford, before he pleaded ii. 32

* Pleads Not Guilty ii. 39

* Has time till the next day to prepare for his defence ii. 39

* Insists on a precedent of counsel being assigned to major Raffe ii. 39

* That case debated ii. 40

* The names of the jury ii. 42

* The indictment for high-treason, in printing and publishing several treasonable books against the commonwealth, and stirring up the soldiers to mutiny ii. 42

* He excerpts against the court and king's counsel whispering together ii. 43

* Evidence of the printer concerning The Apprentice's Outcry ii. 47

* Evidence of his distributing The Outcry to the soldiers ii. 48

* And inciting them to mutiny ii. 48

* His publishing the Salva Libertate proved ii. 50

* The book entitled An Impeachment, &c. proved to be published by him ii. 51

* He

- * He objects against the evidence of col. Purefoy, he being a member of parliament ii. 51
 * Evidence concerning the Preparative to the Hue and Cry after Sir Arthur Haslerig ii. 52
 * That he own'd them at the attorney-general's chambers ii. 52
 * Several passages read out of his books ii. 53
 * And two ordinances of the house of commons, declaring what offences shall be adjudged high-treason ii. 54, 55
 * The attorney-general applies the evidence, to prove him guilty of high-treason ii. 56, &c.
 * He tells them, most of the present council of state must go to Tyburn or Tower-hill ii. 57
 * Says, that misery and poverty never were so extreme under the worst of our kings ii. 57
 * That the power of thieves and robbers was as lawful as the authority which erected the high court of justice ii. 57
 * The king never acted so tyrannically at St. Oliver ii. 58
 * Lilburn urges, that none of his expressions are treason, by the ancient laws of England ii. 63
 * He repeats his request for counsel, and more time; but is refused ii. 66
 * The prisoner desires to withdraw and peruse his notes; which being denied, he sends for a chamber-pot into the court ii. 68
 * Asserts the jury are judges of law, as well as of fact ii. 69
 * He quotes several law books to prove it ii. 69
 * Lilburn's defence as to the facts proved against him ii. 70
 * He observes, that one of the books he is charged with, was published before the acts were made whereupon he is indicted ii. 73
 * He urges his services to the commonwealth ii. 74
 * Says, that the judges are but cyphers, and Norman intruders; and that the jury only are to determine his case, both in law and in fact ii. 76
 * Mr. Prideaux makes his observations on the evidence for the commonwealth ii. 76
 * Lilburn interrupts him several times, and takes notice that Prideaux was one who voted the army traitors ii. 78
 * Mr. Kable directs the jury ii. 78
 * Says that one witness, with concurring circumstances, is sufficient in treason ii. 78
 * The jury desire some wine before they withdraw; but are told they could have no refreshment in capital cases ii. 80
 * Lilburn is acquitted ii. 80
 * At which the people shout ii. 80
 * And make bonfires for joy ii. 80
 * He is discharged out of the Tower about a fortnight after ii. 80
 * The jury brought before the council to give their reasons; but refuse to give any ii. 81, 82
 * His trial at the Old-Bailey, for returning to England, being banished by act of parliament, 1653 vii. 354
 * Voted by the parliament to pay a fine of 7000*l.* and banished England, 1651, to depart in thirty days vii. 354
 * Refuses to kneel at the bar of the house vii. 355
 * A petition to the parliament from the people, in behalf of col. Lilburn, and of trials by juries vii. 355
 * Goes to Amsterdam vii. 357
 * The act for the execution of the judgment given against him vii. 357
 * Returns to England, and is committed to Newgate by the lord mayor vii. 357
 * Is brought to the bar, and desires a copy of his indictment, and counsel to be assigned him vii. 358
 * Counsel assigned him as to one point only vii. 358
 * Receives a copy of his indictment the same day he was to be tried vii. 359
 * Gives in his exceptions to the insufficiency of the indictment vii. 360
 * Has time till six o'clock, to get his exceptions signed by counsel vii. 361
 * Gives in a parchment, demandingoyer of the act, judgment, and supposed crimes mentioned in the act vii. 363
 * Charges the attorney-general Prideaux with being an impeached traitor vii. 364
 * The court refuses to receive the parchment, without counsel's signing it vii. 366
 * Delivers in his exceptions under counsel's hands, upon promise of the court that it should be no prejudice to him, and to haveoyer granted him, if averred by his counsel to be necessary vii. 367
 * Some passages from Whitlocke, that Mr. Lilburn was brought in not guilty, for which the jury were summoned before the council of state vii. 370.
 * See ii. 81, &c.
 * He was several times arraigned for his life; once before the house of peers, by the king's special command and order, May 1, 1641. He was again arraigned as a traitor at Oxford, before lord chief justice Heath ii. 20
 * LILBURN, ROBERT ii. 394. See REGICIDES.
 * LIMERICK, THOMAS ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
 * LINDSAY, DAVID,
 * His arraignment for high-treason, in returning from France without licence, April 19, 1704, 3 Anna v. 508
 * The indictment v. 508. vi. 60. Ap.
 * He confesses the fact; but says he is a native of Scotland, and had the benefit of the queen's pardon there v. 510
 * The proclamation of indemnity in Scotland read v. 510
 * The prisoner proves himself a Scotchman born v. 511
 * That he surrendered to the government in Scotland, and was discharged there v. 512
 * Mr. Williams's defence for the prisoner v. 512
 * That the pardon in Scotland amounted to a licence to come hither v. 513
 * Insists that his trial ought to have been in the first county he came into v. 516
 * Mr. Raymond's speech on the same side v. 516
 * Sir Thomas Powys's reply v. 519
 * Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general, his speech v. 521
 * Vol. XI.
 * Sir Simon Harcourt, solicitor-general, his speech v. 523
 * Lord chief justice Holt of opinion against the prisoner v. 523
 * To which the court agree v. 524
 * His charge to the jury v. 525
 * The prisoner is convicted v. 525
 * Moved in arrest of judgment, that the prisoner was not shewn to be a subject when the act was made v. 525, 526
 * That one who owes local allegiance ought not to be indicted in the same manner with him who owes natural allegiance v. 527
 * The chief justice shews the reasonableness of the statute on which the prisoner was indicted; and pronounces sentence v. 527
 * LINGARD, Mr. Common Serjeant of London,
 * His speech as counsel for Thomas earl of Macclesfield, on his impeachment for selling the places of masters in chancery vi. 635, 663, 664, 685, 686
 * His observations upon the whole trial vi. 695
 * LINSTEED, THOMAS v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
 * LISLE, Lady ALICE,
 * Her trial by a commission of Oyer and Terminer at Winchester the 27th of August, 1685, 1 Jac. II. iv. 105
 * The indictment for harbouring Hicks, who was in Monmouth's rebellion iv. 105
 * The prisoner being thick of hearing has one to assist her at her trial iv. 106
 * Mr. Pollexfen's speech before evidence iv. 106
 * Evidence that Hicks was in the rebellion iv. 107
 * Evidence of the message Hicks sent to the prisoner, to desire entertainment at her house, &c. iv. 108
 * Barter deposes, that he shewed Dunne the way to Moyle's-Court, and gave col. Penruddock notice of it iv. 115
 * Dunne and Barter confronted iv. 116
 * Dunne refuses to answer the court, and discover his knowledge of the matter iv. 116
 * Col. Penruddock's evidence of his taking Hicks and Nelthorpe in the lady Lisle's house iv. 119
 * The prisoner's husband a member of the High Court of Justice iv. 120
 * Carpenter and his wife's evidence of their lady's entertaining Hicks and Nelthorpe iv. 120
 * Dunne confesses he supped with Hicks and Nelthorpe, at my lady Lisle's, the night before they were taken iv. 121
 * The prisoner enters upon her defence iv. 122
 * Objects, that the traitor ought to be convicted before she could be tried for harbouring him iv. 122
 * She calls a witness iv. 123
 * She says her son was actually in arms against Monmouth by her direction iv. 123
 * The chief justice directs the jury iv. 123
 * The prisoner's husband one of those who condemned col. Penruddock's father to die iv. 126. See PENRUDDOCK'S TRIAL ii. 261
 * The jury doubt whether the prisoner knew Hicks had been in the army iv. 127
 * The chief justice tells them, the proof is plain iv. 127
 * She is convicted iv. 127
 * The chief justice's speech before the sentence iv. 127
 * Other proof of her guilt after the trial iv. 128
 * Sentenced to be burnt alive; and her execution directed to be that afternoon iv. 128
 * But reprieved iv. 128
 * A letter to the king in her behalf; but to no effect iv. 128
 * She petitions to be beheaded; which is granted iv. 129
 * She is executed iv. 129
 * Her dying speech iv. 129
 * Her attainder reversed, 1 W. and M. iv. 130
 * She was convicted, attainted, and executed for treason, by a verdict injuriously extorted, and procured, by the menaces, violence, and other illegal practices of lord chief justice Jeffries, in the opinion of the legislature that annulled her attainder iv. 130
 * Lady Lisle, who could neither see nor hear, was sentenced to be burned, because a person who was proved to have been in Monmouth's rebellion came to her house v. 101
 * The jury at first brought her in not guilty iv. 127. n.
 * LISLE, JOHN,
 * Lord-president of the court on the trial of Mr. Henry Slingsby, for treason against the protector, Oliver Cromwell, and the commonwealth ii. 277
 * His speech to Mr. Henry Slingsby, doctor Hewitt, and John Mordaunt, esq. before judgment ii. 298
 * Member of the High Court of Justice, and husband of lady Allice Lisle, illegally sentenced by Jeffries, was basely murdered at Lansdowne, some years before the condemnation of his lady iv. 105. n. 120
 * LITTLETON, Dr. See GOLDING.
 * LITTLETON, Sir EDWARD,
 * Solicitor-general on the proceedings in the Star-Chamber against Prynne and others for libels l. 483
 * His argument for the king against John Hampden, esq. in the cause of ship-money l. 544, 550, 558
 * His argument made by command of the house of commons relating to the liberty of the person of every freeman, at a conference with the lords vii. 151
 * Copies of records not printed quoted by Sir Edward Littleton vii. 167
 * His argument against the return of the habeas corpus for John Sedden and others vii. 224
 * LITTLETON, Sir THOMAS,
 * Non usage is the weakest of arguments to be found in Littlton iv. 169.
 * See vi. 713.
 * His speech in the case of Abby and White viii. 122
 * LLOYD

LLOYD, Mr. See WORCESTER, Bishop of.
LLOYD, Sir RICHARD,
 His argument against the objection, that an attainted person is a competent witness ix. 661*

* LLOYD, Dr. WILLIAM, Bishop of St. Asaph, iv. 304

LOCKTON, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
 Was arrested sitting in his place, displaced from his office, committed to the Tower, and tried for treason i. 5. and n. 14

Confesses, and begs mercy i. 14

Life saved, but transported to Waterford, in Ireland, with the yearly allowance of twenty pounds, and liberty of going out of town two miles for his recreation i. 14. n. * See BRAMBRE.

LOE, Mr.
 Of counsel for earl Stratford i. 759

* LOFFE, GABRIEL v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.

LOGAN, ROBERT,
 Process against him for high-treason, for conspiring with the earl of Gowrie to murder James I. vii. 78

Five letters from the late Robert Logan to the laird Bour, concerning the plot, produced vii. 79

Depositions to prove the hand vii. 81

Depositions and declarations of George Spott at his trial and his execution, concerning the plot vii. 82

The name and arms of Logan declared abolished, and his honours and estates forfeited to the king vii. 85

LOGIC.
 The high court of parliament compared in its representation to logic xi. 250

* LONDON, Bishop of. See COMPTON.

* LONDON, City of.

* Proceedings against it upon a quo warranto in the King's-Bench, Hil. 35

Car. II. iii. 545

* The information, that for a month past the mayor, &c. have without lawful warrant used certain liberties and privileges iii. 545. vi. 16. Ap.

* The plea of the mayor, &c. wherein they plead prescription and royal authority for the exercise of their privileges iii. 545

* Mr. attorney's reply, that they did forfeit their privileges by taking unreasonable toll in their markets, and by presenting and publishing a libellous petition iii. 546

* The city's rejoinder, justifying both those acts iii. 546

* Mr. attorney's sur-rejoinder and demurrer iii. 548

* The city's rebutter and joinder in demurrer iii. 548

* Mr. solicitor-general Finch's argument for the king iii. 548

1. That a corporation may be forfeited iii. 548

* Cases quoted to this purpose iii. 549

2. That the city of London is in the same case with other corporations in this respect iii. 550

* Cases where the franchises of the city have been seized iii. 551

3. That an act of the common-council is a corporate act, and may make a forfeiture of the whole iii. 552

* That the offences set forth in the replication are forfeitures iii. 552

* Of the right to take toll in their markets iii. 552

* Of the city's petition iii. 553

* Lord chief justice Hale's opinion quoted, that it is unlawful to print any man's private case, while it is depending in a court of judicature iii. 553

* Sir George Treby, recorder, his argument for the city iii. 554

1. That a corporation cannot be forfeited iii. 555

* Authorities cited, that a corporation can never die iii. 555

* He argues that common law may be antiquated, though statute law cannot iii. 556

* That if Henry VIII. had thought this proceeding by way of quo warranto feasible, he would have used it against the religious houses iii. 556

2. That the quo warranto should have been brought against the defendants by name, and not in their corporate capacity iii. 560

3. He defends their taking toll in the markets iii. 563

* Argues, that the privileges of London have been upheld, even against the general words of an act of parliament iii. 564

* That the city of Dublin laid a tax of a like kind; which was held good iii. 564

4. That an unreasonable by-law is not sufficient to forfeit a corporation iii. 565

* His defence as to the petition iii. 567

* Endeavours to excuse it from being seditious iii. 568

* And to justify the publishing it iii. 569

5. Argues, that a corporation cannot possibly commit a crime against the peace iii. 570

6. That an act of the common-council is not an act of the corporation iii. 572

* The common-council chosen by the unfreemen as well as freemen iii. 572

* The chief justice's remarks iii. 574

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his reply iii. 575

* To the question, whether the defendants should have been prosecuted in their private or corporate capacity? iii. 576

* Authorities cited iii. 577

* Whether the city liberties can be forfeited? iii. 578

* The end of erecting corporations iii. 579

* He denies the position, that a corporation can never die iii. 581

* Distinguishes between seizures and forfeitures iii. 582

* An election of a mayor is void, if the old mayor be absent iii. 585

* Two reasons why corporations may be forfeited iii. 585

* A resolution, that an alderman might be removed for being a drunkard and haunter of taverns iii. 587

* An instance of the franchises of Sandwich being seized for a notorious riot committed there

* Another of the town of Cambridge iii. 589

* Other instances and cases iii. 590

* Reasons why an act of the common-council is an act of the corporation iii. 590

* He justifies the charge about the markets iii. 592

* And about the petition iii. 596

* Cases of slanderous words spoken against the king's justices iii. 600

* Mr. Pollexfen's speech for the city iii. 603

* He insists upon the impropriety of prosecuting them in their corporate capacity iii. 604

* Answers mr. attorney's authorities iii. 605

* He objects to the pleading, as singular and unprecedented iii. 605

* He argues that they could not forfeit twice; for by the first forfeiture the corporation would cease iii. 608

* Considers the question about the markets iii. 609

* Insists upon three acts of parliament for confirming the city-customs iii. 610

* What were anciently the forms of acts of parliament iii. 611

* His defence of the petition iii. 612

* Denies that it was an act of the corporation iii. 613

* Says, if it were, yet it is not so great a crime as to forfeit the charter iii. 614

* He answers three reasons brought to prove the charter forfeited iii. 616

* And the authorities produced iii. 617

* The meaning of the words forfeiting and seizing stated iii. 619

* The mischiefs of too rigidly expounding the doctrine of forfeiting and surrendering iii. 621

* Several authorities quoted, as to the nature of corporations iii. 624

* A brief recapitulation of the whole argument iii. 625

* The judgment of the court for the king iii. 626

* A general view of the whole matter in debate iii. 627

A gaoler in London may permit his prisoner in execution to go at large with a baton in any place within their jurisdiction iii. 628

A citizen of London may set up one retail trade, tho' bred to another, notwithstanding stat. 5 Eliz. chap. 4. iii. 564

London may prescribe against a statute iii. 564

The customs of London are taken notice of in the courts of Westminster-Hall iii. 564

The metropolis of the kingdom was deprived of its charters and magistrates from the year 1684 till 1688, when king James the second, terrified at the news of the prince of Orange's intended invasion, thought fit to restore them, Oct. 6, and ordered lord chancellor Jeffries to carry them back himself; whereupon sir George Treby was restored to the place of recorder, and the rest of the magistrates according to the ancient constitutions of the city iii. 628

The city's petition to his majesty in council, June 18, 1683 viii. 462.

See iv. 851.

Some regulations concerning their officers, to which his majesty required the city's submission viii. 463

LONDON GAZETTE.

Quere, the evidence of them viii. 213

LONG, WALTER, Esq.

Proceedings against him on his habeas corpus. See STROUD WILLIAM.

* LORD MAYOR arrested. See PRITCHARD Sir WILLIAM.

LORDS. See HOUSE OF LORDS. PEERAGE, &c.

LOVAT, SIMON Lord.

Proceedings in the house of peers upon the impeachment of the commons against him for treason, March 9, 10, 11, 13, 16, 18, and 19, 1746—7, 19 Geo. II. ix. 616

His lordship's petition to the house to have counsel and solicitors assigned him, copy of impeachment, time to put in his answer, money, &c. restored ix. 617

Names of his counsel and solicitors ix. 617

Prayer of petition ordered ix. 617

Prisoner desires further time ix. 617

Partly granted ix. 617

Puts in his answer ix. 617

Petitions that obedience to former order of the house relative to the restoration of his money, &c. may be compelled ix. 618

The same was rejected by the house ix. 618

Petitions that his chief agent might have access to him in the Tower, granted ix. 618

Copy of lord Lovat's answer ordered to the commons ix. 618

Petition to change one of the prisoner's solicitors; which is ordered accordingly ix. 618

Day of trial appointed ix. 618

Address to the king ordered for appointing a lord high steward to continue during the trial ix. 618

Other orders made concerning the prisoner's counsel, witnesses, and scaffold for the commons at the said trial ix. 618

Another petition from the prisoner to the house for further time, which was granted ix. 619

Another petition of the prisoner's for further time, which was rejected ix. 620

Another petition to same purport, which was granted ix. 620

The lord high steward's procession ix. 621

His grace's commission read ix. 621

His grace's address to the prisoner ix. 622

The articles of impeachment ix. 623

The prisoner's answer ix. 624

The replication of the commons ix. 625

Sir

INDEX.

Sir William Young's speech on opening the case on behalf of the commons ix. *625
 Lord Coke's speech on the same side ix. *629
 Mr. attorney-general (sir Dudley Ryder) his speech on same side ix. *629
 Sir John Strange (another of the managers for the commons) proceeds to produce evidence ix. *638
 The prisoner desires his counsel, on account of his age and infirmities, may examine the witnesses, but denied, because contrary to law ix. *638
 The prisoner objecting to the competency of a witness, he is examined upon a voyer dire, and afterwards (proving competent) is examined in chief ix. *639, *640
 The solicitor-general (the honourable William Murray) calls and examines the next witness ix. *645
 Altercation among the counsel, from the lord high steward having inadvertently suffered a witness to be sworn in chief, instead of upon a voyer dire ix. *645, *646
 Mr. Noel calls and examines the next witness, on behalf of the commons ix. *650
 Prisoner objects to this witness, as being attainted ix. *651
 He objects to the reading a record, because he is no party to it ix. *652
 Mr. Forrester's argument in support of the objection ix. *652
 Mr. Ford's ix. *653
 Mr. Hamilton Gordon's ix. *655
 Mr. attorney-general's argument against the objection ix. *656
 Sir John Strange's ix. *658
 Mr. solicitor-general's ix. *659
 Mr. Noel's ix. *660
 Sir Richard Lloyd's ix. *661
 Mr. Forrester's reply ix. *662
 Mr. attorney-general's further argument ix. *663
 Sir John Strange's ix. *664
 The record admitted to be proved, and accordingly proved and read ix. *664
 The witness called in, sworn, and examined ix. *670
 Other witnesses examined ix. *680
 Several letters produced, read, and given in evidence ix. *712, *714, *715, *717, *718, *720, *721, *723, *725
 Sir John Strange recapitulates the evidence ix. *716
 The prisoner's defence ix. *731, *732, *741
 The solicitor-general's reply to the prisoner's defence ix. *735, *744
 Mr. Noel's reply thereto ix. *742
 The prisoner is found guilty ix. *746
 The lord high steward asks him three several times why judgment should not be given ix. *747, *749, *750
 The prisoner's speech thereon ix. *747
 Commons by their speaker demand judgment ix. *749, *750
 The lord high steward's speech to the prisoner, previous to his pronouncing judgment ix. *750
 Sentence pronounced ix. *752
 Account of his lordship's behaviour from the time his death-warrant was delivered, to the day of his execution x. 110. Ap.
 Beheaded on Tower-hill x. 196. Ap.
 Copy of paper delivered to sheriff by his lordship x. 196. Ap.
 His monument at Kirk-hall x. 193. Ap.
 See LETTERS. MURRAY JOHN.
 * LOVE, CHRISTOPHER.
 * His trial for high-treason, in corresponding with, and conspiring to bring in, king Charles II. and treating with the Scots to that purpose, before the High Court of Justice in Westminster-Hall, June 20, 1651, 3 Car. II. ii. 83
 * An impeachment for high-treason and other crimes preferred by Prideaux, attorney of the state ii. 83
 * The prisoner desires counsel as to matter of law; and demands why he is not tried by a jury ii. 85, 86
 * He urges a vote of parliament, that they would preserve the ancient fundamental laws and manner of trial ii. 86
 * They refuse to assign him counsel till he has pleaded, and the evidence given ii. 88
 * He objects, that the crimes in the charge were to be prosecuted within a year; and they charged him with things done several years past ii. 88
 * He cites Coke's Institutes, that he may except to errors in the charge, in order to quash the indictment, before he pleads ii. 89
 * He is told, he must either plead generally or specially, before counsel can be assigned him ii. 91
 * He desires he may have counsel to put his plea into form; but is denied ii. 92
 * He pleads not guilty ii. 92
 * Mr. attorney joins issue with him ii. 92
 * The solicitor-general opens the evidence ii. 92
 * The court exhort Mr. Love to make a free confession ii. 96
 * He solemnly professes his innocence ii. 96
 * He excepts to the testimony of a witness who had confessed himself guilty; but is over-ruled ii. 97
 * Captain Potter's evidence of the presbyterians treating with the king ii. 98
 * Potter's examination read ii. 98
 * Major Alford's evidence of the plot ii. 103
 * Testifies several consultations at Mr. Love's house ii. 103
 * The presbyterians depute commissioners to treat with the king, and the Scotch commissioners, at Brinsford ii. 103
 * Major Huntingdon's evidence ii. 107
 * Evidence of Love's consent to depute commissioners to treat ii. 108
 * Lieutenant-colonel Bain's evidence ii. 108
 * Says nothing against the prisoner ii. 109
 * Major Adams's evidence ii. 109
 * The Scots banished ii. 111

* A witness (Adams) threatened to be hanged, if he would not be ingenuous in his examination ii. 113
 * Major Cobbet examined as to his tampering with Adams; which he denies ii. 114
 * The second day's proceedings ii. 114
 * Jaquel is sworn on his buttons instead of a bible ii. 114
 * The whole Scotch nation unite in the king's cause ii. 116
 * Colonel Barton's evidence ii. 118
 * Captain Far's evidence ii. 119
 * Facts kept by the presbyterians, for a blessing on their treaty with the king ii. 119
 * Love acknowledges he knew of the commission to treat with his majesty, and debated concerning it ii. 121
 * Jackson, a presbyterian minister, refuses to swear against Mr. Love ii. 123
 * The court set a fine of 500l. upon him, and commit him to prison during pleasure ii. 124
 * Mr. Love moves for time and counsel; and has till Wednesday to prepare for his defence ii. 124
 * The court tell the prisoner, counsel may come to him if they will; but make no order in it ii. 124
 * The third day's proceedings ii. 125
 * Mr. Love enters upon his defence ii. 125
 * He objects, that there has been but one witness to any particular fact ii. 126
 * Some particular observations of the prisoner on the evidence ii. 128
 * Love acknowledges the meetings at his house, the reading the letters and commissions, and his debating matters concerning them ii. 135
 * But says, he disapproved the design, and so is guilty only of misprision ii. 135
 * He shews how zealous he was in the cause of the parliament against the king ii. 136
 * Says, he was one of the first at Oxford that refused conformity; for which he was expelled, &c. ii. 136
 * That he was the first who was apprehended for preaching against the king ii. 136
 * And laments his suffering by their hands for whom he had done so much ii. 137
 * The prisoner confesses his being privy to, and concealing, the consults; which he apprehended to be but misprision ii. 138
 * Mr. attorney's reply to the prisoner's defence ii. 139
 * The president makes a speech to the prisoner ii. 141
 * Tells him, the laws of England were the laws of God ii. 141
 * That there was not any treason or notorious villainy but a priest had a hand in it ii. 141
 * The fourth day's proceedings ii. 141
 * Mr. Hall's reply ii. 141
 * A brief account of the conspiracy ii. 142
 * Sir T. Witherington's reply to the prisoner ii. 143
 * He observes that their consults went under the name of fasting and prayer, &c. ii. 144
 * Mr. attorney's further reply ii. 145
 * He discovers the evasions in Love's solemn appeals to God of his innocence ii. 152
 * Shews the ingratitude of conspiring to subvert a state that had been so indulgent to him ii. 153
 * Some passages in the prisoner's sermon, at the treaty at Uxbridge, rise in judgment against him ii. 154
 * Mr. Love gives in his exceptions to the charge ii. 156
 * The fifth day's proceedings ii. 157
 * Mr. Love's exceptions ii. 157
 * Mr. Archer, and Mr. Waller, the prisoner's counsel, rejected for refusing the engagement; but Mr. Hale is permitted to argue his exceptions ii. 159
 * Several exceptions to the charge, made through mistake for want of a sight of it ii. 161
 * Debates between the counsel, whether the fact be high-treason or misprision ii. 171
 * The prisoner's exceptions, as to the incompetency of the witnesses, over-ruled ii. 171
 * Mr. Hale argues, that two witnesses were necessary to one overt-act in treason ii. 173
 * Mr. Love moves for more time, and leave to examine more witnesses; but is denied ii. 176
 * The sixth day's proceedings ii. 177
 * Mr. attorney moves for judgment against him ii. 177
 * The sentence of beheading passed ii. 177
 * Mr. Love's behaviour at execution ii. 177
 * His speech on the scaffold ii. 177-183
 * LOVE, UNLAWFUL. See GREY, FORD Lord.
 * LOVE, Sir SALATHIEL, Serjeant at Law, and Recorder of London.
 * Shews the nature of the evidence on Sir John Fenwick's bill of attainder v. 45
 * His reply v. 89. See x. 67, 71. Ap.
 * LOWICK, Major ROBERT.
 * His trial for high-treason, 21 April, 1696, 8 W. III. iv. 718
 * Indicted with Rookwood and other conspirators in the assassination-plot iv. 661
 * Exceptions taken to the indictment, for that time and place are not ascertained in every fact that is laid iv. 718
 * The indictment iv. 721, 724
 * Sir Thomas Trevelyan, attorney-general, opens the evidence iv. 725
 * Harris's evidence of his being sent over by King James, to assist in the assassination iv. 726
 * Burton's evidence iv. 727
 * His counsel plead that the proof is insufficient iv. 731
 * Call

- * Call witnesses to his character iv. 732
- * Mr. attorney-general's reply iv. 733
- * Lord chief justice's charge iv. 734
- * The prisoner is convicted iv. 736
- * He receives sentence, together with Rookwood and Cranburne iv. 737
- * Their friends permitted to be with them after condemnation, but not in the absence of the keeper iv. 737
- * Their dying speeches iv. 737. See x. 68, 75. Ap.
- L O W N D S, Mr.
- His speech in the case of Abby and White viii. 104
- L U D B O R E, Mr.
- Is prayed by doctor John Bastwick to be assigned of counsel to him i. 502
- * L U M S D E N, A L E X A N D E R ii. 1011. See A N D E R - S O N, & al.
- * L U M S D E N, Mr. i. 333. See H O L L I S Sir JOHN.
- L U N A T I C.
- One pretended to be lunatic, allowed a solicitor to stand by him, to call his witnesses, and ask questions for him on his trial for felony viii. 291
- See A R N O L D E D W A R D. I N S A N I T Y.
- B A T E M A N C H A R L E S. M A D M A N.
- B R A D S H A W J A M E S. N O N C O M P O S M E N T I S.
- F E R R E R S Earl of.
- L U T W Y C H E, E D W A R D,
- His reply on the trial of Thomas earl of Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), on the impeachment by the commons before the lords, for high crimes and misdemeanours, in selling the places of the masters in Chancery vi. 748
- His reply vi. 750, 752
- Of counsel against Matthews for treason ix. 707
- Excepted out of the act of indemnity, which passed in the year 1690, 2 W. and M. chap. 10. iii. 662, x. 41. Ap.
- L Y T T L E T O N. See L I T T L E T O N.
- M.
- M A C A U L A Y, Mrs. the Historian. See B A T E S J O H N.
- M A I G H T O N A L E X A N D E R.
- * M A C C L E S F I E L D, T H O M A S Earl of, Lord Chancellor,
- His speech, returning the thanks of the house of lords to the committee, on the proceedings in parliament, against Francis Atterbury, bishop of Rochester vi. 390
- * His trial on an impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanours before the house of lords, 6 May, 1725, 11 George I. vi. 477
- * The articles of impeachment (21 in number) vi. 477
- * The earl's answer vi. 484
- * The replication of the commons vi. 492
- * Sir George Oxenden opens the charge in general vi. 492
- * Is seconded by sir Clement Wearg, solicitor-general vi. 497
- * The earl's general defence, opened by Mr. serjeant Probyn vi. 618
- * Who is seconded by dr. Sayer vi. 629
- * Sir William Strickland's speech upon the 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th articles, as to selling places in Chancery vi. 498
- * Mr. Doddington's speech vi. 500
- * The statute read at the nomination of sheriffs in the Exchequer vi. 503
- * A debate whether the privy-counsellors, &c. take an oath at that time vi. 620, 704, 736, 747. See P O L E M I C H A E L.
- * Oath of a master in Chancery vi. 504
- * Commissions granted to masters, appointing them to hear causes vi. 505
- * Further evidence to support these articles vi. 506
- * The earl's defence on these articles vi. 635
- * Mr. Lingard, common serjeant of London, of counsel with the earl, his speech vi. 635
- * The evidence in behalf of the earl vi. 640
- * Evidence that former lord chancellors took money for the masters places vi. 650
- * That the price of places has since been considerably raised vi. 654
- * Evidence, as to the manner of paying money into Chancery vi. 656
- * The earl's own observations on the evidence given upon these articles vi. 714
- * Mr. serjeant Pengelly's reply vi. 742
- * Mr. Onslow's speech on the 11th article, about appointing insufficient men to be masters vi. 534
- * Mr. Palmer's speech on the 12th article, for conniving at the masters paying for their places out of the suitors money vi. 535
- * Evidence of the insufficiency of the masters vi. 536, 540
- * Evidence of a declaration made by my lord in court vi. 539
- * Mr. Thomas Broun's evidence upon the 12th article vi. 540
- * Mr. Robins's speech in the earl's defence, on 11th and 12th articles vi. 640
- * Mr. serjeant Probyn, and the common serjeant, on the same side vi. 643, 664
- * The earl's evidence on these articles vi. 664, &c.
- * The earl's observations vi. 744
- * Mr. serjeant Pengelly's reply vi. 744
- * Mr. Gibbon's speech upon the 13th article, for concealing Mr. Dormer's deficiency, and for compounding a debt owing from Mr. Dormer vi. 547
- * Mr. Hedges on the same articles vi. 549
- * Evidence of Mr. Dormer's deficiency vi. 551
- * And of the compounding of his debt vi. 553
- * Mr. Strange's argument for the earl on these articles vi. 555
- * Evidence of the care taken by the earl to secure Mr. Dormer's debts vi. 670
- * Evidence to justify the composition with Wilson vi. 676
- * The earl's observations vi. 719
- * Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 748
- * Sir John Russell's speech on the 15th, 16th, and 17th articles vi. 562
- * The 15th, for calling for the masters accounts, in order to persuade them to contribute to Mr. Dormer's deficiency, and excusing those who contributed from giving in their accounts vi. 562
- * The 16th, for paying 1000l. to a suitor, with a view to prevent a parliamentary enquiry vi. 563
- * The 17th, for ordering Mr. Dormer's money to be paid out, without regard to proportion vi. 564
- * Mr. Sandys's speech on the same side vi. 565
- * Mr. Thompson's speech on the same side vi. 567
- * Evidence of the masters contribution vi. 568
- * Of several conversations between the earl and the masters on this occasion vi. 569
- * Mr. Lockman's evidence of the earl's paying him 1000l. vi. 577
- * Orders of the earl for paying several sums out of Mr. Dormer's effects vi. 580
- * Mr. Strange's defence of the earl upon these articles vi. 678
- * Evidence of the earl's calling for the masters accounts vi. 680
- * Evidence that Mr. Lockman's money was paid to him in compassion vi. 683
- * Mr. serjeant Probyn and Mr. common serjeant, their arguments upon the 18th article vi. 685, 686
- * The earl's observations vi. 722
- * Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 750
- * Mr. Plummer's speech upon the 18th article, for permitting and encouraging the masters to traffick with the suitors money vi. 583
- * Mr. Cary's speech on the same side vi. 585
- * Mr. Lightboun's evidence vi. 586
- * Mr. Holford's evidence vi. 592
- * Mr. common serjeant's defence on this article vi. 686
- * The earl's own defence vi. 725
- * Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 752
- * Lord Morpeth's speech on the 19th article, for advising and persuading the masters to make false representations of their circumstances vi. 594
- * Mr. Snell's speech on the same side vi. 597
- * Evidence of Mr. Thomas Bennet vi. 599
- * Evidence of Mr. Kynaston v. 601
- * Evidence of Mr. Lightboun vi. 602
- * Evidence of Mr. John Bennet vi. 603
- * Evidence of Mr. Lovibond vi. 603
- * Evidence of Mr. Edwards vi. 604
- * Evidence of Mr. Conway vi. 605
- * Mr. Robins's speech in the earl's defence to this article vi. 688
- * The earl's remarks vi. 730
- * Mr. Lutwyche's reply vi. 752
- * An account of the deficiencies vi. 607
- * Mr. Wyse sums up the evidence for the commons vi. 609
- * Witnesses to Mr. Cottingham's reputation vi. 691
- * Account of many charities done by the earl vi. 612
- * Mr. common serjeant's observations upon the whole vi. 615
- * Mr. Robins's to the same purpose vi. 697
- * The earl of Macclesfield's own defence vi. 702
- * Mr. serjeant Pengelly's reply vi. 753
- * Two witnesses examined against the earl vi. 753
- * Who are confronted with another witness vi. 755
- * The statute 11 Henry IV. read vi. 759
- * The earl's remarks on it vi. 760
- * The managers reply vi. 760
- * The earl is convicted vi. 761
- * And fined 30,000h. vi. 763
- M D A N I E L, S T E P H E N,
- Berry, Ryan and Salmon*, their trial, 1st March, 1755, 28 George II. at the Old Bailey, for being accessaries before a felony committed x. 417
- Indictment x. 417
- Evidence against them x. 418, &c.
- Special verdict found x. 432
- Argued before all the judges at Serjeant's Inn hall, in Chancery Lane x. 432
- Mr. Hume-Campbell, counsel for the crown, his argument x. 433
- Mr. Madan, on the same side x. 436
- Mr. Hume cited a case he had met with since his last argument x. 437
- Mr. serjeant Davy, as counsel for the prisoners x. 438
- Mr. Aspin, on the same side x. 441
- Mr. Hume's reply x. 442
- Mr. Justice Foster pronounced the judgment of the court x. 442, &c.
- All discharged of that indictment x. 445
- Indicted again for a conspiracy x. 446
- Found guilty, sentenced to seven years imprisonment, stand each twice to the pillory, and at the end of that term to find sureties for three years, and to pay a fine of one mark each x. 446
- Stood in the pillory once, Ryan killed, so they stood no more x. 446
- The three tried again with Mary Jones, for the wilful murder of Jephtha Hadden, who was executed on their evidence for a robbery on the highway, of which he was innocent x. 446
- Court suffered them to be convicted (death), but respited judgment, in order to have the case argued x. 446
- Attorney-general declined to argue the point of law, so they were discharged, at the subsequent sessions, of that indictment x. 446
- Mr. Justice Foster's observations on this case x. 416, 417
- M A C C L E S F I E L D, T H O M A S, E A R L O F.
- Proceedings against him for treason, 10th December, 1747, 20 George II. ix. 585
- His counsel insisted that he was born in the dominions of the French King, and on that put his defence ix. 585

- His commission from the king of France, read ix. 586
 The cartel between France and England, read ix. 586
 The prisoner not within it ix. 586
 Did not prove he was born out of Great Britain ix. 586
 Found guilty, but recommended to mercy ix. 586
 Prisoner charged in custody with a debt due to one Ramsay ix. 586
 Mr. attorney-general, mr. solicitor-general, and sir John Strange, argued, that the process against the prisoner should be discharged ix. 586
 Mr. Henly and mr. Ford argued, that an attainted person is liable to civil suits ix. 586
 Court gave no opinion; but mr. Mac Donald afterwards making his creditor easy with regard to the debt, the action was withdrawn, and he discharged ix. 586
 Mr. justice Foster's opinion upon the case ix. 586, 587
- M A C G R O W T H E R, A L E X A N D E R,
 His trial for high-treason, 31 July, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 566
 Evidence against him ix. 566
 Pleads he was forced into the rebellion ix. 566
 His case stated by mr. justice Foster ix. 566
 Lord chief justice Lee's opinion, relating to being forced into the rebellion ix. 567
 Found guilty, but reprieved ix. 576
- * M A C G U I R E, C O N N O R Lord,
 * His trial for high-treason, at the King's-Bench bar, the 10th of February, 1644, 20 Car. I. i. 949
 * The indictment, for inciting a rebellion and massacre in Ireland i. 949
 * The prisoner pleads he is a peer of Ireland i. 950
 * His plea is over-ruled i. 950. viii. 341, 363
 * He pleads over not guilty i. 950
 * The prisoner challenges all the jurors that appear i. 951
 * A disfringas and tales made returnable the next day i. 952
 * Each person returned on the pannel examined, whether they had purchased any share of the rebels lands in Ireland i. 952
 * The trial begins i. 953
 * The witnesses called i. 953
 * The examination of a witness read, who might have been produced viva voce i. 954
 * Evidence of my lord Macguire's being taken in Dublin with arms, &c. the very morning the massacre began in the other parts of Ireland i. 954
 * Macguire's own confession of his being concerned in the conspiracy i. 954
 * His examination in the Tower read against him i. 955
 * Denies they had any messages from England, to incite them to this rebellion and massacre i. 955
 * Evidence of the discovery of the conspiracy i. 955
 * Evidence of O'Neile's landing in Ireland i. 956
 * Charlemont surprized by the Irish papists, and the lord Calfeild murdered i. 956
 * Evidence of 104,000 murdered i. 956
 * The conspirators set up a new form of government i. 956
 * A copy of the pope's bull granted to the Irish papists i. 956
 * He thereby grants them full remission of their sins i. 957
 * The lord Macguire in his defence denies he made any such confessions as were produced against him i. 958
 * The counsel reply to him i. 958
 * The lord Macguire is convicted i. 958
 * Demands by what authority the court sat i. 959
 * Sentence passed i. 959
 * Petitions to be beheaded; but is executed as a common traitor i. 960
 * viii. 363
 * His behaviour at execution i. 960
- M A C K W O R T H, S I R H U M P H R Y,
 His speech in the case of Abby and White viii. 117
- M A D A N, M r.
 His argument for the crown, against Macdoniel and others x. 436
- * M A D D E R, J O H N v. 573. See G R E E N T H O M A S, & al.
- M A D D O C K S, J O H N,
 Of counsel for Stevenson, charged with murder * 473
- M A D M A N.
 Madmen are destroyed, not punished iv. 181
 The reason of the law, that a person who falls mad after crime supposed to be committed, shall not be tried for it, and if after judgment, shall not be executed iv. 205. See
- ARNOLD EDWARD. INSANITY.
BATEMAN CHARLES. LUNATIC.
BRADSHAW JAMES. NON COMPOS MENTIS.
FERRERS Earl.
- * M A G D A L E N C O L L E G E in Oxon.
 * Proceedings against them, 3 Jac. II. 1687 iv. 262
 * Doctor Clark, the president of Magdalen, dies iv. 262
 * They elect dr. Hough iv. 263
 * The king's mandate to elect mr. Farmer iv. 263
 * The college petition his majesty not to insist on it iv. 264
 * They apply to the duke of Ormond and bishop of Winchester iv. 261
 * Are cited before the High-Commission, to answer why they did not elect mr. Farmer iv. 261
 * Their answer iv. 261
 * They shew mr. Farmer was incapable iv. 266
 * Testimonials against him of several irregularities iv. 267
 * The court decree dr. Hough's election void iv. 268
 * And suspend the vice-president iv. 268
 * The king's mandate to the college, to admit the bishop of Oxford president iv. 269
 * The king goes down to Oxford, and threatens the college for their contempt iv. 269
 * Commands them immediately to elect the bishop of Oxford iv. 269
- M A G I S T R A C Y
 * And government of England vindicated, as to the proceedings in the lord Russell's trial, by sir Barth. Shower iii. 763
- M A G N A C H A R T A.
Salvo contentemento in Magna Charta said to be meant only of amerciaments, and not of fines for great offences iii. 854. Em. Pref. xi.
 The judges are entrusted with Magna Charta by their oaths iii. 222.
 vii. 480
 The judges by treachery endeavoured to break the bonds asunder of Magna Charta, the great treasury of our peace iii. 222. vii. 480
 It is one of the privileges confirmed by Magna Charta, that no man shall be restrained of his liberty, but by the law of the land Em. Pref. iv.
 Mr. Mason's speech concerning the bill for Magna Charta vii. 194
 What time Magna Charta extended to Ireland viii. 353. See Id. 354, 358, 362
 Magna Charta hath been confirmed above thirty times vii. 142
 The import of the words "per legem terra," in Magna Charta vii. 122, 148, 181
 Explanation of that statute, with relation to the liberty of the persons of the subjects. See D A R N E L L Sir T H O M A S.
 Several petitions of the subjects, in consequence of that charter, and the several kings answers ii. 199, 201, 297, 213. v. 82, 86, 98, 101.
 vi. 735, 739. vii. 121, 130, 146, 148, 152, 207, 246, 749. See vii. 479. 9 Henry III. under S T A T U T E S. W O R D S.
- * M A H O N Y, M A T T H E W, his trial. See G O O D E R E S A M U E L.
- MAIDEN CIRCUIT.
 The circuit held for the county of Kent, in the summer of the year 1719, 5 George I. proved a maiden one, which had not been known before x. 92 Ap.
- MAID of KENT. See B A R T O N E L I Z A B E T H.
- M A I M I N G.
 Indictment for maiming vi. 60. Ap. See C O K E A R U N D E L. W O O D - B U R N E J O H N.
- M A J O R, M r.
 Of counsel for George Purchase viii. 274
- M A I T L A N D, C H A R L E S Lord, of Halton,
 Proceedings against him, before the lords of the articles, &c. for giving false testimony at the trial of James Mitchell ii. 636. viii. 436
 The petition to the lords against him, and the letters on which the petition was grounded viii. 436
 Lord Halton's answer viii. 437
 Declared innocent viii. 439
 Copies of Mitchell's two confessions viii. 439
- * M A L I C E.
 * Malice express, and implied, defined ii. 643. ix. 63
 * Where the law implies malice iii. 62, 939. iv. 386
 * The pursuing malicious methods to obtain a right, makes the party doing it liable to an action iii. 1090
 Woodward of a park killing a person who makes no resistance, is said in law to do it in premeditated malice ix. 533. n.
 He who doth a cruel act voluntarily, doth it of malice prepense ix. 63, 536. n.
 Some have been led into a mistake, by not well considering what the passion of malice is: they have construed it to be a rantour of mind lodged in the person killing for some considerable time before the commission of the fact; which is a mistake arising from not well distinguishing between hatred and malice. By Holt, chief justice ix. 63, 536. n. See ii. 643.
 Malice is a design formed of doing mischief to another; he that useth the means to do ill, is malicious ix. 63
 Malice implied is malice prepense, in the opinion of lord chief justice Holt ix. 63
- M A L L E T, S I R T H O M A S, Judge B. R.
 The time of king Charles the first's death, in respect to the king's reign, was omitted in the indictment against the regicides, in accordance to mr. justice Mallet's opinion ii. 303
 Extract of his opinion concerning libels, who was one of the justices of the court of King's-Bench iii. 312
- M A N C H E S T E R, H E N R Y Earl of, Lord Privy Seal,
 His speech for a mild sentence on Henry Sherfield, esq. convicted by information 5 U

mation in Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glass window in a church i. 415, 416
Parliament resolve that his warrant for the imprisonment of Prynne is unjust and illegal, and that he ought to give him satisfaction for the damages sustained by his imprisonment i. 504

M A N D A M U S.

Record on a Mandamus for admission into the freedom of a corporation x. 138, 139. Ap. See MOORE HENRY, and the Corporation of HASTINGS.

* MANDATE. See CAMBRIDGE MAGDALEN COLLEGE.
MANSEL, Sir ROBERT. See WHITELOCKE JAMES.

MANSFIELD, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
His argument on error in the cause of Fabrigas and Mofyn, when judgment of C. B. affirmed xi. 195

His charge to the jury on the prosecution of J. Horne, Esq. for a libel xi. 287

Declares, that if any man dare give orders to murder a subject, or to make any subject a slave, he is as high a criminal as can exist in the state xi. 288. See KINGSTON Dukes Dowager of, LOVAT Lord's trial ix. *740. *747. MURRAY WILLIAM. POPULARITY.

MANSFIELD, JAMES. See KINGSTON Dukes.

WILKES JOHN.

* MANSFIELD, RICHARD, Esq. iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* MANSLAUGHTER. See MURDER.

MANWOOD, Sir ROGER, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,
One of the commissioners on the trial of Babington and others for treason

And on the trial of Abington, for like offence i. 127
His speech on the arraignment of Davison in the Star-chamber vii. 19, 21, 24, 26

MARCH, Mr.

Of counsel against William Acton ix. 182, 209, 218

His observations on opening for Gibson on quo warranto x. 118, 123. Ap.

His objections to evidence for Elles on quo warranto x. 131. See id. 135. Ap.

MARINER, S.

Whether mariners can be legally impressed into the service of the crown. See PRESSING.

MARKHAM, Sir GRIFFIN,
Sir Edward Parham, George Brocke, Bartholomew Brookesby, Anthony Capley, William Watfon, and William Clarke, their trials for high-treason, at Winchester, 1603

The commissioners names vii. 63

The indictment vii. 63

All but Sir Edward Parham found guilty vii. 65

A copy of a letter, giving an account of these proceedings vii. 65

A true copy of his majesty's warrant, written with his own hand, to the sheriff of Hampshire, to suspend the execution of Lord Cobham, Lord Grey, and Sir Griffin Markham vii. 66

MARKHAM, Sir JOHN,
It is said by Huffey, chief justice, that Sir John Markham told King Edw. IV. he could not arrest a man either for treason or felony as a subject might, because if the king did wrong, the party injured could not have an action against him vii. 120, 129, 130, 146, 171, 219, 221. See id. 208, 209.

iv. 558.

* MARRIAGE.

* If a woman be taken away by force and afterwards married, though by her consent, the person taking her is guilty of felony v. 464

* Marrying a woman under a force is felony, though the party marrying her was not author of the force v. 473

* One may be guilty of felony in aiding and assisting a person in a forcible marriage, though not present at the ceremony v. 478

* The marriage is null and void ab initio, where either of the parties are pre-contracted v. 628

* Marrying a second wife, the first being alive, felony by statute v. 627

Whether second marriage, founded on divorce for impotency, be legal x. 23. Ap.

The marriage act commented on xi. 224, 234

A sentence of nullity is conclusive evidence in a personal action against a defence founded upon a supposed coverture xi. 261

Sentence of nullity, and sentence in affirmance of marriage, is conclusive evidence on a question of legitimacy arising incidentally upon a claim to a real estate. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

Sentence in a cause of jactitation, is, upon a title in ejectment, evidence against the marriage; and so it is in personal actions, immediately founded on a supposed marriage. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

A direct sentence in a suit upon promise of marriage against the contract, admitted evidence against such contract in an action upon the promise for damages. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 261

Sentence in spiritual court against marriage in suit of jactitation of marriage, is not conclusive evidence, so as to stop proof of marriage in indictment for polygamy. Resolved unanimously by all the judges of England xi. 262

The approbation of the marriages of the king's grand-children, and also of the presumptive heir to the crown, in whatever degree related to the king, belongs to his majesty. So resolved by all the judges of England xi. 295. See ROYAL FAMILY. BAYNTON SARAH. FIELDING ROBERT. KINGSTON Dukes of. HARTWELL JOHN. SHREWSBURY Counts of. SWENSDEN HAGEN.

MARSHAL, WILLIAM ii. 917. See id. 453. WALKMAN, & al. ii. 993. ANDERSON, & al. ii. 993.

MARSON, JOHN v. 194. See COWPER, & al.

MARTEN, HENRY ii. 309, 392. See REGICIDES.

MARTIN, Sir H. B. N. R.

His speech concerning the petition of right, at a conference vii. 208

MARY, Queen of England,
Her cruelties exceeded her father's, Hen. VIII. xi. 25

MARY, Queen of Scots,
Depositions of the persons concerned in the murder of her husband, the earl of Darnley viii. 327

Duke of Norfolk's indictment for high-treason, in endeavouring to marry her viii. 335

Her commission to try earl Bonwell, for the murder of her husband the king of Scots i. 77

The commission for her trial i. 145

The commission for her execution i. 161. See SCOTS.

MASON, ROBERT, of Lincoln's-Inn,
Of counsel against William Prynne, for writing Histriomastix i. 421

His speech for the bill concerning magna charta, and the liberty of the subject vii. 194

His speech concerning the additions of the lords to the petition of right vii. 200

Argues against the return of the habeas corpus brought by Walter Long vii. 220

For Sir John Elliot and Denzil Holles, for seditious speeches in parliament vii. 242, 243

Argues against return of habeas corpus for William Stroud and others vii. 219

* MAS SLOTH. See PLOT POPISH.

MASTERS in CHANCERY.

Commissions granted to masters, appointing them to hear causes vi. 505

Their oath vi. 504

Formerly the chancellors took money for the places of masters in Chancery vi. 650, 706

Joined with the judges in commissions, to hear causes in absence of the chancellor vi. 505, 506, 619

Sir Joseph Jekyll, master of the rolls, took notice, that the masters in Chancery assumed to themselves a power of judicature in Chancery vi. 629

Their office anciently was quite different from what it is now, so that it is in a manner forgot what it originally was vi. 706

Of their employment in matters of account vi. 706

Of their duty on references to them touching the sufficiency of answers vi. 706

MASTER and SERVANT.

Servant may justify killing another to save his master's life, if he cannot otherwise escape ii. 7

If master be provoked to a degree of passion by some misfeasance of the servant, and corrects him with a moderate weapon, and chance to kill him, it is but misadventure; but if he use an improper instrument in the correction, and kills the servant, it is murder ix. 64

MATTHEWS, JOHN,
His trial for printing a treasonable libel, entitled, Vox Populi Vox Dei, Ex ore tuo te judico, Os. 30, 1719

Tried before eleven judges ix. 680. See id. 236

Debate whether it was a legal pannel, it being without the addition of parish, ward, dwelling-place, or abode ix. 680. See id. 235, 236

Court agreed it was a good pannel, the city of London not being within the meaning of the act ix. 680. See id. 235, 236

His indictment ix. 680, &c.

Mr. Boyle opens the indictment and evidence against him ix. 682

Mr. Lechmere (attorney-general), his speech against him ix. 684

Serjeant Cheshire on the same side ix. 686

He desires the witnesses may be kept out of the hearing of one another ix. 687

Ordered by the court, that they shall stay out till called ix. 687

Evidence against him ix. 687

Cross-examined by Mr. Hungerford and Mr. Kettleby ix. 688, &c.

Mr. Hungerford's speech in defence of the prisoner ix. 696

Mr. Kettleby on the same side ix. 698

Evidence in favour of the prisoner ix. 700

Cross-examined by the attorney-general ix. 701

Debate about reading of a paper signed by the prisoner ix. 702

Ordered to be read ix. 702

Evidence to invalidate what some of the witnesses had sworn against the prisoner ix. 704

Attorney-general's reply ix. 704

Serjeant Cheshire's observations on what the prisoner's counsel had said ix. 706

Mr. Lutwch on the same side ix. 707

Lord chief justice King's opinion on the act of parliament on which the prisoner was indicted ix. 708

Lord chief justice King sums up the evidence ix. 708

Found guilty ix. 711

Mr. Hungerford moves in arrest of judgment, that the word impress doth not necessarily import printing, unless explained by an Anglican ix. 711

Mr. Kettleby on the same side ix. 711

Attorney-general in answer to them ix. 712

Mr. Lutwch on the same side ix. 712

Mr. Rees on the same side ix. 712

Mr. Boyle on the same side ix. 713

Mr. Hungerford in answer to them ix. 714

Mr. Kettleby on the same side ix. 714

Court over-ruled the objection, and that impress was very proper to signify printing, as used in the indictment ix. 714

Mr. Hungerford made another objection, that the indictment does not pursue the words of the act of parliament ix. 714

Mr. Kettleby on the same side ix. 714

Mr. attorney-general's reply, that they are not bound to pursue the words of the act of parliament ix. 714

Serjeant Cheshire on the same side ix. 715

Mr. Hungerford by way of reply ix. 715

Lord chief justice King's opinion upon it ix. 715

Mr. Kettleby says, that the act of parliament goes all the way in the plural number, and they have laid the indictment in the singular ix. 715

Attorney-

Attorney-general's answer to it ix. 715
Mr. Hungerford says, the act of parliament makes it high-treason to affirm, &c. that any person hath a right to the crown of these realms; and they have not mentioned Ireland ix. 715

Recorder passed sentence upon him, and he was executed at Tyburn ix. 715
M A W G R I D G E, J O H N,
 His case on a special verdict for murder ix. 61
 Escapes from the Marshalsea to Flanders ix. 66
 Is taken, brought into England, and executed at Tyburn ix. 66

M A X I M S.
 The principal maxims, &c. from scripture, the common law, the civil law, and the classics, to be found in this work, arranged alphabetically.

A.

Ab initio secundum legem Dei i. 288
 Ab inutili et incommodo vii. 146
 Ab inutili et incommodo vii. 146
 Ab regis honore i. 272. xi. 56
 Abundans cautela non nocet i. 300
 Abuti fortibus, ut confunderentur omnia i. 281
 Accidens sine subiecto, individuum vagum, et nihil indeclinabile i. 281
 Acta probatoria in uno processu, fidem non faciunt in alio ii. 636
 Acta sumunt denominationem a potentiori i. 443
 Actionem injuriarum nunquam competere, nisi dolus et animus injuriandi adsit viii. 198
 Actor sit author vii. 184
 Actore non probante, absolvitur reus v. 586
 Actus legis nemini facit injuriam ix. 653
 Actus legitimus non recipit tempus aut conditionem xi. 34
 Actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea ii. 74, 79. iii. 792
 Ad animæ deliquium i. 302
 Ad concilium ne accedas, antequam voceris iii. 1094
 Additio probat minoritatem vii. 170
 Adea quæ frequentius acciderint, adaptantur leges i. 533, 1004. v. 695
 Ad faciendum populum xi. 97, 320
 Ad illud separandum, quod Deus conjunxit i. 255, 635. v. 557
 Ad instruendum, non ad destruendum i. 286
 Ad oppositum xi. 109
 Adulterium potentia i. 308
 Aetas parentum pejor avis tulit ii. 356
 Nos nequiores, mox daturos
 Progeniem vitiosorem iii. 772
 A facto ad jus non valet argumentum vii. 636
 Afflictio dat intellectum i. 338
 A grumbletonian in the stirrup generally proves a tyrant in the saddle iii. 777
 Aliud est distinctio, aliud separatio xi. 84
 Aliud est nasci, aliud fieri xi. 80
 All private mischief must be borne with patience, to prevent a national calamity xi. 315
 All things are to be presumed in disfavour of the spoliator ix. 426
 Altum silentium xi. 33
 A majori ad minus vii. 145
 A minore ad majus ii. 212. vii. 170, 172. viii. 68
 A minore ad majus non valet v. 586, 759
 Amicus Gerardus, sed magis amica veritas viii. 366
 Ampliandi sunt favores ii. 138. vii. 302
 Anima et vita regnorum autoritas vii. 112
 Animus injuriandi non presumitur i. 445
 Antehac flagitiis laborabatur, nunc legibus Em. Pref. xv.
 A personis vii. 210
 Appensi in statera, inventi sunt minus habentes i. 267
 Arcana Dei et imperii vii. 133, 183
 Argumenta et indicia clara et evidenter, quæ faciunt fidem judici vi. 290
 Argumentum ab autoritate valet affirmative vii. 170
 Argumentum ratio quæ rei dubiæ, facit fidem v. 592
 Arma ferenti omnia dant, quæ iusta negat vii. 57, 228
 Arma subditorum preces et lacrymæ vii. 145
 Arte perire sua ii. 8. See Lex justior &c.
 Assassini crimen, ob illius atrocitatem, æquiparatur crimini læsæ majestatis
 v. 584
 Assassini qualitas homicidio adjecta, novam constituit delicti speciem v. 584
 Assentiri et co-opinari incidunt in virum sapientem i. 467
 Assurgat rex vii. 110
 A tempore vii. 110
 Audaces fortuna juvat vii. 785
 Augenda sacerdotum jura, jura regia minui i. 219
 Auferat oblitio si potest, si non, utcumque tegat silentium v. 83. vii. 108.
 xi. 25

B.

Bona libertas vii. 145
 Bonum in se i. 214
 Bonum qui communius, eo præstantius xi. 32
C.
 Calamos armare veneno xi. 111
 Calumnia, malitiosa juris interpretatio i. 749
 Candide & caste i. 749
 Capti in bello non sunt occidendi i. 749
 Carcer ad continendos homines, non ad puniendos haberi debet Em. Pref. xv.
 vii. 448. vii. 127, 230
 Causa causæ est causa causati i. 768
 Causa causans causa causata vii. 130
 Causa omittus habetur pro omisso i. 634
 Cessante causa, cessare debet effectus i. 634. xi. 83
 Cessas regnare, si cessas judicare vii. 110

Circumstances in many cases are of greater force, and more to be depended upon, than the testimony of living witnesses ix. 426

Claves legum ii. 465
 Clericus in oppido, tanquam piscis in arido i. 338
 Cogitationis poenam nemo patitur v. 634
 Colore infamiæ, sub velamine petitionis i. 445
 Columna et corona reipublicæ, justitia vii. 144
 Commendo eludere juramentum iii. 452
 Commoda aliena pari dolore i. 302
 Commovere nauseam quam bilem i. 278
 Commune periculum requirit commune auxilium vii. 171, 172
 Communis error facit jus viii. 74. xi. 310, 311
 Communis est opinio confessionem valere ii. 631
 Communiter usitata et approbata xi. 312
 Compendia dispendia vii. 172
 Conatus et attentatum habentur pro crimine consummato ii. 634
 Conatus faciendi non reputatur pro facto ii. 634
 Concordia multos facit unum xi. 105
 Conditio annectitur, ubi libertas præsumitur xi. 34
 Confessio emanata sub spe impunitatis non importat condemnationem
 i. 450
 Confessio non potest pro parte acceptari, et pro parte sperni i. 453
 Confessus habetur pro convicto iii. 1098
 Confessus non est audiendus ut testis iii. 1098
 Confitendum est ne frustra interrogasset vii. 70
 Conjunctus non presumitur injuria i. 442
 Consilium non decretum i. 322
 Constitutio poenalis non excedit casum ii. 8
 Consuetudo et statuta loci, in quem est destinata solutio, respicienda sunt xi. 69
 Consuetudo peccandi tollit sensum peccati vii. 51
 Contemporanea expositio est fortissima in lege vii. 144
 Contingentia argumenta quanquam singula fidem non faciunt v. 592
 Continuante causâ, continuandus effectus i. 634
 Contraria juxta se posita magis elucescunt i. 708
 Cor linguæ fœderat naturæ sanctio i. 255
 Corporalis injuria non recipit estimationem vii. 145
 Corruptio optimorum est pessima xi. 109
 Cortici verborum abhorrendum est ii. 634
 Cor unum et anima una i. 272
 Credulitas in furtis præbet causam probabilem i. 458, 461
 Crescente malitiâ, crescere debet et poena i. 243
 Crimen assassini, interveniente pretio i. 634
 Crimen læsæ majestatis i. 214, 235
 Crimen vel delictum non potest purgari bonâ intentione vii. 277
 Crudelis misericordia ii. 8
 Crudelitas parcens i. 240
 Cui adsunt testimonia rerum, quid opus est verbis? i. 261
 Cuilibet in arte sua credendum est i. 634. vii. 205. xi. 93
 Cui licet quod majus, licet etiam quod minus xi. 50
 Cui quod majus est licet, et ei quod est minus licitum est xi. 60
 Cujus est dare, ejus est dispendere xi. 88
 Cum duo jura concurrunt in una persona, æquum est ac si essent in diversis xi. 76, 81, 82, 87, 104
 Cum grano salis xi. 135
 Cum inventa est veritas, figendum ibi judicium xi. 106
 Cum omnibus nationibus in circuitu i. 305
 Cum princeps orat, præcibus præcepta colorat i. 635
 Cum rex sit author juris, non debet inde injuriæ nasci occasio i. 635
 Cum scelera profunt, peccat qui recte facit i. 301
 Cum sit timida nequitia, dat testimonium condemnationis i. 264, 303
 Cum sudore vultus, et tremore cordis i. 284
 Cum triplici fulvum conjunge leone leonem,
 Ut varias atavus junxerat ante rosas.
 Majus opus varios sine pugna unire leones,
 Sanguine quam varias confocasse rosas i. 252
 Cunctatio nulla longa, ubi agitur de vitâ hominis, non solum de vitâ sed de famâ vii. 386
 Currere quatuor pedibus xi. 126
 Custos utriusque tabulæ vii. 622, xi. 74

D.

Dammum absque injuria i. 637. vii. 112, 184, 444, 506
 Dat tempus et locum per quæ potestis mutari a malitia i. 308
 Date Casari quæ sunt Casari xi. 66, 74
 Date Deo quæ sunt Deo xi. 74
 Dato uno absurdo, infinita sequuntur i. 687
 Deceptio visus i. 278
 Decepto sensu cum judicio i. 303
 De chartis et factis regis, non debent, aut possunt, justiciarii aut privatus personæ disputare xi. 107
 Defendit numerus vii. 116
 Deficiente lege, recurritur ad consuetudinem xi. 76
 Deficiente consuetudine, recurritur ad rationem naturalem xi. 76
 De his quæ non sunt, et non apparent, idem est judicium i. 966, 967.
 See De non &c.
 De jure, in dubiis et obscuris, quod minimum et benignius sequimur i. 439
 De jure socius aut particeps criminis adversus locum fidem non facit
 i. 450, 453, 479
 Delegatus non potest delegare x. 442
 Delicta non presumuntur, sed probantur vii. 282
 Delictum debet esse manifestum v. 593
 Demens est qui fidem præstat errori i. 301
 De minimis non curat lex i. 648
 De more gentis xi. 61
 De morte hominis nulla est cunctatio longa v. 96. See Cunctatio, &c.
 De

De non apparentibus et non existentibus, eadem ratio est ii. 467. v. 125.
 See De hiis, &c.
 Denominatio sumenda a potentiore i. 445
 De nostris annis sibi Jupiter augeat annos i. 307
 De similibus idem est iudicium xi. 93
 Delinit esse remedio locus i. 278
 Determinatione finis i. 214
 De vita hominis nulla est cunctatio longa iii. 105
 Dicta facta presupponunt, et trahunt se cum suis circumstantiis vii. 276
 Dies diei eructat verbum, et nox nocti indicat scientiam i. 304
 Difficile est satiras non scribere iii. 784
 Dii tibi dent quicquid, princeps auguste, mereris, Et rata perpetuo, quæ tribuere, velint i. 308
 Discernere per legem quid sit iustum ii. 466. See v. 99
 Disce iustitiam moniti, et non temnere Divos i. 308
 Discretio est discernere per legem quid sit iustum xi. 134. See v. 99
 Disputandi gratia iv. 197
 Dissimulatione tollitur injuria iv. 286
 Distingendum inter verba narrativa et alia verba dispositiva i. 437
 Diversitas loci varia argueret facinora vii. 399
 Divinum quiddam in vulgi opinione i. 332
 Divili ab orbe Britannii vii. 148
 Divisibilis in semper divisibilia i. 235
 Dixit O mores, O tempora! Tullius olim, Romanum struerat cum Catilina nefas.
 O tempora dicimus, &c. vii. 60
 Et cur non dicimus, O mores!
 Dolum generale in omni actione injuriarum tanquam substantiale requiritur i. 441
 Dolum in injuria requirit i. 441
 Dolus et culpa semper præsumitur vii. 200
 Dolus et error versantur in generalibus vii. 406
 Dolus et malus est de substantia criminis i. 440
 Dolus non sit præsumendus i. 465
 Dominium fundatur in gratia vii. 502
 Ducere volentes, trahere nolentes i. 506
 Dum incerti utemur jure, fluctuaret respublica vii. 394
 Dum tempus habemus, bonum operemur vii. 141
 Dum volumus per iram aliena coercere, graviora committimus i. 298
 E.
 Eadem præsumitur esse mens regis quæ legis vii. 630
 Ea sententia accipienda est semper, quæ res gerendæ aptior est i. 439
 Eatenus rationandum, donec veritas inveniat xi. 106
 Eius est condemnare, cujus est absolvere vii. 63
 Eius sit interpretare, cujus est condere xi. 105
 Electione mediorum i. 214
 Eligere infirma, ut confundat fortia i. 300
 Eodem modo quo quod constituitur, dissolvitur vii. 357
 Eo modo quo offendit i. 409
 Errare cum patribus v. 746. vi. 620. vii. 149. 186
 Errore decipi i. 299
 Errorem ad sua principia referre, est refellere vii. 144
 Et lupus, et turpes instant morientibus uris i. 224
 Et tu Brute? iii. 784
 Ex abundanti cautela v. 559
 Ex Alia ruinis i. 284
 Exceptio ejusdem rei cujus petitur dissolutio vii. 442
 Exceptio format regulam in non exceptis i. 571, 972. iv. 299. v. 588.
 Exceptio in casibus exceptis destruit regulam vii. 209
 Exceptione rei judicæ vii. 220
 Excludetur præsumptio delicti i. 466
 Ex congruo et condigno vii. 172. 210
 Ex consequenti i. 284
 Ex duobus malis minimum eligendum est vii. 391
 Exempla ducunt, non trahunt xi. 111
 Ex extremis media præsumuntur i. 445
 Ex leprosis parentibus, leprosi generantur filii i. 238
 Ex malis moribus bonæ oriuntur leges Em. Pref. vi. i. 329. vii. 528
 Ex merito iustitiæ i. 172
 Ex minutione laicorum, se sacerdotum promovisse gloriam i. 278
 Ex moribus legis i. 446
 Expedi reipublicæ, ut finis aliquis sit litium ix. 653. xi. 218
 Expertus sapiat i. 273
 Ex præsumptionibus et conjecturis nemo criminaliter condemnari potest iv. 287
 Expressio ejus quod tacite inest, nihil operatur vii. 269
 Expressio unius v. 559
 Ex quibus jus oritur vii. 397
 Ex regis spiritu, nos omnes spiritum ducimus i. 261
 Ex solo indelibili unctionis caractere i. 275
 Extra iudicium et spe veniæ ii. 629
 Extrema obruunt media xi. 34
 Et unguibus leo i. 289
 F.
 Fabula non iudicium xi. 224. 233
 Facilius invenitur, quod a pluribus queritur xi. 191
 Facta ex incontinenti, ubi potest docere de errore ii. 632
 Facta valent i. 637
 Factum infectum fieri nequit iii. 760
 Felices essent artes, si per solos artifices iudicarentur i. 662
 Fallacia a bene divinis ad mala conjuncta vii. 399
 Fallacia a dicto secundum quod ad dictum simpliciter vii. 626
 Fas est, si ab hoste doceri Em. Pref. vii. i. 133
 Favores ampliandi i. 571. ii. 128. vii. 302

Favos etiam vespes faciunt i. 267, 268
 Ferendo, non feriendo i. 252
 Festina lente i. 626
 Fiat iustitia, currat lex, & vincat veritas i. 264
 Fiat iustitia, ruat cælum vii. 622, 629. xi. 332
 Fictio juris i. 454
 Fides veri a calumniâ defenderit i. 441
 Flagellatur in corde, qui laudatur in ore i. 249. xi. 103
 Flectere cum nequeo superos, Achilenta movebo i. 268
 Fortes Deus adjuvat i. 785
 — Forum, putealque Libonis
 Mandabo liccis iii. 778
 Fraus et dolus nemine patrocinari debent xi. 220
 Fraus tantum ab iniustitiâ oritur vii. 334
 Frustra potentia quæ nunquam redigitur in statutum vii. 180
 Funiculus triplex non facile rumpitur i. 305. vii. 362
 G.
 Generalitas parit obscuritatem vii. 400
 Gens una summa ii. 11
 Gentem auferte perfidam
 Credentium de finibus i. 258, 303
 Gloria Dei celare, regis perscrutare rem i. 335, 350
 Gratiosa ampliari decet, odiosa restringi xi. 55
 Gratis dictum xi. 296
 Gratuitas cicatrices i. 743
 Gravatis addere gravamina i. 261
 Graviora criminalia iudicia civilibus sunt v. 592
 H.
 Hab. corp. festinum remedium iv. 562
 Em. Pref. v. i. 220. vii. 171
 Hæc fac, et vives
 Hæres nondum in mundum emersa i. 297
 Hæres succedit in defuncti locum i. 276
 Hæretici omnes ipso jure excommunicati i. 237
 High or extraordinary justice is injustice i. 199
 Hoc solum rex non potest agere, quod non potest agere iuste i. 642, 643
 v. 104
 Hominum excessit metus i. 277
 Homo a Deo secundus, et solo Deo minor i. 277
 Homo homini lupus xi. 135
 Homo non multum recessit ab arte sua i. 616
 Homo spiritualis iudicatur a nemine i. 286
 Honores mutant mores i. 230. vii. 48. n.
 Hostis humani generis vii. 74. n.
 Humanum est errare i. 446, 646. vii. 111
 Humores moti et non remoti corpus destruant vii. 148
 J.
 Jacta est alea i. 246, 305
 Id non sit, quod non legitime sit iv. 253
 Id possumus, quod jure possumus v. 129
 If we keep the law the law will keep us ii. 200
 Ignorantia juris est calamitas innocentis Em. Pref. v. i. 464
 Ignorantia juris excusat a dolo i. 461
 Ignorantia juris in damnis vitandis non nocet i. 461
 Ignorantia juris non excusat Em. Pref. vii. i. 412, 417, 457, 463, 464.
 iii. 299. n. 659, 794. vii. 64. See ix. 299. n.
 Ignorantia maxime inexcusabilis, nescire quod omnes sciunt i. 458, 461, 462, 464.
 Ille crucem sceleris pretium tulit, hic diadema i. 300
 Ille terrori subicit, hic servituti donatur i. 277
 Impubes et furiosus non possunt facere injuriam i. 441
 Impunitas continua affectum tribuit peccandi i. 240
 In ambiguis orationibus maxime sententia spectanda est ejus, qui eas protulit i. 439
 In assassinio omnia procedant quæ in criminibus exceptis v. 584
 In divio quærentes divinationem i. 303
 In causa criminali verba in dubio debent intelligi ad bonum i. 466
 In civilibus disentionibus, quamvis sæpe respublica lædatur, non tamen in exitum reipublicæ contenditur i. 970, 971
 Incommodum non solvit argumentum x. 72
 In confessione jurata nullo pænæ metu propter impunitatem promissum i. 454
 In contentem nullæ sunt partes iudicis ii. 632
 In criminalibus sufficit generalis malicia viii. 34. n.
 In cruento prælio i. 16
 Indignum æquipollet universali xi. 49
 Indigni sunt, qui de minimis iudicent i. 283
 Indignum rege vii. 147
 In dubiis benignior fieri debet interpretatio vii. 278
 In dubiis benigniora præferenda sunt vii. 417
 In dubiis et generalibus benignior sensus est præferendus iii. 1056
 In dubio semper in mitiorem partem est præsumendum v. 590
 In delictis præsumitur dolus, nisi probatum contrarium vii. 282
 In delictis voluntas, non finis, attenditur i. 440
 In eo quis rectissime plectitur, in quo peccat xi. 113
 In factio jus oritur ii. 442
 In favorem vitæ iv. 188
 In figura iudicii, sed amicabiliter i. 272
 In furore belli ii. 15
 In genere, non in individuo xi. 61
 Ingressuræ solo, caput inter nubila condit vii. 151
 In ipsa vindicta libertatis i. 305
 Iniquum petere, ut æquum ferrent i. 628
 Iniquus dignitatis iudex, qui aut invidet, aut nimium favet i. 395
 In iure quod usa invaluit i. 464
 Iniquum non factum queritur sed causa faciendam expressa i. 441
 Injuria non fieri sine animo injuriandi i. 441. See i. 456
 Injuria

Injuria non judicium	vii. 99	Libertas potius auro	vii. 184
In majorem cautelam	ii. 13	Libellus nihil ambiguitatis vel obscuritatis continere debet	vii. 399
In majorem securitatem	xi. 56	Ligamentum fidei inter Deum et animam	i. 673
In maleficiis voluntas spectatur, non exitus	i. 441. ix. 606	Ligandi et solvendi potestatem privat qui eam injuste exercet	i. 298
In medio spatio mediocria firma locantur	i. 225	Ligeantia dicitur a ligando	xi. 87
In odium spoliatoris	x. 445	Ligeantia est ligamentum	xi. 87
In omnibus judiciis suis æquitatem, non rigorem legis, observare	i. 219	Ligeantia est quasi legis essentia	xi. 87, 102
In ore, in manu, in consummatione	i. 214	Ligeantia est vinculum fidei	xi. 87, 102, marg.
In penalibus causis semper benignius interpretandum est	ii. 138	Ligeantiam naturalem nemo ejurare potest, nec patriam exuere	ii. 9
In pates est nullum imperium	vii. 274. xi. 216	Lingua detractionis est lancea triplex	vii. 104
In patientia possidentur animæ	vii. 245	Littera scripta manet	ii. 464
In planis non opus est conjecturis	i. 275	Localis ligeantia est ligeantia infima, et minima, et maxime incerta	xi. 88
In presentia majoris, cessat potestas minoris	xi. 49	Longa patientia trahit ad consensum	i. 514
In probatione assassinii, probabilia sufficiunt argumenta	vii. 92	Loquendum ad vulgus	ii. 346
In quacunque hora peccator ingemuerit	v. 584	Lubricum linguæ facile ad pœnam non est trahendum	i. 447
In se magna ruunt	i. 263	Luce clariores	i. 249, 322, 453, 454. iii. 462. v. 588, 590. xi. 83
In senatu nemo tenetur de consilio	i. 283
In summo gradu	vii. 408	Magis docet, qui prudenter interrogat	xi. 105
Integralis unitas, in solutione continui	i. 214	Magna est charta, & prævalebit	vii. 187
Inter arma leges silent	i. 269	Magna est veritas, et prævalebit	i. 261, 545. vii. 187. xi. 106, 124
Interest reipublicæ ut maleficia non maneant impunita	i. 536, 547, 585. vii. 400	Major hæreditas venit unicuique nostrum a jure et legibus, quam a parentibus	vii. 172
	vii. 247. x. 40.	Major relatio trahit ad se minorem	ii. 5, 9
	See vii. 112	Major singulis, universis minor	v. 733
In terminis terminantibus	vii. 169, 172	Majus dignum trahit ad se minus dignum	ii. 10
Inter omnia probationum genera, major est illa, quæ sit per testes de visu	v. 584	Maledicta expositio, quæ corrumpit textum	v. 695
Interpretantur legem consuetudo et princeps	xi. 105	Malitia supplet ætatem	xi. 103
Inter utrumque volat dubiis victoria pennis	i. 973	Malum in se	i. 214. vi. 637, 708. vii. 614
Inter voluptates, tam numeratur id quod habes, quam id quod speras	i. 271	Malum prohibitum	v. 708. vii. 614
In verba veritatis	i. 299	Marcescere in carcere	vii. 184
In victoria veritatis, soli veritatis inimici perierunt	i. 302. xi. 106	Maris & scemina conjunctio est de jure naturæ	xi. 91
Ira furor brevis	ix. 18. xi. 113	Maxime spectanda est sententia proferentis	vii. 275
Judex bonus nihil ex arbitrio suo faciat, nec proposito domesticæ voluntatis, sed juxta leges et jura pronunciet	xi. 96	Memoria ejus semper erat in benedictione	i. 252
Judex debet procedere secundum naturam rei prohibita	i. 463	Mendax infamia	xi. 331
Judex est lex loquens	xi. 87	Mentiri salvâ reverentiâ	vii. 277
Judex ex his quæ decisa sunt, statuet, et de similibus ad similia procedat	xi. 37	Metus & noxa conscientie pro fœdere	i. 302
Judicandum est legibus, non exemplis	i. 684. v. 97	Minæ præcedentes, & damnum sequutum	iv. 289, 291
Judicium non redditur, nisi in invitum	iv. 252. vii. 170, 112	Minima pœna corporalis est major qualibet pecuniaria	vii. 171
Juramentum cum septimâ manu	x. 25	Minime nunquam crescit ex post facto præteriti delicti æstimatio	i. 440
Jura naturalia sunt immutabilia	xi. 91	Mira cano, sol occubuit, nox nulla sequuta est	i. 236
Jura, perjury, secretum prodere noli	i. 278	Misera est servitus, ubi jus est vagum, aut incognitum	ii. 28. n.
Jurat? crede minus, non jurat? credere noli	i. 256		iii. 763. vii. 334. Em. Pref. vii.
Jurat, non jurat hostis, ab hoste cave	i. 256	Miseria constat ex quibus contrariis, scilicet, copiâ & inopiâ; ex copiâ tribulationis, & inopiâ consolationis	i. 252
Jurisprudencia legis communis Angliæ est scientia socialis et copiosa	xi. 97	Misericordia puniens	i. 240. vii. 28
Jus gentium omni humano genere commune est	i. 970	Moderamen inculpatæ tutelæ	v. 586
Jus originis nemo mutare potest	ii. 5	Modo mentem injuratum gereret, etiam si lingua juraret	i. 278
Justitia columna et corona reipublicæ	vii. 144	Modus non factum efficit culpam	vii. 27, 28
Justissima lex est, ut quæ agit aliquis, talia patiatur	vii. 100	Mora trahit periculum	i. 626
Justitia confirmata non eget autoritate	i. 347	More interpretatio capienda est	vii. 416
Justitiâ fruendi causâ reges constituti sunt	i. 993	Mors in olla	i. 333
Justitia totius Angliæ	xi. 260	Mortuæ mortiferæ	ii. 171
Justum non juste	xi. 59	Mortuus homo non est homo	vii. 170
Jus venit, quod usus comprobavit	xi. 100	Multi committunt eadem diverso crimina fæto	i. 300
		Multitudo errantium non parit errori patrociniū	i. 656
King (The) cannot alter the law	xi. 53	Mutatâ ratione legis, mutatur lex	ii. 13
King (The) cannot do wrong	i. 625, 642, 672. ii. 305, 306, 753.	Mutatio hypothesis	xi. 60
	vii. 183, 184	Mutua debet esse domini & fidelitatis connectio	xi. 87
King (The) is trusted with the state of the commonwealth	i. 625
		Naturæ ordo	ii. 8
Lapis Lydius	i. 290	Naturâ servus	xi. 79
Law against the law of God is void	v. 115	Natus ad fidem regis	xi. 83
Law delighteth in certainty, and it doth abandon uncertainty, as the mother of all debate and confusion, than which there is nothing more odious in law	ii. 209	Nec decor efficit fragilem, non scepra superbam,	i. 252
Legati suo regi soli judicium faciunt	vii. 245	Sola potens humilis, sola pudica decus	i. 252
Legatus fit rex in alieno solo	vii. 348	Necessitas culpabilis	ii. 7
Leges egregiæ apud bonos ex delictis aliorum gignuntur	Em. Pref. vi.	Necessitas est lex temporum	i. 546, 568, 586
Leges humanæ nascuntur, vivunt, et moriuntur	xi. 96	Necessitas legem irridet	vii. 391
Leges naturæ perfectissimæ	xi. 96	Necessitas magnum humanæ imbecillitatis patrociniū, omnem legem frangit	i. 535
Leges per desuetudinem tacito consensu censentur abrogatæ	i. 437	Necessitas non habet legem	i. 638
Leges posteriores priores abrogant	xi. 14	Necessitas quod cogit, defendit	i. 566
Leges temporis	xi. 101	Nec infatur, nec est ambitiosa	i. 278
Legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet	xi. 101	Negativum valet	i. 586
Levia judicia sufficiunt	i. 465	Nemini oportet esse sapienterem legibus	vii. 170. xi. 87
Lex caveat de futuris	vii. 194	Nemo bis puniri debet pro eodem delicto	ii. 851. vi. 495, 465. vii. 416
Lex est, quando quis aliquid alicui concedit, concedit et id sine quo res ipsa non potest	i. 625		Em. Pref. ix.
Lex est ratio summa, jubens ea quæ faciendæ sunt, et prohibens contraria	xi. 103	Nemo læditur nisi a seipso	vii. 107
Lex est regula et mensura actuum agendorum vel omittendorum, non actorum et omissorum	vii. 334	Nemo legibus sapientior	iii. 792
Lex et consuetudo parliamenti querenda est ab omnibus, ignota a multis, et cognita a paucis	i. 616. v. 101, vii. 161, 162. xi. 336	Nemo moriturus præsumitur mentiri	i. 219
Lex facit, quod ipse fit rex	xi. 80	Nemo prudens, &c.	i. 332
Lex in sermone tenenda	i. 236, 229	Nemo repente fit pessimus	i. 391. ii. 875. v. 464. x. 300
Lex inspicit quod verisimilius	xi. 61	Nemo tenetur accusare vel prodere seipsum	Em. Pref. iii. i. 169, 176
Lex justior nulla est, quam necis artifices arte perire sua	i. 242		260. ii. 24, 463. iv. 606. vi. 545, 548, 549, 794.
Lex justo non est posita	i. 268	Nemo tenetur ad impossibilia	i. 619
Lex non cogit ad impossibilia	i. 655, 689. xi. 135	Nemo tenetur jurare in suam supertudinem	viii. 199
Lex non facit saltum	i. 545	Ne plus ultra	vii. 144
Lex non scripta	i. 1004	Ne quid detrimenti respublica capiat	xi. 249. See i. 566
Lex talionis	xi. 34	Ne trahatur in exemplum	ii. 560
Libertas populi est salus populi	vii. 150	Nihil aliud potest rex, quam de jure potest	i. 653. ii. 10
Vol. XI.		Nihil efficit constans, nisi sequatur effectus	ii. 304
		Nihil est tam contrarium consensui, quam error	i. 444
		Nihil felicitati meæ deest, nisi moderatio	i. 308
		Nihil iniquum est præsumendum in lege	i. 653
		Nihil relicum est arbitrio judicis	viii. 97
		Nil dat quod habet	ii. 15
			Nil

Nisi refert quod notum sit iudici, si non notum sit in formâ iudicii vi. 405

See v. 96.

Nimium nihil probat

Nobile officium iudicis

Nobilis ira leonis

Nodos in scirpo querere

Nolite iudicare de occultis

Nolumus mutare leges Anglia

Non admittitur exceptio ejusdem rei, cuius petitur dissolutio

Non dicitur notorium, nisi per decem saltem transeat

Non eget Mauri jaculis nec arcu;

Nec venenatis gravaida sagittis,

Crede pharetrâ

Non est cunctatio longa de vitâ hominis i. 347. See De morte, &c.

De vitâ, &c.

Non est reus nisi mens sit rea

Non est opus sapientis animâ sed medentis studio

Non est vagandum in crimine

Non facinus malum, ut inde veniat bonum

Non factum, sed faciendi causa inspicienda

Non hos questum munus in usum

Non injuria absque dolo et animo injuriandi committitur

Non invenire quod querit, quam invenire quod punit

Non laudantur nisi peracta

Non liquet in favorem vitæ

Non mutant sed aptant legem

Non notum est iudici, quod non notum est judicialiter i. 415. vi. 405.

See Nil refert, &c.

Non auit honoris sui tempus esse

Non pacem petimus, superi, date gentibus iras

Non potest patriam in qua natus est exuere, nec ligeantiae debitum ejurare

Non regis sed regni

Non recurendum est ad extraordinaria, quando fieri potest per ordinaria i. 525. 654.

Non sapientis iudicis est incerto experimento credere, quod certa ratione discrimendum est

Non sicutur ad astra

Non valeat argumentum ab incommodo

Non valet privilegium contra rempublicam

Noctæ tempus

Noxia caput sequitur

Nudus conatus et affectus delinquendi reputatur pro effectu ii. 633. See

ii. 628.

Nudus cum nudâ

Nulla regula quin fallit i. 324. v. 592. x. 518. n.

Nulla salus bello, pacem te poscimus omnes

Nunus addictus jurare in verba magistri i. 97. See ii. 561. vi. 475.

Nunus tempus occurrit regi

Nunus mensura rerum

Nunc tua res agitur, jam proximus ardeti. 506. See ix. 296. When our, &c.

Nunquam crescit ex post facto præteriti delicti æstimatio

Nunquam debet iudex procedere ad aliquem actum, nisi prius illi contet delictum ipsum fuisse commissum v. 593.

Nunquam nimis dicitur, quod nunquam satis dicitur i. 249. See i. 215.

Nunquam præsumitur bona intentio nisi probetur, ad eludendum crimen

vii. 277.

O.

Obedientia est melior quam sacrificium

Occupanti concederetur, et melior esset possidentis conditio

Oculus diei

Oculus patriæ

Oculus questionis

Odia sunt restringenda

Offenso creatore, offenditur omnis creatura

Omnis regnum in se divisum, desolabitur

Omnis regnum sub graviore regno

Omnis prudentes illa admittunt solent, quæ probantur illis, qui in sua arte bene versati sunt

Omnia dat qui iusta negat

Omnia habere in memoriâ, et in nullo errare, divinum potius est quam humanum

Omnibus viis et modis, quibus mediis sciri poterit

Omnis exceptione majus

Omnis ignoratio juris est improbabilis et punibilis

Omnis impositio est odiosa

Omnis potestas a Deo, et non est potestas nisi pro bono

Omnis, frigore, et fame

O nimium dilecta Deo, cui militet æther,

Et conjurati veniunt ad classica venti

Oportet neminem esse sapienterem legibus

Opposita juxta se posita, magis elucescunt

Optima legum interpretis consuetudo

Optimus portus est mutatio consilii

Orta magna, viro major, sed maxime prole

O tempora! O mores!

Otiū cum dignitate

Ovum ovo

P.

Pæna corporalis est major quâlibet pecuniaria

Pæna legis sanctio

Pæna de paucis, culpa ab aliis

Pænam alicui non esse indicendam, nisi expresse iure cautum sit

Pari to patrem non habet imperium

Pari ratione

Parliamentum est the pulse of the people

Parliamentum pars corporis regis

Pars præcipua legis est voluntas

Pars pro toto

Patria dicitur a patre

Partus sequitur semen

Pecunie omnia obediunt

Penitus toto divisus orbe Britannas

Penitentia vera nunquam, sera sed poenitentia raro vera

Perdere domum, familiam, vicinos, patriam

Per Deum regnant reges

Pereat peccans, ne pereat respublica

Pereat unus, ne pereant omnes

Peregrina et unusquisque in arte sua artifex

Per errorem nulla est voluntas

Per illum fides proborum collucet

Perspicue vera, non sunt probanda

Pessima est injustitia quæ fit sub colore justitiæ

Petitio principii

Placencia potius quam solida

Plectuntur Achivi

Plenitudo potestatis, plenitudo tempestatis

Plura argumenta conjuncta crimen manifestare possunt

Pluralitas eandem sententiam semper superat

Plurima indicia conjuncta fidem faciunt

Plus peccat author quam actor

Possimus quod jure poterimus

Potentia juris est non injuria

Potentia ligata in creaturis

Potestas juris rex est, et non injuriæ

Præceptum domini regis in curiâ, non in camera

Præsumptio affectionis naturalis prævalet contrariis præsumptionibus

Præsumptio delicti remouetur propter bonam famam

Præsumptio non delicti excludit præsumptiones delicti

Præsumptio pro eo est, quod maxime est secundum naturam toto

Præsumptio versatur circa id quod gestum est, sed ignoratur qualiter gestum

Præsumptiones quæ stant pro reis, prævalent

Præsumptioni statuitur, donec probetur in contrarium

Præcis sanctorum est interpres præceptorum

Præces regum sunt armatæ

Precipitantur principes

Præmoniti præmuniti

Prinæ impressionis

Princeps indulgens hæreticis, amittit regnum

Principium et finis inducunt medium

Pris et posterius

Privatio præsupponit habitum

Probabile est, eadem fecisse qui cruentatus est

Probantur indicia ad torturam per unicum testem

Probatio per evidentiam omnibus est potentior

Probationes oportent esse luce clariores

Pro concessio

Promiores esse debemus ad liberandum

Propinquitas et antiquitas regalis sanguinis

Propositio indefinita æquipollet universali

Propria quarto modo

Proprietas precaria

Proprio ore nullus regum usus est

Proregis dedecus redundat in regem

Prosperum scelus virtus vocatur

Protectio trahit subjectionem, et subiectio protectionem

Publicus inspector regni

Q.

Quæ fuerant olim vitia, nunc mores sunt

Quæ mala cum multis patimur, leviora videntur

Quæ non profunt singula multa juvant

Quæ te iam læta tulere saccula!

Quæ versatur tantomodo in bonâ fide iudicis

Qualis vita, finis ita

Qualitas facit ex personâ facientis præsumitur

Qualitas personæ auget peccatum

Quanto sunt dubia, similiter declaratio ab aliis verbis præcedentibus vel subsequentibus, vel ab utroque

Quando verba confessionis sunt dubia, debent interpretari in meliorem par-tem

Quatenus et quomodo eum loqui jubeat

Quatenus ad omne valet consequentia

Quibus immodicus imminuitur imperio

Qui ad pauca respicit, facile pronunciat

Qui contemnit præceptum, contemnit præcipientem

Quicquid necessitas cogit, defendit

Qui cum possit, non prohibet, jubet

Quicunque testes in causis civilibus esse non possunt, his nec in criminalibus testimoniis dictio est; at non contra

Qui defamat, jugulat

Quid facit in pectore humano lupi feritas, canis rabies, serpentis vene-

num

Quid te exempta juvat spinis de pluribus una

Qui deliberant, desciverunt

Qui facit per alium, facit per se

Qui hæret in literâ, hæret in cortice

Qui jacet in terrâ, non habet unde cadat

Qui iustu iudicis aliquid, non videtur dolo malo facere

Qui negat medium, destruit finem

Qui nimis emungit, elicit sanguinem

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

Qui

- Qui non bene respondet, non respondet i. 337
 Qui non cadunt in constantem virum vani timores æstimandi sunt. xi. 96
 Qui non habet in crumenâ, luat in cute Em. Pref. xi. ii. 829
 Qui non luet in corpore, solvit in bursâ vii. 303
 Qui non prohibet quod prohibere potest, consentire videtur i. 280
 Qui non propulsat injuriam cum possit inferre i. 221
 Qui omnes dixerit, nullos excipit xi. 47
 Qui rapit jus alienum, perdit jus ad suum vii. 168
 Qui sunt sunt, nec medicis egent nec metuunt medicinam i. 271
 Qui sentit commodum, sentire debet et onus i. 516, 619, 617, 633, 664
 Qui tantâ talentum genuere parentes i. 256
 Quid, de quo, cuique vii. 112
 Quo jure petatur vii. 397
 Quo minus ab ortu aberant i. 279
 Quod eogit defendit i. 566
 Quod constat clare, non debet verificari iii. 251
 Quod deest operi, inest voluntati i. 268
 Quod dubitas, ne feceris i. 263, v. 62
 Quod est nullum de jure, nullum sortitur effectum i. 906
 Quod fieri possit, quamplurima legibus ipsis definiantur, quam paucissima iudicis arbitrio relinquuntur iii. 763. See JUDGES.
 Quod inustum alieno solo est, in id quo alitur, naturâ vertente, degenerat i. 245, 246
 Quod intempestivum, injucundum vii. 170
 Quod meum est, sine facto meo, alterius fieri non potest xi. 53
 Quod non relevat, non aggravat i. 967
 Quod omnes tangit, ab omnibus approbatur i. 280, 524, 633
 Quod omnes tangit, per omnes debet supportari i. 516, 616, 617, 664
 Quod populus dici non posse, nisi sint decem i. 469
 Quod præcepto non jubetur, exemplo caveat i. 274
 Quod principi placet, legis vim habet i. 518
 Quod quis in tuitione sui corporis fecerit, jure id fecisse existimatur vii. 145
 Quod quisque novit, in hoc se exerceat xi. 93
 Quod surreptum est, ejus rei æterna auctoritas esset v. 594
 Quod tardè acquisivit, diu retinet i. 268
 Quod tumultuando adipisci petiitis, quiete obtulisset respublica i. 305
 Quomodo licuit et ipsis expedierit i. 277
 Quorum est commune symbolum facillimus est transitus i. 246
 Quos Deus vult perdere, prius dementat ix. 426
 R.
 Radix justitiæ est pietas i. 338
 Ratio judgments reflect on the persons adjudging, not adjudged i. 298
 Ratio confessa dicti præponderat et præsumit contra proferentem vii. 276
 Ratio est anima legis vii. 129
 Ratio naturalis, jus gentium xi. 76
 Ratio sapienti necessitas xi. 97
 Ratio suadet, autoritas vincit xi. 36
 Ratione regis dignitatis et per juramentum est ascriptus ad providendum i. 516
 Ratione regni undequaque vii. 210, 213
 Robus sic stantibus i. 228, 267
 Rectus in curia xi. 260
 Reddendo singula singulis i. 335
 Reges vindices doloris proprii i. 654
 Regis corona est facere justitiam et judicium, et tenere pacem i. 281
 Regis elemosyna i. 281
 Regis non est dare legem i. 281
 Regis non est dare regnum, quod est respublica, sine assensu baronum qui tenentur regnum defendere i. 281
 Regula juris lex est, quando quis aliquid alicui concedit, concedit et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest i. 625
 Regula non facit jus i. 637
 Res est solliciti plena timoris amor vii. 209
 Res inter alios acta, aliis non nocet xi. 220, 229
 Res ipsa consilium dedit vii. 171
 Res iudicata pro veritate accipitur xi. 101
 Respublica continetur pænâ et præmio i. 81
 Reus iudicis gravatus, est morte plectendus i. 637
 Rex ad tutelam corporum et bonorum erectus est i. 524, 654, xi. 87
 Rex censetur habere omnia jura in scrinio pectoris sui i. 625
 Rex est capitalis justiciarius totius Angliæ i. 594, 632
 Rex est legalis et politicus xi. 31
 Rex est lex loquens i. 625, xi. 105
 Rex est medicus regni, et sponsus reipublicæ i. 594
 Rex est omnibus et singulis de regno suo justitiæ debitor i. 524
 Rex est persona mixta xi. 86
 Rex est recordum superexcellens i. 548, 632
 Rex est sola et suprema justitia regni i. 672
 Rex est ubi dominatur lex, non voluntas xi. 54
 Rex est vicarius Dei i. 594, 664
 Rex et subditi sunt relativa xi. 105
 Rex in multis casibus est supra legem i. 548
 Rex natus i. 214
 Rex non habet parem in regno i. 993
 Rex non habet superiorem, nisi Deum ii. 260
 Rex non potest gratiam facere cum injuria et damno alterius vii. 626
 Rex potest facere, quod de jure potest facere i. 622
 Rex solus judicat de causâ a jure non definita xi. 105
 Rex vicarius Dei est in terrâ suâ i. 664, See 652
 Rode caper vitem; tamen hic cum stabis ad aras, iii. 788, v. 816
 Right can never die i. 1062
 S.
 Savire in luxa i. 301
 Sape fugiendo mala, in majora incurrimus i. 302
 Salus populi suprema lex i. 516, 545, 566, 585, 586, 664. ii. 199.
 v. 86. vii. 149. n.
 Salvo honore Dei et ecclesiæ vii. 199
 Salvo jure suo vii. 199
 Salus reipublicæ suprema lex, et summè necessaria; lex legis i. 626, 637
 Sanguis nullo modo expiari potest, nisi sanguine vii. 170
 Sapere quæ sunt carnis i. 304
 Sapiens contentio aut prodest aut non obest ii. 76
 Sapiens incipit a fine vii. 171
 Sat superest i. 261
 Sat verbum, &c. iii. 782
 Satis est quod sufficit i. 682
 Satiùs est impunitum relinqui facinus nocentis, quam innocentem dampnari iv. 287, v. 588
 Scientia juris infinita vii. 112
 Scatur patria, Anglus privilegio ii. 9
 Scribere est agere iii. 817, v. 88
 Scriptum est i. 214
 Secundum allegata et probata i. 223. iii. 119. v. 48, 49, 83, 119.
 vi. 405. xi. 217
 Secundum æquum et bonum in foro conscientiæ vii. 107
 Secundum communem usum loquendi vii. 278
 Secundum mentem extensivam legis xi. 55
 Secundum morem majorum xi. 58
 Secundum sanam discretionem xi. 33. See xi. 326
 Secundum subjectam materiam ii. 15
 Semper honos nomenque tuum laudesque manebunt i. 252
 Semper præsumit sæva perturbata conscientia i. 264, 303
 Semper specialia generalibus insunt vii. 272
 Sententia contra matrimonium nunquam transit in rem judicatam xi. 209,
 212, 217, 231
 Sententia facit jus xi. 101
 Sententia judicis, quamvis injusta, timenda est i. 286, 298
 Sententia lata per collusionem, habetur pro non sententiâ xi. 220
 Sententiam judicis in rem judicatam transeat i. 275
 Sermo est index animi iii. 780
 Servare jus illæsum. [This Jefferies said he would do in all cases] iii. 1088
 Severos quidem facit justitia, inhumanos non facit Em. Pref. xiv.
 Sic judicate tanquam ab alio mox judicandi i. 223
 Si excommunicatus venerit, excommunicatus discederet i. 288
 Si inseparabiles, insuperabiles xi. 86
 Silentii tutum præmium xi. 97
 Sine clade victor v. 774
 Sine nomine i. 335
 Sine religione, sine sede, sine fide, sine re, et sine spe ii. 15, xi. 218
 Sine strepitu judicii v. 593
 Singuli testes haudquaquam fidem faciant vii. 112
 Societas puer differt a Socrate sené xi. 111
 Solo tempore lapsus amor xi. 248
 Solum Deum habes ultorem vii. 248
 Solum rex hoc non potest facere, quod non potest injuste agere vii. 146
 Solus conatus capite puniendus ii. 639
 Sontica dignum horribili flagello i. 436
 Speciosa nomina culpis imponit i. 49
 Spectatum admitti, risum teneatis amici! i. 262
 Spiritus in naribus i. 274
 Stat pro ratione voluntas vii. 474. xi. 193
 State super viis antiquis vii. 121
 Stricta contra impositiones, at largè in favorem gravatorum, interpretan-da est lex xi. 48
 Subjecta sunt talia qualia prædicata demonstrant i. 466
 Subfedit dubius totam dum colligit iram i. 204
 Subversa jacet pristina sedes soliorum vii. 112
 Sufficit ei ad poenam, quod Deum expectat ultorem i. 288, ii. 260, vii. 135
 Sui juris xi. 299, 301
 Summa scelera incipiuntur cum periculo, peraguntur cum præmio i. 302
 Summis negatum est stare diu i. 282
 Summum jus, summa injuria xi. 134. ii. 138, 199. x. 138, Ap.
 Suorum flagitiorum proditores i. 304
 Supplicat celsitudini, &c. xi. 56
 Suppression of truth is oppression of innocents ii. 558
 Sunt tolerabilia, quæ consuetudo comprobat vi. 631
 T.
 Tabefacere in carcere vii. 184
 Tabula post naufragium vii. 178
 Tandem triumphans xi. 202
 Tanquam in acie ordinata i. 278
 Tantâ fuit unius viri majestas, ut nec bonis, neque contra malos opus armis foret i. 306
 Tantæne animis cœlestibus ira! i. 262
 Tantum permissum quantum commissum vii. 25
 Tardæ solet magnis rebus adesse fides i. 235
 Tardior ad poenas Deus est, ad præmia velocius i. 216
 Tempestas abiit, et ecce nova facta sunt omnia i. 305
 Tempus guerræ est tempus injuriæ i. 536
 Tempus suum vii. 210
 Tentandi gratia i. 748
 Terminum diminuentem vii. 209
 Terret per somnia i. 303
 Testes sunt omni exceptione majores v. 592, 594
 Testibus non testimoniis i. 290
 Testimonium rerum, loquentia signa i. 249
 That which was never done before, cannot now be done i. 639
 There must be an end in all things ii. 203
 Theſaurus regis est fundamentum belli et firmamentum pacis i. 522. See
 xi. 150
 Theſaurus

Theſaurus regis eſt pacis vinculum, et bellorum nervi i. 616. See xi. 150
 Tortura legum peſſima xi. 111
 Tractent fabrilis fabri xi. 222
 — Tu regere imperio populos vii. 436
 Hæ tibi erunt artes vii. 436
 Turpis eſt admiſſio rei ad ſe non pertinentis i. 338
 Tutus eſt ut expectetur ſententia regis xi. 107
 Ubi eadem ratio, eadem lex iv. 415. viii. 121, 129. ix. 145. xi. 38, 93
 Ubi confidit Deus et lex, et nos etiam confidamus i. 687
 Ubi conſtet ſcelus non interveniſſe ſilebit proceſſus v. 593
 Ubi dolor ibi digitus; ubi amor ibi oculus vii. 210
 Ubi factum nullum, ibi fortia nulla x. 435
 Ubi lex eſt ſpecialis, et ratio ejus generalis, generaliter accipienda eſt iv. 560
 Ubi lex non diſtinguit, nec nos debemus i. 237, 391, 457, 459, 463, 464, 465, 571. iii. 1098. viii. 345. xi. 88
 Ultimum neceſſitatis præſidium vii. 636
 Ultimum refugium vii. 126
 Ultimum remedium peſſimum v. 110
 Ultimum ſupplicium viii. 74
 Umbra eſt major quo ſerior i. 268
 Una hirundo non facit ver viii. 354
 Una præſumptio aliam juvit v. 584, 592
 Una præſumptio tollit aliam iv. 287
 Unius damnum utilitate publicâ rependitur vii. 184
 Unum pondus et una menſura iv. 277
 Unumquodque diſſolvitur iſdem modis quibus eſt colligatum iii. 628, 629. xi. 56
 Unus iudex, unum tribunal vii. 223
 Unuſquique in arte ſua artifex vii. 112
 Unus teſtis non eſt audiendus v. 592
 Uſage a good interpreter of law vi. 713
 Ut ceſpes unus, et regem noſtrum et rempublicam tegetet i. 304
 Ut legatus eſt quaſi extra legem poſitus xi. 91
 Ut ore ſimulantur juramenti profeſſionem, cum mente retineant perfidiam i. 278
 Ut poena ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat i. 261
 Uxor et filius ſunt nomina naturæ xi. 84
 Valeat quantum valere poteſt ii. 162. v. 70, 96
 Verba debent intelligi, ne ſonent in delictum vii. 406
 Verba juramenti intelliguntur ſecundum mentem et intentionem ejus cui fit juramentum iii. 455
 Verba propter adjunctam mutant naturam ſuam i. 440
 Veritas fortiffima, et prævalebit xi. 79
 Veritas temporis filia i. 235
 Veſcuntur inteſtinis reipublicæ xi. 52
 Via facti via juris vii. 246
 Via regia vii. 214
 Vindictæ doloris proprii i. 335
 Vindictæ tarditas ſupplicii gravitate compenſetur i. 454
 Violenta præſumptio plena probatio ix. 425
 Virtutis curſus celerior quam ætatis i. 305
 Vis expers conſilii mole ruit ſua i. 279
 Vis unita fortior xi. 105
 Vita pejor morte vii. 147
 Vitia temporis et hominis i. 383
 Voluntas et propositum delinquentis diſtinguunt facinora vii. 417
 Volenti et ſcienti non fit injuria i. 245, 442. ii. 8. x. 439
 Voluntas non cogitur vii. 244
 Voluntas reputabitur pro facto xi. 101
 Vox audita perit ii. 464
 W.
 When our neighbour's houſe is on fire, we ought to take care of our own ix. 296
 Wherever there is a right, there is a remedy vi. 681
 Where there is no law, there can be no tranſgreſſion i. 1004. ii. 73, 78. v. 126
 * MAY, WILLIAM v. i. See DAWSON.
MAYNARD, JOHN, Serjeant at Law.
 His ſpeech in the houſe of lords on Laud, lord archbiſhop of Canterbury, his not anſwering the firſt articles of his impeachment for treaſon ii. 876, 877
 Opens the evidence on the trial of Tonge and others, for treaſon ii. 479
 Opens the evidence in general on Coleman's trial for treaſon ii. 662
 Sums up the evidence on lord Cornwallis's trial for murder ii. 229
 Sums up the evidence, on Taſborough and Price, their trial for ſubornation of perjury ii. 1034
 He opens the evidence on the trial of Sir Thomas Gaſcoigne, for treaſon iii. 4
 Sums up the evidence iii. 27
 Opens the evidence of the popiſh plot, in general, on the trial of viſcounte Stafford, impeached before the houſe of peers, for being concerned therein ii. 104
 His ſpeech for Thomas Papillon, eſq; at the ſuit of ſir William Penſhord, for arreſting him during his mayoralty, without cauſe iii. 1076, 1087
 States the evidence in the caſe of Norket, for murder, which is ſingularly remarkable x. 29. Ap. See MORLEY, THOMAS Lord.
 M A Y O R.
 Lord-mayor of London arreſted during his mayoralty iii. 1072, 1076
 Lord-mayor of London ſent to the Tower by the houſe of commons, for committing one of their meſſengers, who had arreſted a printer in the city by virtue of the ſpeaker's warrant ii. 335
 A mayor of London cauſed great and monſtrous ſtocks to be made in his mayoralty, to imprifon men in; as alſo an uncommon axe to ſtrike off the heads of ſuch as ſhould reſiſt his will and pleaſure: i. 14. n.

 * MEAD, WILLIAM ii. 610. See PENN.
 * MEDIETAS LINGUÆ. See ALIEN. SAPANTALCON.
MEGGOTT, Sir GEORGE,
 His caſe in parliament viii. 111
MELDRUM, ROBERT. See BERNARDI JOHN.
MEMORIALS.
 Sir James Whitlocke's memorial of the queſtions propoſed to the judges on lord Audley's trial i. 387
 His memorial concerning lord Rea's diſcovery of the marquis of Hamilton's conſpiracy xi. 126
 The archbiſhop of Canterbury's memorials, touching the nullity between the earl of Effex and his lady. x. 4. Ap.
 The lord-mayor of London's memorial to the king, on behalf of a convict under ſentence of death for a robbery x. 236
 Memorial of doctor Leighton's eſcape, and execution of his ſentence, in the biſhop of London's diary xi. 121

M E M O R Y.

The reaſon why the chancery obliges a man to anſwer as to his own acts poſitively for ſeven years, is, becauſe a man of ſenſe is ſuppoſed to remember all his own acts for that time iv. 191
 A perſon muſt be of ſane memory to make a will iv. 194

M E R C H A N D I Z E.

By a remarkable law in one of the wiſeſt of the Grecian governments, no man bred up to merchandize ſhould be admitted into any office of judicature, till he had quitted that employment for at leaſt ten years vii. 596

M E R C Y.

Instance of the jury's recommendation to the royal mercy having no effect x. 412
MERRIAM, JOHN. See DENEW NATHANIEL.

* MERRICK, Sir GILLY,
 His trial i. 209. See BLUNT Sir CHRISTOPHER.

* MERVIN Lord AUDLEY. See AUDLEY.
 * MESSINGER, PETER,
 * Richard Beafley, William Green, Thomas Appletree, Edward Cotton, John Earles, William Wilks, Richard Farrel, William Ford, Edward Bedle, Richard Latimer, Thomas Limerick, Richard Woodward, John Richardson, and John Sharples, their trial for high-treaſon, 20 Car. II. 1668

ii. 585
 * Four indictments for levying war againſt the king ii. 585
 * Evidence on the trial of Messenger, Beafley, Green, and Appletree, for aſſembly under pretence of pulling down bawdy-houſes, and actually pulling down ſeveral houſes ii. 586
 * The evidence on the trial of Bedle and Latimer ii. 588
 * The evidence againſt Cotton, Earles, Wilks, Farrel, and Ford, for aſſembly under pretence of breaking open priſons ii. 589
 * Evidence on the trial of Richardson, Limerick, and Woodward ii. 590
 * The jury find a ſpecial verdict ii. 591
 * The ſpecial verdict at large ii. 591
 * The chief baron Hale is of opinion, theſe facts did not amount to high-treaſon ii. 593
 * All the reſt of the judges reſolve, that theſe offences were high-treaſon ii. 593
 * Riſing to pull down bawdy-houſes in general, or break open priſons in general, and putting ſuch deſign in execution, is high-treaſon ii. 593
 * Lawful for private perſons to arm themſelves to oppoſe riots, rebellions, or common enemies ii. 593
 * The matter found againſt Messenger, Beafley, Cotton, and Limerick, reſolved to be high-treaſon; and they are executed ii. 594
 * But as to Appletree and Latimer, the judges being divided in their opinion, they were recommended to the king's mercy ii. 594
 * As to Green and Bedle, they being only found to be preſent, and not found that any act of force was committed by them, or that they were aiding or aſſiſting, they were diſcharged ii. 594
 * MEYNE, SIMON iii. 299. See REGICIDES.

M I D D L E M O R E, H U M P H R E Y.

William Exmew, and Sebaſtian Nudigate, monks, their trial in Weſtmiſter-hall, before commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, for treaſon, Trinity-term, 27 H.n. VIII. xi. 23
 Subſtance of indictment xi. 23
 They plead not guilty xi. 23
 Found guilty xi. 23
 Judgment xi. 23
 Not permitted to receive the ſacrament without order from the king xi. 23

MIDDLESEX, Earl of. See BACON FRANCIS Lord.

MILTON, JOHN.

The duke of Milan beheads a French ambuſſador for plotting againſt him during his embally i. 119
MILDMAY, Sir WALTER, Chancellor of the Exchequer.
 See DAVISON. vii. 19, 2, 25.

M I L I T A R Y.

Mr. ſheriff Jaſſen much commended for reſuſing the aſſiſtance of the military in the execution of criminals xi. 282

MILLINGTON, GILBERT ii. 200. See REGICIDES.

MILLS, RICHARD. See JACKSON WILLIAM.

MILTON, JOHN.

Upon what occaſion he wrote the famous pamphlet called Areopagitica xi. 322

MINISTERS.
 The corruption of judges generally ended in their downfall; and of the miniſters whoſe tools they were; the politics of thoſe times not being arrived at that height, to know how to influence the repreſentative body of the nation: for what need could miniſters have to corrupt the interpreters interpreters of the laws, when the makers of them were entirely at their devotion Em. Pref. i.

Treason was the fatal engine so often employed by corrupt and wicked ministers against the noblest and bravest patriots, whose laudable opposition to their pernicious schemes, those ministers were very ready to construe into treason and rebellion against their prince; thereby confounding their own and the prince's interest together, as if the one could not be opposed without the other. Em. Pref. iii. See PETITIONS.

MIRROUR of JUSTICES.

The principal copy of this book is in Bennet college library, in Cambridge, and there is another in Lincoln's-Inn library vii. 226

MISADVENTURE.

Homicide in shooting at a wild fowl, wherein no man hath any property, is not felony, but only misadventure vi. 222
If parent or master being provoked by some miscarriage of child or servant, corrects with a moderate weapon, and chances to kill him, it is but misadventure ix. 64

MISDEMEANOUR.

To petition the king to put the penal laws in execution, adjudged a misdemeanour in the reign of James the first iv. 395
Forgery formerly only a misdemeanour ix. 67, 77, 94, 103. x. 64
Records of misdemeanours vi. 10, 16, 45, 46. Ap.
Of the punishment of misdemeanours Em. Pref. x.
Indictments for misdemeanours iii. 823
The crime of Fitz-harris was only a misdemeanour iv. 171. See

BRADDON LAWRENCE.

BREWSTER THOMAS.

CELLIER ELIZABETH.

CHARNOCK ROBERT and ANNE.

DAVISON WILLIAM.

GREY of WERK, FORD Lord.

HALES WILLIAM.

HAMPDEN JOHN.

HARRIS BENJAMIN.

JOHNSON SAMUEL.

JONES DAVID.

JONES FRANCIS.

JONES REBECCA.

KEACH BENJAMIN.

KINNERSLEY WILLIAM, Clerk.

KNOX THOMAS.

MACCLESFIELD, Earl of.

OXFORD, EDWARD Earl of.

READING NATHANIEL.

SPEKE HUGH.

MISNOMER.

A fatal one in an ex officio information for a libel x. 197

MISPRISION OF TREASON, viii. 468.

Opinion of several eminent civilians concerning concealing treason *ii. 428, 429. vii. 418. See DAVISON. FISHER JOHN, Bishop of Rochester. * TREASON.*

* MIS - SPELLING

* In an act of parliament offered in behalf of a prisoner, but over-ruled ii. 310

MIS - TRIAL. See TRIAL.

* MITCHELL, JAMES,

* His trial for attempting the murder of the archbishop of St. Andrews, and wounding the bishop of Orkney, 30 Car. II. 1678 ii. 623.
See viii. 436.

* His examination before a committee of council ii. 623

* He is put to the torture ii. 625

* His examination whilst under it ii. 626

* The libel against the prisoner ii. 627

* Warrant from the privy council for prosecuting him ii. 628

* Counsel assigned the prisoner ii. 628

* They insist that an endeavour, or attempt, to commit murder ought not to be punished as murder ii. 628

* That mutilation was not capital by their laws, though dismembering was ii. 629

* As to the assaulting a privy-counsellor, it ought to have been laid to have been done in the execution of his office, to make it capital ii. 629

* The prisoner's confession out of court shall not convict him ii. 629

* Alleged, that the prisoner, and other of his followers, held it lawful to kill a bishop ii. 630

* An endeavour to assassinate, punishable with death by the civil law; unless the offender can shew some provocation: and it is not necessary to shew the offender took money to denominate him an assassin ii. 630

* An attempt to rob or ravish punishable with death in Scotland ii. 630

* A promise of pardon by a magistrate who cannot grant it, of no avail ii. 630

* The party's confession the strongest evidence against him ii. 631

* The court of opinion, that it appeared the prisoner made the attempt on his grace for doing his majesty's service ii. 637

* That his confession before the council could not be retracted; but, if it were proved to be on promise of life, the prisoner should have the benefit of it ii. 637

* The prisoner's confession, and the witnesses produced against him ii. 637

* The lord chancellor deposes, no promises of life were made the prisoner on his confession ii. 638

* An act of council concerning his confession ii. 639

* The verdict ii. 640

* The court passes sentence of death on the prisoner ii. 640

* His last speech ii. 640. See MAITLAND.

MODERN REPORTS.

The second edition of 8 and 9 modern, is much improved xi. 324. marg.

* MODERS, MARY. See GERMAN PRINCESS ii. 498.

* MOHUN, CHARLES Lord,

* His trial before the house of peers, for the murder of William Mountford, Jan. 31, 1692, 4 W. and M. iv. 510

* The lords sit in Westminster-hall iv. 510

* The certiorari and return, &c., read iv. 511

* The prisoner brought to the bar iv. 512

* The marquis of Carmarthen, lord high steward iv. 512

* His speech to the prisoner iv. 512

* Admitted that a peer need not hold up his hand iv. 512

* The indictment iv. 513

* Sir John Somers, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iv. 513

* The evidence against the prisoner iv. 516

* Evidence of the declaration of the deceased, after he was wounded iv. 516

* That lord Mohun promised to assist mr. Hill in his design to carry off mrs. Bracegirdle; and said he would stand by his friend iv. 517

* That they accordingly made an attempt together, but were disappointed iv. 518

* Evidence that Hill ran the deceased through before he could draw his sword iv. 520

* Evidence of my lord Mohun's sword being drawn just before the murder iv. 520

* My lord Mohun caresses Mountford at the time he was wounded iv. 521, 524

* Evidence of the watch meeting my lord Mohun and mr. Hill with their swords drawn, before mrs. Bracegirdle's lodging iv. 524

* Evidence of the terror my lord Mohun was in when he was taken iv. 523

* Evidence that Mountford was run through before his sword was drawn, and while my lord Mohun was by him iv. 523

* The two surgeons evidence iv. 525

* Lord Mohun's witnesses iv. 526

* The evidence of Hill's boy iv. 526

* He swears that my lord stood upon the flat stones whilst Hill and Mountford fought in the middle of the street iv. 527

* Other witnesses to the same purpose iv. 528

* A deposition of Hill's boy before the coroner read against the prisoner, though the witness was examined in court viva voce iv. 534

* Sir Thomas Trevor, solicitor-general, sums up the evidence iv. 535

* The lords debate the points of law in their house above iv. 537

* Their lordships require the judges opinions in a point of law iv. 538

* The prisoner's counsel permitted to argue the point, before the judges gave their opinions iv. 538

* The king's counsel refuse to reply, unless their lordships would admit that the case put was my lord Mohun's case iv. 540

* The judges resolutions iv. 541

* Second question, with the judges resolutions iv. 542

* Third question iv. 544

* Fourth question iv. 545

* Fifth question iv. 547

* Sixth question iv. 549

* The prisoner's counsel not suffered to reply, after the judges had given their opinions in any point iv. 549

* Seventh question iv. 550

* Lord Mohun is acquitted iv. 553

* MOHUN, CHARLES Lord,

* His trial for the murder of Richard Coote, esq. March 29, 1699, 11 W. III. v. 180

* Lord high steward, lord Somers, his speech to the prisoner v. 180

* The indictment v. 181

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his speech v. 182

* The evidence given by the drawer of the Grey-Hound-Tavern v. 182

* The chairman's evidence v. 183

* The surgeon, who viewed captain Coote's body, his evidence v. 189

* The lord Mohun calls a witness v. 189

* Lord Mohun's observations on the evidence v. 190

* Mr. solicitor's observations for the king v. 191

* My lord Mohun is acquitted v. 193

* He promises to avoid all quarrels for the future v. 193

* The court dissolved v. 194

MONARCHIES.

The spiritual monarchies of the church compared with the temporal monarchies of the world xi. 71

* MONCRIEF, HUGH. See GOWRIE Earl of.

MONEY.

Necessity of money xi. 66

The king's prerogative in coining money xi. 66

Things essential to the legitimation of money xi. 66

The king's prerogative in putting a value on money xi. 66

The king's prerogative in changing the standard of coin xi. 66

Derivation of the term moneta xi. 66

The king's prerogative in enhancing or debasing the value of coin in England and Ireland xi. 66

Different standards in England and Ireland xi. 67

Sterling money what, and from whence so called xi. 67

Weight and purity xi. 67

Whether mixed money be deemed sterling xi. 68

Irish money lawful money of England xi. 68

If obligee refuseth a tender at the time and place, in mixed money, viz. under the pure standard, the obligor shall not be bound to pay better money afterwards xi. 68

* MONEY, JAMES. See LEACH DRYDEN.

* MONMOUTH, Duke of.

Passages in Account of what passed at the execution of the duke of Monmouth, given in evidence on the trial of doctor Sacheverel v. 739

The duke of Monmouth was attainted by act of parliament, 1 Jac. II. ix. 584

MONOPOLIES.

The great case between the East-India company and Mr. Sandys, concerning their patent trade, exclusive of all others, 35 Car. II. vii. 493
The argument of Mr. Holt, in behalf of the company vii. 493
That the persons traded with being infidels, it is not lawful for a subject of England to trade with them, without a licence from the king vii. 494, 508

The subjects of England have not such a right to foreign trade, that they can, ad libitum, trade without controul vii. 494, 530

By common law, custom but of three things due to the king; wool, wool-fell, and leather vii. 495

Definition of a monopoly vii. 496, 499, 514

Precedents of charters granted, exclusive of other persons than the grantees vii. 497

Sir George Treby's argument for Mr. Sandys vii. 497

That the patent does not differ from the reason of other monopolies, and consequently void vii. 499, 514

Objections against trading with infidels answered vii. 501, 521

Objection, that subjects are not to trade with foreigners ad libitum answered vii. 502, 552

Precedents of grants for sole trading, not good vii. 505

Mr. solicitor-general Finch's argument for the company vii. 507

Mr. Polluxfen's argument for the defendant vii. 511

That the proviso in the statute of monopolies extends only to charters, or letters patents, before that act made vii. 518

Sir Robert Sawyer's argument for the company vii. 528

Precedents of licences for foreign trade granted vii. 538, 563

This charter distinguished from a monopoly vii. 543

This action maintainable by the company vii. 544

Mr. Williams's argument for the defendant vii. 545

The judges of opinion that the grant is good vii. 554

Lord chief justice Jeffries's speech at delivering his opinion vii. 555

The king's prerogative considered, as to inland and foreign trade vii. 557

Corporations for trade to be distinguished from monopolies vii. 565

Judgment for the plaintiffs vii. 570. See BATES JOHN, EAST-INDIA COMPANY, and SANDYS.

* MONSON, Sir THOMAS,

Arraigned for the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, but not tried i. 347

MONTACUTE, Lord,

He is tried by his peers, Dec. 3, 1539, 30 Hen. VIII. xi. 24

Sent to the Tower xi. 24

Accused xi. 24

MONUMENT.

Copy of inscription on Lord Leval's monument erected to his memory at Kirk-Hill, in Scotland x. 193. Ap.

MOORE, FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law,

Extract from his book of reports xi. 76

MOORE, HENRY,

The trial of his cause with the corporation of the town and port of Hastings, before Lord chief justice Hardwicke, on a mandamus for admitting Moore to be a freeman of the said town and port, in pursuance of a custom there

The plea x. 138. Ap.

Mr. Clarke opens the declaration x. 140. Ap.

Sir Thomas Abney argues for the plaintiff x. 140. Ap.

Mr. Strange argues on same side x. 141. Ap.

Mr. Marsh desires to read copies, as they had not the originals of the corporation books x. 142. Ap.

Sir J. Willes (attorney-general) owned, they had the originals, so could not read copies; but said, the original itself is no evidence x. 142. Ap.

Lord Hardwicke's opinion, if an original corporation-book is produced, they cannot read a copy x. 142. Ap.

Town-clerk examined x. 142. Ap.

Sir Thomas Abney proposes reading an ancient book produced by him x. 142. Ap.

Attorney-general objects to it x. 142. Ap.

Lord Hardwicke ordered it to be read x. 143. Ap.

The custom of the town of Hastings read x. 143. Ap.

Counsel object to it, as containing several miscellaneous matters x. 143. Ap.

Town-clerk may bind up what he pleases with it x. 143. Ap.

Several entries from the corporation-books read x. 144. Ap.

And parish registers x. 146. Ap.

Examination of witnesses relating to the right of freedom, and the fine to be paid x. 153. Ap.

Plaintiff's evidence closed x. 157. Ap.

Attorney-general states the case for the defendant x. 158. Ap.

Mr. Serjeant Skinner on the same side x. 161. Ap.

Debate about the fine x. 162. Ap.

Lord Hardwicke says, the notion of law is, that there is an essential difference between a fine certain and a reasonable fine x. 162. Ap.

In some of the Cinque Ports, a distinction is made between voting for a mayor and members of parliament x. 162. Ap.

Evidence for defendant x. 162. Ap.

Several entries read x. 164. Ap.

Serjeant Parker asks, if they make any difference between the eldest and youngest sons? Answered, No x. 165. Ap.

Sir Thomas Abney's reply, wherein he lays down four things, 1. That he must be an eldest son. 2. That he be born within the borough. 3. It must be after the admission and swearing of his father; and, 4. It must be upon paying a reasonable fine x. 167. Ap.

A charge against a witness for what he said, but denied x. 168. Ap.

Mr. Strange states the case, and observes on the fine x. 169. Ap.

The meaning of the words, "in respect thereof" x. 171. Ap.

The jury must determine, 1. Whether there be any custom within the borough for an eldest son to be free. 2. Whether being born within the town, after his father was made free, be necessary qualifications or not.

3. If they believe reliance to be another qualification. 4. If the jury be of opinion that either of these two qualifications, of being born within the town, or after the father was made free, are necessary; or that that concomitancy is not necessary, they must find for plaintiff. But if they should be of opinion that the two former are not essential, and the last necessary, they must find for the defendants x. 171. Ap.

Lord Hardwicke sums up the evidence, and states the case to the jury x. 172. Ap.

Verdict for the plaintiff x. 175. Ap.

Jury find, that the eldest son of a freeman, born within the borough after his father's freedom, has a right, and that residence is not necessary, and they find 6s. 8d. to be the fine, and that reasonable x. 175. Ap.

Lord Hardwicke observed, the point of the reasonableness of the fine must be saved for the opinion of the court x. 175. Ap.

The special verdict afterwards argued and determined in favour of the plaintiff Moore x. 175. Ap.

* MORDANT, JOHN, Esq.

* His trial before the High Court of Justice for high-treason, June 1, 1658

ii. 292

* Impeached of high-treason against the protector and state ii. 292

* He is refused a trial by jury ii. 293

* Pleads not guilty ii. 294

* Evidence of his making an interest to bring in king Charles ii. 295

* A witness withdrawing himself, the justice who took his examination permitted to give in evidence what the witness deposed before him ii. 296

* The president (Lisle's) speech to Sir H. Slingsby, Dr. Hewet, and Mr. Mor- dant, before judgment ii. 298

* Tells them, God had done as miraculously for the cause, as he did of old for the Israelites against the Egyptians ii. 298

* That they owed natural allegiance to the protector ii. 298

* Mr. Mordant acquitted ii. 299, 300

* MORE, Sir THOMAS,

* Tried for high-treason in denying the king's supremacy 26 Hen. VIII.

1535 i. 59. xi. 23

* Barton Eliz. and several others, attainted of high-treason by act of parliament i. 59

* Names of his judges i. 59

* The solicitor-general comes to him, to pump him i. 59

* They debate the points of succession and supremacy i. 59

* His reason for being against the king's second marriage i. 60

* The solicitor swears several things against him that passed at his examination; which Sir Thomas denies i. 60

* His refusing the oath of succession, his principal crime i. 60

* Complains he had been imprisoned fifteen months, and his estate confiscated before his trial i. 60

* Puts the lord chancellor in mind, that before sentence it ought to be demand of the prisoner, what he has to say why judgment should not be pronounced against him i. 61

* And then he asserts, that the act of parliament concerning the supremacy was repugnant to the law of God i. 62

* That no temporal prince may presume to take upon him the supreme government of the church i. 62

* That this kingdom was but part of the catholic church; and that the act was contrary to several statutes in force, and particularly magna charta, and contrary to the king's coronation-oath i. 62

* He has judgment as a traitor i. 62

* But is beheaded i. 63. xi. 23. See FISHER JOHN, Bishop of Rochester.

MORETON, JOHN,

His speech for the prisoner, on the trial of Eliz. Canning x. 289

Rests the evidence on Canning's trial on the testimony given x. 374

MORETON, Sir WILLIAM, Recorder of London,

His charge to the jury on the prosecution of Eliz. Canning, for perjury

Said he could not receive their verdict, "Guilty of perjury, but not wilful and corrupt" x. 390

He passes sentence on Eliz. Canning x. 407

MORRISON, DAVID,

His trial for treason, July 18, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 561

Evidence against him ix. 561

His defence and speech ix. 563

Solicitor-general's reply ix. 564

Found guilty and executed at Kennington-Common ix. 565

Some account of him ix. 565

Part of his dying speech ix. 565

MORDEY, THOMAS, Lord,

His trial for murder, April 30, 1666, 18 Car. II. in the court of the lord high steward vii. 421. See ix. 23.

Resolutions of the judges respecting the trial

1. That they were to attend upon the letter of the lord high steward in their scarlet robes, and the chiefs in their collars of S. S. vii. 421

2. That the peers were the triers vii. 421

3. That in case, after the evidence given, the prisoner withdrawn, and the peers gone to consult of their verdict, they should send for them, if the lord steward required it, they were to go to them; but not to deliver any opinion without conference, and only openly in court vii. 421

4. That if lord steward should in open court demand any of their opinions, he, in the absence of the prisoner, they were to give it vii. 421

5. That the examinations of witnesses taken by the coroner, dead or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of the coroner, that they are the same without addition or alterations, may be read vii. 421

6. That the examination of a witness taken by the coroner, who is absent by means or procurement of the prisoner, their lordships being satisfied he was so detained, may be read; but oath that all endeavours have been used

used to find out such a witness, and cannot, is not sufficient to authorize the reading such examination vii. 421

List of the lords triers vii. 424

Witnesses on the prisoner's behalf not sworn vii. 424

Lord Morley was found guilty of manslaughter, and upon claiming the benefit of clergy, and of the stat. Edw. VI. the lord steward granted them, first obtaining the consent of all the judges; whereupon the noble prisoner was discharged on paying his fees vii. 428

MORRIS, JOHN,

Two judgments of the lords against him, Mary his wife, Smith, Darby, and Harris, for forging and publishing a copy of a pretended act of parliament, 1647 vii. 317

A brief of his case, presented to his excellency sir Tho. Fairfax vii. 319

MORRIS, Colonel, Governor of Pontefract Castle,

His trial for high treason, at York, 1649 vii. 320

Urges, he ought to be tried by martial law vii. 320

Pleads his commission from the prince, and consequently no crime committed against the king and his crown, as laid in the indictment vii. 321

Is condemned vii. 322

Whitlocke's account of this affair vii. 322

His speech at the place of execution vii. 323

MORTGAGES.

Mortgagor in possession, with benefit of redemption, qualified to vote as a freeholder in the election of members to serve in parliament viii. 94. n.

MORTIMER, Lord,

He was attainted without being heard v. 97

MOUNTAGUE, Sir HENRY, Lord Chief Justice B. R.

His speech on granting execution against sir Walter Raleigh viii. 339

His speech on censuring Wraynham in Star-chamber, for slandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 110

MOUNTAGUE, JAMES,

His speech for Tutchin on his trial for a libel v. 538

Is charged by the attorney-general (sir Edward Northey) with justifying defendant's principles, and is threatened with a prosecution v. 540

His argument on motion in arrest of the judgment against Tutchin v. 557

Ordered into custody for pleading on return of habeas corpus on a parliamentary commitment viii. 139

Writ of habeas corpus served on serjeant at arms, on behalf of mr. Mountague viii. 142

Argues that the Aylesbury-men were bailable, and objects to return viii. 158

MOUNTAGUE, Sir JAMES, Attorney-General,

Opens the evidence against Robert Fielding, esq. for bigamy v. 611

His observations on the evidence and defence v. 624

Shows the necessity the commons were under to proceed against doctor Henry Sacheverel, for preaching a seditious sermon, by impeachment v. 648

Holds, that those who were not satisfied with what was done at the Revolution, must be enemies to the present establishment v. 651. See RESISTANCE.

MOUNTAGUE, Sir JAMES, Baron of the Exchequer,

His argument in the prince's case xi. 296, 298

His opinion xi. 300, 302

MOUNTAGUE, WILLIAM, Esq. Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer,

Appealed to by a prisoner, and spoke in his favour as to the particular fact referred to ii. 998, 999

Examined as a witness on dr. Oates's first trial for perjury iv. 40

* MULLINS, DARBY v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.

MURDER.

* The procurers of murder guilty of murder i. 348, &c.

* Where the concealment of an intended murder shall bring one within the guilt of murder i. 343

* Poisoning made high-treason by a statute, and the person guilty to be boiled to death i. 324

* Murder of sir Edmund Godfrey ii. 760

* Where one present at a murder shall be deemed guilty of murder, and where not ii. 728

* One engaged in a design of murder, and posted so as to give any assistance to those that actually do it, is, in the eye of the law, present, though not upon the spot where the murder was committed, nor even in sight or hearing of it vi. 822, 828

* Murder made high-treason in Ireland iv. 403

* One convicted of murder on circumstantial evidence iv. 488

* Murder of mrs. Stout, four persons tried for it v. 194

If a man hath judgment to be hanged, and the sheriff behead him, it is murder ii. 209

Where many are engaged in an unlawful design, and one commits murder, the rest are guilty, though at a distance ii. 729

If sundry persons be together, aiding and assisting to an action, wherein a man-slaughter doth ensue, as in case of a sudden business without malice premeditated, they are equally guilty of the man-slaughter, as they are in the case of murder premeditated. So resolved by all the judges of England ii. 730

Trials for attempts to murder ii. 623, iii. 65

In case of murder, no friends or relations of, deceased to be on the jury iii. 468

Of the punishment of murder Em. Pref. x

Parliament declared, that persons who were supposed to be guilty, as accessories to a barbarous murder, and were equally, if not more guilty, than the principal, should not, if found guilty, have their clergy iv. 174. See PARLIAMENT.

Instances of the fatal consequences of convictions for murder, previous to finding the dead bodies iv. 204. vi. 425. x. 29

* The crime of those who are in company at time of murder committed, may be separated from crime of person who committeth murder, so as in some cases to be only guilty of man-slaughter. So resolved by all the judges of England iv. 541

* A, conscious of an animosity between B and C, accompanieth B where C happeneth to come, and B killeth him; A having no malice to C, or any actual hand in his death, is not guilty of murder, or indeed of any offence whatever. So resolved by all the judges of England iv. 543

* If A hears B threaten to kill C, and some days after A is with B upon some other design, and C passes by, or comes in the place where A and B are, and C is killed by B;—A standing by without contributing to the fact, his sword not then being drawn, or any malice ever appearing on A's part against C;—A will not be guilty of murder, or man-slaughter. So resolved by all the judges of England iv. 544

* If a person knowing of the design of another to lie in wait to assault a third man, who happeneth to be killed (when the person who knew of the design is present), such person is not guilty in law of murder or man-slaughter. So resolved by all the judges of England iv. 546

* If a person knowing of the design of another to lie in wait to assault a third man, and accompanying him in that design, if it shall happen that the third person be killed at that time, in the presence of him who knew that design, and accompanied the other in it, he is guilty in law of the same crime with the party who had the design, and accompanied the other, and killed him, though he had no actual hand in his death iv. 548. So resolved by all the judges of England.

* If a person be by, named William, when Thomas said he would stab John, upon which William says he will stand by his friend, and afterwards Thomas does actually murder John; quære, whether William is equally guilty with Thomas, or of what crime? iv. 550. Doubted by the judges.

* If A accompanies B in an unlawful action, in which C is not concerned, and C happeneth to come in the way of B after the unlawful action is fully over, and happeneth to be killed by B without the assistance of A, A is not guilty at all iv. 551, 552. So resolved by all the judges of England.

* No words are in law such a provocation as to reduce the offence of murder to man-slaughter v. 296. ix. 64

But if upon ill words both parties suddenly fight, and one kills the other, this is but man-slaughter. So resolved by all the judges vii. 421

If one calls another son of a whore, or gives him the lie, and thereupon he to whom the words were spoken kill the other, this is murder, in the opinion of all the judges vii. 421. See WORDS.

If two fall out suddenly, and before any blows presently appoint to go to the field and fight, one kills the other, this is murder vii. 421. n.

Two play at tables, and fall out suddenly, and one with a dagger kills the other; if there be a quarrel, and a reasonable time before they fight, it is murder vii. 422. n. ix. 63, 535

Two fall out suddenly, fight presently, and one kills the other, it is but man-slaughter vii. 422. n.

So if after they have quarrelled, they presently go into the field and fight, and one kills the other, it is but man-slaughter vii. 422. n.

Sir Heneage Finch, solicitor general, observed, that in some places abroad, the same people, who would rise up in arms as one man to pursue a pilferer, yet make a lane through the midst of them for a man-slayer to escape vii. 426, 427

One bore malice to another, and having provoked him to draw his sword, fled away to tempt the adversary to pursue, and still retired till he came to the wall; now seeing himself at his last refuge, he thought to kill him safely, and in his own defence; but this was held murder vii. 426 ix. 63

Homicide in shooting at tame fowl, wherein another hath property, without intention to steal it, is man-slaughter vi. 222

Accidental killing of a man in shooting at such tame fowl, with intention of stealing it, is murder vi. 222

The case of a most extraordinary murder in Hertfordshire, found amongst the papers of that eminent lawyer serjeant Maynard x. 29. Ap.

If an officer be killed in the execution of a warrant for a breach of the peace, it will be murder, though the warrant be obtained by undue means ix. 6. n.

What is murder, and what man-slaughter ix. 17, 18

Indictment for an assault and an attempt to murder iii. 65

Indictment for murder vi. 12. Ap.

Records against peers for murder iv. 511, 512. v. 137

Indictments against peers for murder ii. 642. iv. 513. v. 140, 181. x. 486, 519*

Indictment against a peer for murder vii. 86

If a person be indicted for murder at common law, and on the coroner's inquest, and on the statute of stabbing; if found guilty of manslaughter on the former indictments, was generally acquitted of the latter ix. 333

A case to the contrary ix. 523

Instance from the Roman History, of a father being considered as accessory to murders committed by his son, though he never spoke to, or saw him x. 435

Where several people join to do an act in itself unlawful, and death ensues from any thing done in prosecution of that unlawful design, they will be all considered as principals in murder, if they were all present aiding and abetting therein ix. 734

Being threatened to be killed, if party would not go on a murderous expedition, no legal defence, on a prosecution for murder ix. 732. See FEAR.

By divers old statutes, no charter of pardon ought to be granted in case of murder Em. Pref. ix. n.

Occasion of the distinction between murder and man-slaughter ix. 61

The term "murder" described ix. 61, 62

The law called "Englebre" explained ix. 61

A mistake in chap. 26 of the statute of Marlebridge rectified, and its true meaning explained by lord chief justice Holt ix. 61, 62

The difference between murder and man-slaughter ix. 62

- Of pardon for murder ix. 62
 Wilful poisoning murder ix. 62
 Of the indictment for murder ix. 62
 If a parent or master uses an improper instrument in correction, and thereby kills the child or servant, it is murder ix. 64
 What judgment to be given in murder by stat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37. x. 40
 If A of malice premeditated discharge a pistol at B, and then runs away, B pursues him, and A turns back, and in his own defence kills B, it is murder. By Holt, chief justice x. 63
 Taking away the life of an innocent man by perjury, in a course of legal proceeding, amounts not to murder x. 445, 446, 447
 Mr. justice Foster's observations on indictment for murder x. 30, 39
 If process be defective, or mistake in name or addition, or if officer's name be inserted without authority, and after issuing process, officer exceeds his authority, and is killed, it will be only manslaughter x. 476
 A very extraordinary trial in appeal x. 31. Ap. See
- ADULTERY.
BRAINS.
BUCKNER.
COWLAND.
DUELS.
GREY.
HOLLOWAY.
HUSBAND AND WIFE.
MASTER AND SERVANT.
- MISADVENTURE.
PARENT AND CHILD.
PETTY TREASON.
POISON.
PRESS WARRANTS.
SPECIAL VERDICTS.
STATUTE OF STABBING.
WILLIAMS.
- MURPHY, TIMOTHY,
 His trial for forgery, January 13, 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 183
 The indictment x. 183
 Mr. Hume-Campbell opens the evidence x. 184
 Serjeant Nares, for the prisoner, states a point of law x. 187
 That an accomplice indicted cannot be a witness x. 188
 Serjeant Davy on the same side x. 188
 Mr. Hume-Campbell's reply x. 189
 Mr. Pratt's reply on the same side x. 189
 Court over-ruled the objection to his competency x. 190
 Witness proceeds x. 198
 Witnesses to his character, and why x. 198
 Prisoner's counsel objects, that the will and probate differ x. 198
 Court, the probate being a wrong description, does not alter the case x. 198
Murphy's confession x. 198
 Executed at Tyburn x. 201
- MURRAY, JOHN, the Pretender's Secretary,
 Being called to be sworn, in order to give evidence on lord Levat's trial, the noble prisoner objected to his competency, because he was attainted by act of parliament ix. 650, 651. x. 436
 Counsel heard as to reading the record of those proceedings ix. 652—664
 The record admitted to be proved and given in evidence ix. 664*—668*
 Then the prisoner lord Levat desired to falsify the record, and to prove by witnesses, that Mr. Murray did not surrender himself within the time prescribed by the act of parliament ix. *669
 But his lordship's counsel were not permitted to argue this point ix. 670*
 Nor that his surrender was not a surrender within the act ix. *669
 Letter of lord Levat to him ix. 712*
 The evidence of this witness objected to by several lords ix. 672*, *673
 This witness is often interrogated by several lords ix. 672*, 673, 678, 679, 680
 The late judge Foster's opinion on the validity of Mr. Murray's evidence. x. 188 Ap.
 The objection to it answered by Foster x. 188 Ap.
 Mr. Murray's evidence on lord Levat's trial in ix. vol. p. 678*, seems contradicted by the Gazette x. 188. Ap. See ATTAINDERS.
 "MURRAY'S CASE."
 Resolutions of the commons respecting a libel so called x. 196. Ap. See OWEN WILLIAM.
MURRAY WILLIAM, Solicitor-General,
 His reply to lord Levat's defence ix. *735
 His argument against the objection, that an attainted person is not a competent witness in treason ix. *659
 His speech on the prosecution of Owen the bookseller for publishing "Murray's case" x. 205. Ap. See MANSFIELD Lord MUSEUM. See BRITISH MUSEUM.
MUTE.
 One standing mute, and refusing his trial, condemned upon stat. 35 Hen. VIII. for foreign treasons viii. 346
 The punishment for one standing mute, and the reason of it i. 325. * See TRIAL.
- MUTILATION.
 Mutilation is not capital by the law of Scotland, though dismembering is ii. 629
- N.
- NAIRN, KATHERINE,
 Her trial for incest with her husband's brother, and the murder of her husband, by poisoning him, August 1765, 15 Geo. III. before the High Court of Justiciary in Scotland x. 479
 Indictment against her x. 479
 List of affize x. 481
 List of witnesses on behalf of the prosecution x. 481
 List of writings, &c. adduced in evidence x. 482
- Procurators for and against the parnel x. 481
 Arguments of counsel for and against her x. 482, &c.
 Her jury x. 488
 Evidence against her x. 488, &c.
 Her letters x. 505
 Her first declaration before the sheriff-substitute of Forfar x. 505
 Second declaration x. 506
 Refuses to answer the questions put to her by the sheriff-substitute of Edinburgh x. 508
 Witnesses for her x. 510—512
 Found guilty x. 513
 Minute of debate in arrest of judgment x. 513
 Interlocutor thereon x. 517
 Pleads her belly x. 518
 Midwives cited to inspect her, not positive whether she is pregnant or not x. 520
 Sentence respited x. 520
 Found pregnant, and sentence again respited x. 520
 Delivered of a daughter in the Tolbooth at Edinburgh x. 520 Escapes out of the Tolbooth, after having lain in but seventeen days x. 520
- NAIRN, WILLIAM Lord,
- His petition to the house of peers to intercede with the king for mercy vi. 11, 12. * See vi. 1. DERWENTWATER Earl of N A M E S.
 Though person may have divers surnames, yet purchase by either sufficient vi. 804
 By the practice in the West, many men were hanged for having old Jewish names, as Obadiab, or the like, with a jest, that their godfathers hanged them iv. 175
 Name of place common description in Scotland, as Lochiel for Cameron of Lochiel ix. 26. n.
- NARES, GEORGE, Serjeant at Law,
- His speech for Elizabeth Canning, tried for perjury x. 298
 States a point of law for Murphy x. 187
 Gives Butler, the author of Hudibras, the character of a great man, and cites that work ix. 301
- * NATURALIZATION.
- * The natives of Scotland, and formerly of Gascoigne, &c. when united to the crown of England, were denizens of England, and needed not to be naturalized here ii. 9, 11
 * An act naturalizing the father, naturalizes his children born before the act ii. 12
 It cannot be but by act of parliament ii. 6
Huffey J. said, that 25 Edw. III. stat. 2. was but a declaration of the common law xi. 81
- * NAYLOR, JAMES,
- * His trial before a committee of the house of commons for blasphemy, 1656 ii. 265
 * Report of the committee ii. 265
 * James Naylor's account of himself ii. 265
 * Charged with personating our blessed Saviour ii. 265
 * A paper containing the description of our Saviour, as it was given to the senate of Rome by Pub. Lentulus, found upon him ii. 266
 * His person not unlike that description ii. 266
 * He assumes the titles due only to our Saviour ii. 267, &c.
 * The committee resolve, that he is guilty of the charge ii. 269
 * His followers, who were in custody with him, give him divine worship ii. 270
 * As did many quakers who came to see him ii. 270
 * The house agree with the committee ii. 270
 * Sentenced to be bored through the tongue, whipped, &c. ii. 272
 * Lord commissioner Whitlocke's speech in the house of commons thereon See Great Reg. No. vi. 1. p. 166. vol. 7. p. 494. ii. 273
- NEGRO.
- Authority of owner of a negro to enforce his right by transporting him out of England, considered xi. 347. See SLAVERY. SOMERSET VILLENAGE.
 * NEVIL, ALEXANDER, Archbishop of York. See BRAMBRE.
 NEVIL, Sir EDWARD. See POLE Sir GEOFFREY.
 NEWCASTLE, Duke of,
 His grace's singular vote on the trial of her grace of Kingsfon for bigamy xi. 256
- NEW ENGLAND. See QUELCH JOHN.
 NEW GATE.
- In Newgate, no state prisoner has any allowance made him from government, and in case he hath not of his own, he must live upon charity, or starve; and if he hath any known substance, he must expect to be squeezed out of a great part of it, or he will have much worse lodging than many a tolerable dog-kennel of a kind good-natured country squire would make, be loaded with irons, and used worse than a dog x. 75, 76 Ap.
- NEW ROMNEY. See ELLES RICHARD. GIBBON JOHN.
 NEWTON. See GOLDING.
 NEW YORK. See BAYARD NICHOLAS. ZENGER PETER.
 NEW S.
 Queen Anne's proclamation for restraining the spreading false news v. 782
 Lord chief justice Scroggs censured the folly of the age in being so fond of newspapers iii. 64. See LIBELS.
 NEW TRIALS.
 Court will grant a new trial, where jurymen make affidavits, that the verdict was taken wrong by the judge and mistakenly recorded, and was not the verdict they meant or intended to bring in x. 406, 407, 413
 But

But not where two jurymen recant, after they have consented, and given in a general verdict according to their oath x. 407, 408. See JURY TRIAL.

* NITHISDALE, WILLIAM Earl of vii. 1. See DERWENTWATER Earl of. NOBILITY.

The king may supersede his writ to ennoble any one under the great seal, before the parliament sits. viii. 60. See PEERAGE and PEERS.

NOBLE, RICHARD,

His trial for the murder of John Sayer, and of Mary Sayer for petty treason, and Mary Salisbury for aiding and abetting the said murder, at Kingston affizes in Surry, March 12, 13, 1712-13, 11 Anne ix. 1

Motion to put off trial from absence of witnesses ix. 1

No affidavit being made that the absent witnesses were material, court ordered the trial to go on ix. 1

Queen's counsel alledge, that the prisoners endeavoured to procure witnesses to perjure themselves ix. 1

It appearing that some of the jurymen summoned had been tampered with, they were all set aside, and a new jury sworn ix. 2, 3

Noble challenged 20 of the jury, Mrs. Sayer 35, and Mrs. Salisbury 20 ix. 3

Noble moved that he might be tried separately, his crime differing from those of the other prisoners, but over-ruled ix. 3

The evidence ix. 3

Mrs. Sayer's defence ix. 4

Mrs. Salisbury's ix. 5

Noble's defence ix. 5

Witnesses to the characters of the prisoners ix. 6

Noble desires counsel to a point of law, viz. to the legality of the warrant, whereby Mrs. Sayer was apprehended ix. 6

Hopes the court would therefore direct the jury to find a special verdict ix. 6

Court declare warrant legal ix. 6

Evidence summed up ix. 7

Noble found guilty, the other prisoners not guilty ix. 7

Court, on motion, ordered Mrs. Sayer and Mrs. Salisbury to give bail for their appearance at any time within twelve months, to answer any other indictment or appeal; which they accordingly did, and were discharged ix. 7

Noble's motion in arrest of judgment, which was over-ruled ix. 7

His speech previous to receiving sentence ix. 7

Sentence passed, and execution ordered ix. 9

His behaviour in gaol ix. 9

His speech at execution ix. 9

The lord chief justice Parker's reason for over-ruling Noble's motion in arrest of judgment, made upon the ground of having a mis-trial, for that his crime was murder, and Mrs. Sayer's petty treason, confuted ix. 10

NOEL, the Honourable WILLIAM,

Of counsel for Franklin on trial for libel ix. 261

His speech in his favour ix. 271

His argument on lord Lovat's trial, respecting the competency of a witness who was attainted ix. 660*

His reply to lord Lovat's defence ix. 742*

NOEL, WILLIAM, Justice of the C. P.

Of opinion, that killing an officer attempting to arrest by virtue of a warrant sealed before his name inserted therein, was only man-slaughter at most x. 478

NOLI PROSEQUI.

Noli prosequi entered by attorney general, on lord Grey's prosecution for seduction iii. 544

NON COMPOS MENTIS.

Stat. 1 & 2. P. & M. c. 10. did justly repeal stat. 35 Hen. VIII. c. 20. which punished a man for treason, though he became non compos mentis before execution ii. 7

No less justly did stat. 25 Edw. III. & 5 Car. II. by the word imagination, alter in like point that law which was in use till then, concerning such a person's committing the act of treason, such an one being no better than quasi inanimatus ii. 7. See ARNOLD EDWARD. BATEMAN

CHARLES. BRADSHAW JAMES. FERRERS Earl. INSANITY. LUNATIC. MADMAN. Insanitus, ever at option xi. 194

NON JURING CLERGYMEN.

Three of them, Mr. Collier, Mr. Cook, and Mr. Snatt, proceeded against for publicly absolving Mr. William Perkins and Mr. John Friend, at Tyburn, 1696 x. 43. Ap.

Bishop Burnet's account of the affair x. 43. Ap.

An account of what passed at the execution of Perkins and Friend x. 43. Ap.

Cook and Snatt committed to Newgate; Collier kept out of the way x. 44. Ap.

Collier's defence of the absolution given them x. 44. Ap.

A declaration of the archbishops and bishops concerning the behaviour of these clergymen x. 45. Ap.

Collier's further defence of the absolution, occasioned by a declaration of the archbishops, bishops, &c. x. 46. Ap.

Proceedings against Cook and Snatt in B. R. x. 49. Ap.

An argument in their behalf x. 50. Ap.

NORFOLK, HENRY Duke of,

Proceedings between the duke and duchess, in the house of lords, for a divorce, 1691 viii. 7

Duchess heard by counsel against the bill viii. 7

The bill for a divorce viii. 7

Reasons offered to the lords on behalf of the duke viii. 8

Civil lawyers heard, and the duke ordered to bring in his charge particularly, as to person, time, and place viii. 8, 9

The duke charges Mr. John Germaine viii. 9

The duchess's answer viii. 9

Her answer to the new charge viii. 10

Charges the duke with adultery viii. 10

The witnesses names viii. 11

Witnesses examined, and counsel heard on both sides viii. 12

Depositions of the witnesses read, and proceedings of the lords thereon viii. 13

Observations upon the several evidences by her grace's friends viii. 13

Evidence on behalf of the duchess, intimating a reconciliation viii. 23

Bill thrown out viii. 25

Brings his action against Mr. Germaine in the King's-Bench viii. 27

Defendant pleads not guilty within six years viii. 27

Jury's names viii. 27

Damages laid 100,000l. viii. 27

Evidence for the duke viii. 28

Counsel for the defendant urge, no fact proved within the time of the declaration between the duchess and Mr. Germaine viii. 32

Witnesses examined for the defendant, and against the credit of the duke's witnesses viii. 32

A letter from the duke to the duchess read in court viii. 35

Lord chief justice sums up the evidence, and declares matters before the six years may be given in evidence, to explain some actions since, but to no other purpose viii. 35

The jury next morning find for the plaintiff, with 100 marks, damages and costs viii. 36

Are severely reprimanded by the court viii. 36

* NORFOLK, HENRY HOWARD, Duke of,

* Proceedings in parliament upon the bill of divorce between him and his duchess, 1699, 12 W. III. v. 239

* The bill of divorce v. 239

* Complaint made to the house, that the duke cannot get his witnesses to attend v. 241

* The depositions of Eleanor Vanes for the duke v. 243

* Depositions of Nicholas Hofer v. 246

* Of William Bayly v. 251

* Depositions of Thomas Hawksworth for the duchess v. 253

* Depositions of John Peacock v. 254

* Depositions of Frances Knight v. 256

* Depositions of William White v. 258

* Depositions of Matthew Macdonald, and others v. 260

* The bill past the lords, and sent down to the commons v. 265

* The duchess's petition v. 266

* The duke's case v. 266

* Bishop Cosin's argument, whether adultery is a just cause of divorce v. 268

* The duchess's case v. 271

* The bill read a second time by the commons v. 274

* Sir Thomas Powys's speech for the duchess v. 274

* Mr. Dodd's speech v. 277

* Dr. Pinfold's speech on the same side v. 278

* Mr. Serjeant Wright's speech for the duke v. 279

* Mr. Northey on the same side v. 281

* Mr. Oldys's speech for the duke v. 282

* The duchess's counsel reply v. 282

* Mr. Northey opens the evidence v. 283

* The witnesses examined v. 284

* The duchess's counsel desire to read the depositions taken before the lords, in order to prove that the witnesses contradict themselves v. 285

* Which being refused, they decline making any further defence v. 285

* The bill is passed v. 286

* NORFOLK, THOMAS HOWARD, Duke of,

Lord high steward on the duke of Buckingham's trial xi. 5

Again, on lord Dacres's trial xi. 10

Again, on queen Anne Boleyn's trial, and on viscount Rochford's, her brother xi. 10

Again, on duke Northumberland's, marquis Northampton's, and earl Warwick's xi. 26

Proceedings against him for treason, December 1546, 37 Hen. VIII. xi. 17

He is committed xi. 18, 20

Evidence of witnesses xi. 18

His goods seized xi. 19

He is committed to the Tower xi. 19

His letter to the king xi. 19

To the lords xi. 19

His submission xi. 19

Escaped execution by the king's death xi. 19, 20

* His trial by commission the 16th of January 1571, 14 Eliz. i. 82

* Names of his peers i. 83

* The indictment charges him with a design of marrying the queen of Scots; with aiding the earl of Northumberland and other rebels; with adhering to the queen's enemies, corresponding with the pope and king of Spain, and promoting a foreign invasion i. 83, 84. See viii. 335

* He is denied counsel, though he cites a precedent for it i. 86

* Is required by the court to answer directly, whether he knew of the queen of Scots making pretensions to the crown of England i. 89

* The bishop of Ross's examination read i. 90

* Earl of Murray's letter read i. 92

* Bishop of Ross's letter to the queen of Scots read i. 94

* A letter from the duke to the earl of Murray read i. 95

* The duke's own examinations and letters read i. 96, 97

* An old prophecy given in evidence i. 100

* The court denied to let the witnesses be examined vis à vis i. 95, 98

* The duke in his defence objects to the bishop of Ross's evidence, as being 5 Z

- being a foreigner, &c. particularly as he was a Scot, and might be made a prisoner in time of peace i. 102
- * A title derived to the queen of Scots above the Conquest i. 106
- * The pope's deposing power i. 106
- * Foreigners, bondmen, and persons confessing themselves guilty of treason, may be witnesses, if they do not stand indicted, outlawed, or attainted i. 113
- * Where the subjects of a foreign prince may be deemed enemies, though the prince be in amity with us i. 115
- * The crown entering into a war with any other nation, a sufficient declaration of their being enemies i. 115
- * The duke is convicted i. 115
- * Judgment is pronounced on him as a traitor i. 116
- * His behaviour at execution i. 116

NORKOT, JANE,

- Being murdered, the question was, how she came by her death x. 29. Ap.
- Persons tried at Hertford for her murder, and acquitted x. 29. Ap.
- An appeal brought, and they were convicted and executed; but confessed nothing x. 30, 31. Ap.
- Serjeant Maynard states the evidence x. 31. Ap.

NORRIS, HENRY,

- Mark Smeton*; William Brereton, and fr Francis Weston, their trials for high-treason, before commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, in May 1536, 2d Hen. VIII. xi. 10, 12
- They were twice indicted xi. 12
- Three pleaded not guilty xi. 12
- Smeton* confessed he had known the queen carnally three times xi. 11, 12, 13, 14
- They are all found guilty xi. 12
- Judgment xi. 12
- None of them were quartered xi. 13
- Three were beheaded xi. 13
- Smeton* was hanged xi. 13

NORTH, Sir FRANCIS, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of C.B.

- Directs the jury on the trial of Reading, counsellor at law, for a misdemeanour, in endeavouring to stifle the king's evidence against the popish lords, by suborning the king's witnesses, and bribing them to retract their evidence ii. 827. See COUNSEL.
- His charge to Reading's jury ii. 829
- Ordered to be impeached when chief justice iii. 224. vii. 486
- Tells Stephen Colledge, that he must not call one witness to disprove what another of his witnesses has deposed iii. 373
- Tells the jury, that whoever imagine to depose or imprison the king, are in law guilty of imagining his death iii. 406
- That if one witness proves an overt act of treason in county wherein prisoner is indicted, and another witness proves another overt act of the same treason in another county, these are two witnesses, as the law requires, and sufficient to support the indictment iii. 407
- His speech before sentence iii. 408
- His conduct on Colledge's trial condemned iv. 174, 175, 180
- Published Colledge's trial iv. 185
- Sir John Hawles observed, that lord chief justice North would have deceived any man by his countenance, who had not known his practice iv. 191

- His argument against the judgment in Barnardiston and Soame viii. 441
- Examines captain Bellow, in his last sickness, in the year 1680 viii. 460
- His narrative of it at the council-board viii. 460
- His letter to fr Lionel Jenkins, secretary of state viii. 461
- His speech, when lord keeper, to lord mayor and aldermen of London, on delivering their petition to his majesty in council, relating to the quo warranto, 1683 iv. 851. viii. 463

NORTH, ROGER,

- Opens the indictment on the trial of Colledge iii. 351
- His argument on challenge to the freehold, against lord Russel, indicted and tried for high-treason, in conspiring the death of the king iii. 711
- His speech before evidence, on the trial of Sacheverel and others, for a riot, in being unlawfully present at the election of a mayor, when they had no concern in the election iii. 951
- He is examined before committee of lords, relative to the advisers and prosecutors of the murders of lord Russel, colonel Sidney, fr Thomas Armstrong, mr. Gornish, and others viii. 478

NORTHAMPTON, WILLIAM Marquis of. See NORTHUMBERLAND, Duke of.

NORTH BRITON.

- The proceedings on the prosecution of a libel so called xi. 307

NORTHEY, EDWARD,

- His argument for Godwin, at the suit of fr Edward Hales, for neglecting to take the oaths of supremacy and allegiance i. 686. vii. 613
- Opens the evidence on trial of Mary Butler, for forgery v. 233
- His speech for the duke of Norfolk, on the second reading of the bill in the house of commons, for a divorce v. 281
- Opens the evidence on the said bill v. 283

- NORTHEY, Sir EDWARD, Attorney-General,
- His speech on the trial of Lindsay, for treason, in returning from France without licence v. 521
- His observations on the evidence for the queen, at the trial of John Tutchin, informed against for a libel, for writing a periodical paper called The Observator v. 540
- Charges James Mountague, one of the defendant's counsel, with justifying his principles, as to the power of the people, and declares he will prosecute any man who maintains such doctrine v. 540

- His argument, on motion in arrest of judgment, against John Tutchin v. 547

- His reply v. 547
- His speech in the house of peers, on trial of earl Wintoun, impeached for treason, in being concerned in the rebellion vi. 29, 53
- His speech on the trial of Francia, for treason vi. 62
- He had been in and out of the office of attorney-general so often, that mr. Hungerford observed, he might easily be led into a mistake as to the actual time of his being attorney-general vi. 74
- His behaviour towards Bernardi, a state prisoner in Newgate for forty years x. 66, 69, 76. Ap.

NORTHINGTON, ROBERT Earl of,

- His procession on the trial of lord Byron x. 517
- His commission of lord high steward x. 517
- His address to the noble prisoner previous to the evidence. x. 519
- His lordship's speech to him, on acquainting him with the verdict of the lords xi. 548

NORTHUMBERLAND, JOHN DUDLEY, Duke of,

- William Parr*, marquis of Northampton, and John Dudley, earl of Warwick, their trials for high-treason, in the court of the lord high steward, at Westminster, August 18, 1553, 1 Mary xi. 26
- The lord high steward xi. 26
- The duke asks two questions of the court xi. 26
- They are answered xi. 26
- His defence xi. 26
- All confess the indictment xi. 26
- Judgment pronounced xi. 26
- The duke requests several favours xi. 26
- The marquis pleads xi. 26
- The earl requests that his debts may be paid xi. 26
- They are brought to execution xi. 26
- The duke makes a speech xi. 26

NOTE of HAND.

- Indictment for forging a promissory note of hand x. 95. Ap. See HALES ROBERT. HALES WILLIAM. KINNERSLEY THOMAS.

NOTE-TAKING,

- Unless it be habitual, it is very difficult iv. 182

NOTICE.

- Prisoner cannot insist on any notice of trial iii. 343, 732. iv. 143.
- See xi. 6, 7.

NOTTINGHAM, HENEAGE FINCH, Earl of, Lord Chancellor,

- His speech as lord steward, on earl Pembroke's trial, for murder ii. 641
- His speech before evidence, to lord Cornwallis, on his trial for murder ii. 725. See iv. 234
- His speech to the prisoner previous to the examination of witnesses ii. 725
- His charge to the peers ii. 726
- He said courts of justice protected counsel in the advice they gave their clients, and that they ought to be able to maintain it in point of law iii. 204
- Lord chancellor Nottingham used to say, that counsel should not speak as if they would abet the guilt of their clients, rather than advocates for their innocence iii. 567. ix. 309
- He refuses an Habeas Corpus to Jenkes vii. 471. See DAVENTRY LORD. FINCH HENEAGE.

* NOTTINGHAM TOWN.

- * A riot at an election there tried iii. 194. See SACHEVEREL, WILLIAM, Esq.
- * The case of that corporation in 1684, stated by the late William Sacke, Esq. v. 978

NOY, WILLIAM,

- His argument in B. R. on Hab. Corp. brought by persons imprisoned for refusing to lend upon commissions for loans vii. 119
- His answer to the attorney (fr Robert Heath) his objections vii. 183

NOY, WILLIAM, Attorney-General,

- Opens and enforces the charge, on information in the Star-chamber, against Prynne, for writing, &c. Histrionastix i. 420, 421
- His answer to the defence of Sherfield, prosecuted by information in the Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glass window in a church i. 407
- Vindicated from the reflections cast on him by Prynne, by fr Edward Littleton, solicitor-general, on the proceedings against Prynne, for several libels, in Star-chamber i. 483

NUDIGATE, SEBASTIAN. See MIDDLEMORE HUMPHRY.

O.

* OATES, TITUS;

- * Proceedings on the writ of enquiry, between his royal highness James duke of York, and the said Oates, June 18, 1684. 36 Car. II. iii. 987
- * The high sheriff present in court, and sits covered during the executing the writ. Fifteen sworn on the jury iii. 987
- * The writ at large in English iii. 988
- * The duke had declared on the statute de scandal. magnat. the words laid to have been spoken were, "That the duke of York was a traitor" iii. 988
- * The words proved to be spoken at the bishop of Ely's table iii. 990
- * Other words proved to be spoken; as, that "the duke fired the city;" that "he was a son of a whore, and should never succeed to the crown," &c. iii. 991
- * The chief justice Jefferies's observations on the evidence iii. 993
- * Damages given by the jury, 100,000l. iii. 996
- * His trial at the King's-Bench bar, in Easter-Term, the 8th of May 1685, 1 Jac. II. upon an indictment of perjury iv. 1
- * The defendant permitted to sit within the bar iv. 1
- * The

I N D E X.

* The having been on the grand jury, a good cause of challenge	iv. 2	* He intimates that the popish plot was a sham, and the Rye-house and lord Ruffel's plot the only true plot	iv. 98
* The court deny to bring up the prisoner's witnesses, who were in execution for debt, in the King's-Bench , either by habeas corpus or rule of court; alledging it would be an escape	iv. 2	* The reasons that prevailed upon king Charles II. to permit Ireland to be executed	iv. 99
* The indictment	iv. 2	* Of which the king repented	iv. 99
* The defendant's exceptions to it	iv. 5	* Oates is convicted	iv. 101
* He is told he moves them out of time	iv. 5	* Moves for longer time to move in arrest of judgment	iv. 102
* Sir Robert Sawyer , attorney-general, his speech before evidence	iv. 5	* Delivers four exceptions to the indictment	iv. 102
* Evidence of his former testimony	iv. 7	* An evidence for the king may be indicted at common law; but not upon the statute of perjury	iv. 102
* Lord Gerrard's evidence of Oates's being at St. Omers , when he swore he was in London	iv. 21	* If any part of the defendant's oath appear to be false, it will maintain the indictment for perjury	iv. 103
* A clergyman of the church of England , and about twenty other witnesses depose to the same effect	iv. 22	* Perjury anciently punished with death	iv. 103
* Oates says he is prosecuted to serve a turn;—the court resent it	iv. 24	* At this day, it is in the discretion of the court to inflict what punishment they see fit, saving life and member	iv. 104
* Mr. Oates's defence	iv. 27	* Oates's severe and illegal sentence	iv. 104
* He insists his evidence ought not to be questioned or impeached, while the records of conviction remained in force, and unreversed against the parties who were convicted on his evidence	iv. 27	Immediately after the Revolution, the house of commons resolved, that the prosecution of Titus Oates , upon two indictments in the court of King's-Bench , was a design to stifle the popish plot, and that the verdicts given thereupon were corrupt, and the judgments cruel and illegal	iv. 106
* Complaints of being prosecuted so long after the supposed crime; especially when the parliament and courts of justice had expressed their satisfaction of the truth of what he had deposed	iv. 27	House of peers affirms the judgment against him, and thirteen lords enter their protests	viii. 474
* The defendant's witnesses, to prove he was in London in April 1678	iv. 30	The two chief justices Holt and Pollaxfen , and the chief baron Aikyns , and six more judges, did solemnly deliver their opinion in the lords, and unanimously declare, that the judgments against him were barbarously inhuman and unchristian, and that there was no precedent to warrant the punishments of whipping and committing to prison for life for the crime of perjury, which, however, was only one of his punishments; and that they were against law and ancient practice, and therefore erroneous and ought to be reversed	viii. 475. See iv. 166, 205.
* Earl of Devonshire called as a witness for Mr. Oates	iv. 38	Em. Pref. xii.
* Earl of Clare also examined by him	iv. 39	There was an attempt to get the above judgments reversed, but still to continue Oates's disability as a witness; but it did not succeed, only the house of lords addressed the king to grant Oates a pardon, which was accordingly done	iv. 106. viii. 474, 475. See vii. 476. PETITIONS.
* Earl of Huntingdon called as a witness by him, who says, though the defendant was believed once in the house of lords, they had now altered their opinions of him	iv. 40
* Oates shews he had the thanks of the house of lords for discovering the plot	iv. 41
* Several of the judges examined	iv. 40, 41
* Mr. attorney-general replies to Mr. Oates	iv. 42
* Oates's evidence against the queen and sir George Wakeman , of a conspiracy to poison the king	iv. 43
* His evidence against the earl of Castlemaine	iv. 44
* Oates objects, that those who had been indicted on his evidence, and acquitted, ought not to be admitted witnesses against him	iv. 44
* Insinuates, that the design of prosecuting him was, to smother the popish plot	iv. 44
* Oates's narrative, sworn to in the house of lords, produced as evidence against him	iv. 47
* The court refuse the testimony of a person who came to swear he had sworn himself at a former trial	iv. 47
* The king's counsel insist, that this evidence was always admitted to prove a subornation	iv. 47
* Evidence of Oates's suborning and tampering with the witnesses at the trial of the five Jesuits	iv. 48
* Hearsay evidence admitted to confirm another's testimony	iv. 48
* Oates objects to the testimony of papists, as being parties in this cause	iv. 50
* He appeals to the audience, that the court did not do him justice; for which he is reprimanded	iv. 51
* Insists that a witness for the king cannot be indicted for perjury	iv. 52
* Says, it is the Protestant cause, and not him, they strike at	iv. 53
* He appeals to God; as to the truth of his evidence of the plot	iv. 53
* Moves he might not be kept in irons	iv. 53
* He has leave to withdraw before the evidence summed up	iv. 54
* Mr. Finch , solicitor-general, sums up the evidence	iv. 54
* He shews how Mr. Oates's witnesses contradict himself and one another	iv. 56
* And how it came about, that Oates had once such credit with the parliament and the nation	iv. 58
* The chief-justice's directions to the jury	iv. 58
* Takes notice that Oates was styled the Saviour of the nation	iv. 60
* Shews the improbability of Oates's testimony	iv. 63
* The court offer the jury some refreshment before they go from the bar	iv. 65
* Oates is convicted	iv. 65
* His trial at the King's-Bench bar, Easter term, the 9th of May , 1685	iv. 66
* Yac. II. upon another indictment for perjury	iv. 66
* The indictment	iv. 66
* Mr. attorney-general (sir Robert Sawyer) opens the evidence	iv. 71
* Evidence, that the defendant swore Mr. Ireland was in London between the 8th and 12th of August , and on the 1st or 2d of September , 1678.	iv. 71
* Many witnesses called to prove that Mr. Ireland was out of London from the 3d of August to the 14th of September , 1678	iv. 72—89
* Oates's bold behaviour towards the court	iv. 79
* Several of the king's witnesses protestants	iv. 80
* Ireland's execution respited	iv. 82
* Evidence of Ireland's witnesses being insulted and threatened	iv. 87
* Oates's defence	iv. 89
* He urges that witnesses ought to be allowed a latitude in swearing, and not be tied up to a point of time	iv. 89
* Oates's witnesses do not appear	iv. 92
* He insists the king's witnesses ought not to be indicted for perjury	iv. 92
* Says, if he had been a witness in any other cause than the discovery of the popish plot, he had met with better usage	iv. 93
* He is allowed a week's time to move in arrest of judgment	iv. 94
* Withdraws before the evidence is summed up	iv. 94
* Mr. solicitor's reply to Oates's defence	iv. 94
* He shews that Oates's evidence against Ireland could not be true, even allowing him the latitude he contends for in point of time	iv. 94
* The reason why the prosecution was so long delayed	iv. 96
* The factious disposition of the city of London	iv. 96
* The chief justice's directions to the jury	iv. 96
		* Whether any other authority but the parliament can impose an oath	i. 746
		* Oaths enjoined by the canons, without authority of parliament	i. 870
		* The oath of allegiance permitted to be taken to king Charles I. till his death	ii. 9
		* A debate whether the privy counsellors, &c. take an oath at nomination of sheriffs in the court of Exchequer	vi. 502
		* The oath of a baron of the Exchequer	vi. 193
		* The oath of a master in Chancery	vi. 504
		Oath of the judges and king's counsel observed upon	iv. 176
		Hardship of the old law, that witness could not be examined for prisoner on oath	iv. 178, 181. See MORLEY THOMAS Lord vii. 424
		The religion of an oath is not tied to place or form, but receives its obligation from the appeal therein to God	iv. 194. vi. 738
		Oath of lord chancellor	vi. 484, 596, 736
		The king may dispense with the oaths of a privy councillor	iv. 399
		Of kissing the book	vi. 920
		Custom-house oaths censured	vi. 738
		Indictment for not taking the oaths	vi. 11. Ap.
		Oath to be administered to a witness upon a voir dire	ix. *639
		Oath against oath determines nothing, unless of superior weight and credit	x. 407. n.
		In France and other countries the very holding up the hand is an oath	xi. 126. See BOLTON JOHN. CASTLEMAINE ROGER Earl of
			iv. 397. CROOK JOHN. GREY ISAAC. HALES Sir EDWARD.
			O F F E N C E.
		Act of parliament inflicting penalty for second offence, indictment must recite record of first conviction, which must be proved, but matter thereof shall never be re-examined	x. 433
			O G I L V I E, J O H N.
		Proceedings against him for high-treason, at Glasgow , 1615	vii. 95
		Confesses himself a Jesuit, and is examined concerning the power of the pope over his majesty	vii. 96
		Arraigned before commissioners for that purpose	vii. 96
		The indictment	vii. 97
		Protests against the commissioners	vii. 98
		Refuses to answer their questions, or acknowledge them as judges	vii. 100
		The archbishop of Glasgow's speech to the jury	vii. 100
		Found guilty, and sentenced to be hanged and quartered	vii. 101
		Account of his execution	vii. 101
			O G I L V I E, P A T R I C K.
		His trial for incest with his brother's wife, and assisting in poisoning him, August 1765 , 15 Geo. III. before the High Court of Justiciary in Scotland	x. 479
		Indictment against him	x. 479
		List of assize or jury returned	x. 481
		Witnesses for the prosecutor	x. 481
		Writings adduced in evidence for the prosecutor	x. 482
		Names of advocates for and against the pannel	x. 482
		Counsel for and against him	x. 482, &c.
		Several cases cited	x. 486
		His petition for removing Anne Clark	x. 487
		Ordered to be removed	x. 488
		The jury or pannel's names	x. 488
		Several witnesses examined against him	x. 488, &c.
		His first declaration before the sheriff-substitute of Forfar	x. 506
		His second declaration	x. 506
		His declaration before the sheriff-substitute of Edinburgh	x. 507
		List of witnesses for the pannel	x. 509
			Excul-

- Exculpatory proof x. 510-512
 Verdict of affize x. 513
 Minutes of pleadings upon the verdict x. 513
 Minutes of pleadings for both pannels x. 514-516
 Minutes for the prosecutor x. 516
 Interlocutor thereon x. 517
 Sentence against him x. 518
 Proceedings laid before his majesty and the privy-council, with mr. M^cCarty's opinion thereon x. 518
 Is executed, with his speech at the gallows denying the fact x. 519, 520
O K E Y, Colonel,
 One of the regicides, seized at Delft, and brought to England, his trial viii. 370
 His behaviour after sentence viii. 371
 His speech at his execution viii. 376
 * OLDCASTLE, Sir JOHN, Lord COBHAM,
 * Accused of heresy, anno 1413, 1 Hen. V. i. 36
 * Application made to the king for his concurrence, before process was issued against him i. 37
 * The king examines him himself, and then leaves him to be proceeded against by the archbishop i. 37
 * Who cites him, and afterwards excommunicates him for contumacy i. 37
 * His confession of faith i. 38
 * He challenges any man to fight with him in defence of his faith i. 39
 * He is arrested in the king's presence i. 39
 * His examination before the archbishop in the Chapter-House of St. Paul's i. 39
 * He is examined to four points: 1st, concerning transubstantiation; 2d, penance; 3d, the authority of the church; 4th, pilgrimages i. 41
 * His answers i. 44, &c.
 * His sentence, to be hanged and burnt i. 46
 * His abjuration counterfeited i. 47
 * By an act of parliament it is made capital to read the Bible in English; and the offenders to be condemned as hereticks and traitors, and suffer and forfeit accordingly i. 49
 * Such hereticks excluded the benefit of sanctuary, by another act i. 49
 * Whereupon those of sir John Oldcastle's persuasion are rigorously prosecuted, and multitudes fled into foreign countries i. 49
 * Sir John Oldcastle escapes out of the Tower, and flies into Wales i. 49
 * Before he got there, narrowly escaped being taken at an husbandman's near St. Albans i. 49
 * Divers of his men taken; and some of his books, in which the images and paintings were disfigured i. 49
 * Sir Roger Aston, master Browne, sir John Beverly, and thirty-six more, condemned on the above-said acts, and hanged as traitors, and afterwards burnt as hereticks i. 49
 * Sir John Oldcastle delivered up by the lord Powis, and again imprisoned, condemned, and cruelly executed, 1418, 6 Hen. V. i. 49
 * The proceedings against sir John Oldcastle, taken from the records at Lambeth, in Latin and English i. 50
 * His answer to the four articles exhibited against him i. 53
 * The sense of the church as to those articles i. 55
 The record of his outlawry for treason vi. 4. Ap.
OLDISH, Doctor. See GOLDING.
OLLIBEAR, Mr.
 Of counsel for Harris on prosecution for a libel ii. 1038
ONEBY, Major JOHN,
 His trial at the sessions-house in the Old Bailey, March, 1725-6, for murder ix. 14
 The indictment ix. 14
 The evidence ix. 14
 Jury find a special verdict ix. 16
 Tenor of the special verdict ix. 17, 19
 The special verdict argued at the instance of the prisoner ix. 17
 Serjeant Darnall's argument for the king ix. 17
 Serjeant Eyre's for defendant ix. 18
 Serjeant Darnall's replication ix. 18
 Argued before all the judges of England ix. 18
 Lord chief justice Raymond's argument, on delivering the resolution of the judges ix. 18
 The prisoner found guilty of murder ix. 24
 During the four day rule for judgment, demise of king Geo. I. happened; however, Geo. II. ordered the law to take its course ix. 25
 Prisoner destroys himself with a penknife ix. 25
 Some account of him ix. 25
ONSLOW, ARTHUR,
 His case on an appeal brought against him by sir Nicholas Stoughton, during the time of parliament See FAGG Sir JOHN.
ONSLOW, DENZIL,
 His case on a false return viii. 94
ONSLOW, Lord. See ARNOLD EDWARD.
 OPENING COUNSEL.
 King's counsel opens the proceedings on the trials of peers, except upon impeachment from the commons. See COUNSEL. KING'S COUNSEL.
 ORDEAL.
 A prisoner offers to put himself upon this trial ii. 862
 The trial by ordeal was a much more advantageous trial for the suspected, than what was practised in the latter part of Car. II.'s reign iv. 178
 ORDERS OF COURT.
 If it becomes necessary to enforce the order of a judge by attachment, there must be a motion to make it a rule of court xi. 333
 * ORDERS, HOLY. See PLOT POPISH ii. 801, 993
 * ORDINARY i. 849
 * OVERBURY, Sir THOMAS. See the trials of ELWES

Sir FERVIS, FRANKLIN, MONSON Sir THOMAS,
SOMERSET Earl and Countess, TURNER, and WESTON, for poisoning him.

* OVERT-ACT.

- * Any words or actions which discover a design against the person of the prince are overt-acts of high treason i. 101. iii. 87, 208, 817, 1055.
 iv. 593, 658
 * Levying war an overt-act of compassing the king's death ii. 163
 * If any one overt-act laid in the indictment be proved, it maintains the indictment ii. 314. ii. 339
 * One witness proving an overt-act in the county where the indictment is found, and another witness proving another overt-act in another county, are two witnesses such as the law requires in treason ii. 873.
 iii. 204, 366. iv. 640, 657
 * A consult with traitors, an overt-act of treason iv. 689
 * A conspiracy to levy war against the king directly, an overt-act of compassing the king's death iii. 722. iv. 625
 * But a conspiracy to levy war, which by construction only is against the king, is not an overt-act of compassing the king's death iii. 713. iv. 625
 * The same overt-act laid to prove the treason of adhering to the king's enemies, as to prove the compassing the king's death iv. 413
 * Whatever manifests a treasonable intention is an overt-act of treason iv. 593, 657
 * Meeting and consulting to levy war, or to procure the kingdom to be invaded, overt-acts of compassing the king's death iv. 772. v. 88
 All meetings and agreements to rise and seize the king's guard, are plain overt-acts of treason viii. 467
 Overt-acts not laid, tending directly to the proof of overt-acts laid, may be given in evidence ix. 550, 551. n. x. 580. See TREASON.
 OUTLAWRY.

- Armstrong's* case on outlawry declared a precedent not fit to be followed iii. 983. n.
 Prisoner allowed to be within the benefit of the proviso in the statute of outlawry, though escaped out of prison and retaken in England, and admitted to prove himself beyond sea at time of outlawry, which he did, and his outlawry was reversed, he admitted to trial, and acquitted iii. 983. n.
 Court put a strained sense on the statute of outlawry in Armstrong's case, in order to deprive Armstrong of his trial iii. 985. n. See viii. 469, 470.
 Outlawry to be reversed if party beyond sea when pronounced iv. 198
 Reason of making stat. 6 Edw. VI. whereby it is no error that party was beyond sea at time of pronouncing outlawry in treason iv. 198
 A record of outlawry for treason vi. 4. Ap.
 A general pardon good for outlawries against all persons, but the party at whose suit vii. 69
Quare, whether the particular judgment of treason should be given against an outlaw for treason, or only execution generally awarded x. 204. n.
 Defendant in execution upon an outlawry, after conviction for a misdemeanour, in crown prosecutions, cannot be admitted to bail, without the consent of the attorney-general xi. 327
 Outlawry, though a very important part of the law, is but little understood xi. 328. See * ARMSTRONG Sir THOMAS iii. 983. BERKSTEAD JOHN. * HOLLOWAY JAMES iii. 943. OKER JOHN.
 * PARDON. WILKES JOHN.

O W E N, W I L L I A M,

- His trial for printing a libel called, "The Case of Alexander Murray, Esq." at Guildhall, July 6, 1752, 25 Geo. II. x. 196. Ap.
 The resolutions of the commons respecting the libel x. 196. Ap.
 The information, wherein the whole case is set forth at large x. 197. Ap.
 A misnomer therein x. 197. n. Ap.
 Names of the counsel for the prosecution x. 204. Ap.
 Names of the defendant's counsel x. 204. Ap.
 Names of the special jury x. 204. Ap.
 Mr. Yorke (afterwards lord chancellor) opened x. 204. Ap.
 Mr. attorney-general (afterwards lord chief justice Ryder) spoke next x. 204. Ap.
 The evidence of the publication x. 205. Ap.
 Mr. solicitor-general (now lord chief justice, earl Mansfield) his speech x. 205. Ap.
 Mr. Ford, his speech, arguments, and defence of Owen x. 205. Ap.
 Evidence for defendant x. 207. Ap.
 Mr. Pratt (late lord chancellor, and present lord Camden), his speech, arguments, and defence of Owen x. 207. Ap.
 The attorney-general's reply x. 208. Ap.
Lee, chief justice B. R. summed up the evidence x. 208. Ap.
 The jury find defendant not guilty; at which there was a prodigious shout x. 208. Ap.
 The jury having mistakingly said 'guilty' at first, the attorney-general artfully asked them a leading question, which they refused to answer x. 208. Ap.
 And was desirous of asking them more questions, but the judge would not permit it x. 208. Ap.
 * OWENS, ABEL v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.
 * OXFORD, Earl of v. 339. See PORTLAND Earl of, & al.
 * OXFORD and MORTIMER, ROBERT Earl of,
 Proceedings against him, on an impeachment for high-treason, and other high crimes and misdemeanours, June 24, 1717, 3 Geo. I. vi. 102
 * Lord high steward's commission vi. 102
 * The articles against him read, being sixteen in number vi. 103
 * The articles of high-treason vi. 111, 112
 * Six additional articles vi. 116
 * The earl's answer vi. 123
 * His answer to the articles of high-treason vi. 132, 133
 * The close of the earl's answer vi. 143
 * The commons replication vi. 147
 * Mr. Hampden opens the articles vi. 148
 * The

* The lords insist that judgment be given on the articles of high-treason, before they proceed upon the articles of high crimes and misdemeanours

- * The commons reasons for proceeding in their own method vi. 150
- * The lords reasons for their resolution vi. 152
- * After some messages, the lords adhere to their resolutions, and the commons to theirs vi. 154
- * The commons not appearing, the lords dismiss the impeachment, and discharge the earl vi. 156

OXFORD UNIVERSITY. See MAGDALEN COLLEGE.
OYER and TERMINER.

The difference between this court and the High Court of Justice, in the time of the Usurpation ii. 87

Sir John Hawles dared say, there had been more men destroyed by the irregular judgments of commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, than by all the acts of attainder, legal or illegal v. 97

P.

PAGE, FRANCIS,

Ordered into custody for a breach of privilege, in the case of the Aylesbury-men viii. 139

His argument on their praying a habeas corpus viii. 158

PAGE, Sir FRANCIS, Justice B. R.

Sums up the evidence to the jury on Huggins's trial, for murder ix. 133

And on Bambridge's trial for same offence ix. 150

Sums up the evidence against Hales for forgery x. 115

PAKINGTON, Sir JOHN,

His charge against the bishop of Worcester viii. 82

PALACE.

Ceremony of punishment for striking in the king's palace xi. 16

PALMER, Sir JEFFERY, Attorney-General. See MORLEY

THOMAS Lord vii. 424.

* PALMER, ROGER, Esq. See CASTLEMAINE Earl of.

PALMER, Sir THOMAS. See GATES Sir JOHN.

* P A N N E L

Called over, and defaulters marked, before the prisoner was put upon his challenges ix. 550. See COOK PETER iv. 728 to 733. * JURY.

P A P E R S.

Remarks on paper said to have been delivered by lord Ruffel to sheriffs at his execution viii. 464

Sir Bartholomew Shower was of opinion, it was no answer to the material part of the evidence on that nobleman's trial viii. 465

Copy of paper delivered by lady Armstrong to lord keeper North, lord chief justice Jefferies, and the attorney-general, on behalf of her husband, Sir Thomas Armstrong viii. 470

Paper delivered by Sir Thomas to sheriffs iii. 397, 398. viii. 471

Paper delivered by Anderton to sheriffs viii. 72

Seizure of papers illegal iv. 174, 175

Papers found in accused party's custody, read in evidence as overt-acts of the treasons they were charged with x. 77. n.

Copy of part of a paper Ashton left in a friend's hand viii. 482

Of all sorts of evidence, the finding of papers in a person's possession is the weakest iv. 182

There is no process against papers in civil causes xi. 323. See ENTICK JOHN.

Copy of paper delivered to sheriff by lord Lovat x. 196. Ap.

Account of paper found in the pocket of Laurence Hill at his execution, relative to the murder of Sir Edmondbury Godfrey viii. 441

Account of the papers delivered to the populace by Fletcher, one of the Scotch rebels, in 1746, at the place of execution ix. 555

* PAPILLON, THOMAS, Esq. iii. 1072. See PRITCHARD

Sir WILLIAM.

P A P I S T S.

Said not to be credited even on oath ii. 876

Sufficient to shew that party exercised office of priest, and not necessary to shew how he was ordained ii. 804. iii. 339

The five popish lords were, William earl Powis, William viscount Stafford, Henry earl Arundel of Wardour, William lord Petre, and John lord Belkiss iii. 102

Papist bookseller convicted of publishing a libel, shewn compassion and mercy iii. 420. vii. 483

The evil consequences arising from the judges being papists in the reign of James II. v. 748, 749. See PLOT POPISH ii. 801.

* P A R D O N.

* A pardon must have express words, and cannot be by implication or inference i. 227. ii. 350

* A pardon of life only i. 367

* Articles entered into by military officers cannot amount to a pardon, or bind the civil power otherwise than in honour ii. 14. See CAPITULATION.

* Where one pleads a pardon that has exceptions in it, he must shew that he is not excepted ii. 562

* Where one ought in honour to have his pardon, though the officer or magistrate engaging for it, had not the power of pardoning ii. 630, 636

* The commons held, that a pardon could not be pleaded in bar to an impeachment ii. 739. iii. 245

* Persons accused discharged on the king's writ declaring their innocence ii. 750

* A pardon will not restore one convicted of perjury to his credit; but he shall have an action against any one who upbraids him with his crime afterwards ii. 44, 47

* A general pardon does not restore one outlawed for felony to blood or Vol. XI.

credit; but a felon admitted to his clergy is purged, and restored to his credit iii. 36, 46. iv. 139, 149

* One convicted of felony is, by the king's pardon, or a statute pardon, restored to his credit; but one who is attainted of felony, &c. neither the king's pardon nor a statute-pardon will restore either to blood or credit, without special words iv. 682

* The king might pardon the burning in the hand in an appeal v. 168

* What a convict is restored to, on his purgation or pardon v. 171

* One pardoned in Scotland has no benefit of it in England v. 110, &c.

* Whether, if a man pleads a defective pardon, he may plead over; or whether such a plea is fatal? li. 754

Whether an admiral's commission does not amount to a pardon in honour, if not in law i. 227

Bacon told Sir Walter Raleigh he had a sufficient pardon i. 227, 228

Motives that induced king James I. to grant earl and countess of Somerset their pardon, for being accessaries to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, by poison i. 367, 369

The countess of Somerset's pardon i. 367

The earl of Somerset's pardon i. 369

A pardon cannot be without the broad seal ii. 350

Copy of a pardon ii. 733. vi. 49. Ap.

No pardon under the great seal can discharge a judgment obtained upon the impeachment of the commons iv. 167. vi. 4

Pardon takes away the guilt as well as the punishment iv. 681. vi. 703. ix. 653*

Pardon under great seal equal to pardon by act of parliament iv. 682

Pardon for a misdemeanour only, may be pleaded without either going to the bar, or kneeling ix. 68. n.

Of pardon for murder ix. 62.

Petition to the lords justices in his majesty's absence, by an infant, for pardon of murder ix. 539

The first act of parliament for a general pardon, which had a clause to enable the party to avail himself of the pardon on the general issue, without specially pleading the same, that Mr. Justice Foster had ever met with, was the act of oblivion, 12 Car. II. chap. 11, and all such acts since that time have had clauses to the same purport ix. 584. n.

Convict of murder having the king's pardon, allowed a legal witness, tho' not burnt in the hand x. 76. Ap. n.

Pardons by statute, how to be taken advantage of ix. 583, 584. See KNEVEL Sir EDMUND.

P A R E N T A N D C H I L D.

Child's cursing his father a capital offence in Scotland iv. 293

Lucius Junius Brutus sat as judge, and condemned his own sons as traitors to their country, and caused their heads to be struck off in his presence ix. 296

His memorable saying upon that great occasion ix. 296

Extraordinary affliction of a parent for the loss of a child who came to an untimely end ix. 66

If a parent be provoked to a degree of passion, by some miscarriage of the child, and shall correct with a moderate weapon, and by chance give an unlucky blow, so as to kill him, it is but misadventure; but if the parent uses an improper instrument in the correction, then if he kills the child, it is murder ix. 64

A parent hoped, by sending his son into the rebellion to join the Pretender, and remaining at home himself, he might be rewarded by his son's services, if successful, or his son alone be the sufferer, if the undertaking failed ix. 627*

Instance, from the Roman history, of a father being considered as accessory to murders committed by his son, though he never spoke to or saw him x. 435. See PARRICIDE. PETIT TREASON.

PARHAM, Sir EDWARD. See MARKHAM Sir GRIFFIN.

PARKER, Sir THOMAS, Queen's Serjeant at Law,

His argument, on motion in arrest of judgment against Tutchin, for publishing "The Observators" v. 562

His argument in maintenance of the fourth article, in the impeachment exhibited by the commons to the lords against doctor Sacheverel for sedition v. 690

His reply to defence of fourth article v. 819

PARKER, THOMAS Lord, Chief-Justice 2. B.

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Dammarie viii. 243

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Purchase, 1710 viii. 282

Sums up the evidence on the trial of Willis viii. 265

His argument in the Prince's case xi. 295, 296, 300

His opinion xi. 300, 302. See x. 70. Ap. NOBLE RICHARD.

PARKER, THOMAS, Earl MACCLESFIELD, Lord Chancellor,

His speech of thanks of the house to the lords of the committee, on the proceedings in parliament against the bishop of Rochester vi. 390

He did not approve of setting state prisoners in the pillory x. 92. Ap.

PARKER, THOMAS,

Opens the information against Franklin ix. 255. See x. 165. Ap.

* PARKYNS, Sir WILLIAM,

* His trial for high-treason, in promoting an invasion and rebellion, and endeavouring the assassination of the king's person, 24 March, 1695. 8 W. III. iv. 627

* The court of opinion the prisoner ought to have his plate and effects to subsist him iv. 627

* The court deny to put off the trial on allegations of the absence of a material witness, without an oath made of it iv. 631

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence iv. 633

* Porter's evidence, that he agreed to invite king James over iv. 636

* And engaged in the assassination iv. 637

* Sir George Barclay concerned in the assassination iv. 637

* Evidence of a quantity of arms found in Sir William's house in the country iv. 642

* Sir John Hawles, solicitor-general, his reply iv. 652

* Mr. Cowper's speech iv. 653

- * Lord chief justice's directions iv. 655
- * The prisoner is convicted iv. 658
- * Sentence passed on fir John Freind and fir William Parlyns iv. 659
- * Their dying speeches iv. 660. See x. 43. Ap. PORTER Captain GEORGE.

* P A R L I A M E N T

- * Grant a commission for ordering and disposing publick affairs, to certain great men, with extraordinary powers i. 3
- * Some of the king's ministers advise him against it; which is made an article of treason against them i. 7
- * The lords adjudge an accusation to be good, after it had been declared by the judges not to be according to civil and common law i. 11
- * Orders of parliament determine with the sessions ii. 216, 749
- * For treason, felony, or breach of the peace, there is no privilege of parliament ii. 336
- * The long parliament held to be dissolved by the death of king Charles the first, notwithstanding the act that it should not be dissolved but by their own consent ii. 444
- * Whether the power of the parliament, as to declaratory treasons, be not taken away by 1 Mar. &c. i. 760. ii. 565
- * Inferior courts may judge of privilege of parliament, where it is incident to a suit the court is possessed of; but not of matters arising originally in parliament ii. 620
- * Appeals, writs of error, and impeachments, are not to be begun de novo on calling a new parliament; but they remain in the same state they were at the dissolution of the old ii. 747
- * But inferior courts may grant execution in the vacancy of parliaments, notwithstanding appeals or writs of error lodged in the house of peers ii. 748
- * Counsel may not argue concerning the law and course of parliaments iii. 208
- * The courts of Westminster are to take notice of the adjournment, prorogation, and dissolution of parliaments iii. 254
- * The parliament in their judicial capacity to be governed by the statute and common laws, as well as the courts at Westminster iii. 255. vi. 426, 632
- * The power of declaring new treasons was lodged in the house of lords by 25 Edw. III. and could only be used when matters of difficulty were brought before them from inferior courts v. 110
- * Whether it be just in the parliament to take away a man's life by bill of attainder, on less evidence than the law of the land requires in inferior courts? v. 114
- * Whether the convention acted consonant to the laws of this kingdom, when they declared the throne vacant on king James's abdication? Or whether they went upon that principle, that the people, on any great emergency, might constitute a new government for their preservation? v. 116
- * That may be legal evidence in parliament which is not so in the courts of Westminster v. 132
- The judgment against lord chancellor Pole, earl of Suffolk, and lord chief justice Tresilian reversed in the parliament of 21 Rich. II. but this parliament declared to be held by force in parliament rolls of 1 Hen. IV. and is therefore entirely repealed by stat. 1 Hen. IV. chap. 3, and the parliament of 21 Rich. II. confirmed and approved of, for the honour and profit of the realm, by stat. 1 Hen. IV. chap. 4. i. 15. n.
- Peer may be tried by commission, during prorogation of parliament i. 164. ii. 725. iv. 212
- The petition of both houses of parliament on behalf of fir Henry Vane ii. 459
- Court of K. B. may examine parliamentary matters ii. 617
- Of the trial of a peer in full parliament ii. 641. iii. 101. iv. 233. vii. 422
- Whether order of parliament of any force after prorogation or dissolution ii. 749
- Parliament cannot declare any thing treason which is not so already by some statute in being i. 760
- In all times the parliaments have practised, and it is necessarily incident to all supreme powers in all governments, to enact extravagant crimes to be greater than by the established law they are declared to be, but not by virtue of the clause in stat. Edw. III. iv. 172, 173
- It was not injustice in the parliament of 2 and 3 P. and M. to enact, that Smith and others, who were supposed to be guilty, as accessories to a barbarous murder, and were equally, if not more guilty than the principal; that if they should be found guilty as accessories, they should not have their clergy iv. 174
- To enact a fact after committed, to be a crime, which when done was not, is high injustice iv. 174
- The distinction between the proceedings in the court of the high steward, and that before the king in parliament iv. 214. x. 209. Ap.
- The judges declare, that at the trial of a peer in parliament the house may, and often has adjourned, because there the lords are judges iv. 232
- At a trial in full parliament, the lords cannot consult the judges in the prisoner's absence; but they may ask questions of the lord steward in his absence, and he may withdraw with them iv. 233
- In full parliament the lord steward has a vote iv. 233
- The parliament that passed the statute of treasons 25 Edw. III. was called The blessed Parliament v. 433. vi. 74
- Whether it be an high crime and misdemeanour to dissent in opinion from the resolution of both houses of parliament v. 768
- The parliament is a supreme court of Oyer, and the proper subject of their Oyer is such offences for which right cannot otherwise be had, and to deal with delinquents too high for ordinary courts vi. 408
- The proceedings of the house of lords concerning captain Pernous vi. 763
- Debates in parliament concerning the election for Buck, 1603, between

- fir Francis Goodwin* and fir John Fortescue, ordered to be printed by the house vii. 67
- Concerning the grievances of the subject, in billeting soldiers, and imprisonment for not subscribing to the loan, 3 Car. I. vii. 140
- Members of parliament summoned before the council vii. 217
- Members of parliament refusing to answer act of parliament committed to the Tower, and their studies sealed up vii. 217
- Speaker of the house of commons held in his chair till some protestations made vii. 217
- Answers of the judges to some questions put to them concerning offences committed by members of parliament in parliament vii. 218
- The judges agree they have jurisdiction to punish offences committed in parliament vii. 247
- What things concerning parliament court of King's-Bench may determine, and what not vii. 437
- The parliament never give damages viii. 98
- Member of parliament may be committed by a common justice for a breach of the peace viii. 162
- No lord of parliament impeached shall be precluded from voting, except on his own trial, and at that he shall not stand without the bar viii. 528
- "Parliamentary History" commended, and an error therein pointed out xi. 3

- The earl of Surrey, heir of the duke of Norfolk, was tried for treason by a common inquest, not of the peers, because the earl was not a parliament lord xi. 19, 20
- Lawyers gave their aid to attempts made by the crown against the rights of parliament xi. 29
- The antiquity of parliaments xi. 50
- Over-ruling peer's privilege of parliament, fining him, and committing him in execution, great violations of privilege of parliament. See resolved by the lords xi. 136
- Cafe of the Bankers in parliament xi. 160
- If even the saving of lives be contrary to law, nothing less than an act of parliament can indemnify the party xi. 282, 283
- Sir F. Bacon* the first attorney-general permitted to sit in parliament xi. 273
- Member of parliament discharged without bail, being committed for writing a seditious libel xi. 302, 305

- Peers who have been tried before the king, in parliament:
- | | |
|---|--|
| Balmerino, Arthur lord ix. *596 | Lowat, Simon lord ix. *621 |
| Byron, William lord x. *517 | Mohun, Charles lord iv. 512. v. 137 |
| Carnwarth, Robert earl of vi. 5 | Nairn, William lord vi. 5 |
| Cromartie, George earl of ix. *590 | Nithsdale, William earl of vi. 5 |
| Derwentwater, James earl of vi. 5 | Oxford, Robert earl of vi. 102 |
| Ferrers, Lawrence earl of x. 478 | Pembroke, Philip earl of ii. 641 |
| Kenmure, William viscount vi. 5 | Stafford, William viscount iii. 101 |
| Kilmarnock, William earl of ix. *590 | Stratford, Thomas earl of i. 736 |
| Kingston, Elizabeth duchess dowager of xi. 198 | Widdrington, William lord vi. 5 |
| | Wintoun, George earl of vi. 18. See |

ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.

ASHBY and WHITE.

ELLIOT Sir JOHN.

HOLLIS ARTHUR.

HOLLIS DENZIL.

IMPEACHMENTS.

PARLIAMENTARY CORRUPTION.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.

PEERAGE and PEERS.

STATUTES.

VALENTINE BENJAMIN.

PARLIAMENTARY CORRUPTION.

- The politics of those times wherein the judges, who were the tools of the ministers, were corrupt, were not arrived at the height, to know how to influence the representative body of the nation; for what need could ministers have to corrupt the INTERPRETERS of the laws, if the MAKERS of them were entirely at their devotion? Em. Pref. i.
- The price of an house of commons, and of an English parliament, was known, and esteemed a most valuable knowledge, 26 Car. II. viii. 109

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTION.

- Qualification of elector and right of elected solely cognizable in parliament viii. 123
- No action lay for a double return till stat. 7 and 8 Will. III. chap. 25. viii. 151
- Whether an outlaw eligible vii. 68, 69
- Writs for electing members issued by lord chancellor during a prorogation, declared void at next meeting of the parliament viii. 146
- The election of burgesses, the freeness of which is the greatest fundamental of government, monopolized and put into few hands iv. 172. See vii. 428.
- Mortgagor in possession, with benefit of redemption, qualified to vote viii. 94. n.
- Declaration between Pety and White respecting members of parliament viii. 135. See
- ASHBY* and WHITE.
- BARNARDISTON* Sir SAMUEL, and SOAME.
- FALSE RETURN.
- GOODWIN* Sir FRANCIS.
- RAPLEY* WILLIAM.
- WORCESTER* Bishop of vi. 712.
- PARR, WILLIAM*. See NORTHAMPTON Marquis of.
- PARRICIDE.
- Though a child attainted of felony cannot be heir to her parents, yet if she kill either of them after attainder, it will be parricide and petit treason xi. 91. See BLANDY MARY. STANSFIELD WILLIAM.
- * PARRIS, alias PARRY, CHARLES ii. 993. See ANDERSON, & al.

* PARROT,

I N D E X.

* PARROT, HUGH v. 287, 297. See KIDD, & al.
 * PARRY, WILLIAM, Doctor of Laws,
 * His trial for high-treason i. 121
 * Names of the commissioners i. 121
 * Indicted for conspiring the death of the queen i. 121
 * Pleads guilty i. 122
 * His confession afterwards read in court, wherein he owns that "he looked on it as meritorious to kill the queen" i. 122
 * His letter to the queen i. 124
 * A letter to him from cardinal De Como i. 125
 * His letter to the lord treasurer, and the earl of Leicester i. 125
 * He talks distractedly i. 127
 * Lord chief justice Wray's speech before judgment i. 127
 * His execution i. 128
PARSONS, FATHER. See COKE Sir EDWARD.
 * PARTICEPS CRIMINIS. See ACCOMPLICE.
PARTITION TREATY. See PORTLAND Earl of.
 * PAYNE, WILLIAM iii. 505. See THOMPSON, & al.
 * PEACHEL, JOHN, D. D. Vice-Chancellor. See CAMBRIDGE.
PATENTS.
 Patent of the clerk of the custodies vi. 510, 511
 Letters patents being once under the great seal, the king cannot countermand them viii. 60
 Are a conveyance at common law viii. 60
 Extend not to Ir-land, unless it be specially named viii. 62. See PEERAGE and PEERS.
PEACE-OFFICERS
 Having a legal warrant to arrest for a breach of the peace, may break open doors, after having demanded admittance and given due notice of their warrant ix. 6
PECK, EDWARD, Serjeant at Law,
 Taken into custody for a breach of privilege in the case of a parliamentary appeal brought by doctor Shirley against sir John Fagg vii. 459
PECKHAM, Mr.
 Opens declaration for Fabrigas against Moistyn xi. 162
 Argues for him on error in same cause xi. 186
PEERAGE and * PEERS.
 Peer not to be tried by jury of commoners in capital cases, though desired i. 388
 All the peers must be summoned to the trial of a peer Em. Pref. vi.
 Peer cannot waive his trial by peers. So resolved by all the judges i. 388.
 Peer cannot challenge his peers. So resolved i. 198, 388, 390. vii. 18, 422, n.
 Peer cannot have counsel but upon points of law. So resolved i. 388
 Lords may eat and drink before they are agreed, but cannot separate or adjourn till after verdict. So resolved i. 388
 Verdict cannot be given by less number of lords than twelve Em. Pref. iii.
 And if twelve are for the king, and thirteen for the prisoner, he shall be acquitted. So resolved i. 388
 * Several questions concerning the privilege of the peers resolved i. 388
 Case of peer as to benefit of clergy, in sodomy and rape i. 388
 Indictment against an Irish peer for treason i. 949. viii. 341
 Peer cannot be brought to trial on charge exhibited against him by another peer in house of lords ii. 558
 The lords are the peers of a nobleman only in capital cases ii. 560
 The trial of a peer for misdemeanours is not to be by the lords, but by the commons ii. 560
 Peer who has his clergy not to be burnt in the hand ii. 655. See xi. 263
 A peer may give evidence, though a judge in the cause iii. 141
 Peers desired to stand up while she gives her evidence iii. 283
 Mr. J. Dolben doubted, whether court could commit a peer on an hominie replegiando iii. 544
 Peer need not hold up his hand on arraignment iv. 211, 512
 Peer may be tried by commission on prorogation of parliament iv. 212
 May be committed for treason, felony, or breach of the peace iv. 315
 Peer who insists on his peerage must produce his patent iv. 413, 414.
 viii. 51.
 Records against English peers for murder iv. 511, 513. v. 137. x. *480, *519
 They shall not be burnt in the hand v. 167
 Peer on trial before the lords for misdemeanour, shall not stand without the bar v. 364
 Record against a peer for debauching a young lady of quality vi. 16. Ap.
 The marquis of Hertford restored to the title of duke of Somerset vii. 18
 Debates in the house of peers concerning the liberty of the subject vii. 150
 Upon an appeal of murder, which is a suit of a subject, peers shall be tried by an ordinary jury of freeholders vii. 152. See APPEAL.
 The resolutions of the judges in several points relating to the trials of peers vii. 421
 If error be committed in the proceedings on the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high steward, they shall be reversed by error in the court of King's-Bench vii. 248
 Debates in the house of peers in the case of Charles Knowles, esq. commonly called earl of Banbury viii. 55
 Peerage by creation triable by record only viii. 59
 A person a complete nobleman by his letters patents, without any other ceremonies viii. 59
 Name of a place in a nobleman's stile no farther necessary than to give the patentee an estate in his honour, within the statute de donis viii. 59
 A person nobilitated under the great seal of England, is a peer of England, though the place from whence he takes his name of honour be in a foreign country, unless distinguished, as Irish peers are, in their patents viii. 59
 A bishop who is a peer jure ecclesie, must plead his peerage, that he is unus de paribus regni, for he hath no letters patents to plead viii. 59
 How peerage is to be pleaded viii. 59

Nobility not to be granted over, or barred by him that hath it viii. 60
 Nor can the heir on whom it descends waive it, or the privilege of it, as to being tried by his peers viii. 60
 By what means peerage may be taken away viii. 60
 Though the house of peers be a supreme court of record, yet every vote passed there is not an act of judicature, unless the proceedings in order to it be judicial viii. 60
 House of peers have no power over any one's peerage; unless the king on a petition refers the matter to them viii. 60
 Their jurisdiction ascertained by the common law viii. 61
 The journals of the house of lords not the records of parliament; and when they act as judges, the style is, Per cur. parliamenti viii. 61
 Original causes not within the cognizance of the house of peers, who are the dernier ressort viii. 62
 No writ of error lies in parliament out of the King's-Bench for any error in fact, though it doth for any error in law viii. 62
 Debates in the house of peers in the case of the Aylsbury-men viii. 125
Irish peers mere esquires in England viii. 348
 Peers of parliament not by inherent nobility, but in right of their baronies, which they hold in auter droit, shall be tried for treasons or felonies at the king's suit by an ordinary jury viii. 360
 Peer convicted of murder is within stat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37, to all intents as a commoner x. 208, 209. Ap.
 The office and duty of the high steward on the trial of a peer in the court of the high steward x. 29. Ap.
 And in the court of the peers in full parliament x. 209, 213. Ap.
 Multiplying the number of peers, and raising persons of mean extraction to that dignity, tend to render the peerage contemptible xi. 133
 Over-ruling a peer's plea of privilege of parliament, and fining him 30,000l. for an assault, and committing him to the King's-Bench in execution, are great violations of the privileges of the peers of this realm. So resolved by the lords xi. 136
 Peers, and the widows and dowagers of temporal peers, to answer in all courts as defendants, and on examinations by interrogatories in all causes, as well criminal as civil, upon protestation of honour only xi. 108. n.
 Peers entitled to benefit of clergy on conviction for bigamy xi. 264
 King's counsel opens the proceedings upon the trials of peers, except upon impeachment from the commons. See KING'S COUNSEL.
 Peers indicted. See INDICTMENT.
 Peers impeached. See IMPEACHMENT.
 Peers tried before the lord high steward of England. See COURT of the LORD HIGH STEWARD. BANBURY Earl of. CLERGY. HIGH STEWARD. KNOWLES CHARLES. TRIAL.
PEINE FORTE & DURE.
 That punishment described i. 325, 326
PEMBERTON, FRANCIS, Serjeant at Law,
 Ordered into custody for appearing as counsel at the bar of the house of lords, in the prosecution of a parliamentary appeal, wherein a member of the house of commons was concerned vii. 459
PEMBERTON, Sir FRANCIS, Judge B. R.
 Prevents Harris being adjudged to be whipped for a libel ii. 1040.
 vii. 483
 Justifies himself, upon being called to the bar of the house of commons, for his judgment in the cause of Jay and Topham viii. 3
 Gives his reasons for the judgment viii. 4
 Voted guilty of a breach of privilege, and taken into custody viii. 6
 Succeeded sir William Stroggs iv. 166, 167
 See the reason of this preferment iv. 166, 167
 Reprimands Edmund Saunders for moving the court to bail the earl of Danby ii. 743
 His opinion, that tho' his court could bail for treason, yet, as the earl of Danby was imprisoned by an higher authority, court could not interfere ii. 752
 Refused, on same motion being made again ii. 760
 Opinion that the plea of Fitzharris, in order to oust the court of jurisdiction, was insufficient iii. 261
 His directions to the jury on his trial iii. 287
 This chief justice did not shew the same favour to Fitzharris which he shewed to count Canningmark iii. 265. n. 465. iv. 169
 His conduct on Fitzharris's trial condemned iv. 168
Fitzharris's trial was published by his authority iv. 189
 He directs the jury on the trial of Plunket, on indictment for treason, in conspiring the death of the king, and subversion of established religion and government in Ireland iii. 294
 Pronounces sentence on Plunket as a traitor iii. 314
 Charge to the grand jury on an indictment preferred to them against the earl of Shaftesbury, for treason iii. 418
PEMBERTON, Sir FRANCIS, Lord Chief Justice C. B.
 Lord chief justice Pemberton was removed between Mich. and Hil. Terms, 34 Car. II. and made chief justice C. B. iii. 547. n.
 The chief justice, out of favour to count Canningmark, would not permit examinations to be read in court, as he ought to have done on that trial iii. 474. n.
 He did not ask Borlase or Sterne what they had to say for themselves iii. 561. n. iv. 169
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of Ford lord Grey and others, for seducing, carrying away, and adulterously soliciting lady Henrietta Berkeley ii. 541
 He presided at the trial of lord Ruffel, indicted for conspiring the king's death iii. 730
 His conduct on this trial censured iv. 176, 187
 This trial condemned by the legislature viii. 471
 Sir Francis Pemberton was subpoenaed, but did not appear, on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41. See ANDERSON. TASBOROUGH.
PEMBROKE, Earl of.
 In the case of the earl of Pembroke, A. D. 1677, for blasphemy and abuse of of the sacrament, the lords declared, that the single testimony of a commoner, though on oath, was no sufficient evidence against a peer denying the fact upon his honour; and upon that they addressed his majesty that he might be released from his imprisonment vi. 427

 PEMBROKE and MONTGOMERY, PHILIP Earl of,
 * His trial for murder, April 4, 1678, 30 Car. II. ii. 641
 * The earl brought to the bar ii. 641
 * The lord high steward makes a speech to him ii. 641
 * The indictment ii. 642
 * Sir William Jones the attorney-general's speech ii. 643
 * Malice exprefs, and malice implied, defined ii. 643
 * Evidence of the earl of Pembroke's being in the company of the deceased, at a tavern in the Hay-market ii. 644
 * That my lord threw the deceased down ii. 644
 * That my lord kicked the deceased when he was down ii. 645
 * The deceased troubled with fits ii. 647
 * The physician's evidence of the pain the deceased was in, after these blows ii. 647
 * The deceased imputed his illness to the usage he received in my lord Pembroke's company ii. 649
 * The evidence of some of the coroner's inquest, who deposed that they observed several bruises, and a great deal of clotted blood in the bottom of his belly ii. 649
 * The earl of Pembroke's witnesses examined ii. 651
 * The doctors of opinion, that hard drinking occasioned his death, and not any ill usage ii. 651
 * A surgeon deposes, that the body had no bruises to be seen upon it ii. 651
 * Sir Francis Warrington, solicitor-general, sums up the evidence ii. 653
 * My lord Pembroke is found guilty of manslaughter ii. 655
 * Where a commoner should have read, and been burnt in the hand, a peer was to be discharged without either ii. 655

P E N A L T Y.

Act of parliament inflicting penalty for second offence, indictment must recite record of first conviction, which must be proved; but the matter thereof shall never be re-examined x. 433

PENGELLY, THOMAS, Serjeant at Law,
 Opens the evidence on Laver's trial, for treason vi. 249
 His reply on earl Macclesfield's trial, on his impeachment in the lords, for selling the places of masters in chancery vi. 742, 744, 753

PENGELLY, LORD Chief Baron,
 Sums up evidence on Hales's trial for forgery ix. 73
 His opinion respecting cases of forgery, put by counsel ix. 83
 Sums up on Kinner's trial for forgery ix. 87, 94

 PENN, WILLIAM, alias of insensit
 * And William Mead, their trial for a riot and conspiracy, 22 Car. II. 1670 ii. 610
 * The indictment ii. 610
 * The prisoners fined forty marks each, for standing before the court with their hats on ii. 611
 * Cook's evidence of Penn's preaching to the mob in Graus-abbey-street, and Mead's abetting him ii. 611
 * Penn justifies their meeting ii. 612
 * Demands upon what law the indictment is grounded ii. 612
 * Penn is violent in his defence, and is ordered to be carried away ii. 613
 * Mead's defence ii. 613
 * Mead is carried into the Bail-Dock ii. 613
 * The recorder directs the jury in the absence of the prisoners; which they object to as unlawful ii. 613
 * The jury give a special verdict ii. 614
 * And are sent out again ii. 614
 * They put their verdict into writing ii. 614
 * The court refuse it again, and adjourn till next morning, when they give the same verdict again ii. 615
 * They are threatened by the court, and locked up till the next morning; and then they acquit both the prisoners ii. 616
 * The jurors are fined for going contrary to evidence, and sent to Newgate with the prisoners ii. 616
 * Their commitment afterwards adjudged illegal ii. 616

 PENNINGTON, ISAAC ii. 391. See REGICIDES.

 PENRUDDOCK, Colonel JOHN,
 * His trial for high-treason, before commissioners of Oyer and Terminer, at Essex, 19 April, 1655 ii. 259
 * Several other cavaliers arraigned with him ii. 259
 * He insists that there could be no treason but against the king ii. 260
 * Says he surrendered to capt. Crook on articles ii. 261
 * That the law knows no such person as Protector ii. 260, 262
 * He is found guilty ii. 262
 * Sentence passed on him and twenty-six more ii. 262
 * Declares in his dying speech, that, by his articles, his life, liberty, and estate were stipulated for ii. 263
 * His behaviour at execution; and letters from and to his lady ii. 264

 P E R J U R Y.

* One convicted of perjury a witness in law, till the record of his conviction be produced ii. 1006
 * One convicted of perjury, a pardon will not restore him to his credit iii. 47
 * Whether a witness for the king may be indicted for perjury on the statute iv. 52, 92, 162
 * Perjury anciently punished with death; but at this day the punishment is in the discretion of the court, saving life and member iv. 104
 * If any part of oath is false, it will maintain indictment for perjury iv. 103
 * Indictment and record for subornation of perjury vi. 12. Ap.
 * A mistaken false oath, without wilful corrupt design, is not perjury x. 407. n. See vii. 352.

The essence of perjury is, that the party knew what he swore to be false x. 407. n.
 Perjury punished with death in foreign countries x. 408
 Murder by means of perjury is not a capital offence by the English law x. 445
 One may be guilty of perjury, though oath administered when court forbade it x. 137. Ap. See

CANNING ELIZABETH.
FAULCONER RICHARD.
HURLEY PATRICK.
 INDICTMENTS.
MAITLAND CHARLES, Lord HALTON.
OATES TITUS.
PRANCE MILES.
TASBOROUGH JOHN.
WARD Sir PATIENCE.

 PERROT, Sir JOHN, Lord Deputy of Ireland,
 * Tried at Westminster, for high-treason, 1592 i. 188
 * Commissioners names i. 188
 * Indicted, 1. for treasonable correspondence, 2. for disobedience to the queen's orders, 3. for harbouring traitors i. 189
 * Twenty-four only returned on the pannel, and twelve sworn i. 189
 * Several indecent expressions spoken by him in Ireland of the queen, given in evidence; most of which he denies i. 190
 * Seager swears he exhorted him to murder a man i. 191
 * Archbishop of Cassils, that he connived at the escape of a traitor i. 192
 * Proved that he discharged several who had made ballads on the government i. 192
 * A treasonable correspondence sworn against him by Mr Dennis Oroughan i. 192
 * Sir John objects against him, as a person of infamous character i. 193
 * He is convicted; but his judgment respited i. 194
 * Being called to judgment, he denies Seager's evidence; and affirms the other witnesses to be perjured, and himself to be innocent i. 195
 * Receives judgment of death i. 196
 * He dies in the Tower i. 197

P E R R Y, JOHN,
 And Richard Perry, their remarkable trial for robbery and murder iv. 204.
 x. 29. Ap. n.

P E R R Y N, RICHARD,
 Of counsel for Stevens, charged with murder x. 472

 PETERS, HUGH ii. 357. See REGICIDES.

P E T I T I O N S.

Earl Somerfet's to Charles I. for his estate, never granted i. 373
Prynne's petition to long parliament i. 500
Bestwick's i. 502
Barton's i. 503
 Of both houses of parliament, on behalf of Mr Henry Vane ii. 459
 Petition of earl of Clarendon to the lords and commons in parliament ii. 578
 This petition was voted scandalous ii. 580
 Petition of Mr Thomas Pilkington and others, on behalf of themselves and the personal representatives of Mr Thomas Player and others, to king William III. that the prosecutors and judges on their trials might be excepted in the act of grace, as to their respective judgments for a pretended riot in Charles II.'s reign iii. 661
 Lord Nairn's to the house of peers, to intercede with the king for mercy vi. 11, 12
 Captain Porteous's petition to queen Caroline, then regent of the kingdom, on his conviction of murder, for her royal interposition vi. 761
 Petitions of John Lilburne to the parliament vii. 297, 298. See 280.
 Petition of many well-affected people, in behalf of the just liberties of the free people of England, highly concerned in the sentence against Lilburne viii. 355. See 357.
 The marquis of Argyll's petition to the parliament of Scotland viii. 385
 Petition to the king, for a writ of habeas corpus to parliament viii. 54
 The like to the house of peers viii. 57
 Petition of the city of London to the king, respecting the judgement in quo warranto viii. 462
 Petition of Almon Stany, presented to the king viii. 469
 Petition of Titus Oates to parliament, with the proceedings thereon viii. 474
 The petition of an infant convicted of murder, to the lords justices, in the absence of the king, for a pardon ix. 539
 Petition of Lord Trevelyan, to have counsel and solicitors assigned, copy of articles of impeachment, and time to prepare and put in his answer; and that his property might be returned to him, to enable him to see counsel, &c. ix. 616, 617
 Another to put off trial, and to compel the appearance of witnesses ix. 619
 Another to put off trial further ix. 620
 Petitions to the throne and the queen consort, to be discharged under acts for suspending habeas corpus acts, in several reigns x. 71. Ap.
 Earl of Kilmarnock's petition to the king x. 181. Ap.
 Petition of grievances from the commons xi. 62. See LIBELS.
 It is lawful for the subject to petition the king for redress iii. 367. iv. 367.
 In most courts of Europe, there is an office for receiving petitions; and days appointed to read them; the answers are inserted in the margin; here the petitioners take their oaths, and so, soon know the success of their respective applications x. 70. Ap.
 Court of England said to have the least regard to petitions of any court in Europe, which neglect is chiefly imputed to the prime minister x. 70. Ap.
 The king, having a petition put into his hand, generally gives it to one of the lords in waiting, whereby it is too often thrown aside, and never heard of more x. 70. Ap.

Petition of Richard Chambers to the long parliament xi. 119
P E T I T I O N of R I G H T,
 Presented to the lords by the commons viii. 197
 The lords propose an addition, and it is debated by the commons vii. 199
 After several conferences, agreed to by the lords vii. 211
 The petition, and his majesty's answer vii. 212
 Means taken to suppress the petition of right, by the same royal command that granted it vii. 216
 Gifts, loans, and benevolences were declared to be contrary to law, by the petition of right xi. 29, 110

P E T I T - T R E A S O N.
 Murdering mistress petit-treason, though only master is mentioned in the act of parliament, for they are in effect same word, differing only in gender iii. 764, 770
 Though a child attainted of felony cannot be heir to his parents, yet if he kills either of them after attainder, it will be parricide and petit-treason xi. 91
 One charged with murder, appearing upon evidence to have been guilty of petit-treason, discharged, and indicted again for that crime vi. 224, 225, 226, 227
 Peremptory challenge of thirty-five in petit-treason x. 38
 Petit-treason is within stat. 25 Geo. II. chap. 37. for preventing murder x. 40
 Petit-treason is ousted of clergy, by stat. 1 Edw. VI. chap. 12. under the denomination of murder x. 40
 Mr. justice Foster's observations on indictments for petit-treason x. 38, 39. See NOBLE RICHARD. SWAN JOHN. PYTE, WILLIAM. See POLE Cardinal.
PHILIP and MARY.

Their style was king and queen of England, France, Naples, Jerusalem, and Ireland, defenders of the faith, princes of Spain and Sicily, arch-dukes of Austria, dukes of Milan, Burgundy, and Brabant, counts of Hapsburg, Flanders, and Tyrol vii. 598, 608, 610
 Their title is recognized in the preamble to the sessions of parliament of that reign; and Spain being inserted next before France, and both the Sicilies instead of Naples, and princes of Spain and Sicily being inserted next immediately after defenders of the faith in their title in a deed, led to a discovery of the forgery of it vii. 598, 601. See vii. 575, 584, 585
PHILIPS, Sir AMBROSE, Counsellor at Law,
 Examined before committee of lords, touching the advisers and prosecutors of the murders of lord Russel, colonel Sidney, sir Thomas Armstrong, mr. Cornish, and others viii. 476
 * PHILIPS, GEORGE ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

PHILIPS, Sir ROBERT,
 His speech in parliament concerning the grievance of the subjects, in billeting soldiers, and imprisonment for not subscribing to the loan vii. 142
PHILLIPS, Sir EDWARD, King's Serjeant at Law,
 His speech on the prosecution of the conspirators in the gun-powder plot i. 234
 Craved judgment against them i. 248
PHIPPS, Sir CONSTANTINE,
 Of counsel for Rookwood, tried for treason, in conspiring the death of the king iv. 664
 His defence of captain Vaughan, tried before the Admiralty, for assisting the king's enemies, and levying war v. 26
 His speech before evidence, on the trial of Hathaway, for a cheat v. 435
 His argument in doctor Henry Sacheverel's defence as to the first article in the impeachment before the lords for preaching seditiously v. 721
 His argument on behalf of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the second article v. 753
 His argument as to the third article v. 764
 His argument as to the fourth article v. 776
 His speech in arrest of judgment, on behalf of earl Wintoun, convicted before his peers, on an impeachment of treason, for being in rebellion vi. 49
 His speech for Francis Atterbury, bishop of Rocheſter vi. 398
 His recapitulation of the evidence vi. 429. See x. 68. Ap.
 * PICKERING, THOMAS ii. 696. See IRELAND, & al.

PILKINGTON, Sir THOMAS. See PETITIONS.
 * PILKINGTON, THOMAS, Esq.
 * Samuel Shute, esq. sheriffs; Henry Cornish, alderman; Ford, lord Grey, of Work; sir Thomas Player, knight, chamberlain of London; Slingſby Bethel, esq. Francis Jenks, John Deagle, Richard Freeman, Richard Goodenough, Robert Key, John Wickham, Samuel Swinock, John Jekyll, senior, their trial, May 8, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 630
 * An information brought against them for a riot in continuing the poll for election of sheriffs, after the common-hall was adjourned by the lord mayor, and for assaulting the lord mayor, &c. iii. 636
 * The counsel for the defendants challenged the array, because the panel was returned by the sheriffs, the legality of whose election they disputed; and urged, that if their election was admitted to be valid, their client's cause was prejudged, for that was the point in dispute iii. 631
 * They are over-ruled by the court, and the jury sworn iii. 634
 * Sir Robert Sawyer and mr. Finch open the evidence iii. 635
 * Sir George Jefferies gives a particular account of the manner of electing sheriffs, and other officers, on midsummer-day iii. 635
 * Evidence to this purpose for the king iii. 636
 * Evidence against the several defendants iii. 645
 * The rioters defence iii. 647
 * Several witnesses examined for the defendants, as to the power of adjournment iii. 650
 * Whoever can call or dissolve an assembly, may adjourn it iii. 658
 * Whether a common-hall are bound to elect the person my lord mayor drinks to, for sheriff iii. 651, 652

Vol. XI.

* Whether a number of persons insisting upon, and asserting their right, where they have a probable cause, can be said to be guilty of a riot in so doing iii. 659
 * Ignorance of the law no excuse iii. 659. See MAXIMS.
 * The rioters convicted iii. 660
 * And fined iii. 660
 The record vi. 40. Ap.
 * The judgment reversed in parliament after the Revolution iii. 661

P I L L O R Y.
 The ears of a forger and impostor nailed to the pillory i. 202. n.
 A counsellor at law pilloried for suborning and bribing the king's evidence ii. 829. See READING NATHANIEL.
 A person gagged in the pillory vii. 270, 296. n.
 Observations on the punishment of the pillory Em. Pref. xii. xiii. See vii. 302
 A gentleman of the long robe held infamous, for having stood in the pillory ix. 309
 Serjeant Whitaker compared the standing in the pillory, to looking through a wooden casement ix. 106
 Instance of a man being killed in the pillory x. 446
 Standing in the pillory does not affect the competency of witnesses x. 42. Ap.

Lord chancellor Parker disapproved of putting state prisoners into the pillory. See PARKER THOMAS, Lord Chancellor.

BREWSTER THOMAS.
CELLIER ELIZABETH.
FULLER WILLIAM.
GILES JOHN.
HARRIS BENJAMIN.
HATHAWAY RICHARD.
KEACH BENJAMIN.
LANE JOHN.
NAYLOR JAMES.
OATES TITUS.
PRYNNE WILLIAM.
THOMPSON NATHANIEL.

PINFOLD, Sir THOMAS. See GOLDING, & al.
 * P I R A C Y.

* Those on board a pirate, presumed to concur with him, unless they can make the contrary appear v. 14
 Pirates are usually executed at Execution-dock v. 18
 Foreigners in service of enemy (though their state be in amity with ours) deemed subjects to enemy, and not pirates, while in enemy's service v. 34
 If servant go voluntarily with pirate, and accepts share of booty, he is a pirate v. 314
 * Those who are servants on board a pirate directed to be acquitted v. 314
 * English pirates tried in Scotland v. 572
 Persons acting under commission of Jac. II. after his abdication considered as pirates, proceeded against as such, and convicted viii. 73. See GOLDING.
 Doctor Oldys displaced for refusing to prosecute pirates viii. 75
 Pirates in plantations proceeded against in a summary way, by commissioners, without a jury viii. 214. See

BARLICORN RICHARD.
BONNET STEDE.
DAWSON JOSEPH.
FORSEITH EDWARD.
GREEN THOMAS.
HOWE JAMES.
JENKINS WILLIAM.
KIDD WILLIAM.
LAMBLEY ROBERT.
LOFFE GABRIEL.
MAY WILLIAM.
MULLINS DARBY.
OWENS ABEL.
PARROT HUGH.
QUELCH JOHN.
SPARKES JOHN.

* P L A N T A T I O N S.
 * Whether private subjects in the plantations have a right to petition the king or parliament of England v. 431
 * Whether an act of assembly in the plantations can create a new treason v. 432, 433
 Pirates in the plantations proceeded against in a summary way, by commissioners, without a jury viii. 214
 Account of governor Nicholson's extraordinary prosecution of an American parson, in queen Ann's reign ix. 295. See BARBOT JOHN.
BOSTON.
FABRIGAS ANTHONY.
NEW YORK.
QUELCH JOHN.
SOUTH CAROLINA.
ZENGER PETER.

* PLAYER Sir THOMAS Knight iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

* P L E A D I N G A N D P L E A S.
 * Where one pleads a defective pardon, whether he shall be admitted to plead over; or whether such plea will be fatal? ii. 15
 * Exceptions to an indictment ought to be made before plea pleaded ii. 89
 * If the prisoner demurs to the indictment, he confesses the fact ii. 91
 * Counsel

I N D E X.

- * Counsel assigned a prisoner to put his plea in form iii. 228
- * Time given a prisoner to maintain his plea to the jurisdiction iii. 238
- * A record cannot be pleaded in general terms; but the special matter must be set forth iii. 233
- * A private act of parliament must be pleaded specially iii. 233
- * Averments necessary in pleading, and what averments shall be good, and what not iii. 248, 251
- * One cannot plead Auter feitz arraigned iii. 252
- * Where an averment shall reduce a general allegation to a certainty iii. 253
- * No fact is admitted by a demurrer that is not well pleaded iii. 253
- * An action brought cannot be pleaded in bar to another action for the same cause, unless a declaration be delivered in the first action iii. 256
- * Matter of fact averred shall not enlarge the record iii. 257
- * A plea in paper, and without a counsel's hand, is not to be received iv. 213
- * Where one pleads to the jurisdiction, he ought to be ready to maintain his plea presently iv. 214
- * In capital cases the criminal is allowed no time to plead iv. 323
- * Where one appears upon a summons, he shall have an imparlance; but if he comes in custody, or on a recognizance, he shall plead presently iv. 324
- * Where one pleads to an indictment, he admits the copy delivered him according to 7 Will. III. chap. 3. to be a true copy iv. 668
- * Time refused to consider of a joinder in demurrer vi. 242
- Plea that party is a peer of Ireland i. 950
- Plea of pardon ii. 737. vi. 48. Ap.
- Cannot plead guilty to part, and not guilty to the rest iii. 703. vii. 47. n.
- Cannot plead to the jurisdiction of the court after pleading in chief iv. 167
- Where matter of plea is naught, no form can make it good iv. 168
- Innocence and a pardon may be pleaded to same offence vi. 703
- Estoppel, how to be pleaded vii. 624
- Difference between pleading in bar, and to the jurisdiction viii. 3
- Authority by acts of parliament pleadable by way of bar, but not to the jurisdiction viii. 3
- When letters patents are pleaded, and shewn to the court, the adverse party cannot deny them, or plead nul tiel record viii. 59
- Party fined for insisting on a frivolous plea, though signed by counsel x. 33
- * P L O T S.
- * Assassination plot against king William III. iv. 562
- * Plotters against queen Elizabeth i. 121, 128, 134
- * Popish plot ii. 656, &c.
- * Powder plot i. 232, 248. See vi. 408
- * Ryehouse plot iii. 684
- P L O W D E N.
- Plowden ascertains in his Commentaries of what authority those ancient writers, Bracton, Glanville, and Hengham, are in point of law vii. 235.
- See BRACON. GLANVILLE. HENGHAM.
- * PLUMTRE, HENRY, Esq. iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.
- * PLUNKET, JOHN vi. 335. See ATTERBURY.
- * PLUNKET, OLIVER, D. D. Titular Primate of Ireland,
- * His trial the 8th of June, Trinity term, 33 Car. II. 1681, at the King's-Bench bar, Westminster, for high-treason committed in Ireland iii. 293
- * Arraigned before, in Ireland, for the same fact iii. 293
- * Five weeks time allowed the doctor to fend for his witnesses iii. 293
- * His trial comes on iii. 294
- * The indictment, for conspiring the death of his majesty, and the subversion of the established religion and government in Ireland iii. 294
- * The king's counsel open the indictment iii. 295
- * Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iii. 295
- * The king's witnesses called iii. 296
- * Evidence of the French king's design to invade Ireland, and the prisoner's collecting money of the popish clergy to incite a rebellion in Ireland, to favour the invasion iii. 296
- * The prisoner enters upon his defence iii. 309
- * Complains that the time allowed him was not sufficient to bring over his records and witnesses iii. 309
- * Mr. solicitor sums up the evidence iii. 309
- * He insists much on a letter the doctor sent to invite the French king to invade Ireland iii. 310
- * Mr. serjeant Jefferies's observations on the evidence iii. 310
- * An evidence examined for the prisoner, after the king's counsel had made their observations iii. 311
- * The chief justice directs the jury iii. 311
- * The prisoner is convicted iii. 312
- * He is called to his sentence, and makes a speech, wherein he complains of being tried in a foreign kingdom by a jury of strangers, who neither knew the character of him or the witnesses; and endeavours to shew the improbability of what had been sworn against him iii. 312
- * The chief justice tells him he is tried in England by virtue of an ancient statute; and that he was not the first instance, for O'Rourke and several others had been tried in England for crimes committed in Ireland iii. 313
- * The chief justice pronounces sentence on dr. Plunket as a traitor iii. 314
- * He is executed iii. 314
- * His dying speech iii. 314
- * POCKLINGTON, JOHN, Esq. vi. 188. See GILBERT JEFFERY.
- P O I S O N.
- One boiled alive for poisoning i. 324. v. 97
- Poisoning once made high-treason i. 353
- Salmon le Rach*, a judge, 21 Edw. I. was poisoned by a monk i. 337

- The poisoner of a judge not allowed the sanctuary of the church i. 337
- The emperor, Henry of Luxemburg, poisoned in the sacrament iii. 757
- Pope Victor poisoned in receiving the chalice iii. 757
- Where poison is intended to be given to one person, and another takes it and dies, the procurer of the poison is guilty of murder vi. 222
- * An Antidote against Poison viii. 463
- Answer thereto iii. 757
- ix. 62. See
- Whilful poisoning murder
- BLANDY MARY. OGILVIE PATRICK.
- ELWES Sir JERVIS. SOMERSET, Earl and Countess of.
- FRANKLIN JAMES. TURNER ANNE.
- * MURDER. WESTON RICHARD.
- NAIRN KATHERINE.
- P O L E, Cardinal,
- Michael Throgmorton*, John Hiliard, Thomas Goldwell, and William Peyte, were attainted in absence xi. 25
- P O L E, Sir GEOFFREY,
- And Sir Edward Nevill, George Crofts and John Collins, indicted for treason xi. 25
- All except Nevill plead guilty xi. 25
- Pole* the only one not executed xi. 25
- * P O L E, MICHAEL DE LA, Earl of Suffolk, Lord Chancellor,
- * Impeached i. 1
- * Disputes the sense of the chancellor's oath i. 2
- * Censured on the first, fourth, and fifth articles i. 2
- * His judgment i. 3. See BRAMBRE.
- P O L L E X F E N, HENRY,
- His defence for John Tasborough indicted for subornation of perjury ii. 1030
- His argument for Fitzbarris, on his plea to the jurisdiction of the court iii. 252
- His speech for the city of London, in the quo warranto iii. 604
- His speech against sir Patience Ward, on his trial for perjury iii. 678
- His argument on challenging juryman for want of freehold, on behalf of lord Ruffel, tried for treason, in compassing the king's death iii. 709
- His argument for Sandys, at the suit of the East India Company vii. 511
- His speech for Sachverel and others, informed against for a riot, in being unlawfully present at the election of mayor, where they had no concern iii. 964
- His argument in arrest of judgment given against Roswell, for speaking treasonable words iii. 1055
- His speech before evidence, on the trial of lady Alice Lisle, for treason, in harbouring a traitor in Monmouth's rebellion iv. 106
- P O L L E X F E N, Sir HENRY, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas,
- His observations on trial of viscount Preston, for treason iv. 453
- His observations on the trial of Ashton, for compassing the death of their majesties, and adhering to their enemies iv. 484
- Reflected on by the prisoner iv. 488
- P O L Y G A M Y.
- A ludicrous idea thereon xi. 224
- Sentence in spiritual court against a marriage in suit of jactitation of marriage, is not conclusive evidence in indictment for polygamy xi. 262.
- See BIGAMY.
- P O P E.
- Pope Victor poisoned in receiving the chalice iii. 757
- The pope had no jurisdiction in England in time of the Britons xi. 71
- The first usurpation of the pope upon the liberties of the crown of England began in the time of king William the conqueror xi. 71
- In the time of William Rufus, the pope attempted to draw appeals to Rome, but prevailed not xi. 71
- In the time of king Henry the first the pope usurped the donation of bishoprics xi. 71
- In the time of king Stephen the pope gained appeals to the court of Rome xi. 72
- In the time of king Henry the second the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the secular power xi. 72
- Four points of jurisdiction usurped upon the crown of England by the pope before the reign of king John xi. 72
- The cause of the quarrel between king John and the pope xi. 72
- King John's round and kindly letter to the pope xi. 73
- The pope curseth the king, and interdicteth the realm xi. 73
- King Edward the first opposed the pope's usurpation xi. 73
- Edward the second* suffered the pope to usurp again xi. 73
- Edward the third* resisted the usurpation of the pope xi. 74
- During the nonage of king Richard the second, the pope began once again to encroach upon the crown xi. 74. See TALBOT WILLIAM.
- P O P H A M, JOHN,
- Attorney-general to queen Elizabeth, on the trial of Babington for treason i. 120
- And on Abington's for similar offence i. 135
- His speech on the arraignment of Durison in the Star-chamber vii. 19
- P O P H A M, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
- When mr. Popham, attorney-general, was made lord chief justice of the Queen's-bench i. 194
- Libelled in the time of Elizabeth i. 330
- His declaration on the trial of the earls of Essex and Southampton for treason i. 200
- Censured for his conduct on the trial of sir Walter Raleigh iv. 160. See i. 218
- His speech on pronouncing judgment against sir Christopher Blunt and others vii. 62
- Lord chief justice Popham and his brethren were of opinion, that one man coming by another, making wry mouths, laughing, and making such signs as usually put men in a passion, and the other presently falling upon upon and killing him, that it was murder, and he was hanged upon appeal

vii. 425

POPULARITY.

Lord chief justice Holt deserved popularity, by doing that which was right, upon great, trying, and important occasions; he obtained popularity because he despised all other means of aiming at it, but that of doing right upon all occasions
xi. 293

Lord chief justice Mansfield said, that he wished for popularity, but that it was that popularity which followed, not that which was run after
xi. 331

 PORDAGE, Dr. JOHN, Rector of Bradfield,

* His trial before the commissioners of Berks, for ejecting scandalous and insufficient ministers, 1654
ii. 217

* The first nine articles exhibited against him
ii. 218

* Charging him with maintaining several heterodox opinions in religion
ii. 218

* The doctor objects, that he had already been tried, and acquitted of this charge; which does not avail him
ii. 218

* His answer to the first articles
ii. 219

* A second charge, of speaking against the state of matrimony; and of dealing with conjurors
iii. 221, 222

* His answer
ii. 222

* A third charge, of erroneous doctrines; and of saying he conversed with angels, and saw dragons, and the devil
ii. 224

* Evidence to prove it
ii. 225

* A fourth charge, of criminal conversation with a woman, and having a child by her
ii. 226

* Evidence to the second charge
ii. 226

* Evidence to the third charge
ii. 227

* The doctor's defence
ii. 227

* As to doctrinal points
ii. 228

* As to conversing with angels, &c.
ii. 230

* To the fourth charge
ii. 232

* As for what he is accused of before 1651, he pleads the general pardon
ii. 234

* The depositions as to the first charge for and against the doctor
ii. 235

* Evidence pro and con of the second charge
ii. 244

* Evidence pro and con of the third charge
ii. 245

* Hear-say admitted as evidence against the doctor
ii. 251

* The sentence passed upon him, to turn him out of his living
ii. 259

 PORTEOUS, Captain JOHN,

* Proceedings on the trial of him for murder, before the Court of Justiciary, at Edinburgh, in July 1736, 10 Geo. I.
vi. 763

* The indictment, subscribed by the king's solicitor
vi. 764

* The information, by the king's advocate
vi. 765

* Captain Porteous's defence, by his counsel
vi. 770

* Interlocutor upon the relevancy against him
vi. 781

* The libel found relevant
vi. 781

* The jury sworn
vi. 781

* The prisoner confesses the persons mentioned in the indictment were killed and wounded
vi. 781

* Depositions of the witnesses against him
vi. 781, &c.

* Depositions of the witnesses for him
vi. 788, &c.

* The verdict against him
vi. 791

* Sentence of death passed
vi. 791

* His petition to queen Caroline, then guardian of the three realms
vi. 791

* A letter from the duke of Newcastle, secretary of state, by order of her majesty, to the lords of the justiciary, for stay of execution for six weeks
vi. 793

* The captain is thereupon respited
vi. 793

* But taken out of prison, three days after, and executed by the populace
vi. 794

* They order two of their number, for want of clergymen, to officiate at the place of execution
vi. 794

Particulars concerning him
x. 282

PORTER, CHARLES, Counsellor at Law,

He was ordered into custody for a breach of privilege in the case of an appeal against sir John Fagg
vii. 459

PORTER, Captain GEORGE (the Witness against Sir John Fenwick and others),

His trial for the murder of sir James Hacket, knight, at the Duke's Theatre, in Salisbury-court, Fleet-street, Dec. 1684, 36 Car. II.
x. 74. Ap. n.

Names of the jury
x. 75. Ap. n.

The case
x. 75. Ap. n.

Prisoner's defence
x. 75. Ap. n.

Found guilty of manslaughter, and acquitted on the statute of stabbing, [1 Jac. I. chap. 8.]
x. 75. Ap. n.

An appeal brought against him
x. 75. Ap. n.

Admitted to bail
x. 75. Ap. n.

Next sessions pleaded his majesty's pardon
x. 75. Ap. n.

Was excepted against on Rookwood's trial, as incapable of being a witness, standing convicted of felony; but having got the king's pardon, was allowed a legal witness, though not burnt in the hand
x. 75. Ap. n.

See iv. 681.

Had a pension of 260l. a year granted him as a reward for giving evidence against
x. 75. Ap. n.

Charnock, Kys,
Cranburne, King,
Fenwick, Sir John, Parkyns, Sir William,
Freind, Sir John, Rookwood, which annuity continued till Porter's death
x. 75. Ap. n.

 PORTLAND, WILLIAM Earl of,

* John lord Somers, Edward earl of Orford, Charles lord Halifax, their impeachment, together with the charge against the lord Haverham for breach of privilege, exhibited by the house of commons, 13 W. III.

1701 v. 339. See viii. 517, 520

The state of the proceedings in the house of commons, with relation to him, and the rest of the impeached lords, and what happened thereupon between the two houses
viii. 512

Copies of several treaties presented to the house
viii. 512

Address of thanks, and to lay before his majesty the ill consequences of the partition treaty
viii. 513

A committee of lords appointed to draw up, and state the fact, as to the treaty now in debate
viii. 514

The report of the committee, and debate thereon
viii. 514

Lords address upon the treaty
viii. 516

Conference with the lords, and report thereof
viii. 517

The letters patents, creating the earl of Portland and earl of Jersey plenipotentiaries
viii. 518

The paper laid before the lords by the earl of Portland
viii. 519

The lord Somers admitted into the house of commons, and heard
viii. 520

The commons address his majesty, to remove the impeached lords
viii. 521

* The lords address the king not to censure or punish the four lords till the impeachments are tried
v. 339

* The lords send a message to the commons, to put them in mind of exhibiting articles against the lords
v. 340

* The commons bring up articles against the earl of Orford, and demand he should give security to abide the judgment of the house of lords
v. 340

* The lords search their journals, and find it not usual to take security
v. 340

* The articles against the earl of Orford; and his answer
v. 340

* The earl of Orford desires a copy of the articles against him; which is granted
v. 344

* A copy of the lord Orford's answer ordered to be sent down to the commons
v. 344

The commons replication thereto
viii. 523

* Two counsel assigned him for his trial
v. 344

* Another message from the lords, to put the commons in mind of exhibiting articles against the other impeached lords
v. 345

* Articles exhibited against John lord Somers; and his answer
v. 345

The commons replication thereto
viii. 523

Message from the lords, that the right of limiting a convenient time for bringing the particular charge before them is lodged in them
viii. 525

The commons answer
viii. 525

Conference appointed, and report thereof
viii. 526

Messages from the lords, relating to the right of appointing the days for trial of the impeachments, and the commons answers
viii. 526, 527

Conference appointed, and the report thereof
viii. 528

* A message sent by the lords to the commons, that the house having been desired by the earl of Orford, that a day may be appointed for his speedy trial, their lordships finding no issue joined by replication of the house of commons, think fit to give them notice thereof
v. 356

* Another message to put the commons in mind of exhibiting articles against the lords Portland and Halifax
v. 357

* A message from the lords, that they had appointed a day for the trial of the earl of Orford; and that the commons might reply, if they thought fit
v. 357

* The commons insist upon it as their right to exhibit articles when they see fit
v. 357

* That where several are impeached, it is their undoubted right to bring to trial such of them first as they see fit
v. 357

* That their lordships ought not to appoint a day of trial, before the commons have signified their being ready to proceed thereon
v. 358

* Precedents in cases of impeachment
v. 358

* The lords in a message to the commons set forth, that they can find no precedent where articles have been so long deferred after a general impeachment
v. 359

* The lords insist on their right of appointing the time for the trial
v. 359

* The commons propose a conference on the methods of proceeding in impeachments
v. 359

* The lords agree to it
v. 359

* Precedents searched by the lords
v. 360

* The lords again assert their right to appoint a day for the trial of an impeachment, without any previous signification from the commons of their being ready to proceed
v. 361

* In a message by mr. Harcourt, the commons insist on their proposition for a committee of both houses, to adjust the preliminaries for the trial: particularly, whether the impeached lords shall appear at their trials at their lordships bar as criminals; and whether they shall sit as judges on each other's trials for these crimes, or give their votes in these cases
v. 361

* Precedents concerning the regulation of trials before the lords
v. 362

* The lords refuse to appoint a committee to meet a committee of the house of commons, to settle the preliminaries in relation to the trial of the impeached lords
v. 363

* A message to the commons, that they have appointed a day for the trial of the lord Somers
v. 365. viii. 531

The commons forbid any member to attend lord Somers's trial
viii. 531

* In a message from the commons, they take notice that the lords have omitted naming a place for the trial
v. 365

* They still insist on a committee of both houses, before they proceed upon the trial
v. 365

* The lords reasons given at a conference for not appointing a committee
v. 365

* The lords resolve, that no lord of parliament impeached of high crimes and misdemeanours, shall at his trial be without the bar
v. 364.

* And that no lord of parliament, impeached as aforesaid, can be precluded
viii. 529

- cluded from voting on any occasion, except in his own trial v. 364.
 The commons answer thereto viii. 529
 * Exceptions taken by the commons to some expressions of my lord Haversham's at a free conference v. 366. viii. 530
 * The commons desire the lords to proceed against the lord Haversham for the words spoken by him, and inflict such punishment upon the said lord, as so high an offence against the house of commons deserves v. 366. viii. 530
 * Articles brought up against Charles lord Halifax, and demanded he should give security to abide the judgment of the house of lords v. 367
 * His answer to the articles v. 367
 * The commons refuse a conference, till satisfaction be given them as to the words spoken by the lord Haversham v. 372. viii. 533
 * Ordered, that the lord Haversham have a copy of the charge delivered in against him by the commons; and that he have counsel allowed him v. 373
 * The lords acquaint the commons with their intended method of proceeding at the trial of the lord Somers v. 373
 * An order of the house of lords for the lord Somers's witnesses to attend the trial v. 374
 * Reasons given by the commons why they refuse to proceed to the trial of the lord Somers v. 374. viii. 532
 * And an answer thereto by the lords v. 374
 * A message from the lords, that they intend presently to proceed to the trial of the lord Somers; the messengers acquaint the lords that the house of commons is adjourned v. 376
 * The lords proceed to the trial, notwithstanding v. 376. viii. 534
 Thirty-two lords dissent, but the reasons expunged by order of the house viii. 534
 Lord Orford and lord Halifax withdraw at the trial viii. 534
 Resolved, the question for acquitting lord Somers be put in the court below; 31 lords protest; the reasons expunged viii. 534
 The impeachment dismissed viii. 535
 The commons protest against it viii. 535
 * Proclamation made in the king's name v. 376
 * No prosecutor appearing, he is acquitted by the majority of voices v. 377
 * The lords appoint the 23d of June for the trial of the lord Orford v. 378. viii. 533
 The commons forbid any member to appear at lord Orford's trial viii. 535
 * The commons answer, they will proceed first to the trial of the lord Somers, when they have received satisfaction in relation to my lord Haversham, &c. v. 378
 * The lord Haversham's answer to the charge of the house of commons v. 378. viii. 533
 * The lords declare that, unless the commons prosecute their charge against the lord Haversham before the end of this session, they will adjudge him innocent v. 381
 * An order of the lords for my lord Orford's witnesses to attend the trial v. 381
 * A complaint that the commons in their printed votes had reflected on the house of peers v. 381
 * Resolved, that those reflections of the commons are contrived to cover their affected and unreasonable delays in prosecuting the impeached lords v. 381
 * That they tend to the subverting the constitution, &c. v. 381
 * They proceed to the trial of the earl of Orford v. 382
 * They acquit him nemine contradicente, no prosecutor appearing v. 382
 * Ordered, that the charge against the lord Haversham be dismissed v. 382
 * That the impeachment against the lord Portland be dismissed, no articles being exhibited against him v. 383
 * That the impeachment against the lord Halifax, and the articles against him, be dismissed v. 383
 * That the impeachment against the duke of Leeds for high crimes and misdemeanours, and the articles against him, be dismissed v. 383
 P O S T N A T I.
 The case of the union of the realm of Scotland with England xi. 75
 Extract from Moore's reports xi. 76
 Speech of lord Bacon, as counsel for Calvin, in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 79
 Lord Coke's report of Calvin's case xi. 86
 Lord chancellor Ellesmere's speech in the Exchequer-chamber xi. 97
 * POTTER, VINCENT ii. 398. See REGICIDES.
 P O U L T N E Y, Mr.
 Opens the information against sir Samuel Barnardiston iii. 934
POWELL, Sir JOHN, Justice B. R.
 Declares his opinion on the trial of the seven bishops, that the petition was not libellous iv. 393. 394
 This judge characterised for his noble conduct on the above trial ix. 288
 His speech before judgment on Swensden, for a forcible marriage, and Sarah Baynton, for abetting and assisting therein v. 479
 Of opinion, that erroneous proceedings against Tutchin, convicted for publishing "The Observators," might be amended v. 569
 Directs the jury on the trial of Fielding, for bigamy v. 625
 His argument in controverted point of peerage, in the case of Charles Knowles, commonly called earl Banbury viii. 58
 His speech on giving his opinion, that the Aylesbury-men were not bailable viii. 159
 He said, on Cook's trial, that if the sheriff had returned all new men on a jury, without regard to those who appeared and were sworn or challenged before, it had been well enough iv. 744. ix. 587
 The house of lords declared, that the court of King's-Bench, one of the justices whereof was sir John Powell, over-ruling the earl of Devonshire's plea of privilege, was a breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136

P O W E R.

- Abuse of power well defined ix. 296
POWIS, Sir LYTTON, Judge B. R.
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of the reverend William Hendley, for preaching a charity sermon x. 88. Ap.
 His letter to lord chancellor Parker, containing an account of his proceedings on the summer home circuit, for Kent, in 1719 x. 89. Ap.
 His argument in the Prince's case xi. 300
 His opinion xi. 300, 302
POWIS, Sir THOMAS, Attorney-General,
 Prays the information may be read on the seven bishops Hab. Corp. iv. 303
 He prays the bishops may plead to information iv. 320
 States the case and opens the evidence for the king, on their trial iv. 334
 His reply to Somers, defendant's counsel iv. 385
 His argument on the bill of attainder brought into the house of commons against sir John Fenwick v. 82
 His argument on behalf of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, as to the competency of a witness, on his trial before the house of peers for murder v. 167
 His speech for duchess of Norfolk, in the house of commons, on the proceedings for a divorce between the duke of Norfolk and her grace v. 274
 His reply to the defence of Lindsay, tried for treason, in returning from France without licence v. 519
 His argument on motion in arrest of judgment against Tutchin, convicted by information, for writing "The Observators" v. 545
 His reply v. 564
POWIS, Sir THOMAS, Judge Q. B.
 Is of opinion, there is a mistake in proceedings against Tutchin v. 569. See 570
 His parliamentary speech against the action brought by Ashby against White, lying viii. 95
 His argument for sir Edward Hales, at the suit of Godwin vii. 614
 Gives his opinion, that the Aylesbury-men were not bailable viii. 159
 P O W L E, HENRY,
 His speech and motion, that earl Danby be committed on his impeachment for high-treason, before the house of lords ii. 734
 His speech on summing up the evidence, on the trial of viscount Stafford, impeached by the commons, before the lords, of treason, for being concerned in the popish plot iii. 200
 P O W R I E, WILLIAM,
 His deposition concerning the murder of lord Darnley, husband to Mary queen of Scots viii. 321
 His trial and sentence viii. 331
 * POYSON. See MURDER. POISON.
 P R A C T I C E.
 The ancient practice of every court is the law of that court vi. 624
 Matters of practice are not to be known from books xi. 332, 333
 P R E M U N I R E.
 Statute of præmunire made at the prayer of the commons xi. 70. See BOLTON JOHN.
CROOK JOHN.
GREY ISAAC.
IRELAND.
LALOR ROBERT.
 P R A N C E, MILES.
 Account of the sentence of the court on him, on his conviction of perjury on the trial of Green, &c. for the murder of sir Edmondbury Godfrey, on his own confession viii. 442
 P R A T, WALTER. See HENDLEY WILLIAM.
 P R A T T, CHARLES.
 His reply on Timothy Murphy's trial x. 189
 His speech, argument, and defence of Owen, the bookseller, for publishing "Murray's Case" x. 207. Ap.
 P R A T T, Sir CHARLES. Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas.
 His speech in that court, on delivering mr. Wilkes, on his Hab. Corp. from a commitment by a secretary of state; taken from mr. serjeant Wilson's reports xi. 304
 The same from "Digest of the Law concerning Libels" xi. 304. See CAMDEN, CHARLES Lord.
 P R A T T, Sir JOHN, Justice of the King's-Bench,
 His argument in the Prince's case xi. 299
 His opinion xi. 300, 302
 P R A T T, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's-Bench,
 His directions to the jury, on the trial of Reaf.n and Tranter, sheriff's officers, for murder vi. 208
 His directions to the jury, on the trial of Layer, for treason vi. 318
 P R E A M B L E.
 The preamble to an act of parliament is the key that openeth the entrance into the meaning of the maker of the law vii. 154. See STATUTES.
 P R E C E D E N T S.
 Precedents and examples of former times are singularly useful, if not absolutely necessary, to a right understanding of the laws of England Em. Pref. i. See vii. 69, 108, 111, 118, 137, 139, 144, 157, 158, 167, 197, 538, 563. viii. 549, 554, 566. COMMISSIONS.
 DECLARATIONS. INDICTMENTS. INFORMATION.
 JUDGMENTS. PARDON. PLEADING and PLEAS. RECORDS. SPECIAL VERDICTS. WARRANTS. WRITS.
 P R E C E P T S on the TRIALS of PEERS. See BALMERINO, ARTHUR Lord ix. 596
BYRON, WILLIAM Lord x. 517
CROMARTIE, GEORGE Earl of ix. 590
FERRERS, LAWRENCE Earl of x. 478
 KIL-

KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM Earl of
KINGSTON, ELIZABETH Duchess Dowager of
MOHUN, CHARLES Lord
MORLEY, THOMAS Lord
WARWICK, EDWARD Earl of WRITS.

In what a precept differs from a venire iv. 745
 Precept issues before sessions, and before issue joined; and only commands the sheriff to return jurors sufficient to try the prisoners in general iv. 744, 745

P R E L A T E S

Not de jure divino i. 496
 Not to issue writs in their own name i. 496

P R E R O G A T I V E.

Lord Bacon endeavoured to reconcile parliament to impositions by prerogative xi. 29
 Proceedings against Whitelocke for contempt of the king's prerogative xi. 106

Hakewell's argument against impositions by prerogative xi. 29, 36
Yderton's on the same subject xi. 29, 52

Mr. justice Foster is of opinion, that the right of pressing mariners into the public service is a prerogative inherent in the crown xi. 350. See ROYAL FAMILY. * See i. 547. and ii. 305.

* PRESSICKS, MARY iii. 79. See THWING.

P R E S S I N G.

Warrant to press seamen xi. 349
 Question touching of pressing mariners for the public service, is a point of very great and national importance xi. 349

No persons seem liable to be pressed into land service xi. 349
 Nor landmen to be pressed into the sea service xi. 349

Persons who have chosen a sea-faring life, whose education and employment have fitted them for the service, and inured them to it, such persons, being mariners, may, in the opinion of Mr. justice Foster, be legally pressed into the service of the crown, whenever the public safety requireth it xi. 349

His reasons for being of this opinion, seem chiefly founded on the public utility of pressing xi. 349

Hard to press sailors homeward bound, after a long voyage xi. 349

Yet impress on even outward bound vessels is sometimes necessary xi. 349

Mr. justice Foster is of opinion, that the right of impressing mariners for the public service is a prerogative inherent in the crown, grounded upon common law, and recognized by many acts of parliament xi. 350

Several mandatory writs and commissions for pressing cited xi. 350

Observations on them xi. 351

Of the statutes concerning pressing xi. 351

A short view of the acts xi. 352

Pressing mariners never mentioned in any act of parliament, as illegal xi. 352

Press-warrants never had the sanction of one judicial determination, and seem not reconcilable to the law of the land Em. Pref. v. xi. 349

Pressing is one of the mischiefs which war brings with it xi. 315, 349, 350

If a man sees another pressed, though the person abused does not complain, or call for assistance, and others out of compassion come to his rescue, and kill any of those that restrained him of his liberty, that is man-slaughter ix. 65

* P R E S T O N, Lord Viscount (alias Sir RICHARD GRAHME, Baronet),

* John Ashton, and Edmund Elliot, their arraignment for high-treason, Jan. 16, 1690, 2 W. and M. iv. 410

* The indictment for compassing the death of the king and queen, and adhering to their enemies iv. 410

* The same overt-acts laid to prove the adhesion, as to prove the compassing the king and queen's death iv. 413

* The lord Preston insists upon his peerage iv. 413

* The court tell him he must produce his patent iv. 414

* That the house of lords had over-ruled his claim of peerage iv. 414. See vi. 240.

* And that his lordship had disclaimed his right to peerage there iv. 414

* The indictment read in Latin at the prisoner's request iv. 415

* Produces a statute of 46 Edw. III. upon which he prays a copy of his indictment iv. 417

* Which is refused him iv. 418

* It is not regular to put off a trial before plea pleaded iv. 418

* The prisoners plead not guilty, and then move for a longer time to prepare for their trial, urging that the hasty proceedings in the late reign in capital cases were looked upon as great hardships, and given by king William as one of the reasons for his coming over, in one of his declarations iv. 419

* A trial never put off on a suggestion that witnesses are out of the way, without oath made of it iv. 421

* The prisoners refusing to join in their challenges, are ordered to be tried separately iv. 423

* The lord Preston comes upon his trial, and Ashton and Elliot remanded to Newgate, and not permitted to be present at his trial iv. 423

* Jurors discharged for want of freehold iv. 423

* The king need not shew his cause of challenge till the pannel is gone through iv. 423

* Mr. solicitor-general (for John Somers), his speech before evidence iv. 425

* Captain Billop's evidence of taking the prisoners on board a smack at Grausend, as they were going to France with treasonable papers iv. 433

* Lord Nottingham, secretary of state, marquis of Carmarthen, lord president, and lord Sidney, depose, that the papers produced in court were the same that were brought to them by captain Billop iv. 436, 437

* The papers read, giving an account of the state of the English fleet and garrisons, &c. iv. 440

VOL. XI.

* Witnesses produced to prove some of the papers to be my lord's hand iv. 446

* Lord Preston's defence. He objects that no treason was proved against him in the county of Middlesex iv. 447

* That similitude of hands was not evidence of a man's hand-writing in capital cases iv. 447. See vi. 478.

* His objections answered iv. 447

* The lord chief justice Holt directs the jury iv. 448

* Lord chief justice Pollexfen adds his observations iv. 453

* The lord Preston suffered to speak in his defence after the evidence summed up iv. 454

* He is convicted iv. 455

Lord Preston pardoned, on making a pretended discovery, which he afterwards denied v. 96

* P R E S U M P T I O N. See EVIDENCE.

P R E T E N D E R.

The alterations in favour of the subject on prosecutions for treason, which were not to take place during the life of the Pretender Em. Pref. vi. See vi. 76.

* "Reasons for attainting and abjuring the pretended Prince of Wales," censured by the lords viii. 82

Judge Powys ordered a man to be whipped in open market twice, till his back was bloody, a month intervening between the first and second whipping, for drinking the Pretender's health x. 91. Ap.

He fined another man 100*l.* for drinking the health of king James III. and saying, he knew no such person as king George x. 91, 92. Ap.

* P R I C E, ANNE ii. 1017. See TASBOROUGH.

* P R I C E, JOHN, Esq.

* And one hundred other protestants, their arraignment for high-treason, at Wicklow, in the kingdom of Ireland, March 6, 1688—9 iv. 401

* An introduction, giving an account how they came to be charged with high-treason iv. 401

* Ten of the grand jury papists iv. 402

* The lord chief justice Keating's charge to them iv. 402

* The Irish papists arm themselves upon the Revolution with half-pikes and skeans iv. 402

* Encouraged by the regular troops in their depredations on the English iv. 402

* No petit-treason in Ireland iv. 403

* Murder made high-treason in Ireland iv. 403

* People may assemble for their common defence, without staying for permission from authority iv. 404

* The indictment against Mr. Price and the rest iv. 404

* Prisoners to the civil power ought not to be guarded by soldiers, or with fire-arms iv. 405

* The grand jury ought to be all freeholders iv. 405

* A capital crime must be tried in the county where it is committed iv. 406

* For want of jurors qualified, the trial put off to another assizes; and most of the prisoners bailed by order of the government, tho' committed for high-treason iv. 407

* The protestants complain to the court of their being stripped and plundered by a rabble of Irish papists iv. 407

* Two convicted for stealing cattle; and the court directing the ordinary not to assist them in reading, they receive sentence of death iv. 408

* The lord deputy Tyrcannel's letter read at the assizes, requiring a loan of particular persons towards subsisting king James's army iv. 409

* The grand jury excuse themselves, through the poverty of their county, and are reprimanded by the judge iv. 410

P R I C E, ROBERT, Baron of the Exchequer,

His argument in the Prince's case xi. 296

His opinion xi. 300, 302

P R I D E A U X, EDMUND, Attorney-General for the Commonwealth,

Opens the indictment against Fox, Vowell, and Gerhard, for treason ii. 213

Prefers an impeachment for treason against Gibbons, upon which he is tried ii. 184

Applies the evidence on the trial of John Lilburne, to prove him guilty of treason ii. 56

Makes his observations on the evidence for the commonwealth ii. 76

Is charged by prisoner with being an impeached traitor vii. 364

Joins issue with Love on his impeachment for treason, in corresponding with, and conspiring to bring in, king Charles II. ii. 92

His reply to the prisoner's defence ii. 139

His further reply ii. 145

He moves for judgment against the prisoner ii. 177

* P R I E S T, — ii. 801. See PLOT POPISH.

P R I E S T, WILLIAM,

The case of duels, or proceedings in the Star-chamber, against Mr. William Priest, for writing and sending a challenge, and Mr. Richard Wright for carrying it, Jan. 26, 1615, 11 Jac. I. xi. 112

Charge of Sir Francis Bacon, the king's attorney-general xi. 112

Decree of the Star-chamber against duels xi. 114

They were fined, imprisoned, and to acknowledge offence at the assizes xi. 115. See BARBOT JOHN. BYRON Lord. REA Lord.

P R I N C E.

The judges of Oliver Cromwell declared, that a prince was a subject, and triable by the same law as a commoner vii. 322. ii.

The Prince's case in George the first's reign. See ROYAL FAMILY.

P R I N C I P A L and A C C E S S A R Y.

Principal ought to be convicted before accessory tried iv. 199

Though principal and accessory be tried together, yet verdict is always given against the principal, before it is given against the accessory iv. 199

Instance from the 'Roman History,' of a father being considered as accessory 6 C

- fary to murders committed by his son, though he never spoke to, or saw him
x. 435. See ACCESSARY.
- * P R I N T I N G.
- Printer on his trial for treason, is allowed to have his jury bookfellers or printers ii. 530
- No excuse for printer of sedition to say, that printing is his trade ii. 547
- Or that he printed the dying speeches or words of a dying man ii. 542
- Printing an overt-act of treason viii. 64. See ANDERTON WILLIAM. DOVER SIMON. * LIBELS. MATTHEWS JOHN. TWYN JOHN.
- * PRISONERS and IMPRISONMENT.
- * Sir Thomas More imprisoned fifteen months, and his estate confiscated before he is brought to trial i. 61
- * One kept in prison after his being tried and acquitted of high-treason i. 77
- * A prisoner denied the liberty of taking notes at his trial i. 135
- * False imprisonment to detain one committed by order of parliament, after the dissolution of the parliament ii. 209
- * The goods of a prisoner accused of treason or felony may be secured; but the prisoner shall have a subsistence out of them till he is convicted ii. 504. iv. 627. v. 290
- * A prisoner indicted for felony, denied process by the court to bring in his witnesses ii. 505
- * The jury directed in the absence of the prisoner ii. 613
- * Earl of Danby imprisoned forty months without any prosecution ii. 744
- * Resolved by all the judges, that the king could not give him leave to go to his house ii. 753
- * Where any question of law arises, it ought to be put in the prisoner's presence ii. 729. v. 169
- * Counsel assigned a prisoner shall not be discharged without his assent iii. 233
- * A prisoner in capital cases may not have any instruction in writing, or otherwise, from counsel or others, without they are assigned by the court to assist him iii. 344
- * A peer imprisoned on a homine replegiando till the party effaigned was produced iii. 544
- * The court of King's-Bench deny the prisoner a habeas corpus to bring up his witnesses, who were prisoners for debt iv. 2
- * A prisoner for high-treason, not usual to let his friends be in private with him iv. 209, 662, 737
- * A prisoner to the civil power ought not to be put under a guard of soldiers iv. 404, 405
- * A prisoner brought by habeas corpus to the King's-Bench, may be remanded to the county gaol from whence he came, or to any prison in the county where the King's-Bench sits iii. 1000
- * Where a witness is a prisoner, he cannot be brought out of the rules but by habeas corpus iv. 599
- * The prisoner's irons ought to be taken off during the trial ii. 303. iv. 698. v. 18.
- * But not upon his arraignment vii. 232
- * A statute made to imprison several persons for life v. 81
- * Whether a peer may be committed for a misdemeanour? iv. 312
- * Whether a commitment to the custody of a messenger be a lawful imprisonment? iv. 556
- Instance of a person being committed to prison, and never more heard of i. 36
- The use of chains and fetters in gaols Em. Pref. xiv.
- Sending the subject to remote and private prisons complained of by the judges, in 34 Eliz. Em. Pref. v. and n.
- Why the law requires, whenever any die in prison, the coroner to sit on their bodies Em. Pref. xvi. n.
- Prisoners removed, that they might lose the benefit of the judgment of a court of justice in their favour vii. 239
- Instance of a state-prisoner being confined above forty years, without trial x. 760. Ap.
- Resolutions of the house of commons, in the report of their committee appointed to enquire into the state of the gaols, respecting the cruel usage of the prisoners ix. 107
- Though the opinion of judges must be asked, it need not be given in presence of the prisoner i. 207
- Prisoner cannot insist on any notice of trial iii. 343. iv. 143
- Prisoner departing from prison with keeper's leave, punishable as well as keeper. So resolved by the judges vii. 241
- Prisoners fined for coming into court at their trial, with their hats on ii. 611
- Prisoners in Scotland have many considerable advantages not allowed them in England Em. Pref. i.
- Instance of prisoners not being asked what they had to say i. 61. iv. 199
- Prisoner suffered to speak in his defence after evidence summed up iv. 454
- How prisoners may be lawfully removed Em. Pref. v. and n.
- Witnesses produced on the part of prisoners ought always to have been examined on oath Em. Pref. v. and n. iv. 178
- Crown prisoners ought not to be taken out of custody without leave vii. 537
- Prisoner can demand no time to prepare for his trial in Scotland ii. 1097
- Prisoners may be indulged with, but not claim as their rights, the use of pen, ink, and paper i. 355. ii. 177, 330. iii. 346, 708. iv. 143, 513, 565. v. 143, 181. vi. 22, ix. 622.
- A chair to sit upon i. 993, 994, 995. iii. 102. vi. 1, 477. vii. 424
- Copy of pannel of jury (except in treason) iii. 350. n. 465, 707. iv. 191, 566
- The liberty of cross-examining witnesses ix. 638, 691. xi. 10, 239
- Or of their being examined apart v. 20
- Several instances of prisoners being most cruelly used in gaols ix. 107
- See ACTON WILLIAM. BAMBRIDGE THOMAS. BASTILE. HUGGINS JOHN. NEWGATE.
- * PRITCHARD, Sir WILLIAM, late Lord Mayor of London,
- * And Thomas Papillon, esq. the trial between them, Nov. 6. 1684. 36 Car. II. iii. 1072
- * The plaintiff declares that the defendant caused him to be arrested, being then lord mayor, having no probable cause of action against the plaintiff iii. 1072
- * Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, suggests that this was part of the plot of the discontented party to throw the city into confusion iii. 1072
- * The manner of the arrest is proved iii. 1073
- * The lieutenant raise the militia, and prevent any disturbance; and my lord mayor is released iii. 1075
- * Mr. serjeant Maynard's speech for the defendant iii. 1075
- * The lord mayor not exempt from an arrest, where there is a probable cause iii. 1076
- * The defendant's counsel urge that they had a probable cause, the plaintiff making such a return to the mandamus for admitting him sheriff, as he had reason to apprehend was false iii. 1076
- * Mr. Williams's speech iii. 1077
- * Mr. Ward's speech iii. 1077
- * The chief justice reprimands him iii. 1078
- * Evidence that the plaintiff refused to give an appearance iii. 1079
- * Evidence that the defendant had a majority of votes on the poll for sheriff iii. 1084
- * The attorney-general's reply iii. 1085
- * The plaintiff's counsel shew that the poll where the defendant pretends he was elected sheriff, was taken in a riotous manner, and by persons who had no authority to take it iii. 1085
- * Mr. serjeant Maynard's answer iii. 1087
- * The chief justice's observations upon the evidence iii. 1088
- * The pursuing malicious methods to obtain a right, makes the party doing it liable to an action iii. 1090
- * Instances of malice in the defendant iii. 1091
- * The true design of this arrest, to procure an insurrection iii. 1093
- * Damages directed to be given answerable to the mischief intended, and not according to what the plaintiff sustained iii. 1094
- * Damages given 10,000l. iii. 1094
- * The chief justice commends the verdict iii. 1094
- The record vi. 50. Ap.
- PRIVILEGE of PARLIAMENT.
- Court of King's-Bench over-ruling peer's plea of privilege of parliament, and forcing him to plead over in chief, it being within time of privilege, did thereby commit a manifest breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136
- The speaker of the house of commons detained in prison upon a civil action, notwithstanding the privilege of parliament, 31 Hen. VI. xi. 99
- The house of commons resolved, that the judgment given against Sir John Elliot, &c. 5 Car. I. was illegal, and against the freedom and privilege of parliament ii. 571
- Privilege of parliament does not extend to a prosecution for a seditious libel xi. 305
- A masterly and spirited protest against narrowing the privilege of parliament xi. 305
- See CRISPE, Sir NICHOLAS, and DALMAHOY. FAGG Sir JOHN, and Doctor SHIRLEY. FINCH Sir HENEAGE. JAY and TOPHAM.
- PRIVY COUNCIL.
- As the jurisdiction of the privy council is limited, the cause of their commitment ought to appear vii. 126
- The lords of the council used in ancient times to meddle with matters of meum and tuum, which are now left to the king's courts of law and equity xi. 112
- Assaulting privy counsellor must be laid to be done in the execution of his office, to make it capital in Scotland ii. 629
- A single privy counsellor hath not a right to commit in any case xi. 319
- Lord Holt's opinion to the contrary, denied to be law xi. 319
- PROBYN, EDMUND*, Serjeant at Law,
- Opens the defence of Thomas earl of Macclesfield (late lord-chancellor) impeached by the commons before the house of lords, for high crimes and misdemeanours, in selling the places of the masters in chancery, May 1725, 11 Geo. I. vi. 618, 663, 664, 685, 686
- PROBYN, Mr.* Justice,
- His opinion respecting bailing Bambridge ix. 229
- PROCESSES.
- If process be defective, or mistake in name or addition, or if name of officer be inserted without authority, and after issuing process, or officer exceeds his authority, and is killed, it will be only manslaughter x. 476
- PROCESSIONS of LORD HIGH STEWARDS.
- See CARMARTHEN Marquis.
- CLARENDON Earl.*
- COWPER Lord.*
- DAVENTRY Lord.*
- DERBY Earl.*
- ELLESMERE Lord.*
- HARDWICKE Lord.*
- HENLEY Lord.*
- NORTHINGTON Earl.*
- NOTTINGHAM Earl.*
- SACHEVEREL HENRY, D. D.*
- SOMERS Lord.* See viii. 572.
- PROCLAMATIONS.
- They may be of great use towards the observation of a law, but never used instead of a law vii. 479
- Proclamation issued for prohibiting the printing of news vii. 480
- The judges espoused proclamations against law iii. 223. vii. 481
- Proclamation of reward and pardon, on the assassination plot in William III.'s reign iv. 684, 685
- A falsity intimated in a royal proclamation of Jac. I. i. 226. n.
- A proclamation respecting pirates v. 298
- A proclamation of indemnity v. 510
- A pro-

A proclamation for restraining the spreading of false news, and printing and publishing libels v. 782. See xi. 63

P R O M I S S O R Y N O T E.

Indictment for forging a promissory note of hand x. 95. Ap. See HALES ROBERT. HALE WILLIAM. KINNERSLEY THOMAS.

* P R O O F. See EVIDENCE. WITNESSES.

P R O S E C U T I O N S.

Instances of illegal prosecutions, during the reigns of the Stuart family, in civil as well as criminal matters, but more especially in capital cases, and those chiefly for treason iv. 165

See ARMSTRONG Sir THOMAS.

BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL.

BATEMAN CHARLES.

CARR HENRY.

COLLEDGE STEPHEN.

CORNISH HENRY.

FITZHARRIS EDWARD.

GAUNT ELIZABETH.

HARRIS BENJAMIN.

LANGHORNE RICHARD.

LISLE LADY.

PILKINGTON THOMAS.

RUSSEL Lord.

SHAFESBURY Earl.

SIDNEY Colonel.

VANE Sir HENRY.

WILMER.

P R O S T I T U T I O N.

Person prostituting himself guilty of felony, as well as the actor i. 396
In many countries, an action may be maintained by a courtesan for the price of her prostitution; but no such action is allowed in England xi. 188

P R O T E S T S.

Protest made against the resolution of the house of lords, that privilege of parliament does not extend to the case of writing and publishing seditious libels, contains a masterly and spirited argument against thus narrowing the privilege of parliament xi. 305

P R O V E R B S.

A very wise chancellor affirmed, that proverbs were the wisdom of a people x. 208. Ap.

* P R O V O C A T I O N. See MURDER.

* P R Y N N E, WILLIAM, Esq.

* His trial in the Star-Chamber in Hilary term, 1632-3, 9 Car. I. for writing and publishing a libel, intitled, Histriomastix; or, a Scourge for Stage-players, &c. as also the trial of Michael Sparkes for printing, and William Buckner for licensing, the said libel; and of four others concerned in printing part of it i. 418

* The libel censures all manner of plays and recreations as unlawful, and casts reflections on the king, queen, and court, &c. for allowing them and being present at them i. 418

* The keeping of festivals does not please this author i. 418

* Prynne's answer to the information i. 419

* Buckner's answer i. 419

* Sparkes's answer i. 419

* Mr. attorney-general opens and enforces the charge i. 420

* Music, dancing, church-ceremonies, and men and women's hair offends Mr. Prynne. He insinuates that we are returning to paganism, and persuades people to fly their country i. 420

* Prynne affirms that he would rather die than put on his maid's clothes i. 421

* King Charles's reign compared with Nero's i. 422

* Mr. Atkins and Mr. Holbourn, of counsel for Prynne; their arguments in his defence i. 422

* Mr. Herne's argument i. 423

* Commissioners speeches before sentence i. 423

He was sentenced to be put from the bar, and to be for ever incapable of his profession; that the society of Lincoln's-Inn do put him out of the society, and that he be degraded at Oxford i. 424, 428

The parliament in 1640, resolved that Mr. Prynne ought to be restored to his degrees in the university of Oxford, and to the society of Lincoln's-Inn, and to his exercise of his profession of an utter barrister at law, and to his chamber again at Lincoln's-Inn i. 504

His censure was one of the charges against archbishop Laud i. 862, 882

* Buckner and Sparkes censured i. 428

Prynne was the prosecutor of colonel Fiennes for cowardice i. 766

His argument in the case of Connor lord Macguire condemned in England for treason committed in Ireland viii. 341

Account of his 'Chronological vindication of the king's supreme ecclesiastical jurisdiction' xi. 75. * See i. 481. BASTWICK JOHN.

* P U B L I C A T I O N. See LIBEL.

PUCKERING, Sir JOHN, Queen's Serjeant at Law, Of counsel for the crown on the prosecution of Abington for treason i. 135

His reasons, as speaker in the lower house, for the expediency of executing Mary queen of Scots, for a conspiracy against queen Elizabeth i. 158

His speech on the arraignment of Davison, in Star-Chamber vii. 23

When made lord keeper i. 194

P U N I S H M E N T S.

The execution of punishments complained of Em. Pref. xii.

Of the punishment of peine forte et dure Em. Pref. ix. i. 325, 326

Of the inequality of punishment of crimes in general Em. Pref. ix. x.

Of theft in particular Em. Pref. ix.

Of murder in particular Em. Pref. ix.

Of adultery in particular

Of less crimes and misdemeanours

For striking in the king's palace

Cruel punishments oppress many, terrify all, and consequently make government odious to the subject iv. 172

Instances of cruel punishments during the reigns of the Stuart family in civil as well as criminal matters, but more especially in capital cases, and those chiefly for treason iv. 165. See

BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL.

DANGERFIELD.

HAMPDEN JOHN.

JOHNSON SAMUEL, Clerk.

LEIGHTON.

LILBURNE JOHN.

OATES TITUS.

PRYNNE WILLIAM.

The above cruel punishments, and of several other persons, as they were against law, so they were without precedent iv. 165. See DAMAGES. FINES.

PURCHASE, GEORGE.

His trial for high-treason, in levying war, under pretence of pulling down meeting-houses, 1710 viii. 267

Mr. Thomson opens the indictment viii. 268

The attorney-general's speech viii. 268

Tolbo's evidence of their intention of pulling down the meeting-houses viii. 269

Mr. Orrell's evidence, that the prisoner thrust several times at the officer of the guards viii. 270

Russell's evidence to the same purpose viii. 272

Richardson's evidence to the same purpose viii. 273

Mr. Darnell for the prisoner, urged no general previous intention proved, but this only a sudden execution of a design viii. 273

That the prisoner being in drink, was forced about by the mob, but no ways concerned in the intention or execution of pulling down the meeting-houses viii. 274

Mr. Major on the same side viii. 274

Evidence for the prisoner viii. 275

Broad's evidence that he was very much in drink, at near eleven o'clock, and must necessarily pass the mob to go home viii. 276

Cheekley's evidence, that he only held his sword undrawn to keep the horses off viii. 278

Mr. Darnell's speech viii. 280

Mr. attorney-general's reply viii. 281

Mr. solicitor's reply viii. 281

Mr. Thomson's reply viii. 282

Lord chief justice Parker sums up the evidence viii. 282

The jury find a special verdict viii. 285

A copy of the special verdict in his case, as it was drawn up for the consideration of all the judges viii. 285

Solemn argument on his case viii. 289

PYM, JOHN.

Opens the charge against earl Strafford tried for treason i. 736

Seconds John Glynn i. 757

His speech on delivering the articles of treason against archbishop Laud i. 826

Q.

Q U A K E R S.

The quakers give a blasphemous divine worship ii. 270. See NAYLOR JAMES.

A quaker cannot be a witness upon an appeal ix. 122. n. See BOLTON JOHN. CROOK JOHN. GREY ISAAC.

QUEEN CAROLINE. See PETITIONS.

QUEEN CONSORT. See PETITIONS.

QUEEN REGENT. See PETITIONS.

QUEENSBERRY, Duke of. See BAILLIE DAVID.

QUELCH, JOHN.

And others, their trials at Boston, for piracy and murder viii. 205

Arraigned with Matthew Pym, John Clifford, and James Perrot, upon several articles viii. 205

That being fitted out to cruise on the French and Spaniards, they had plundered the Portuguese, allies of her majesty viii. 206

Quelch pleads not guilty, the rest guilty viii. 207

The rest of the crew arraigned, and plead not guilty viii. 207

Paul Dudley, esq. queen's advocate, opens the evidence viii. 208

Pym, Clifford and Perrot, evidence against the prisoners viii. 209

The counsel for the prisoners urge the London Gazette's no evidence of the alliance viii. 213

That the witnesses were not competent witnesses, not having received her majesty's pardon viii. 213

Pirates in the Plantations proceeded against in a summary way, by commissioners, without a jury viii. 214

Found guilty viii. 214

He and four more executed viii. 217

Q U E S T I O N S of LAW,

Propounded to, and resolved by, all the judges of England. See JUDGES.

MOHUN Lord. KINGSTON Duchess of. RESOLUTIONS.

QUIDLEY, PATRICK. See GOLDING, & al.

Q U O W A R R A N T O.

By bringing the quo warranto against the city, the credit of it was lost, and many orphans starved, and more impoverished, beyond the possibility of recovery; which was heightened by the judgment given in the highest case that ever came in Westminster-Hall, by two judges only, only, and that without one word of reason given at the pronouncing

 iv. 172, 187
 If quo warranta had been a legal method, Henry VIII. would have proceeded by it to dissolve the religious corporations iii. 556. iv. 187
 The quo warranta was brought against the city in Hilary term, 1681, upon which there was a demurrer, of which judgment was not given till Trinity term, 1683 iv. 186, 187
 Two arguments were only permitted in it of each side, one in Hilary term, the other in Easter; and so the case was ripe for judgment in Trinity term following iv. 187
 The information at large vi. 16. Ap. See ELLES RICHARD, x. 128. Ap. GIBBON JOHN, x. 128. Ap.

R.

RABY, JOHN, Serjeant at Law,
 His application of the evidence on behalf of the crown, on a counsellor's trial for murder vi. 217
 His charge to the jury on Hals's trial for forgery ix. 105

RADLEY, RICHARD,
 Fined 200*l.* for speaking scandalous words of the lord chief justice Scroggs
 viii. 459

* RALEIGH, Sir WALTER,
 * His trial for high-treason, in conspiring to depose the king, and to set up the lady Arabella Stuart, and corresponding with Spain for that purpose, and for publishing a book against the king's title; before commissioners of Oyer and Terminer specially appointed at Winton, the 17th of November, 1603, 1 Jac. I. i. 212
 * Sir Edward Coke, attorney-general, his speech i. 214, &c.
 * Interrupted by Sir Walter i. 214
 * The king is king to all intents on the demise of his predecessor, before he is crowned; and treason may be committed against him before his coronation i. 214
 * Lord Cobham's examination, who was a prisoner, and charged with the same fact, read as evidence against Sir Walter i. 216
 * The prisoner's answer i. 216
 * Lord Cobham's second examination read; and the prisoner's answer
 i. 217
 * The judges rule, that two witnesses were not necessary to convict one of treason; and that the 25 of Edw. III. was not then in force i. 218
 * An examination not signed by the party, adjudged evidence against a third person i. 218
 * Sir Edward Coke affirms, that circumstantial evidence alone is sufficient to convict a man of high-treason i. 219
 * The court rule that the witnesses need not be produced in voce i. 220
 * Some hear-say examinations read i. 222
 * Evidence concerning the book i. 221
 * The lady Arabella cleared of being concerned in the plot i. 222
 * Mr. attorney gives scurrilous language to Sir Walter i. 216, 220
 * Is reproved by the court i. 223
 * A letter of lord Cobham's read in justification of the prisoner i. 224
 * Sir Walter is convicted i. 224
 * Sentence passed i. 225
 * After fourteen years imprisonment in the Tower, he is made admiral of a squadron bound to Guiana i. 226
 * Having ill success, is executed at his return, upon the former sentence
 i. 226, &c.

* Whether his commission did not amount to a pardon, in honour, if not in law? i. 227
 * His behaviour before and at execution i. 229, &c.
 Of Sir Walter Raleigh's trial all since have complained iv. 169
 Bacon, when chancellor, told Sir Walter Raleigh, that he had a sufficient pardon for all that was passed i. 227, 228. See BACON
 Sir FRANCIS.

Instead of consults, &c. in lord Russel's trial, the cant words of the surprising 'the bye,' and 'the main,' were made use of in Sir Walter Ra- leigh's, interpretable as the counsel thought fit; at least it was astonishing to the jury, which was all that was designed by the counsel, and fatal to the prisoner vii. 63. n.

His trial is printed before his History of the World vii. 63. n.
 If Sir Walter Raleigh was guilty of the things he was accused of by the witnesses, though the accusation did not amount to legal proof, it was treason, in the opinion of Sir John Hawles, solicitor-general to Wm. III.
 vii. 63. n.

Account of bringing him to execution vii. 339
 The attorney-general demands execution of the judgment given against him fifteen years before viii. 339
 The chief justice's speech at granting it i. 227. viii. 339
 The king's special warrant for beheading him viii. 340. See MARK-
 HAM Sir GRIFFIN viii. 64. n.

RAMSEY, DAVID. See REA, DONALD Lord.
RANDALL, Mr.
Barton prays he may be assigned his counsel i. 502, 503
RAPPE.

There must be penetration in rape. So resolved by all the judges i. 388
 Indictment for a rape vi. 4. Ap.
 Upon an acquittal for a rape, court oftentimes directs a prosecution for an assault with intent to commit a rape x. 518, 519. n. See * AUDLEY MERVIN Lord. BROADWAY GILES. * BUGGERY.

RAPLEY, WILLIAM. See viii. 94, 95. n.
RATCLIFFE, CHARLES, Esq.

Proceedings against him on an attainer for high-treason, at the King's Bench, Nov. 21, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 582
 His counsel pressed to put off the trial, but refused by the court ix. 582
 His counsel moved, that possibly Mr. Ratcliffe might be entitled to the benefit of the act 3 Geo. II. ix. 583

 But the prisoner having once pleaded in bar of execution, and that plea having been falsified by the verdict, his plea is peremptory, and the verdict conclusive ix. 583
 His case stated ix. 583
 Mr. justice Foster's opinion on this case ix. 583
 Award of execution in Mr. Ratcliffe's case, agreeable to many precedents which were cited ix. 583
 Beheaded on Tower-Hill ix. 583
 Some account of him ix. 586

* RAWLINS, PLEASANT v. 449. See SWENSDEN, & al.
RAYMOND, ROBERT,
 His speech for Lindsay, arraigned for treason, in returning from France without licence v. 516
 Opens the indictment against Fielding, for bigamy v. 611

RAYMOND, Sir ROBERT, Solicitor-General,
 His reply on the trial of Dammarce, for treason viii. 241
 His reply on the trial of Willis, for treason viii. 263
 His reply on the trial of Purchase, for treason viii. 281

RAYMOND, Sir ROBERT, Attorney-General,
 Demurred to the plea of Laver, for treason vi. 238
 Seconds opening the evidence vi. 254
RAYMOND, Sir ROBERT, Ld. Chief Justice of the King's Bench, Delivers the opinion of the judges of that court, on the special verdict found in major Oneby's case, for murder ix. 19
 And on that found in Huggins's, for similar charge ix. 142 Sums up the evidence on the appeal against Bambridge and Corbet, for murder ix. 177
 His opinion respecting bailing Bambridge ix. 229
 His opinion respecting evidence on Franchlin's trial, for a libel ix. 260, 267
 Of opinion, that it is not material whether libel be true or false, if prosecuted by indictment or information ix. 269. See Id. 271.
 Sums up the evidence ix. 275

RAYMOND, Sir THOMAS, Justice B. R.
 Declined giving his opinion on earl Danby's case, who moved, on a commitment by lords for treason, that he might be bailed ii. 754
 Refused to bail his lordship on motion ii. 760
 He was sent down to the court of Common-Pleas, to know their opinion on earl Castlemaine's case iii. 46
 Of opinion, that the plea of Fitzharris was insufficient to oust the court of their jurisdiction iii. 261
 His Reports cited xi. 25

RAVAILLA, C.
 Who killed Henry IV. of France, justified the murder by his conscience, and said he had done a good thing v. 126. See viii. 369. xi. 116.
RAYNSFORD, Sir RICHARD, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
 Of opinion, on the earl of Shaftesbury's motion to be discharged or bailed, on a commitment by his peers for contempt, that though he was illegally committed, the commitment could not be examined in B. R. and that he could neither be bailed or discharged by that court, but did not declare how his opinion would have been in case there had been a prorogation ii. 622

REA, Lord,
 Proceedings in the court of Chivalry on appeal of treason, by Donald lord
Rea, against David Ramsey, A. D. 1631, 7 Car. I. xi. 124
 Occasion of the trial xi. 124, 126
 The earl of Lindsay, lord high constable pro tempore xi. 124, 126
 Names of the other commissioners xi. 124, 126
 Place where the court was held xi. 124
 Procession and entry of the earl marshal and high constable xi. 124
 Form of presenting the commission xi. 124
 Purport of the commission xi. 124. See xi. 126
 Appellant ushered into court by the herald, accompanied by four knights his sureties xi. 124, 126, 128
 He is very richly apparelled, with a sword xi. 124
 Doctor Reynolds his counsel xi. 124
 Defendant ushered in in like manner, accompanied by two lords his sureties xi. 124, 126, 128
 Very richly dressed, without a sword xi. 124
 Earl marshal's speech xi. 124, 126
 Effect of doctor Duck's speech, the king's advocate for the marshal's court
 xi. 124, 127
 Appellant's petition to the king for counsel xi. 128
 His majesty's answer xi. 128
 Charge or appeal against the defendant xi. 124, 127
 Appellant challenges the defendant xi. 124, 128
 Defendant challenges the appellant xi. 125, 128
 He answers the appellant's bill xi. 125
 Being advised by the court to take counsel, craves counsel to answer
 xi. 125, 128

Court is adjourned xi. 125
 Appellant entered as before in manner and habit xi. 125
 Defendant was new suited xi. 125
 He presents his answer and defence in writing xi. 125, 128
 Craves revenge upon the appellant's person by dint of sword xi. 125
 Doctor Eden, of counsel for the defendant, his speech xi. 125
 Time given for the appellant's replication xi. 125
 His counsel reprimanded by the court xi. 125
 Appellant appears as before xi. 125
 Defendant appears in another new suit xi. 125
 Appellant's replication is presented to the high constable xi. 125
 Appellant's counsel enforce the charge against the defendant xi. 125
 Defendant seeking flight from justice by sending appellant a private challenge sufficient conviction in law, according to ancient precedents in this court xi. 125
 Doctor Duck's answer xi. 125
 Doctor

I N D E X.

Doctor Reeves consents to combat	xi. 125
Doctor Duck interrupted by the earl marshal	xi. 125
Letters read	xi. 125, 128
Doctor Duck opened the whole matter	xi. 125
Doctor Reeves prosecutes the matter	xi. 125
Doctor Eden speaks in his excuse	xi. 125
Earl marshal interposes concerning a point of honour	xi. 125
Pleaders proceed	xi. 125
The court clears the marquis of Hamilton from dishonour	xi. 126
Witnesses examined viva voce	xi. 126, 128
Doctor Duck summed up all the proceedings	xi. 126
Doctor Eden 's objections	xi. 126
Doctor Duck 's answer	xi. 126
Doctor Reeves 's conclusion	xi. 126
Court adjourned	xi. 126
The business referred to the king's pleasure	xi. 126
In this appeal conviction incurs no corruption of blood, or forfeiture at common law	xi. 126
Defendant released from the Tower upon bail	xi. 128
His sureties become his bail, and enter into a bond	xi. 128
The defendant's protestation	xi. 128
His sureties released, he remanded to the Tower , and the bonds rendered	xi. 129
Doctor Duck 's further speech	xi. 129
Bill and answer subscribed and sealed by the respective parties	xi. 129
Duel adjudged between the parties	xi. 129
Form of it	xi. 129
Appellant's speech hereupon	xi. 129
The defendant moves for a shorter time to be assigned for the duel	xi. 129
Sureties for appearance on same being appointed	xi. 129
Defendant released	xi. 129
Weapons assigned combatants by the court	xi. 129
Appellant's protestations or demands	xi. 129
Court's answers to them	xi. 129, 130
The dimensions of the weapons	xi. 130
The defendant's petition to the lord high constable and the lord marshal	xi. 130
The answer thereto	xi. 130
Day of combat prorogued	xi. 129
Sureties remitted	xi. 130
The appellant asks the judges, whether he may use defensive arms at discretion	xi. 130
They answer, that both parties may	xi. 130
The constable and marshal find the defendant not guilty of treason, but that he had seditiously committed many attempts against his majesty	xi. 130
Court decree both parties to be committed to the Tower , till, by sureties to be approved by his majesty, they gave in sufficient caution not to attempt any thing one against the other	xi. 131
Letter from his majesty dismissing the court, and discharging the combat	xi. 131
Marquis of Hamilton 's power with the king got all favour for the defendant, who was well rewarded in due time	xi. 126
The appellant having done the duty of a loyal subject, left the court and kingdom, and returned to his command in Sweden	xi. 126. See
UCHILTREE JAMES Lord of.

R E A D I N G.

Instance of convicts being put to read for their clergy in Ireland	iv. 408, 409
* READING, NATHANIEL , Esq.
* His trial for a misdemeanour, April 24, 1679, 31 Car. II.	ii. 806
* Sir James Butler 's charge to the grand jury	ii. 806
* Probable evidence sufficient for them to find the bill	ii. 806
* Eleven judges assist at the trial	ii. 806
* The indictment, for endeavouring to fluster the king's evidence against the popish lords, by suborning the king's witnesses, and bribing them to retract their evidence	ii. 807
* No peremptory challenge but in capital cases	ii. 808
* The prisoner complains of too strict and illegal a confinement	ii. 808
* One cannot be convicted of treason in an indictment, where the treason is not formally laid, though the facts charged do amount to treason	ii. 808
* Whether he may not be indicted for treason, on those very facts, after he had been convicted of a misdemeanour for them. See Mr. HAMPDEN 's trial	ii. 808
* Jurymen may be examined as a witness	ii. 809
* The prisoner confesses, he believes there was a plot	ii. 810
* Bedloe 's evidence of the prisoner's tampering with him to retract his evidence against the lords	ii. 810
* Speke deposes, that he over-heard the bargain between Bedloe and the prisoner	ii. 815
* Bedloe 's servant deposes, that he over-heard the treaty between the prisoner and his master	ii. 817
* Mr. Reading 's defence; he shews how he became concerned for the popish lords	ii. 818
* He is told he must not asperse the king's witnesses, unless he brings proof of what he charges them with	ii. 821
* The prisoner to have 100l. per ann. out of every 1000l. per ann. Bedloe got	ii. 821
* Bedloe owns he had been engaged in a design to fire the city of Westminster	ii. 822
* But the prisoner is told, he must not ask him any questions tending to make him accuse himself	ii. 822
* The prisoner avers that Bedloe first proposed the matter to him	ii. 824
* Bedloe owns he pitched upon an estate in Gloucestershire for his reward	ii. 825

* The prisoner clears the popish lords of any design to bribe Bedloe	ii. 825
* He says, that his treating with Bedloe was to prevent the shedding of innocent blood	ii. 825
* Bedloe receives 500l. of the government for his discovery	ii. 826
* No man ought to be counsel in treason or felony, till he is assigned	ii. 826
* The lord chief justice North directs the jury	ii. 827
* The jury can have no papers out of court that are not under seal	ii. 828
* The judgment against Mr. Reading	ii. 829
* He is set in the pillory	ii. 829. See ix. 309.
* REASON, HUGH , and ROBERT TRANTER ,
* Their trial for the murder of Edward Lutterell , esq. at the King's-Bench bar, Feb. 3, 1721, 8 Geo. I.	vi. 195
* The indictment	vi. 195
* Mr. serjeant Chefhyre 's speech before evidence	vi. 197
* Evidence for the king, that the deceased was arrested, and killed by the prisoners whilst in their custody	vi. 198
* Evidence of what the deceased declared after he was wounded	vi. 201
* Debates about giving evidence of what the deceased said on his death-bed, the examination not being produced	vi. 203
* The judgment of the court	vi. 204
* The surgeon's evidence	vi. 205
* The prisoners defence	vi. 205
* Evidence for the prisoners	vi. 205
* Mr. Reeve and Mr. Hungerford , their reply	vi. 207
* Lord chief justice Pratt 's directions to the jury	vi. 208
* The prisoners found guilty of manslaughter	vi. 212

R E B E L L I O N.

Lawful for private persons to arm themselves to oppose rebellions, &c.	ii. 593
There is not, nor ever was a tenure, which obligeth tenants to follow their lords into rebellion	ix. 567
The fear of having houses burnt, or goods spoiled, is no excuse in law for joining and marching with rebels	ix. 567
The only force that doth excuse is a force upon the person, and present fear of death; and this force and fear must continue all the time the party remains with the rebels	ix. 568
It is incumbent on every man that makes force his defence, to shew an actual force, that he joined the rebels for fear of death, and quitted the service the very first opportunity	ix. 568
Of what church and religion the rebels executed for the rebellion of 1745, were	ix. 565. See TREASON.

R E C O G N I Z A N C E.

Upon oath of party being sick, his recognizance is respited, and admitted to plead by attorney	iii. 933
Heretofore when swords were not usually worn but by soldiers, if a man was bound to his good behaviour, the wearing one might be a breach of his recognizance for keeping the peace; but now swords are worn by all sorts of people, it is not	iv. 198

R E C O R D E R.

Sir George Treby was restored to the place of recorder of the city of London , Oct. 6, 1688	iii. 628
---	----------

R E C O R D S.

The whole record in case of ship-money, in English	i. 510
All the records produced in the case of ship-money, stated	i. 556, &c.
Those of cowardice	i. 815
The record against Titus Oates , for perjury	iv. 1
The second record against the same person for the like offence	iv. 85
Of old time before Edward III. the reasons of judgments used to be entered of record in cases of difficulty	iv. 168. n.
The reasons of judgments are seldom expressed in the record of it	iv. 168
Cornish suffered for want of the copy of a record	iv. 175
Records against peers of the realm, for murder	iv. 511, 513. v. 137.
Records in causes for misdemeanours	x. 479, 480. 518, 519
Record on subornation of perjury	vi. 10, 16, 45, 46. Ap.
Record against a peer for debauching a young lady of quality	vi. 12. Ap.
Record of cause for a riot	vi. 16. Ap.
Records in treason	vi. 40. Ap.
Record in action of false imprisonment	vi. 48, 50, 51, 55, 57. Ap.
Records of proceedings against a cheat	vi. 50. Ap.
Record of the court of King's-Bench of the proceedings on an information against Sir John Elliot , Benjamin Valentine , and Denzil Hollis , members of the house of commons, for several seditious speeches in the said house, and assaulting the speaker, and forcing him to sit in the chair after the king had signified his pleasure that the house should be adjourned	vi. 58, 59. Ap.
Record in Latin between Seams and Barnardiston concerning the election of members to parliament	vii. 253
Record in Latin against Charles Knowles , commonly called earl of Banbury , for murder in a duel	vii. 427
Record in Abby and White	viii. 50
The record against Thomas duke of Norfolk , for treason	viii. 89
Record of surrender in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament	viii. 335
Record cannot be falsified by parole evidence	ix. 664*
If record avers death of party, court will not admit his appearance to falsify the record	ix. 670*
Indictment on an act of parliament inflicting penalty for second offence must recite record of first conviction, which must be proved; but matter of it is never to be re-examined	x. 433
Record in Moore and the port of Hastings , on a mandamus for admission into the freedom of that corporation	x. 434
Record in the Bankers case, Latin	x. 138, 139. Ap.

Record of the proceedings in Fabrigas and Mostyn, a Plantation governor, for false imprisonment xi. 186
 Record in case of a seditious libel amended xi. 324
 Record of information amended xi. 332
 Order of a judge to amend seems erroneously termed an alteration of a record xi. 333. * See EVIDENCE.

* R E C U S A N T.

* The beginning of recusancy, and the reason of making the penal laws against popish recusants ii. 232
 Reasonableness of laws against them ii. 240
 * Three persons, quakers, convicted of recusancy for refusing to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy ii. 463
 * A popish recusant a good witness, till the record of his conviction is produced i. 392, iv. 45
 * The juries who tried the prisoner for the popish plot directed by the court not to give any credit to the testimony of the popish witnesses, how numerous soever ii. 826, 907
 * King James's mandate to the university of Cambridge to admit a popish recusant to his degree iv. 254

REDDING, JOSEPH. See ANNESLEY JAMES ix. 315
 REEVE, THOMAS,

His reply on the trial of Raeson and Tranter, sheriff's officers, for murder ii. 207

His reply on the parliamentary proceedings against Francis Austerbury, bishop of Rochester vi. 445

REEVES, THOMAS,

Of counsel against Corbet, on appeal of murder ix. 152

* R E F O R M A T I O N.

The bishop of Salisbury's History of the Reformation approved by the house of commons, and the author of it received the thanks of parliament v. 86

* R E G I C I D E S,

* Twenty-nine, their trial for high-treason, which began at the Old Bailey, London, October 10, 1660, 12 Car. II. ii. 302. See vi. 408
 * Resolutions of the judges and king's counsel upon a consultation preparatory to the trial ii. 302. See vi. 328
 * That any of the king's counsel might privately manage the evidence to the grand jury ii. 302
 * In case a juror convict a man, it is no cause of challenge to a prisoner who is to be tried on the same indictment ii. 303
 * The lord chief baron's charge to the grand jury ii. 304
 * The intention only punishable in treason ii. 304
 * Of which words may be an overt-act ii. 304
 * The people have no coercive power over the person of the king ii. 305
 * The Spaniers' treason; the holding that the king might be imprisoned, or compelled per asperitatem to submit to the people's demands ii. 305
 * Any person executing an illegal act, though by the king's command, is punishable ii. 306
 * The king cannot in person arrest any man, or be arrested ii. 306
 * The king cannot sit in judgment in his own person; and his possessions are subject to a trial by jury ii. 306
 * The prisoners brought from the Tower to Newgate ii. 307
 * They are severally arraigned ii. 307
 * Sir Hardress Waller pleads guilty ii. 308, 401
 * Henry Marten offers to the court, that his name is mis-spelt in the exception in the act of indemnity ii. 309
 * And is over-ruled ii. 310
 * George Fleetwood pleads guilty ii. 311
 * The rest plead not guilty ii. 308, &c.
 * Thomas Harrison brought upon his trial ii. 314
 * Sir Heneage Finch aggravates the charge ii. 314
 * Holds, that if any one of the overt-acts laid in the indictment, or any other overt-act tending to the same treason, be proved, it maintains the indictment ii. 314
 * An account of the number of the regicides, and where dispersed ii. 315
 * Sir Edward Turner's speech ii. 315
 * The witnesses called ii. 316
 * Proved, that Harrison sat in the court several days, and particularly on the day of the sentence ii. 317
 * That he signed the warrant for summoning the High Court of Justice ii. 318
 * That he signed the warrant for the execution of the king ii. 318
 * Proved, that Harrison advised to blacken the king in their charge against him ii. 317
 * Copy of the warrant for the execution of the king ii. 319
 * Harrison's defence ii. 319
 * He justifies the fact as approved by Heaven ii. 319
 * Says, that many upon the bench were as active in the rebellion as himself ii. 320
 * He excepts to the jurisdiction of the court ii. 320
 * And says he acted by authority of the parliament, for which he was not to be questioned here ii. 320
 * Some on the bench answer him ii. 320, 321
 * The lord chief baron directs the jury ii. 323
 * An endeavour to imprison the king, an overt-act of compassing his death ii. 323
 * Harrison convicted ii. 324
 * Judgment against him ii. 324
 * Adrian Scroop, his trial ii. 324
 * The evidence against him the same as against Harrison ii. 325
 * Scroop's defence ii. 327
 * That he acted under the then supreme authority ii. 327
 * But forty-six members in the house, when the act for erecting the High Court of Justice passed ii. 328
 * Whoever obeys a court, where it exceeds its jurisdiction, is punishable ii. 328

* The chief baron directs the jury ii. 329
 * Scroop convicted ii. 330
 * John Carew, his trial ii. 330
 * The evidence against him the same as against the two former ii. 330
 * Carew's defence ii. 331
 * He justifies the fact, and insists that the cause was approved by Heaven ii. 331
 * Carew convicted ii. 333
 * Thomas Scot, his trial ii. 334
 * Proved, that he sat as judge in the High Court of Justice that he was there upon the day of sentence; and that he signed the late king's death-warrant ii. 334
 * Proved, that he gloried in the fact, and desired it might be inscribed on his tomb ii. 335
 * Scot's defence ii. 336
 * For treason and felony there is no privilege of parliament ii. 336
 * He endeavours to prove, that the rump-parliament were a rightful and lawful authority ii. 337
 * The bishops excluded by act of parliament ii. 337
 * Scot convicted ii. 338
 * Gregory Clement retracts his plea, and pleads guilty ii. 338
 * John Jones, his trial ii. 339
 * Evidence against him the same as against Harrison ii. 339
 * Jones convicted ii. 340
 * Scroop, Carew, Scot, Jones, and Clement called to their sentence ii. 340
 * The chief baron's speech to them ii. 340
 * He shews them the thing was never the less sinful for their pretending conscience, and that the man who killed a father and mother made the same pretence ii. 340
 * Sentence pronounced on the last five ii. 340
 * John Cook, his trial ii. 341
 * Proved, that he exhibited the charge against the king to the High Court of Justice ii. 342
 * The king refusing to plead, the prisoner moved the court that the charge might be taken pro confesso ii. 343
 * That he demanded judgment against the king ii. 344
 * That he examined witnesses against the king ii. 345
 * Cook's defence ii. 346
 * He pleads that he was assigned to be counsel against the king ii. 346
 * That he acted only for his fee, and not with a malicious intention ii. 347
 * That he was not instrumental in taking away the king's life, having no power in the court, and acting only as counsel ii. 348
 * Claims the act of oblivion ii. 348
 * Insists upon the king's declaration from Breda ii. 348
 * He objects, that his writing treasonable words, which others dictated, was not treason ii. 348
 * Mr. solicitor's reply to the prisoner's defence ii. 349
 * Words tending to the personal hurt of the king, treasonable ii. 350
 * A pardon cannot be by implication, but must have express words ii. 350
 * Sir Edward Turner's reply ii. 351
 * Mr. Windham's reply ii. 352
 * The chief baron's directions to the jury ii. 352
 * Tells them, the exhibiting the charge against his majesty was high-treason ii. 352
 * The chief baron shews, he was not within the equity of 11 Hen. IV. which indemnifies those who assist a king de facto ii. 356
 * Cook is convicted ii. 357
 * Hugh Peters brought upon his trial ii. 357
 * The evidence against him ii. 357
 * That he confessed he advised Cromwell to put the king to death ii. 358
 * That he commanded the soldiers to cry out, Justice! Justice! against the king ii. 361
 * That he was active at the king's execution ii. 361
 * That he preached on that text, "Bind their kings with chains, and their nobles with fetters of iron" ii. 362
 * Hugh Peters's defence ii. 364
 * The lord chief baron's directions to the jury ii. 365
 * He tells the prisoner, that the encouraging, aiding, or abetting those who sat upon the king, and brought him to his death, was as much treason as if he himself had sat upon him and sentenced him; and that his seditious speeches in the pulpit, or out of it, were a sufficient overt-act of his treasonable imagination ii. 365
 * Mr. solicitor observes, that this was the man who had seduced the rest, who said, they acted in the fear of the Lord; and that his execution might be a means to bring some of them to their senses; that his death would preach much better than his life had done, and might in some measure vindicate the pulpit from that dishonour he had brought upon it ii. 367
 * Hugh Peters convicted ii. 368
 * Cook and Peters called to their sentence together ii. 368
 * Cook objects to the indictment, that it does not aver that he is the same John Cook, who is excepted in the act of indemnity ii. 368
 * The court tells him, he has admitted it, by pleading to it ii. 368
 * The chief baron's speech before sentence ii. 368
 * He tells Mr. Cook, that those words in the oath of supremacy, which he had taken, "That the king is the only supreme governor in these realms," excludes any co-ordinate power ii. 368
 * Judgment pronounced on Cook and Peters ii. 369
 * William Hulet, alias Howlet, arraigned ii. 369
 * Daniel Astell brought upon his trial ii. 369
 * The king's counsel open the indictment and evidence ii. 369
 * The witnesses produced against Astell ii. 369
 * Evidence of Astell's commanding the guards at the king's trial, and beating the soldiers who did not cry out, Justice! Justice! &c. ii. 370
 * * Astell's

I N D E X:

* Astell's defence ii. 373
 * He insisted, that the authority by which he acted, was acknowledged, both at home and abroad, to be the supreme authority of the nation; and what he had done was as a soldier, by the command of his general, whose command if he had refused, he must have died: that he was no more guilty than general Monk, who acted by the same authority; and though it was but an authority in fact, and not of right, he ought not to be questioned ii. 374
 * He repeats and considers distinctly the evidence against him ii. 377
 * The chief baron directs the jury, and tells the prisoner, that no authority can bear him out in being concerned in the king's death ii. 381
 * Astell is convicted ii. 382
 * Francis Hacker brought upon his trial ii. 382
 * Mr. serjeant Keyling opens the evidence against him ii. 382
 * Hacker confesses he was upon the guard, and kept the king for his execution; and being shewn the warrant, he acknowledged that to be the warrant he had for it ii. 382
 * Two of the commissioners come down from the bench to give evidence; but did not go up to the bench again during the trial ii. 384
 * Evidence that Hacker acknowledged he did, by virtue of that warrant, sign another warrant for executing the king; but he did not remember to what person ii. 384
 * His defence, that he was a soldier, and what he did was by command ii. 385
 * The chief baron directs the jury, and tells them, that this being the person who had the care of the execution, and signed the warrant to the executioner, it was not to be doubted but he was guilty of imagining the king's death ii. 385
 * Hacker is convicted ii. 385
 * William Hulet brought upon his trial ii. 386
 * The king's counsel open it, that Hulet was the man who cut off the king's head ii. 386
 * Evidence of Hulet's confessing he did the execution, and other circumstantial evidence of his being the man ii. 386
 * Hearsay evidence allowed against him ii. 387
 * Hulet's defence ii. 388
 * He produces several witnesses to prove, that the common hangman owned he did it ii. 388
 * The chief baron directs the jury ii. 389
 * Hulet is convicted ii. 390
 * Edmond Harvey brought upon his trial ii. 390
 * He acknowledges his sitting in the High Court of Justice; but says, he did not sign the warrant ii. 391
 * Calls witnesses to extenuate his crime ii. 391
 * Isaac Pennington brought upon his trial ii. 391
 * He acknowledges his sitting in the High Court of Justice, but denies he had any malice to his majesty ii. 391
 * Henry Marten brought upon his trial ii. 392
 * Evidence that he was very active in the counsels against the king, and very merry at signing the warrant for the king's execution ii. 392
 * He confesses his sitting in judgment on the king, and seems to justify it ii. 393
 * Gilbert Millington brought upon his trial ii. 393
 * He acknowledges himself guilty ii. 394
 * Robert Titchburn brought upon his trial ii. 394
 * He acknowledges his offence ii. 394
 * Owen Roe brought upon his trial ii. 394
 * He acknowledges his sitting in judgment on his majesty, and signing the warrant for his execution ii. 394
 * Robert Lilburn brought upon his trial ii. 394
 * He acknowledges the charge also ii. 394
 * Henry Smith being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his sitting in judgment on his majesty ii. 395
 * The lord chief baron's charge to the jury ii. 395
 * Harvey, Pennington, Marten, Millington, Titchburn, Roe, Lilburn, and Smith convicted ii. 396
 * John Downes brought upon his trial. He confesses his sitting in judgment, and signing the warrant for execution; but in his excuse says, he caused the court to adjourn, and did his utmost to save the king; but was induced by threats to comply with the rest ii. 396
 * Vincent Potter being brought upon his trial, confesses his sitting in the High Court of Justice ii. 398
 * Augustine Garland brought upon his trial, confesses his sitting and signing the warrant for the execution ii. 398
 * Evidence of Garland sitting in the king's face ii. 398
 * He confesses he was chairman in the house, when the act for trying the king passed ii. 399
 * Simon Mayne brought upon his trial ii. 399
 * He acknowledges his sitting upon the king, and signing the warrant for his execution ii. 399
 * James Temple being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his hand to the warrants ii. 399
 * Peter Temple being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his hand to both warrants ii. 399
 * Thomas Waite being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his hand to the warrants ii. 399
 * William Heveningham being brought upon his trial, acknowledges his sitting in judgment on the king ii. 400
 * Downes, Potter, Garland, Mayne, James Temple and Peter Temple, Waite, and Heveningham, convicted ii. 401
 * Sir Hardress Waller, Isaac Pennington, Henry Marten, Gilbert Millington, Robert Titchburn, Owen Roe, Robert Lilburn, Thomas Waite, Edmund Hoyle, John Downes, Vincent Potter, Augustine Garland, George Fleetwood, James Temple, Simon Mayne, Peter Temple, Francis Hacker, Daniel Astell, and William Hulet called to their sentence ii. 402
 * The chief baron's speech before judgment ii. 403

* He acquaints the prisoners, that as to all but three of them, execution is to be suspended till another act of parliament shall direct how they shall be dealt with ii. 403
 * Judgment pronounced against these 19 as traitors ii. 405
 * Judgment pronounced also on William Heveningham ii. 405
 * The behaviour, dying speech, and execution of Harrison ii. 405
 * Of Carew ii. 408
 * Of Cook ii. 409
 * Of Scot ii. 412
 * Of Peters ii. 413
 * Of Clement ii. 413
 * Of Jones ii. 413
 * Of Astell and Hacker ii. 414
 * Of Scripps ii. 416
 * The regicides were the particides who took off the head of both kingdoms in a day ix. *691
 * Several of the regicides justify the doctrine of resistance. See their Trials.
 * They assert the principles of resistance at their executions ii. 536, 540.
 * See RESISTANCE.

REGISTER.

The expedient of a voluntary register for seamen attempted in king William the third's time, had no effect xi. 350. See PRESSING.

RELIGION.

Proceedings against various persons in reign of Hen. VIII. for denying the supremacy, and other capital crimes relating to religion xi. 22

REMARKS.

* ATKINS Sir ROBERT.
 * ATWOOD WILLIAM.
 * HAWLES Sir JOHN.
 * SHOWER Sir BARTHOLOMEW.
 * ZENGER PETER.

REPLY.

Prisoner may not reply after evidence summed up iii. 1048. See vi. 784.
 When counsel may or may not reply See vii. 126. ix. 132. xi. 266, 271, 288
 To call witnesses after the reply is irregular ix. 743

REPORTS.

After Edward the third's time, the reasons of judgments were constantly pronounced by the court, that they might be published in books of cases and reports
 The reports are nothing but a relation of what is said by counsel and judges in giving judgment, and contain the reasons thereof iv. 168. n.
 Lord Coke challenges that which is due to every reporter of right, that is, to reduce the sum and effect of all to such a method, as, upon consideration had of all the arguments, he himself thinks fittest and clearest for the right understanding of the true reasons and causes of the judgment and resolution of the case in question vii. 635
 The second edition of 8 and 9 "Modern Reports" is much improved xi. 324
 So is the report of "Cases in the time of lord Hardwicke" xi. 213. See COKE Sir EDWARD.
FORD JOHN.
SOMERS Lord.
STRANGE Sir JOHN.

REPUTATION.

Reputation signifies nothing against positive evidence v. 464, 465. See CHARACTER.

RESISTANCE.

The act for constituting the High Court of Justice, wherein the doctrine of resistance, and the lawfulness of calling kings to account, and judging and condemning them by their subjects, are avowed and maintained 1009
 The charge against king Charles I. wherein they suggest that he is but the people's trustee, or rather servant, and charge him that he had traitorously levied war against his masters the people i. 1018
 And in pursuance of these principles, as a tyrant, traitor, and murderer, they adjudge him to death i. 1040
 Impeachment for asserting the unlawfulness of resistance on any pretence whatsoever, and suggesting that the resistance (or necessary means) whereby the Revolution was effected, was odious and unjustifiable, &c. v. 642
 Said, that all government was founded in resistance or compact v. 680
 The doctrine of the utter illegality of resistance, on any pretence whatsoever, said to be the doctrine of the church of England, and agreeable both to the common and statute law of the kingdom v. 719
 That the Spencers' treason (viz. that the king might be deposed for maladministration) had been condemned by two acts of parliament, and was damned by my lord Coke in Calvin's case v. 714, 715
 The archbishop and other bishops who attended the duke of Monmouth at his execution, insisted that he must acknowledge the doctrine of non-resistance to be true, if he would be thought of the church of England; and that archbishop Tillotson pressed the same point on my lord Russel; and that bishop Sanderson says, the taking up arms offensive or defensive against a lawful sovereign, being a thing in its nature simply and de toto genere unlawful, may not be done by any man, at any time, in any cases, upon any colour or pretence whatsoever v. 724
 Passages out of the Homilies confirming the doctrine of non-resistance v. 730
 Several acts of parliament declaring the unlawfulness of resistance v. 740

REVOLUTION.

CHARLES the KING.
COOK JOHN.
HAMILTON Duke of.
HEWET Doctor.

MORDANT JOHN.
PENRUDDOCK Colonel.
REGICIDES.
SACHEVEREL Doctor HENRY.
SIDNEY ALGERNON.

RESOLUTIONS of the COMMONS.

Their resolutions in report of their committee appointed to inquire into the state of the gaols, as far as relates to the cruel usage of the prisoners, and which occasioned the following trials, viz. of William Allen, Thomas Bambridge, and John Huggins ix. 107

RESOLUTIONS of the JUDGES.

That a peer cannot waive his trial by peers i. 388
 That on a trial by peers, a peer cannot challenge the peers that are returned on his jury i. 388
 That a peer cannot have counsel, but upon points of law i. 388
 That examinations taken without oath cannot be used, unless of the party to be tried i. 388
 That wife may be a witness against her husband in rape i. 388
 That there must be penetration in rape i. 388
 That bail is not to be granted ex gratia in sodomy i. 388
 That lords may eat and drink before agreed, but not separate or adjourn till after verdict i. 388
 That verdict cannot be given by less number of lords than twelve; and that if twelve were for the king, and thirteen for the prisoner, he shall be acquitted i. 388
 That lord steward, after verdict given, may take time to advise for any point of law i. 388
 That his office continued till judgment, and that it was but a commission pro hac vice notwithstanding i. 388, 389
 That the examination of witnesses taken by the coroner, they being since dead, or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of the coroner, that it is the same without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421
 That the examination of a witness taken by the coroner, the witness being absent by means or procurement of prisoner, upon proof that witness was so detained, the same may be read; but oath that all endeavours were used to find out such witness, and could not, is not sufficient to authorize the reading such examination vii. 421
 That no words are in law such a provocation as to diminish the offence of killing a man, from murder to manslaughter v. 296. vii. 421
 That if upon ill words both parties suddenly fight, and one kills the other, this is but manslaughter vii. 421
 That if upon words two men grow to anger, and afterwards suppress that anger, and then fall into other discourses, or have other diversions for such a space of time as in reasonable intentment their heat might be cooled, and some time after they draw upon one another and fight, and one is killed, this is murder vii. 422. See vii. 425. MURDER.
 See I. chap. 8. under STATUTES. SACHEVEREL HENRY, D. D. WORDS.
 That a sentence in the spiritual court against a marriage in a suit of jactitation of marriage, is not conclusive evidence, so as to stop the counsel for the crown from proving the marriage in an indictment for polygamy xi. 262
 Admitting such sentence to be conclusive upon such indictment, the counsel for the crown may avoid the effect of such sentence by proving the same to have been obtained by fraud or collusion xi. 262
 That a peeress convicted of a clergyable felony, praying the benefit of stat. 1 Edw. VI. chap. 12, is not only excused from capital punishment, but ought to be immediately discharged, without being burnt in the hand, or liable to any imprisonment xi. 264
 That all resolutions of judges should always be given in public in the court of the lord high steward of England vii. 421
 Resolutions of the judges and king's counsel upon consultation preparatory to the trials of the regicides ii. 302
 Resolution of the judges on Dr. Sacheverel's trial censured vi. 330
 The resolutions of the judges on the statute of forcible marriages v. 464
 See APPEALS.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL.
BAIL.
CONVOCAATION.
EVIDENCE.
IMPRISONMENT.
INFORMATIONS.

RETALIATION.

The best pattern for imitation Em. Pref. x. See Lex Justior, &c. and Lex Talionis, under MAXIMS.

RETURN.

Return must be of an officer's own act, or of another, not what he is certified of by another vii. 119. * See WRITS.

REVERSAL.

Judgment against Pilkington and others for a riot, in continuing poll for election of sheriffs, after common hall adjourned by lord mayor, and for assaulting his lordship, &c. reversed in parliament after the Revolution iii. 661
 Attainder of treason reversed, and reversal affirmed in parliament iii. 752
 See CORNISH HENRY.

LISLE Lady ALICE.
RUSSEL Lord.
SIDNEY ALGERNON.

REVOLUTION.

Sir John Hawles remarks, that undue and irregular prosecutions in the preceding reigns, were one of the great and immediate causes of the Revolution iv. 165, 166. vi. 426
 The Revolution only restored the constitution to its first principles xi. 321
 The Revolution was a most auspicious period, for then the principles of liberty were well understood and most gloriously asserted xi. 352.

* See i. 116, 645, 671.

The resistance at the Revolution was said to be a case of necessity; and all such cases are to be excepted in every general rule v. 673, 693, &c.
 See RESISTANCE. SACHEVEREL Doctor HENRY.

REWARD.

Witness's competency objected to, because intitled to a reward on prisoner's conviction iv. 684

REYNOLDS, JAMES, Serjeant at Law,

His argument in the Prince's case, being solicitor-general xi. 296

REYNOLDS, Judge,

Sums up evidence on trial of Hales and Kinnerley for forgery ix. 100

* REYNOLDS, JOHN v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

* RICCARDS, ARTHUR iii. 949. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

RICH, RICHARD, Solicitor General,

Comes to Sir Thomas More, lord chancellor, charged with treason in denying the king's supremacy i. 59
 He swears several things against Sir Thomas, that passed at his examination, which Sir Thomas denies i. 60

RICHARD the SECOND.

Lord chancellor Ellesmere says, that power and might of some potent persons oppressed justice and faithful judges, in Richard the second's time, for expounding the laws soundly and truly xi. 99, 101
 Bills of attainder were frequent in Richard the second's time v. 53
 During the non-age of Rich. II. the pope began once again to encroach on the crown xi. 74

* RICHARDS, SAMUEL iii. 678. See SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* RICHARDSON, JOHN ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

RICHARDSON, Sir THOMAS, Lord Chief Justice of the court of King's Bench,

His speech for a mild sentence on Sherfield, convicted by information, in Star-Chamber, for breaking a painted glass-window in a church i. 410

His speech on censuring and passing sentence on Prynne, on his conviction in the Star-chamber, for writing Histrionastix i. 425. See i. 387, 389

RIGBY, Mr.

His speech in the house of commons, in answer to lord keeper Finch's justification of himself, 1640 vii. 312

RIGHT OF COMMON.

If a man who has right of common lays it for sheep, and proves he has such right for them, cows and horses too, he shall prevail x. 170. Ap.

* RING, WILLIAM iv. 131, 134. See CORNISH, & al.

 RIOTS AND ROUTS.

* Lawful for private persons to arm themselves to oppose riots, rebellions, or common enemies ii. 593

* A riot is, when three or more are together to do an unlawful act, and enter upon their design ii. 613

* Where a number of persons lawfully convened, continue together to do an unlawful act (after the assembly is dissolved by the proper officer), it is a rout and unlawful assembly, though there be no disorder committed iii. 660

Whether a number of persons insisting upon, and asserting their right, where they have a probable cause, can be said to be guilty of a riot in so doing iii. 659

Citizens who were at Guildhall, innocently contesting their right of election, were punished as rioters iii. 661. iv. 172

Record of proceedings for a riot vi. 40. Ap. See iii. 629.

HATHAWAY RICHARD.

INFORMATIONS.

PENN WILLIAM.

PILKINGTON THOMAS, & al.

SACHEVEREL WILLIAM.

* ROBERTSON, ANDREW v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

ROBBERTY.

The common law does not require the putting in fear to constitute the crime of robbery x. 434, 445. See BELCHER'S CASE x. 438

Whether in robbery the putting the person actually in fear be a necessary ingredient x. 444, 445

Robbery on the highway, without putting in fear, held to be a capital offence x. 438

ROBES.

Resolved by all the judges of England, that they were to attend the trial of a peer in the court of the lord high steward in their scarlet robes vii. 421. See COLLARS of S. S.

ROBINS, Mr.

His speech in defence of earl Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), impeached by the commons before the lords of high crimes and misdemeanours, in selling the places of the masters in chancery vi. 658, 688

His observations on the whole trial vi. 697

ROBINSON, the Prothonotary,

Gives evidence on the trial of Green and others, for murder ii. 765

ROCHESTER, Bishop of. See ATTEBURY Dr. FRANCIS.

FISHER JOHN. SPRATT Doctor THOMAS.

ROCHFORD, Lord Viscount. See BOLEYN ANNE.

ROCHFORD, Lady, Wife of the Viscount,

Was attainted and executed for serving queen Katharine Howard in her beastly practices xi. 11

* ROE, OWEN ii. 394. See REGICIDES.

* ROE, RICHARD. See RENDALL.

* ROGERS, WILLIAM. See COWPER SPENCER.

ROLFE, Serjeant at Law,

Pleaded, that he was a serjeant at common law, and not bound to be a knight, but he was forced to it i. 547

ROMAN

ROMAN HISTORY.

Lucius Junius Brutus sat as judge, and condemned his own sons as traitors to their country, and caused their heads to be struck off in his presence

ix. 296
His memorable saying upon that great occasion ix. 296
Instance, from the Roman History, of a father being considered as accessory to murders committed by his son; though he never spoke to, or saw him x. 435

The noble answer Pompeius Sextus made on a proposition made him to break his faith for the acquisition of an empire ii. 202

Tully bore a great figure in the Roman empire, was very knowing, and well read in the Greek and Roman Histories iv. 172. See TULLY.

When a man names the Poet, the Latinists understand Virgil vi. 181

ROMISH CHURCH. See POPE.

* ROOKWOOD, AMBROSE,

* His arraignment, 14 April, 1696, 8 Will. III. iv. 661

* He is indicted for high-treason in conspiring the death of the king, and to that end consulting and agreeing with other traitors to attack the guards, and assassinate his majesty iv. 661

* None permitted to be in private with a prisoner committed for high-treason, but his counsel iv. 662

* The indictment against the prisoner and three others jointly; but the court ordered them to be tried separately iv. 663

* The court having signed the precepts for summoning the petit juries, adjourned for a week iv. 663

* Rookwood's trial comes on iv. 663

* Sir Bartholomew Shower and Mr. Phipps, his counsel iv. 664

* So as the prisoner have a copy of the pannel arrayed, the intent of the act is answered, though it be not at that time returned iv. 667

* No habeas corpus issues on trial for capital offences; but the jury come in upon the venire iv. 667

* The prisoner's counsel object, they have not a true copy of the indictment, the style of court, &c. being omitted; but were answered they had admitted it a true copy, by pleading to it iv. 668

* No exceptions can be taken to the indictment after the jury are sworn, though the words of 7 Will. III. are, that it may be done before evidence given iv. 677

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iv. 678

* Where the king pardons under the great seal, it has the full effect of a general pardon by act of parliament iv. 682

* Porter's evidence of Rookwood's concern in the assassination iv. 682. See PORTER Captain GEORGE.

* The prisoner's counsel oppose the swearing of Harris, because he was intitled to 1000*l.* reward on the prisoner's conviction; but this appeared to be a mistake iv. 684

* Harris's evidence that the prisoner agreed to be one of the assassins iv. 686, 687

* Sir Bartholomew Shower's defence for the prisoner iv. 689

* Consulting and agreeing, an overt-act of compassing the king's death iv. 689

* No evidence can be given of an overt-act not laid in the indictment iv. 691

* No evidence ought to be produced without opening iv. 692

* Lord chief justice Holt sums up the evidence iv. 694

* Any thing may be given in evidence that tends to prove an overt-act laid in the indictment, though the thing itself that is testified be an overt-act not laid in the indictment iv. 697. See i. 224. WINTER ROBERT.

* Rookwood is convicted iv. 698. See vi. 326.

* ROSEWELL, THOMAS,

* His trial for high-treason at the King's-Bench bar, 18 November 1684, 26 Car. II. iii. 997

* The indictment is removed out of the county of Surry into the King's-Bench iii. 997

* The words in the indictment which are laid to be treasonable iii. 997

* The indictment read in Latin, at the prisoner's request iii. 998

* A rule made to bring him up again on the day appointed for his trial iii. 999

* A prisoner brought by habeas corpus to the King's-Bench, may be remanded to the county gaol where he was indicted, or to any prison in the county where the King's-Bench sits iii. 1000

* The trial begins iii. 1000

* Two women, the king's witnesses, depose that the words laid were spoke by the prisoner at a conventicle iii. 1000, 1008

* Other words permitted to be proved than were laid in the indictment iii. 1010

* Mr. Rosewell has the indictment read to him in Latin a third time at his request, and objects to several phrases in it iii. 1012

* The prisoner insists, he never spoke the words in the manner the witnesses testified iii. 1012

* Gives an account of the substance of his sermon iii. 1014

* He calls his own witnesses to attest what he did say iii. 1017

* The chief justice uses the prisoner's witnesses with contempt iii. 1018

* The chief justice observes the difficulty of getting the truth out of the prisoner's witnesses iii. 1023

* The prisoner calls witnesses to his character iii. 1024

* Evidence that the prisoner used to keep the 30th of January as a fast iii. 1028

* And preached up kingly government as the best iii. 1029

* Several persons examined to impeach the credit of the witnesses against the prisoner iii. 1030, &c.

* Sir John Talbot's evidence to this purpose iii. 1031

* The evidence closed iii. 1037

* Rosewell proceeds in his defence iii. 1037

* The chief justice Jefferies directs the jury iii. 1039

* The prisoner may not reply, after the evidence is summed up iii. 1040

* The prisoner is convicted iii. 1049

VOL. XI.

* Desires the jurors may give their verdict severally; but it is denied iii. 1049

* The king's counsel move for judgment on the conviction iii. 1049

* The prisoner moves in arrest of judgment, and that counsel may be assigned him as to matter of law iii. 1050

* He objects to the indictment, that the words are not positively averred to be spoken iii. 1050

* Innuendo's insufficient without a positive averment iii. 1051

* His counsel move for a copy of the indictment; but it is denied iii. 1052

* Mr. Wallop's argument for the prisoner iii. 1053

* He quotes a report of the lord Coke iii. 1054

* An innuendo cannot give an original certainty, where a certainty is not fixed before iii. 1055

* Mr. Pollexfen's argument iii. 1055

* Words may be an overt-act of treason iii. 1055

* An innuendo without a preceding colloquium, or averment; cannot maintain an action, or an indictment iii. 1059

* Mr. attorney's reply iii. 1059

* That where words are plain and express, there needs no averment iii. 1060

* Mr. solicitor-general Finch's reply iii. 1062

* The chief justice inclines to allow the exceptions iii. 1064

* The chief justice shews the repugnancy of some expressions iii. 1065

* The solicitor endeavours to make it good grammar iii. 1065

* No statutes of Jeofails extend to criminal cases iii. 1067

* No judgment given iii. 1067

* The prisoner pardoned iii. 1067

The record vi. 48. Ap.

His plea of pardon vi. 48. Ap.

His pardon vi. 49. Ap.

ROTHERAM, JOHN,

Counsel for Richard Baxter, brow-beat and ill treated by chief justice Jefferies x. 39. Ap.

Of counsel for colonel Sidney, and examined before the lords touching the advisers and prosecutors of the murder of that gentleman viii. 482

* ROUSE, JOHN,

* His trial for high-treason the 13th of July, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 731

* He is indicted with William Blague, for conspiring the king's death, (and to that end meeting and consulting with divers other traitors how to surprise the Tower) and providing arms, &c. iii. 731

* No time can be insisted on to prepare for trial in capital cases iii. 732

* Mr. serjeant Jefferies opens the evidence iii. 732

* Leigh's evidence concerning the setting up the duke of Monmouth, and seizing the Tower iii. 733

* The plotters suggest that the king was sworn in France and Spain to bring in popery, and therefore it was no sin to cut him off iii. 734

* That the king had forfeited his right to the crown iii. 735

* Rouse's defence, wherein he acknowledges there was such a plot; but says he was trepanned into it iii. 736

* Rouse is convicted iii. 738

* Sentence of death passed upon him iii. 745

* His behaviour at execution iii. 749

ROUTS. See RIOTS.

ROYAL FAMILY.

Proceedings on the case concerning the king's prerogative in respect to the education and marriage of the royal family, Hilary term, 4 Geo. I. A. D. 1717 xi. 295

The judges meet xi. 295

The king's letter to the chancellor read xi. 295

The question stated xi. 295

The prince of Wales's solicitor-general desires that counsel may be heard in behalf of his royal highness xi. 295

Judges of opinion that they could not, without his majesty's leave xi. 295

The question considered by Mr. J. Blencowe xi. 295, 300

By Mr. J. Dormer for the king xi. 295, 296

By the chief justice King, afterwards lord chancellor xi. 295, 296

By the lord Parker, chief justice xi. 295, 296

Their second meeting xi. 296

Mr. serjeant Ryndall, the prince's counsel, afterwards lord chief baron, his argument for his royal highness xi. 296

The question considered by Mr. baron Price xi. 296, 299, 300

By Mr. justice Eyre xi. 296, 300

By Mr. baron Montague xi. 296

Mr. baron Fortescue Aland, his argument on delivering his opinion xi. 296

Mr. baron Montague's argument thereon xi. 298

Mr. justice Pratt, afterwards lord chief justice of England, his argument on that occasion xi. 299

Mr. justice Eyre, the prince of Wales's chancellor, his argument on his delivery thereof xi. 299

Mr. justice Dormer, his argument xi. 299

Mr. justice Trevelyan xi. 299

Mr. justice Blencowe's xi. 300

Mr. justice Powis's xi. 300

Lord chief baron Bury's xi. 300

The lord chief justice King's, afterwards lord chancellor xi. 300

The lord Parker's, chief justice, and afterwards lord chancellor xi. 300

All the above opinions were drawn up and signed by the judges, and delivered to the chancellor, for the king xi. 300

Which his majesty communicated to his privy-council xi. 300

The kings of this realm have always been entrusted with the care and approbation of the marriages of the royal family. As declared by the legislature xi. 299

6 E

RUMLEY,

- RUMLEY, WILLIAM ii. 917. See WAKEMAN, & al.
RUSHWORTH, JOHN,
 His account of the proceedings between lord Rea and David Ramsey in the court of Chivalry, on an appeal of treason xi. 126
- RUSSEL, Lord WILLIAM,
 * His trial, 13 July, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 706. See iv. 187. vi. 414
 * The indictment for conspiring the king's death, and to that end consulting and agreeing to raise a rebellion, and to seize and destroy the king's guards iii. 706
 * He is permitted to advise with counsel iii. 706
 * And has a copy of the pannel, before the trial iii. 707
 * He is permitted to have pen and ink, and the use of his papers iii. 708
 * Insists on the trial being put off till the afternoon iii. 708
 * Is allowed two clerks to take minutes for him iii. 708
 * But desires he may have his lady's assistance iii. 708
 * Challenges a jurymen for want of 40s. per ann. freehold in the city, and is allowed counsel to argue it iii. 708
 * Mr. Pollexfen and Mr. Holt's arguments iii. 709
 * Mr. Ward's argument iii. 710
 * Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, and Mr. Finch solicitor-general, their reply iii. 710
 * Mr. Serjeant Jefferies and Mr. North on the same side iii. 711
 * The challenge is over-ruled iii. 711
 * The prisoner having challenged 31 peremptorily, a jury is sworn iii. 712
 * The attorney-general's speech before evidence iii. 712
 * Lord Essex's death in the Tower that day mentioned at the trial iii. 713
 * Ramsay's evidence concerning my lord Russel's being at the meeting at Mr. Sheppard's iii. 713
 * Trenbald disappoints them iii. 713
 * Sheppard's evidence concerning the meeting at his house iii. 715
 * Lord Howard's evidence concerning the insurrection iii. 716
 * A design to alter the government to a commonwealth iii. 717
 * A design upon the king's life iii. 718
 * Lord Howard's evidence concerning a cabal of six that met at Mr. Hampden's, of which my lord Russel was one iii. 719
 * The Scotch invited into the conspiracy iii. 719
 * Lord Russel makes his defence iii. 721
 * Alleges that a conspiracy to levy war is not high-treason, by the 25 Edw. III. iii. 721
 * What may be interpreted a design upon the king's life iii. 722
 * Two witnesses to any one species of treason sufficient, though they do not speak to the same overt-act iii. 729
 * If counsel are allowed to argue a point of law, the fact must be admitted iii. 722
 * A conspiracy to levy war against the king directly, is an overt-act of a design upon the king's life iii. 722. iv. 620, 622
 * But a conspiracy to levy war, which by construction only is against the king, is not such an overt-act as to testify an imagination of compassing the king's death iii. 722
 * Lord Russel calls many witnesses, to prove that lord Howard often denied that he knew of the plot iii. 723. &c.
 * Mr. Solicitor Finch's reply to my lord Russel's defence iii. 726
 * Mr. Serjeant Jefferies's reply to my lord Russel's defence iii. 728
 * The chief justice's directions to the jury iii. 730
 * My lord Russel is convicted iii. 731
 * He makes the same objections before judgment as he made at his trial iii. 744
 * Which are over-ruled, and sentence pronounced iii. 745
 * His dying speech iii. 752. See viii. 464, 476
 * Lord Russel was illegally prosecuted iv. 172, 176, 178
 * Sir John Hawles's remarks on his lordship's trial iv. 186, 187, 191, 201, 202, 205. See iii. 758
 * That my lord of Essex killed himself, was a fact insinuated by the king's counsel as evidence against lord Russel on his trial, though not proved iv. 177
 * His trial was signed by the lord mayor for publication iv. 189
 * Cause of putting off lord Russel's trial was, that the insinuation respecting lord Essex's killing himself might operate on the jury iv. 190
 * The usage of the king's counsel and the court towards him unjust and unfair iv. 195
 * Nothing in print was so eagerly accepted or sought for as what was called "Lord Russel's dying speech" iv. 196
 * His lordship's character iii. 756, 760
 * His indictment insufficient iii. 760
 * See "Antidote against Poison" iii. 463
 * See "Defence of Lord Russel's Innocence" iii. 755, 757
 * See "The Case of William Lord Russel" iii. 768
 * He was by undue and illegal returns of jurors, having been refused his lawful challenge to the said jurors, for want of freehold, and by partial and unjust constructions of law, wrongfully convicted, attainted, and executed for treason, in the opinion of the legislature, as appears by the preamble to Stat. v. Will. and M. chap. 4. for annulling the attainder of lord Russel iii. 771
 * See "The Magistracy and Government of England vindicated" iii. 767
 * See Two Letters upon the Subject of his Lordship's Trial iii. 756
 * In lord Russel's trial no freehold was not allowed to be a good challenge iii. 769
 * Though lord Russel was guilty of the things he was accused of, yet he was not guilty of treason, in the opinion of Sir John Holt, solicitor-general to Will. III. iii. 769
 * A confab in lord Russel's case was held to be an overt-act of treason iii. 768
 * Date of the charge against lord Russel viii. 464. See viii. 464.
- RUSSEL, WILLIAM ii. 993. See ANDERSON, & al.
RUTHVEN, ALEXANDER and HENRY. See
GOWRIE Earl of
RYAN, JOHN. See GOLDING.
RYDER, Sir DUDLEY, Attorney-General,
 His speech on lord Loval's trial ix. *629
 His argument against the objection that an attainted person is not a competent witness in treason ix. *656
 His further argument thereon ix. *663
 His speech on the prosecution of Owen the bookseller, for publishing "Murray's Case" x. 204. Ap.
 His reply to his defence x. 208. Ap.
 Puts an artful question to the jury x. 208. Ap.
 Declined to argue the point of law, whether perjury, whereby innocent persons had their lives sworn away, was a capital offence x. 446
- S.
 * SACHEVERELL, HENRY, D.D.
 Account of what passed most remarkable in the house of commons, 1709, relating to him viii. 557
 His two sermons resolved scandalous and seditious libels viii. 557
 Committee appointed to draw up articles of impeachment against him viii. 558
 Affirms the lord mayor's desiring him to print his sermon, though his lordship denied it viii. 558
 An address to her majesty resolved on, for some dignity in the church for Mr. Benjamin Hoadley, for having justified the principles of her majesty and the nation viii. 558
 The doctor petitions to be bailed viii. 559
 Upon debate resolved in the negative viii. 559
 The report of the committee read paragraph by paragraph, and agreed to by the house viii. 560
 The doctor delivered into the custody of the gentleman usher of the black rod, and, upon his petition, is bailed by the lords viii. 561
 The doctor's answer read, and replied to by the commons v. 648. viii. 561
 Debates in the house of commons, concerning their right to be present at the trial viii. 562
 Resolved to address her majesty for a proclamation, to discover the fomenters of the tumults about the doctor's trial viii. 563
 Debates about leaving out the words, fomented by papists, non-jurors, and of adding the word republicans viii. 563
 Her majesty's answer, and the address of thanks viii. 563
 The managers receive the thanks of the house viii. 564
 Division in the house upon it viii. 564
 * His trial before the house of lords, upon an impeachment of the house of commons for high crimes and misdemeanours, began in Westminster-Hall on Monday the 27th of February, 1709-10, 9 Anna. v. 641
 * The order in which the lords proceed from their house to the court erected in Westminster-Hall v. 641
 * Lord chancellor's speech to the prisoner v. 641
 * The preamble to the articles exhibited against the doctor, justifying the Revolution v. 641
 * The four articles exhibited against the doctor v. 642
 * The doctor's answer to the first article v. 643
 * His answer to the second article v. 644
 * His answer to the third article v. 645
 * His answer to the fourth article v. 646
 * Mr. attorney-general (Sir James Montague) shews the necessity the commons were under of proceeding against the doctor by impeachment v. 648
 * Mr. Lechmere's speech, shewing the nature and tendency of the facts the doctor is charged with v. 651
 * Mr. Jedrell, clerk of the house of commons, sworn, and proves the doctor acknowledged both the sermons to be his in the house of commons; and the doctor's counsel admit it in court v. 655
 * The dedication sermon preached at Derby read in evidence against the doctor v. 655
 * The dedication of the sermon preached at St. Paul's read in evidence v. 656
 * The sermon itself preached at St. Paul's read v. 656
 * Second day of the trial v. 666
 * Sir Joseph Jekyll's argument in maintenance of the first article, concerning the resistance at the Revolution v. 666
 * Mr. Solicitor-general (Sir Robert Lyns) his speech, wherein he states the several passages in the doctor's sermon preached at St. Paul's, which the commons produced as a proof of the first article, and shews the insufficiency of the doctor's answer v. 669
 * Sir John Halland's argument, in maintenance of the first article v. 673
 * Mr. Walpole's argument, in maintenance of the first article v. 674
 * Sir John Hawles's argument, in maintenance of the first article v. 676
 * Major-general Simpson's argument, in maintenance of the first article, wherein he endeavours to shew, that the doctor preached this sermon with a wicked and malicious intention, to undermine and subvert the government, and the protestant religion, &c. as he is charged in the preamble to the articles v. 680
 * Sir Peter King's argument, in maintenance of the second article, concerning the toleration v. 683
 * Archbishop Grimm's character and conduct vindicated v. 689
 * The lord William Powlett's argument, in maintenance of the second article v. 690
 * Mr. Symonds's argument, in maintenance of the second article v. 691
 * Third
- EXAMINATION, &c.
HAMPDEN JOHN iii. 834.
RALEIGH Sir WALTER.

- * Third day of the trial v. 693
- * Mr. Thomson's argument, in maintenance of the third article, concerning the danger of the church v. 693
- * Mr. Compton's argument, in maintenance of the third article v. 696
- * Lord Canisby's argument, in maintenance of the third article v. 697
- * Mr. Dolben's argument, in maintenance of the third article v. 697
- * Mr. Serjeant Parker's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article; being a charge of sedition against the doctor, for maintaining, in his sermon, That there were men of characters and stations in church and state who were false brethren v. 698
- * Mr. Secretary Boyle's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article v. 706
- * Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article v. 706
- * Fourth day of the trial v. 707
- * Mr. Lechmere's argument, in maintenance of the fourth article v. 708
- * Fifth day of the trial v. 709
- * Sir Simon Harcourt's argument in the doctor's defence, as to the first article, concerning the resistance used at the Revolution v. 710
- * Mr. Dodd's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the first article v. 717
- * Mr. Phipps's argument in the doctor's defence, as to the first article v. 721
- * Mr. Dee's argument in behalf of the doctor, as to the first article v. 727
- * Dr. Henchman's speech in defence of dr. Sacheverell, as to the charge in the first article v. 728
- * The doctor's counsel being about to produce some passages in the Homilies, &c. in maintenance of the doctrine the doctor had delivered, the managers retire to consider if they should admit of this sort of evidence; and being returned, they did agree, that the passages the doctor's counsel had collected out of the Homilies and other books, should be read; and they were proved to be justly transcribed by Mr. Trapp v. 729
- * Sixth day of the trial v. 729
- * The doctor's counsel desire the passages they had collected might be read: the managers admit, that the passages out of the Homilies, and the book called, "The Erudition for any Christian Man," might be read; but as to others, desire they may produce the books and papers themselves; to which the doctor's counsel conform v. 730
- * Seventh day of the trial v. 752
- * Mr. Dodd's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the second article, concerning the toleration v. 752
- * Mr. Phipps's argument in behalf of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the second article v. 753
- * Mr. Dee's argument in the doctor's behalf, as to the second article v. 756
- * Dr. Henchman's argument, as to the charge in the second article v. 757
- * The act of toleration read v. 759
- * A letter from queen Elizabeth, the bishops, and another from archbishop Grindall to the council, proved and read v. 762, 763
- * Mr. Dodd's argument in behalf of the doctor, as to the charge contained in the third article, concerning the danger of the church v. 763
- * Mr. Phipps's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the charge in the third article v. 764
- * Mr. Dee's argument, as to the charge in the third article v. 767
- * He makes a doubt, whether it be a high crime and misdemeanour to dissent in opinion from a resolution of both houses of parliament v. 768
- * Mr. Thomson's reply to that objection v. 819
- * Dr. Henchman's argument, as to the charge in the third article v. 768
- * Some blasphemous and heretical books produced in evidence by the doctor's counsel v. 769
- * The managers oppose the reading such blasphemous passages; but the doctor's counsel insist on the reading them, as tending very much to the doctor's defence; and they are read accordingly v. 769, &c.
- * Eighth day of the trial v. 775
- * Mr. Dodd's argument in defence of the doctor, as to the charge of sedition contained in the fourth article, concerning false brethren of characters and stations in church and state v. 775
- * Mr. Phipps's argument, as to the charge in the fourth article v. 776
- * Mr. Dee's argument, as to the charge in the fourth article v. 779
- * Dr. Henchman's argument, as to the charge in the fourth article v. 781
- * Proclamations against prophaneness, &c. produced in evidence by the doctor's counsel v. 782
- * The doctor's counsel move, that he may have leave to speak for himself, after the managers have replied; which the managers oppose, and insist that if the doctor have any thing to say in his defence, he may offer it before they reply v. 784
- * Dr. Sacheverell's speech in his defence v. 784
- * Ninth day of the trial v. 790
- * Sir John Hyll's argument, by way of reply to the doctor's defence, as to the charge contained in the first article, concerning the resistance used at the Revolution v. 791
- * Mr. Solicitor-general's reply to the doctor's defence of the charge in the first article v. 798
- * Mr. Lechmere's animadversions on some expressions let fall by the doctor's counsel v. 802
- * Sir Peter King's argument, by way of reply to the defence made by the doctor's counsel to the charge contained in the second article concerning the toleration v. 807
- * Tenth day of the trial v. 812
- * Mr. Cooper's reply to the doctor's defence of the charge contained in the second article v. 812
- * He takes notice of the mob having demolished several meeting-houses during the trial, which he imputes to the doctrine contained in the doctor's sermons v. 812
- * Mr. Thomson's reply to the doctor's defence of the charge contained in the third article, concerning the danger of the church v. 815
- * Mr. Serjeant Parker's argument by way of reply to the doctor's defence, as to the charge of sedition contained in the fourth article, concerning men of characters and stations in church and state who were false brethren v. 819
- * The lord Nottingham desires this question may be put to the judges, viz. Whether in all prosecutions, by indictment or information, for crimes and misdemeanours, by writing or speaking, the particular words supposed to be criminal, must not be expressly specified in such indictment or information v. 828
- * The judges resolve, that all words and writings supposed to be criminal, ought to be specified in such indictment or information v. 828
- * This resolution censured vi. 330, 331
- * Resolved by the lords, that by the law and usage of parliament, in prosecutions by impeachments for high crimes and misdemeanours, by writing or speaking, the particular words supposed to be criminal, are not necessary to be expressly specified in such impeachments v. 828
- * A list of the lords who protested viii. 565
- * Precedents of parliamentary prosecutions, where the words have been constantly expressed in the articles viii. 566
- * Sixty-nine of the lords find dr. Sacheverell guilty of the high crimes and misdemeanours charged on him by the impeachment, and fifty-two vote him not guilty v. 829
- * The doctor offers some exceptions to the impeachment in arrest of judgment v. 830
- * Debates, whether the commons should demand judgment against the doctor viii. 565
- * They demand judgment against the doctor v. 830
- * The doctor's exceptions to the impeachment are over-ruled v. 831
- * Judgment pronounced against the doctor v. 831 viii. 565
- * The doctor's two sermons ordered to be burnt before the Exchange by the common hangman v. 831
- * The lords also order, that the judgment and decree of the university of Oxford passed in their convocation, July 21, 1683, which was given in evidence by dr. Sacheverell at his trial, should be burnt by the common hangman at the same time with the doctor's sermons v. 831
- * The lord Haverham his speech in the house of lords, on the first article of the impeachment of dr. Henry Sacheverell v. 831
- * The bishop of Salisbury (dr. Gilbert Burnet) his speech, on the same article v. 834
- * The bishop of Oxford (dr. William Talbot) his speech on the same article v. 840
- * The bishop of Lincoln (dr. William Wake) his speech to the house of lords, March the 17th, at the opening of the second article, &c. v. 844
- * The bishop of Norwich (dr. Charles Trimmel) his speech on the same occasion v. 850
- * Protest upon the question, Whether the commons have made good their first, second, third, and fourth articles against the doctor viii. 567
- * And whether the answer of the lords, in giving judgment, shall be guilty or not guilty only viii. 567
- * Protest, upon the lords finding him guilty viii. 568
- * Protest, upon his sentence viii. 568
- * SACHEVERELL, WILLIAM, Esq.
- * George Gregory, Charles Flitbush, John Greaves, William Greaves, Samuel Richards, Robert Green, Francis Salmon, Arthur Riccardi, Ralph Bennet, John Sherwin, William Wilfen, Samuel Smith, Thomas Pigge, Richard Smith, John Hay, William Smith, Joseph Turpin, Nathaniel Charnel, Joseph Astlin, their trial at the King's-Bench, for a riot committed at Nottingham, 1684, 36 Car. II. viii. 949
- * The information for being unlawfully present at the election of a mayor when they had no concern in the election, and for carrying away one of the maces viii. 950
- * Sir Thomas Jenner (recorder of London) his speech before evidence viii. 950
- * Mr. Norih's speech viii. 951
- * Mr. Jones's speech viii. 952
- * Evidence of a dispute relative to two charters, and that the defendants committed a riot in contending for the old one viii. 953
- * Mr. Polluxen's speech for the defendants viii. 964
- * The court refuse to hear any thing for or against either of the charters, the matter in question being only for a riot viii. 967
- * Witnesses examined for the defendants viii. 968
- * Lord chief justice Jefferies sums up the evidence viii. 976
- * Twenty are found guilty and fined, and one acquitted viii. 978
- * Their respective fines viii. 978
- * SAINTE ALBINS. See BACON Sir FRANCIS.
- * SAINTE JOHN, OLIVER.
- * His argument for John Hampden, esq. in the cause of ship-money ii. 515, 537
- * His speech at a conference i. 699
- * SAINTE JOHN, OLIVER. Solicitor-General,
- * Opens the evidence against Love, on his trial for treason ii. 92
- * The case of Oliver Saint John on an information in Star-chamber, for writing and publishing a letter to the mayor of Marlborough, against a benevolence collected under letters of privy-council xi. 110
- * Speech of Sir Francis Bacon, attorney-general, thereon, addressed to the court of Star-chamber xi. 110
- * SAINTE LEGER. Sir JOHN viii. 515. See GILBERT JEFFERY.

- SALISBURY, Bishop of. See BURNET GILBERT.
His History of the Reformation was so far approved of by the house of commons, that he received the thanks of parliament for it v. 86
Extract from it in censure of unjust attainders in the reign of king Henry VIII. v. 86
- SALISBURY, Countess of,
She was beheaded, though sentenced to be hanged iv. 129
* SALISBURY, Sir JOHN i. 15. See BRAMBRE.
* SALISBURY, THOMAS i. 121. See BABINGTON, & al.
* SALMON, FRANCIS iii. 949. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
SALMON, JAMES. See MAGDANIEL STEPHEN.
* SANGROFT, Doctor WILLIAM, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury,
His trial at the King's Bench, for publishing a libel, June 29, 1688, Trin. Term, 4 Jac. II. iv. 304
- SANDWICH.
Franchises thereof seized for notorious riots iii. 589
SANDYS, Sir THOMAS, and the EAST-INDIA COMPANY,
The great cause of monopolies, 25 Car. II. vii. 493
- SANQUHAR, Lord,
His trial at Westminster, for the murder of John Turner, 1612 vii. 86
The indictment, by the name of Robert Creighton, esq. vii. 86
His confession and speech vii. 87
Sir Francis Bacon's speech vii. 89
Mr. justice Yelverton's speech at passing sentence vii. 90
Lord Sanquhar hanged vii. 91
Lord Sanquhar's execution was the noblest piece of justice, in lord Bacon's opinion, that ever came forth in any king's time xi. 112
Report of the case from a Co. vii. 91
Lord Coke tells us, that he reported this case with all the circumstances, because this example hath not its parallel vii. 94
- SANTALEON Don,
Brother to the Portuguese ambassador, being convicted of murder by a jury of six aliens and six denizens, was executed viii. 368. n.
- SARUM, Countess of,
Attainted for treason, in the year 1539 xi. 25
She was beheaded xi. 25
In her the name and line of Plantagenet determined xi. 25
- SAVAGE, JOHN i. 128. See BABINGTON, & al.
SAUNDERS, EDMUND,
Of counsel for earl Dunby upon his motion for bail ii. 742
Reprimanded by the lord chief justice Pemberton ii. 743
He justifies himself ii. 743
Of counsel for Anna Price, charged with perjury ii. 1027
- SAUNDERS, Sir EDMUND, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
Who had been counsel for the king, in drawing and advising the pleadings in the quo warranto against the city of London, was made chief justice B. R. in the room of Pemberton, between Mich. and Hil. Terms, 34 Car. II. iii. 547. n.
His remarks on the proceedings in the quo warranto against the city of London iii. 574
His directions to the jury on the trial of captain Walcot, indicted for treason, in conspiring the death of the king, and raising a rebellion in Rye-house plot iii. 701
His summing up the evidence on the trial of sir Patience Ward, on information for perjury iii. 682
The judgment against Pilkington and others for a riot, on which trial sir Edmund Saunders presided, was reversed at the Revolution iii. 662
- SAWYER, Sir ROBERT, Attorney-General,
His speech before evidence on the trial of sir George Wakeman, baronet, and others, for treason, in conspiring the king's death ii. 920
Argues, that Fitzharris's plea to the jurisdiction of the court was defective both as to matter and form iii. 234
Answers the arguments of his counsel iii. 254
Opens the evidence against him for a treasonable libel iii. 267
His speech before evidence on the trial of Plunket, D. D. for treason, in conspiring the death of his majesty, and subversion of the established religion and government in Ireland iii. 295
Opens the evidence on the trial of Colledge, for treason iii. 351
He is severely characterised by mr. solicitor-general sir John Hawles, for his conduct on Colledge's prosecution iv. 173, 191. See iv. 166
Opens the evidence on the trial of Ford lord Grey and others, for seducing and carrying away, and adulterously soliciting a young lady of quality iii. 520, 521
His argument on the proceedings against the city of London on the quo warranto iii. 546
His sur-rejoinder and demurrer iii. 548
His reply iii. 575
Opens the evidence on the trial of Pilkington and Shute, sheriffs, Cornish alderman, Ford lord Grey of Werk, the chamberlain of London, and ten others, on information for a riot, in continuing the poll for the election of sheriffs, after common-hall adjourned by lord mayor, and for abusing his lordship iii. 635
His speech on trial by information of sir Patience Ward, for perjury iii. 668
His reply iii. 699
His reply on challenge for want of shield on the trial of lord Rye, for treason, in conspiring the king's death iii. 710
Sir Robert Sawyer disclaimed under his hand being author of a quo warranto against the city of London iii. 710
His speech before evidence against Henry, tried for high treason, in conspiring the king's death iii. 710
His argument for the East-India Company against sir Thomas Sandys iii. 710
- His speech before evidence on the trial of captain Walcot, for treason, for conspiring the death of the king, and for being concerned in the Rye-house plot iii. 685
His speech before evidence on the trial of Hampden, for a rebellious misdemeanour iii. 824
His speech before evidence on the trial of Braddon, for subornation of witnesses iii. 856
His reply to motion in arrest of judgment on conviction of Rosewell, for speaking treasonable words iii. 1059
Of counsel for sir William Pritchard against Papillon, for causing plaintiff to be arrested, being then lord mayor of London, without cause iii. 1073
His reply iii. 1085
His speech before evidence on the trial of Oates, D. D. for perjury iv. 5, 71
His reply iv. 42
His speech before evidence against alderman Cornish, for treason iv. 147
His speech before evidence on the trial of lord Delamere in the court of the lord steward, for treason iv. 216
Expelled the house of commons in 1689, for the part he took as attorney-general in the prosecution of sir Thomas Armstrong iii. 986
This attorney-general, of all men who ever came to the bar, hath laid down the most rules which depend totally upon the authority of his own saying iv. 191
- SCANDAL.
Earl of Suffolk charged with speaking scandal of mr. Selden, with the proceedings thereupon vii. 182. See LIBEL. WRAYNHAM.
* SCANDAL MAGNAT.
When the word 'falsely' is inserted in proceedings for scand. mag. defendant ought not to be found guilty, if assertion be true Em. Pref. viii.
Writ of enquiry on the statute de scand. magnat. iii. 987. See OATES TITUS. YORK JAMES Duke of.
- SCOT, THOMAS,
The regicide, gloried in the fact, and desired it might be inscribed on his tomb ii. 335. See ii. 334. REGICIDES.
SCOT, Sir WILLIAM,
Hunney was imprisoned, judged, fined, and ransomed, for complaining to king Edw. III. that sir William Scot, chief justice, had awarded an assize contrary to law vii. 109. See ix. 287.
- SCOTLAND.
The commission of Mary queen of Scots, to try James earl Bothwell, for the murder of her husband Henry earl Darnley, king of Scots i. 77
* The method observed in the trials of criminals there i. 429. ii. 623. iii. 441, 1095. iv. 283
Scotsmen admitted to give evidence in England, even before the Union ii. 11
A nation of great learning and eloquence, and wherein very considerable advantages are allowed prisoners, not enjoyed in England Em. Pref. i.
The manner of Scotland is, that when a gentleman is hanged with a man of meaner quality than himself, the gentleman hath the honour of the higher gibbet, and thinks himself much wronged if he be not so distinguished vii. 91
Shan O'Neale, a bloody desperate rebel, was hewn in pieces by the Scots viii. 350
By the laws of Scotland, compared signifies appeared; pannel, prisoner or defendant; pursuers, counsel against the prisoner; procurators in defence, counsel for defendant; assize, jury; assize, acquit ix. 26. n.
The statute of stabbing (1 Jac. I. chap. 8.) was enacted in the time of king James I. when many animosities arose between the English and the Scots, who, using daggers, were accustomed to stab several of the English ex improviso, which could not have been done by a flat sword, the usual weapon of the English; therefore this statute was designed to secure defenceless people from surprise, supposing whoever struck would be prepared ix. 534. n. 535. n.
Proceedings relating to a plea, that a native of Scotland ought to be tried according to the laws of that kingdom, by virtue of the act of Union, in England ix. 567
By the law of Scotland, in all criminal pursuits, the defender, or his advocate, is always the last speaker, except in cases of treason or rebellion x. 106. n.
Of appeals from Scotland to England x. 520. n. See
- ARGYLE Earl of.
ARGYLE Marquis of.
ARMS.
BAILLIE DAVID.
BAILLIE ROBERT.
BALMERINO Lord.
BALMERINOTH Lord.
BENEDICTING.
BOTHWELL Earl.
CARNEGIE JAMES.
EXECUTION.
GOWRIE, JOHN Earl of.
GREEN THOMAS.
INDICTMENTS.
JURY.
LANDSAY DAVID.
LEON ROBERT.
MATLAND CHARLES, Lord HILTON.
ROBERT JAMES.
NARR CATHARINE.
OGILVIE JOHN.
OGILVIE PATRICK.
POYNATI.

SCOTS, MARY Queen of.
 SPOTISWOOD Sir ROBERT.
 SPROT GEORGE.
 STANSFIELD PHILIP.
 STEWART ARCHIBALD.
 STEWART JAMES.
 STIRLING JAMES.
 UCHILTREE Lord.
 SCROGG S, Sir WILLIAM, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's-Bench,
 Sums up the evidence, and passes sentence on the trial of Stayley, convicted for speaking treasonable words in French ii. 639
 His directions to the jury on Coleman's trial for treason ii. 689
 Makes a speech to the prisoner before sentence ii. 693
 Tells him, that whoever brings in popery, consequently brings in a foreign authority ii. 693
 That the actor or agent is answerable for the consequences of all ill actions ii. 693
 His directions to the jury on the trial of Ireland and others, for treason ii. 719
 Directs the jury against Green and others, for murder ii. 785
 His directions to the jury on the trial of Thomas White or Whitebread, and others, for treason, in conspiring the death of the king, and to subvert religion and government ii. 875. See ii. 832, 861
 He admits on the trial of Langborne, for treason, that a witness may be confronted by another, to prove what the witness swore at another trial relating to the prisoner, was false ii. 900
 His directions to the jury ii. 906. See iii. 222. vii. 485.
 His directions to the jury on the trial of Kerne, for treason ii. 961
 Directs the jury to find Bromwich guilty of treason, if they believe him from circumstances, without the evidence of two positive witnesses, to be a priest ii. 968
 Directs the jury on the trial of Anderson and others, for treason ii. 1000
 Sat on the trial of Harris, for a libel ii. 1037
 Speech on that trial ii. 1038
 Pronounced sentence of fine, pillory, and sureties for good behaviour, and would have added whipping, had it not been for Mr. Justice Pennerson ii. 1040. See iii. 219. vii. 483.
 The seditious libel for which Francis Smith was convicted, in 1679, 32 Car. II. reflected chiefly on Lord Chief Justice Scroggs ii. 1040. See iii. 220.
 The imprisonment of Smith makes part of one of the articles of impeachment against the chief justice, for treason vii. 487
 The trial of Mrs. Curtis, for publishing a libel reflecting chiefly upon his lordship ii. 1042. See iii. 219.
 Her imprisonment makes another part of one of the articles of impeachment against the chief justice, for treason vii. 487
 Directs the jury on the trial of Earl Castlemaine, for treason iii. 55
 In his direction to the jury on the trial of Henry Carr, for a libel, shews his resentment at noise and humming made in court iii. 63
 The proceedings against Carr make the substance of one of the articles of impeachment against the chief justice vii. 486, 487
 Tells the jury, they are not to expect such strict proof in this as in common cases iii. 63
 That presumptive evidence is often admitted even in capital cases iii. 63
 That it has been resolved and subscribed by all the judges, when his majesty demanded their opinions concerning the regulation of the press, that to print or publish news books, or pamphlets of news, without authority, was illegal, and discovered a manifest intent to a breach of the peace, though no scandal in them iii. 64
 That if there were no scandal, the author ought to be convicted for publishing such books without authority; that alone being illegal iii. 64
 Censures the folly of the age in being so fond of news-papers iii. 64
 Says, it was ridiculous for the author to hope court of justice would not understand what he designed all the rest of the world should iii. 64
 That if jury found defendant guilty of fact, court would judge whether it implied malice, about which jury were not to trouble themselves iii. 64
 That jury, by finding defendant guilty, do not say upon their oaths absolutely that he is the author, but that they believe him to be so iii. 64. See iii. 219. vii. 478. ii. 482.
 Said, he verily believed Langborne died innocently, whom he had condemned himself iii. 222. vii. 485
 The articles of high misdemeanours exhibited against him to the king and council by captain Bedloe and Dr. Oates vii. 476
 His answer to them vii. 478, 479
 His speech, occasioned by the many libellous pamphlets published vii. 479
 Proceedings against him vii. 479
 Parliamentary resolution to impeach him iii. 224. iv. 166. vii. 486
 Other articles of impeachment against him vii. 488
 Speeches in parliament thereon vii. 488
 His answer to them vii. 490
 He was removed from being chief justice, but with all marks of favour and respect, and allowed a pension for life iii. 224. vii. 490
 Never thought fit for his eminent place viii. 488. See RADLEY
 RICHARD. TASBOROUGH JOHN.
 * SCROOP, ADRIAN ii. 324. See REGICIDES.
 * SEALE, A. L. See GREAT SEAL.
 SEAMEN.
 The expedient of a voluntary register for seamen attempted in William the third's reign, had no effect xi. 350. See PRESSING.
 * SEATON, ARCHIBALD v. 630. See STIRLING & al.
 SECRETARY OF STATE.
 Commitment by secretary of state illegal, and never practised till 1678, 30 Car. II. iv. 555, 557
 Vol. XI.

Secretaries of state, when they commit, are considered as common justices of the peace xi. 304

A secretary of state is not a conservator of the peace ex officio, and therefore not within the equity of the statutes in favour of justices of the peace xi. 319, 320

He has not power to commit for any offence under treason xi. 319

The history of this officer xi. 317

Secretary of state's law clerk has no more authority to examine persons and papers than a common justice of peace's clerk xi. 320

His warrant for apprehending a libeller xi. 302. See ENTICK

JOHN, Clerk. KENDALL. WILKES JOHN.

SEDITION.

The meaning of the word sedition, and what it implies in law vii. 220, 223, 225, 231. See

ELLIOT Sir JOHN.

JENKES FRANCIS.

KNIGHTLEY Sir RICHARD.

LIBELS.

LILBURNE JOHN.

PRYNNE WILLIAM.

SACHEVERELL HENRY, D. D.

TUTCHIN JOHN.

UCHILTREE Lord.

WILKES JOHN.

SEDLER, Sir CHARLES, Bart.

Was indicted for exposing himself naked in a balcony in Covent-Garden, to a multitude of people x. 94. Ap.

Court of King's-Bench told him they were the custos morum of the king's subjects, and would punish such actions committed against all modesty x. 94. Ap.

He confessed the indictment; and the court, considering he was a gentleman of an ancient family in Kent, and his estate incumbered (not intending his ruin, but his reformation), fined him only 2000 marks, to be imprisoned a week, and to be of good behaviour for three years x. 94. Ap.

SEDUCTION.

Record of proceedings against a peer for debauching his wife's sister vi. 16. Ap. See GREYFORD Lord.

Indictment lies for seducing servant from master's service Em. Pref. x. n.

SEIZURE OF PAPERS.

Warrant for the seizure of papers cannot be justified in the case of a seditious libel xi. 307, 312, 320, 323

No Lord Chief Justice, except Scroggs, ever assumed the authority of seizing papers xi. 321

The seizure of papers is illegal xi. 321

The reason iv. 174, 175. xi. 323. See ENTICK JOHN, Clerk.

SELEBY, JAMES, Serjeant at Law.

His speech before evidence on the trial of Coke, counsellor at law, on the maiming act vi. 213

SELDEN, JOHN.

His argument on habeas corpus in B. R. brought by persons imprisoned for refusing to lend money upon commissions for loans vii. 121. See

DARNELL Sir THOMAS.

His speech relating to the liberty of the subject vii. 148

His argument on a conference with the lords on the same subject vii. 155

Precedents of persons committed by the king's command, bailed vii. 157

Precedents contra answered vii. 159

Copies of the records of the precedents cited vii. 162

Earl Suffolk charged with speaking scandalously of Mr. Selden, member of the house of commons, and one of the managers of the conference; and proceedings thereon vii. 182

Speech concerning the propositions delivered by the lords to the king vii. 187

About the bill concerning magna charta vii. 191

His argument on habeas corpus against return vii. 219

Proceedings against him in Star-chamber, May 29, 1630, 6 Car. I. for publishing a seditious writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD Earl of.

* SELLERS, JOHN ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.

SENTENCES.

Against William Prynne, for writing and publishing Hypocrasicon:

That the book be burnt by the hand of the hangman; that Mr. Prynne be put from the bar, and be for ever incapable of his profession; that the Society of Lincoln's-Inn do put him out; that the University of Oxford do degrade him; that he do stand in the pillory in Westminster and Chappside; that he lose both his ears, one in each place; that he have a paper on his head, declaring, it is for an infamous libel against both their majesties, state, and government; that he be fined 5000l. [10,000l. i. 428.] to the king; and that he be perpetually imprisoned i. 424, 426, 427, 428

To be restrained from writing, neither to have pen, ink or paper i. 426

To be branded in the forehead, slit in the nose, and his ears cropped i. 428

Against Thomas Buckner, for licensing the said book, that he be imprisoned, and fined 50l. to the king i. 425, 426

Against Michael Sparkes, for printing and selling the said book, to be fined 500l. to the king; to stand in the pillory in Chappside i. 425, 426, 428

Another against William Prynne, for several libels; to lose his ears in Palace-yard, Westminster; to be fined 5000l. to his majesty; and to perpetual imprisonment in a remote part of the kingdom; to be stigmatized in the cheeks with two letters (S. and L.) for a seditious libeller i. 486, 497, 500, 504

Against John Bastwick, doctor of physic, and Henry Burton, clerk, for same offence, same punishment, except stigmatizing i. 486, 499, 500, 502, 503

Blasphemer sentenced to be bored through the tongue, &c. ii. 272

- To pass sentence on day of conviction is a violent and precipitate proceeding iv. 279
- Sentence of the Ecclesiastical Court deemed of no force, although not before controverted for 1475 years xi. 246
- Sentence in Spiritual Court against a marriage in suit of jactitation of marriage, not conclusive evidence in indictment for polygamy xi. 262. So resolved by all the judges of England.
- Effect of such sentence may be avoided, by proving the same fraudulent or collusive xi. 262. So resolved by all the judges of England.
- Sentence of nullity, and sentence in affirmance of a marriage, are conclusive evidence on a question of legitimacy arising incidentally upon a claim to a real estate xi. 261. So resolved by all the judges of England.
- Sentence in cause of jactitation is, upon a title in ejectment, evidence against a marriage; and so it is in personal actions, founded immediately on a supposed marriage xi. 261. By all the judges of England.
- A direct sentence in a suit upon a promise of marriage, against the contract, admitted evidence against such contract, in an action upon the promise for damages xi. 261. So resolved by all the judges of England.
- Sentence of nullity is conclusive evidence in a personal action against a defence founded upon a supposed coverture xi. 261
- Elizabeth Gaunt was sentenced to be hanged for treason* iv. 160
- King Charles the first was sentenced to be beheaded for treason i. 1040
- See EXECUTIONS. JUDGMENTS. See also PUNISHMENTS; and the same article in the Alphabetical and Chronological Tables.
- S E R M O N S.
- Doctor Binkes's sermon on 30th of January, 1701-2, censured by the lords viii. 81
- Doctor Sacheverell's sermon, See SACHEVERELL HENRY, D. D.
- Some passages in Hugh Latimer's sermon, touching Lord Sudley's death vii. 10
- S E R V A N T S. See MASTER AND SERVANT.
- S E V E N B I S H O P S.
- Their case of the greatest concernment and consequence that ever was in Westminster-hall iv. 320, 321, 342
- This case, as to a libeller being bound to find surety of the peace, denied to be law xi. 304, 305
- All the counsel for the defendants were lovers of liberty, and the greatest lawyers of the age xi. 304
- Powell* was the only honest judge of the four who sat on that trial xi. 304, 305
- The counsel on both sides in this cause were the ablest of their time, and few times have produced abler xi. 319
- S E Y M O U R, Sir E D W A R D.
- His speech in the cause of Abby and White viii. 103
- S E Y M O U R, Sir F R A N C I S.
- His speech in parliament, concerning persons imprisoned for not paying the loan vii. 140
- S E Y M O U R, Lord S U D L E Y.
- Proceedings in parliament against him, for high-treason, 3 Ed. VI. vii. 1
- Marries the queen dowager, and endeavours to be made governor of the king's person vii. 1
- Articles of high-treason against him vii. 2
- Duke of Somerset's letter to Sir Thomas Hobby, declaring the traitorous proceedings of the admiral vii. 2
- Some of the council go to him in the Tower, to desire his answer to the charge vii. 4
- The admiral answers three of the articles, but would go no farther vii. 5
- The act for his attainder vii. 6
- The warrant for his execution vii. 10
- Some passages out of bishop Hugh Latimer's sermons, concerning the admiral's manner of dying vii. 11
- S H A D W E L L, Lady Ivy's trial for great part of it vii. 571
- S H A F T S B U R Y, ANTHONY Earl of.
- He was committed to the Tower by the house of lords during the king's pleasure, or that of the house, for moving a question in parliament about the legality of a prorogation vi. 616 n.
- * His case on a motion in the King's Bench to be admitted to bail, the 27th and 29th of June, 1677, Trin. Term, 29 Car. II. vii. 616
- * His commitment by the lords for contempts in general; which his counsel urge is an illegal commitment ii. 617
- * And that its being by the house of peers, made no difference ii. 617
- * And that the court of B. R. might examine parliamentary matters ii. 617
- * The king's counsel make a reply ii. 620
- * The earl makes a speech in answer to the attorney and solicitor general ii. 621
- * Mr. justice Jones delivered his opinion, that though the commitment was ill, it could not be examined here; and that the earl could not be bailed or discharged here ii. 622
- * Mr. justice Wilde of the same opinion ii. 622
- * As was Sir Richard Raynsford, Lord chief justice ii. 622
- * And Mr. justice Twyden: but none of them declared what their opinions were in case the session had been concluded, but Mr. Justice Wilde, who said, in that case, that the earl ought to have been discharged ii. 622
- * Proceedings at the Old-Bailey, on an indictment for high-treason preferred against him; Nov. 24, 1682, 33 Car. II. iii. 418 See iv. 187
- * The grand jury sworn iii. 418
- * The Lord chief Justice Pemberton's charge to them iii. 418
- * He tells them, that words would not amount to treason within 25 Ed. III. any more than a design to imprison the king; but that by the 23 Car. II. words tending to such a design were treasonable iii. 419
- * That two witnesses to every overt-act are not necessary iii. 419
- * That if there appear a probability of the party's guilt who is indicted, it is a sufficient inducement to find the bill iii. 419
- * The king's counsel move, that the evidence may be given to the grand jury in court iii. 420
- * The grand jury insist, that they ought to examine the witnesses in private, being bound by their oaths to keep the king's secrets, and it being the constant practice so to do iii. 420
- * The chief justice tells them, their debates indeed ought to be in private, but anciently the evidence was given in court iii. 420
- * The grand jury still insist they are bound to keep the king's secrets; and the court tell them, the case is altered, where the king waives that matter iii. 421
- * The indictment iii. 421
- * A paper found in my Lord Shaftsbury's custody given in evidence against him, being an association for excluding the duke of York, and destroying the king's regular forces; wherein the subscribers bind themselves to obey such officers as the majority of the parliament shall appoint; and in the interval of parliament, such officers as a majority of the subscribers shall appoint iii. 424
- * Bosib's evidence, of his being appointed by my Lord Shaftsbury to assist in surprising the king, if he should not agree to the demands of the parliament of Oxford iii. 426
- * Other evidence to the same purpose iii. 428
- * The grand jury retire to consider what questions to ask the witnesses iii. 432
- * They desire to know if any of the witnesses are indicted; but are told it is not their business to examine to the credibility of the witnesses: but if they know any thing of them themselves, they may consider of it iii. 432
- * The grand jury put their questions to the witnesses iii. 433
- * The king's witnesses in danger of being knocked on the head by the populace iii. 435, 436
- * Having withdrawn some time, they return the bill ignoramus; at which the people shout iii. 441
- Sir John Hawles's remarks on the earl's grand jury iv. 183
- His lordship's speech in the house of lords, upon the debate of appointing a day for the hearing doctor Shirley's cause vii. 463
- S H A R P E, Doctor JOHN. See COMPTON Doctor HENRY.
- * S H A R P L E S S, JOHN ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.
- * S H E R F I E L D, H E N R Y, Esq.
- * Proceedings against him in the Star-chamber, for breaking a painted glass-window in a church, 8 Car. I. i. 399
- * The information against him i. 399
- * In his answer he owns the fact, and justifies it i. 399
- * Alleges that it was a superstitious picture, and taken down by order of the vestry i. 400
- * Depositions of the king's witnesses read i. 401
- * The defendant's reply i. 403
- * Mr. attorney's answer i. 407
- * The commissioners differ in opinion as to the sentence: the speech of Lord Cottington for a severe one i. 408
- * Sir Robert Heath for a mild one i. 409
- * Sir Thomas Richardson, the same i. 410
- * Secretary Windebank, for a severe one i. 411
- * Secretary Cook and Sir Thomas Fernyn, for a mild one i. 411
- * Sir Henry Vane, for a severe one i. 411
- * Sir Thomas Edmonds, for a mild one i. 412
- * Dr. Laud, bishop of London, for a severe one i. 412. See 895.
- * Lord Falkland, and earl of Droghda, for the same i. 414
- * Viscount Wimbleton, and earl of Dorset, for a mild one i. 414
- * Earl of Arundel, for a severe one i. 415
- * Earl of Manchester, for an easy one i. 415
- * Dr. Neale, archbishop of York, for a severe one i. 416
- * Lord keeper, for a mild one i. 417
- * His sentence i. 418
- Censure of Robert Sherfield for defacing a church-window, one of the charges against archbishop Laud i. 895
- S H E R I F F S O F L O N D O N.
- Whether common-hall bound to elect persons drunk to be lord mayor, sheriffs? iii. 651, 652
- High sheriff sits covered on his being present in court, at execution of writ of inquiry iii. 987
- The sheriffs North and Rich were imposed on the city iv. 171, 186, 188
- The city's right of electing sheriffs taken away iv. 171, 172, 186
- Grand juries returned by such as are sheriffs in fact, but not in right, illegal iv. 172
- The convictions on the presentments of such grand juries are illegal and void iv. 172. See viii. 464, 471. * PILKINGTON, & al.
- * SHERWIN JOHN iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
- S H I P M O N E Y.
- The king's writ in the case of ship money i. 510. vi. 5. Ap.
- The judgment therein censured by the house of lords i. 716
- Copy of the judgment as entered on record i. 695. vi. 9. Ap.
- Property was much invaded by imposing ship money, which at first was light and easy, but in progress of time was increased, according as it was found the nation would bear it; and at length it was justly feared that it would become as burthenome as the impositions on the French nation by the French king; and yet when the civil wars broke out, the majority of the nation took part with the king iv. 165. See BATES JOHN. HAMPDEN JOHN.
- S H I R L E Y, Doctor.
- His appeal brought in the house of lords against some members of the house of commons, during the session, and debates thereon See FAGG Sir JOHN.
- S H I V E R S, R I C H A R D. See GOLDING.

SHOOTING AT. See ARNOLD EDWARD.

SHORT-HAND.

Trial allowed to be taken in short-hand, after debate x. 132. Ap.

SHOWER, Sir BARTHOLOMEW,

His observations on the paper said to have been delivered by lord Ruffel to the sheriffs on his execution iii. 668. viii. 464Author of "The Magistracy and Government of England vindicated," as to the proceedings on lord Ruffel's trial iii. 765. vi. 95His argument on moving, that Kendal and Roe, committed by secretary of state for treason, might be bailed on hab. corp. iv. 554, 557, 561. See

SECRETARY OF STATE.

Defence of Cook for treason iv. 767Of counsel for Rookwood, tried for high-treason, in conspiring death of the king iv. 964

His defence of the prisoner iv. 689

His argument against the bill of attainder brought into the house of commons against sir John Fenwick v. 86, 87

"Antidote against Poison" wrote by him viii. 464

Sir Bartholomew was an eminent practicer, and had studied the subject of informations well, and taken more than ordinary pains therein ix. 313. See x. 68. Ap.

SHREWSBURY, GEORGE Earl of,

Lord high steward on the trial of Thomas duke of Norfolk, for treason i. 82

SHREWSBURY, MARY Countess of,

Proceedings against her before a select council, for contempt in refusing to answer fully before that board, or to subscribe her examination, Trin. 10 Jan. 1. 1614 xi. 108Extract of the case from lord Coke's twelfth report xi. 108Speech of sir Francis Bacon xi. 109. See xi. 295, 296, 297, 299, 300* SHUTE, SAMUEL Esq. iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.* SIDNEY, ALGERNON, Esq.* His arraignment for high-treason, November 7, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 794

* The indictment, for conspiring the king's death, and framing a libel, wherein he affirms, that the king is accountable to the people who make him king, &c. iii. 794

* He objects that the crimes laid in the indictment were different in their nature, therefore the indictment was vicious, and he need not plead to it; but is told by the court, he must either plead or demur to it; and if he demurs, he admits the facts: whereupon he pleaded Not guilty iii. 795, 796

The plea in form vi. 45. Ap.

* A counsel reprimanded for whispering to him in court iii. 796. See iv. 176

* He is brought to trial, Nov. 21, 1683 ii. 797

* He is denied a copy of the indictment; but it is read to him in Latin iii. 797* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iii. 797

* Hear-say evidence allowed to be given; and some of it such as did not relate to the prisoner iii. 798

* The case of the popish lords remembered, where a general account of the plot was allowed to be given in evidence, though it did not immediately affect prisoners iii. 798

* The English and Scotch disagree in their schemes of a new government to be erected iii. 799* Lord Howard's evidence concerning the cabal of six who met at Mr. Hampden's iii. 800

* The libel proved to be the prisoner's by the similitude the hand it was wrote in bore to the prisoner's, and by being found among his papers in his study iii. 802. See iv. 278. vii. 402

* Part of the book read ii. 803

* The prisoner objects, that similitude of hands is no proof in criminal cases ii. 805

* That it was no crime to write treasonable positions, so as he did not publish them; which the court deny iii. 807

* He endeavours to shew, that those expressions in the libel could never be wrested to a design of killing the king iii. 807

* He objects to my lord Howard's testimony, that he had said he could not have his pardon till he had done some other jobs, and till the drudgery of swearing was over iii. 811* Col. Sidney's defence, as to the consult iii. 811

* The solicitor-general's reply iii. 813

* Treasonable positions contained in the libel iii. 815

* Lord chief justice sums up the evidence iii. 816

* Writing an overt-act: scribere est agere iii. 817

* Conspiring to levy war, evidence of compassing the king's death ii. 817

* Or any other act which discovers an imagination in the heart to depose, destroy, or imprison the king iii. 817

* The prisoner convicted iii. 820

* Alleges in arrest of judgment, that some of the jury were not freeholders; but is told by the court, freehold is not a necessary qualification of a jurymen in high-treason iii. 820

* He is denied a sight of the indictment iii. 820

* Sentence pronounced upon him iii. 822

* His dying speech iii. 822

* His attainder reversed at the Revolution iii. 824

Colonel Sidney illegally prosecuted iv. 172Sir John Hawley's remarks on the colonel's trial iv. 186, 196The king's counsel applying his writing his book to the time of Charles II. which for any thing that appeared, might have been wrote before that king came to the throne, was wresting as evidence of the fact, what in sense was not so iv. 177, 198*Sidney* was tried upon a vicious indictment iv. 177, 197* "That Innocence would defend," was a saying as mortal to Sidney, as was the letter Θ amongst the Greeks iv. 177His trial was signed by lord chief justice Jeffries for publication iv. 189Colonel Sidney was talked to death, under the notion of a commonwealth's man iv. 196*Sidney's* was the first indictment of treason, whereon any man lost his life for writing any thing without publishing it iv. 197The duke of York's owning the plot to the king, was the cause of Sidney's execution; for the king balanced before viii. 480

He was, by means of an illegal return of jurors, and by denial of his lawful challenges to many of them, and without sufficient legal evidence of any treasons committed by him, and by a partial and unjust construction of the statute, declaring what was his treason, most unjustly and wrongfully convicted, attainted, and executed for high-treason, in the opinion of the legislature vi. 278, 279. viii. 472

In Sidney's trial, no freehold was not allowed to be a good challenge iii. 265. n.

His petition to his majesty viii. 469

Desires to be admitted into his majesty's presence viii. 470

The act for annulling his attainder viii. 472

Examinations taken on oath before a committee of lords appointed to inspect who were the advisers and prosecutors of the murder of col. Sidney, lord Ruffel, &c. viii. 476. See iii. 738. EXAMINATIONS. HAMPDEN JOHN.The same principles of resistance as were maintained by the regicides, may be found in a book of colonel Sidney's, and for writing which he was condemned iii. 815. See viii. 64. n. and RESISTANCE.

SIMONS, HENRY,

He is robbed of five hundred and fifty-four ducats at the White Hart Inn, Cranford-Bridge x. 411

He is indicted of perjury on his evidence respecting the robbery x. 411

And upon his trial by a special jury, in B. R. he is acquitted x. 411He is indicted at Chelmsford in Essex, for a misdemeanour, in putting three duckets into James Ashley's pocket, with intent to charge him with a robbery x. 411

The indictment x. 412

He pleads not guilty x. 412

Names of the special jury x. 413

Found guilty x. 413

Moves for a new trial on the affidavits of the twelve jurymen, that though they found him guilty of putting the ducats into Ashley's pocket, they did not find that same was done with any intent x. 416

Affidavit of the whole trial, and that the jury found the prisoner guilty of the whole indictment x. 416

A new trial is granted x. 416

The prisoner is acquitted by another special jury x. 417

Simons had six trials about this transaction, which cost upwards of 1300l. x. 417

SINDERCOMBE, MILES, alias FISH,

His trial at Westminster, for high-treason, 1656 vii. 371

The indictment for conspiring and imagining the death of the Protector vii. 371

Evidence of his design to kill the Protector, and to fire Whitehall vii. 372

The court declare, the compassing and imagining the death of the chief magistrate, by whatsoever name he was called, high-treason vii. 373

And the statute 25 Edw. III. only declaratory of the common law vii. 373

Sentenced to be hanged and quartered vii. 373

Endeavours to corrupt his keeper to suffer him to escape vii. 374

Is found dead in his bed vii. 374

The physicians and surgeons who opened him, not able to guess by what means he made away with himself vii. 375

The coroner's inquest bring in their verdict, that he poisoned himself vii. 376

Buried on Tower-Hill, under the scaffold erected for his execution vii. 376

His sister's examination, if she ever brought him poison vii. 376

The informations of the guards, who watched in his chamber vii. 377

SKIPWORTH, Sir WILLIAM,

Who had been prevented by sickness from being along with the other judges when the commissioners were declared guilty of high-treason, in the reign of Richard II. was not therefore arrested, as all the other justices were i. 5

SKYNNER, MATTHEW, Sergeant at Law,

His argument on behalf of the mayor, &c. of the port of Hastings, at the suit of Harry Manners x. 161. Ap.

SLAUGHTER, JOHN. See GOLDING.

SLAUGHTERFORD, CHRISTOPHER,

An account of his trial and condemnation on appeal for murder, after acquittal ix. 542

His speech at the gallows denying the fact ix. 542

SLAVERY,

Origin of slavery xi. 341

General observations on domestic slavery xi. 340

Difficulty of defining slavery xi. 340

Properties usually incident to slavery xi. 340

Bad effects of slavery xi. 340

Opinion of modern writers in favour of slavery xi. 340

The lawfulness of slavery considered xi. 341, 345

Universality of domestic slavery among the ancients xi. 341

Decline of slavery in Europe xi. 341Revival of domestic slavery in America xi. 341Attempt to introduce slavery of negroes into England, examined xi. 341Laws of England will not admit a new slavery xi. 341The rules of law are against slavery by contract xi. 341. See HAR-

HARGRAVE FRANCIS. NEGRO. SOMMERSETT JAMES. VILLENAGE.
 * SLINGSBY, Sir HENRY, Knight,
 * His trial for high-treason before the High Court of Justice, in Westminster-Hall, May 25, 1658 ii. 277
 * Impeachment for high-treason against the Protector and commonwealth ii. 277
 * John Lisle, president of the court ii. 277
 * The prisoner is refused a trial by jury ii. 278
 * Evidence of his endeavouring to bring over some of the officers in Hull to the king's interest ii. 278, &c.
 * Sir Henry in effect acknowledges the design with which he is charged ii. 280
 * See the judgment in Mr. Mordant's trial ii. 299
 * He is beheaded ii. 300
 * His behaviour upon the scaffold ii. 300
SMETON, MARK. See NORRIS HENRY.
SMITH, AARON,
 His deposition, that he was desired to be a witness against colonel Sidney viii. 477
 * SMITH, FRANCIS,
 * Indictment against him for a libel, 1679, 32 Car. II. iii. 1040. vi. 13. Ap. vii. 484
 The libel reflects chiefly on lord chief justice Scroggs ii. 1040
 Defendant's counsel admit the record, and prisoner is convicted ii. 1041
 * SMITH, HENRY ii. 395. See REGICIDES.
 * SMITH, ISABEL. See MORRIS.
 * SMITH, RICHARD ii. 1041.
SMITH, SAMUEL iii. 949. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
SMITH, Sir THOMAS,
 His writings no authority in Westminster-Hall xi. 143
SMUGGLING.
 Some excellent observations on that hazardous employment ix. 733. See JACKSON WILLIAM.
SMYTHE, SIDNEY STAFFORD, King's Counsel,
 His speech against smugglers, for murder ix. 720, 732
 Opens information against Gibson on quo warranto xi. 118. Ap.
 Of counsel for Elles in quo warranto x. 136. Ap.
SNAPE, WILLIAM, a Nonjuring Clergyman,
 Proceedings against him for absolving traitors at Tyburn xi. 43. Ap.
SOAME and BARNARDISTON.
 Those who argued against the judgment in the King's Bench in the above cause were made judges, and they themselves afterwards determined the case upon a writ of error brought in the Exchequer-chamber viii. 109.
 See BARNARDISTON Sir SAMUEL.
SODOMY.
 Bail cannot be granted ex gratia in sodomy. So resolved by all the judges xi. 388 Indictment for sodomy vi. 5. Ap. See AUDLEY MERVIN Lord.
BUGGERY.
 * SOLICITOR.
 * A prisoner may not have a solicitor in treason or felony without leave of the court iii. 263, 344. iv. 174
 * One indicted for high-treason, in soliciting for a prisoner charged with treason iii. 347. See iv. 175, 178, 205.
 * Aaron Smith, Colledge's solicitor, made to give security to answer the misdemeanour iii. 349. See ix. 310.
 * The court deny the prisoner a solicitor to assist him at his trial iii. 343. iv. 455
 * "Solicitor" imports his employment v. 85
 How far they are privileged from disclosing the secrets of their clients; whether this privilege extends to criminal cases; and whether the client can compel the solicitor, or prevent his giving evidence, without his consent ix. 387, 389. See ATTORNEY.
SOLICITOR-GENERAL.
 The office of solicitor-general has been the rock whereon several aspiring lawyers have made shipwreck of their virtue and human nature xi. 273
William De Grey, solicitor-general to Gen. III. an illustrious instance of exception to the above observation x. 541
 Information filed by solicitor-general during vacancy of attorney-general, good in law. So resolved by the judges xi. 334
SOMERS, JOHN,
 Cites the case of Thomas and Sorrel, in relation to the dispensing power iv. 384
SOMERS, Sir JOHN, Solicitor-General,
 His speech before evidence on the trial of lord Proffor (or Richard Graham, baronet), for treason, in compassing the death of the king and queen, and adhering to their enemies iv. 425
 His speech before evidence on the trial of lord Mohun, for murder, before his peers iv. 513
SOMERS, Sir JOHN, Attorney-General,
 Replies to Charles Knowles (who, upon being indicted at Hick's Hall, for murder, removes same into B. R. and pleads misnomer in abatement, viz. that he is earl of Banbury), that the lords, upon his petition to be tried by his peers, had adjudged that he had no title to the earldom viii. 50, 51
 The attorney, by order of the house of lords, delivers them an account of proceedings of B. R. against him viii. 152
SOMERS, Lord Keeper,
 Distinguished himself on giving judgment in the case of the Bankers in the Exchequer-chamber, by one of the most elaborate arguments ever delivered in Westminster-Hall xi. 137, 143
 His lordship observed, that Sir Edward Coke, in his Reports, does not confine himself to the case before the court, but does generally lay together all the learning in the law which comes under that title, so as to make them a nature of common-place xi. 151, 152

SOMERS, JOHN Lord, Lord Chancellor,
 His commission of lord high steward for the trials of Edward earl of Warwick and Holland, and of Charles lord Mohun, for murder v. 137
 His lordship's address to the earl of Warwick, previous to the examination of witnesses v. 142
 His lordship's address upon informing him of their lordships judgment of acquittal v. 180
 His lordship's address to Charles lord Mohun, previous to the examination of the witnesses v. 181
 His lordship's address upon informing him of their lordships judgment of acquittal v. 194
 Impeached for advising the king to the treaty of partition viii. 520. See viii. 512
 And for his judgment in the Bankers case xi. 137. See v. 355.
 Admitted into the house of commons, and heard viii. 520
 Commons address the king to remove him viii. 521
 Articles of impeachment against him, with his answer v. 345
 Lords acquaint commons with intention of proceeding on his trial v. 373
 Witnesses ordered to attend the trial v. 374
 Lords appoint a day for his trial v. 363, 365. viii. 531
 Commons forbid any member to attend viii. 531
 Reasons of committee for not proceeding to lord Somers's trial viii. 532
 Commons resolve not to go to lord Somers's trial, till satisfaction received for affront on them by lord Haverham viii. 533
 Lords proceed to Westminster-Hall, on trial of lord Somers, 32 lords dissent, but reasons expunged by order of house viii. 534
 Lords Orford and Halifax withdraw at the trial viii. 534
 Resolved, the question for acquitting lord Somers be put in court below; 31 lords protest, reasons expunged viii. 534
 Impeachment dismissed for want of prosecution viii. 535. See v. 374
 Commons protest against it viii. 535
 * See PORTLAND, WILLIAM Earl of v. 339.
SOMERSET, Duke of,
 Proceedings against him for high-treason, and misdemeanours, 3 and 4 Edw. VI. vii. 12
 Proclamation against him, signed by most of the council vii. 12
 Committed to the Tower vii. 12
 The articles objected to him vii. 13
 His first submission vii. 13
 He is fined 2000l. a year of land, and loses all his goods and offices vii. 14
 His second submission vii. 14
 He is pardoned, and restored to almost all his estate vii. 15
 Proceedings against him for high-treason and felony, 5 and 6 Edw. VI. vii. 15
 He and several others sent to the Tower vii. 15
 Several examinations against him vii. 15
 He is tried in Westminster-Hall vii. 16
 The indictment for designing to seize and imprison the duke of Northumberland vii. 16
 His defence vii. 17
 The witnesses not produced, but only their examinations read vii. 17
 Acquitted of treason, and found guilty of felony, and sentenced to be hanged vii. 17
 He is beheaded, and his speech before his execution vii. 18
 His great-grandson restored to the title vii. 19
 * SOMERSET, FRANCIS Countess of,
 * Brought to trial, as accessory before the fact to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, May 24, 1616 i. 348
 * She pleads guilty i. 349
 * The king's counsel shew, how strangely this murder was discovered, after it had been concealed two years i. 350
 * The king's instructions to those who were appointed to enquire into the said murder i. 350
 * Sentence passed on the countess i. 351
 * SOMERSET, ROBERT CARR, Earl of,
 * His trial as accessory, before the fact, to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, the 25th of May, 1616, 14 Jac. I. i. 351
 * Lord high steward's charge to the peers i. 351
 * Mr. attorney (Sir Francis Bacon) opens the evidence i. 352
 * He shews the springs and foundation of this conspiracy against Sir Thomas's life i. 353
 * Poisoning once made treason i. 353
 * Evidence of the earl's malice to Sir Thomas, for advising against his marriage with the countess i. 356
 * Letters sent by Sir Thomas to the earl from the Tower i. 356
 * Sir Day. Wood's evidence, that the countess offered him 1000l. to kill Sir Thomas Overbury i. 358
 * Earl of Somerset's petition to the king, that he might not be brought to trial, read as evidence against him i. 358
 * The earl owns he was the occasion of Overbury's imprisonment i. 358
 * His hypocrisy and baseness to the whole family of the Overburys i. 359
 * Examinations taken without oath read against him i. 360
 * The countess's actions given in evidence against the earl i. 361
 * The lord steward presses him to waive his defence, and submit to mercy, which he refuses, and makes his defence i. 363
 * Owns his being privy to sending the tarts i. 363
 * He is convicted, and sentence passed upon him i. 365
 * His letter to the king i. 365
 * The earl and countess pardoned as to their lives, but confined i. 367
 * Order of council as to their confinement i. 367
 * Motives in the countess's pardon, which induced the king to grant it i. 367
 * The earl's petition to king Charles I. for his estate—never granted i. 373
 * He and his countess both died in obscurity i. 373

SOMERSET, Earl of,
Proceedings against him, 29 May 1630, 6 Car. I. in Star-chamber, for publishing a seditious and scandalous writing xi. 121. See BEDFORD Earl of.

SOMERSET, Duke of,
He was beheaded for felony, though adjudged to be hanged iv. 129
SOMMERSETT, JAMES, a Negro,
His case on an habeas corpus, B. R. 1771, 1772 xi. 339
Habeas corpus, and return xi. 339
Sommersett discharged xi. 339
Argument of Mr. Hargrave for the negro xi. 340
Short state of the case xi. 340
Importance of it xi. 340
Points that arise therein xi. 340
Of the right claimed in the negro's person xi. 340
Slavery the foundation of the claim to the negro xi. 340
See NEGRO
SLAVERY.
VILLENAGE.

* SOUTHAMPTON, HENRY Earl of i. 197. See ESSEX
ROBERT Earl of.

SOUTH CAROLINA. See BONNET, STEDE, & al.
SOUTHWELL, Sir ROBERT,
His evidence on the trial of Green, and others, for murder ii. 775
* SPARKES, JOHN v. i. See DAWSON.
SPARKES, MICHAEL,
Proceedings against him in Star-chamber, for printing Histrionastix i. 418
His answer opened by Mr. Jenkins, of Gray's-Inn i. 419
His censure by Lord Cottington i. 425
By Secretary Cook i. 427
By Earl Dorset i. 428

SPECIAL PLEADING.
The nicety of special pleading censured Em. Pref. iii. See PLEA and PLEADINGS.

SPECIAL VERDICTS.
Copy of special verdict in a case of treason, drawn up for the consideration of all the judges viii. 285, 552
Special verdict on the trial of John Huggins, for murder ix. 140, 141
Special verdict on the trial of William Chetwynd for murder ix. 537
Special verdict on the trial of John St. venfon, for murder x. 477
* SPEKE, HUGH iii. 855. See BRADDON.

SPIRITUAL COURT.
Sentence of Spiritual Court may be avoided by proving same fraudulent or collusive xi. 262. See MARRIAGE.

* SPOTISWOOD, Sir ROBERT,
His trial for high-treason, in the parliament held at St. Andrews in Scotland, Nov. Dec. and Jan. 1645, 21 Car. I. i. 961

* The indictment for abusing the king, in purchasing the office of secretary of state, lately held by the earl of Lanerk i. 962

* For signing a commission to the (late) earl of Montrose to be generalissimo; and for joining with the said earl's army, and committing divers acts of hostility with him i. 962

* Sir Robert answers, that the king had made him a temporary secretary in the absence of the earl of Lanerk i. 963

* That the said commission was signed by his majesty's special and express command i. 964

* That his accompanying the earl of Montrose, with the king's commission, could not be interpreted a taking up arms against the kingdom i. 964

* And lastly, that he is not charged with any thing declared, by any law or act of parliament, to be treason i. 964

* The counsel against him reply, that to accept any office without consent of the parliament, is criminal i. 965

* And his signing this commission a proof of his framing or advising other acts of state against them, to disturb the public peace i. 965

* That his joining the traitor, James Graham (the earl of Montrose), was a taking up arms against his country i. 965

* Which is high-treason by an act of parliament in 1584 i. 963, 966

* Sir Robert rejoins i. 966

* Insists that he was promised quarter upon surrendering himself i. 968

* Is answered, that it is not in the power of any private man in the army to give quarter to an opposer of the solemn league and covenant, as he had been i. 969

* And if quarter were to be allowed to other prisoners, yet not to him, whom both parliaments of Scotland and England had excepted from pardon i. 970

* Sir Robert insists further, that the benefit of quarter given is secured to all prisoners by the laws of arms, and of all nations, as well in civil as in foreign wars i. 970

* Otherwise a door would be opened to all manner of cruelty i. 971

* And no clause in the covenant could oblige to go contrary to the laws of war or of nations i. 972

* That the question is not of pardon, but of quarter already granted, for securing his life i. 973

* His reasons why he cannot enter upon any other defence till this be discussed i. 977

* The report from the commissioners for the process to the parliament against him i. 978

* He is declared guilty, and condemned i. 979

* Is going to speak to the people, but silenced by the provost of the town, at the instance of a zealous minister of the kirk i. 984

* His speech delivered in writing i. 984

* The said minister's insult, and the prisoner's mild and magnanimous behaviour i. 985

* Sir Robert is beheaded i. 985
VOL. XI.

SPRATT, Doctor THOMAS, Bishop of Rochester,
Proceedings against him before the lords of the privy council, 1692 viii. 37. See vi. 425

Arrested at Bromley viii. 37
His papers seized, and his house examined by the clerk of the council viii. 37

Carried to his own house under a guard of soldiers viii. 37

Examined concerning an association for restoring king James viii. 38

His speech to the council viii. 39

Writes to lord Nottingham, and is discharged viii. 39

Receives a letter from lord Nottingham, to attend him at his office viii. 39

Is examined in the presence of one Blackhead viii. 40

Blackhead charges the bishop with receiving and answering a letter from one Robert Younge viii. 40

The bishop examines Blackhead himself viii. 41

The bishop's secretary examined viii. 42

Remembers Blackhead's bringing a letter from one Hookes viii. 42

Blackhead confesses he brought the bishop a letter from one Dr. Hookes, and not Younge viii. 42

The bishop is again discharged viii. 43

Brings the letter before the council, and meets Younge there viii. 44

Blackhead confesses he left the association in the parlour, at Bromley, by Younge's direction viii. 46

And took it away again since the bishop's confinement viii. 46

The counterfeit association viii. 46

Younge and Blackhead confronted, Younge denies all viii. 47

The association and the letter signed Hookes, both the same hand viii. 48

Younge and Blackhead afterwards convicted of this forgery viii. 48

Younge executed for coining, and a copy of his last speech, confessing the forgery viii. 49

* SPROT, GEORGE,
His trial in Scotland, for conspiring with the earl of Gowrie to murder king James I. i. 310

* He confesses before the privy council his being privy to two letters between the earl of Gowrie, and laird of Restalrig, relating to the conspiracy i. 310

* At his trial his confession is read against him i. 312

* He abides by his confession, and is condemned i. 313

* His execution i. 314

* After he had hanged a pretty while, he clapped his hands together aloud three times i. 314

* SPUR, JOHN v. 465. See SWENSDEN.

SQUIRES, MARY The Gipsy,
Her trial for robbing Elizabeth Canning, at the Old-Bailey, February 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 223

Canning's evidence against her x. 223

Found guilty x. 234

Her speech to the court x. 235

A memorial in her behalf laid before the king by Sir Crisp Gascoyne, lord mayor x. 235

Her execution respited, and she pardoned x. 236

Canning's friends answer to Sir Crisp Gascoyne's memorial x. 236

STABBING.
See MURDER. STATUTE of STABBING, and 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, under STATUTES.

* STAFFORD, WILLIAM Viscount,
His trial on an impeachment for high-treason before the house of peers, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 101

* Five popish lords impeached iii. 101

* The commons signify their intencion of beginning with the trial of the lord Stafford iii. 101

* The day for the trial appointed by the lords iii. 101

* Lord chancellor Finch, lord high steward iii. 101

* The bishops withdraw iii. 101

* The trial begins iii. 102

* The lord high steward's speech iii. 102

* The seven articles of impeachment read iii. 102

* The lord Stafford answers generally, that he is not guilty iii. 104

* Mr. serjeant Maynard opens the evidence of the plot in general iii. 104

* Sir Francis Winnington shews how probable it was there should be such a plot at this time iii. 106

* Mr. Treby's speech iii. 109

* The managers call their witnesses to prove the plot in general iii. 109

* The records of the attainders, and convictions of those concerned in the popish plot, produced as evidence of it iii. 120

* Second day of trial iii. 122

* The lord Stafford's counsel admitted to hear the evidence, but not to stand so near as to prompt him iii. 122

* Dugdale sworn a second time, when he came to give a particular evidence against the lord Stafford iii. 123

* The prisoner permitted to have a clerk to take notes for him iii. 123

* Dugdale swears positively that the prisoner consented to the resolution on the king's death (at which there was a great hum) iii. 124

* Oates sworn again, deposes, that my lord wrote letters and contributed money towards carrying on the plot iii. 126

* Turberville's evidence of my lord's soliciting him to assassinate his majesty iii. 127

* The lord Stafford enters upon his defence iii. 129

* He moves to have copies of some affidavits that are in the custody of the house of commons iii. 131

* Which is opposed by the managers iii. 131

* And over-ruled by the lords iii. 135

* The court think themselves under no obligation to assist the prisoner with the depositions taken by a justice of peace concerning him iii. 135

* The third day of trial iii. 136

* The

- * The managers produce the affidavit my lord desires iii. 137
 - * A peer may give evidence, though he be a judge in the cause iii. 141
 - * The king's witnesses ought not to be debarred hearing what the prisoner's witnesses depose iii. 141
 - * The lord Stafford calls his witnesses against Dugdale iii. 141
 - * Endeavours to prove him forsworn in a former trial iii. 150
 - * A journal of the house of lords read, as evidence for the prisoner iii. 152
 - * Oates's examination read iii. 153
 - * Dugdale's examination taken by the justices, as it was entered on the lords journal, read as evidence for the prisoner iii. 156
 - * Turberville's examination read iii. 159
 - * The lords adjourn iii. 163
 - * The fourth day's trial iii. 163
 - * The prisoner insists, that Oates is not a credible witness, having acknowledged his hypocrisy and dissimulation with God and man iii. 168
 - * The managers call other witnesses, to support the testimony of the first iii. 170
 - * The managers endeavour to discredit my lord Stafford's witnesses iii. 173
 - * The lords Stamford and Lovelace sworn for the king iii. 183
 - * The lords adjourn iii. 185
 - * The fifth day iii. 185
 - * The lord Stafford desires he may examine witnesses, to discredit those who had been produced to discredit his iii. 186
 - * Which is allowed him iii. 186
 - * The lord Stafford makes his observations on the evidence iii. 187
 - * A member of the house of commons sworn as a witness iii. 189
 - * Sir William Jones sums up the evidence for the commons iii. 190
 - * He answers the prisoner's objections to the credit of their witnesses iii. 193
 - * The test first imposed iii. 198, 199
 - * Mr. Powle's speech at the summing up the evidence iii. 200
 - * His lordship's exceptions in point of law answered by the managers iii. 201
 - * Whether those large allowances made Oates, Bedloe, &c. were not some objection to their testimony iii. 202
 - * Counsel may not argue as to the law and course of parliaments iii. 208
 - * The judges deliver their opinions, that two witnesses to every overt-act are not necessary; but one to one overt-act, and another to another, is sufficient iii. 204
 - * The lords adjourn iii. 205
 - * The sixth day iii. 205
 - * The lord Stafford petitions the lords to be heard again iii. 206
 - * He repeats some points of law he had insisted on before iii. 206
 - * The prisoner declares his opinion of the several plots charged on the papists since the Reformation iii. 207
 - * A toleration granted by king Charles II. to all dissenters iii. 207
 - * The dissenters permitted to offer their reasons to the house of lords against the penal laws iii. 207
 - * A comprehension designed iii. 207
 - * His lordship concludes with solemn protestations of his innocence iii. 208
 - * The managers reply to what his lordship last offered iii. 210
 - * The seventh day iii. 211
 - * The lord high steward takes their lordships votes iii. 211
 - * Thirty-one find the lord Stafford not guilty, and fifty-five guilty iii. 211
 - * The lords adjourn to their house iii. 211
 - * The commons, with their speaker, go up to the lords house, and demand judgment iii. 212
 - * A judgment for high-treason must be in usual form, or the king loses his forfeitures, &c. iii. 213
 - * The lord high steward's speech to the prisoner before judgment iii. 213
 - * Judgment pronounced, to be hanged, drawn, and quartered, &c. iii. 214
 - * The king issues a writ to the sheriffs to execute the prisoner, by cutting off his head only iii. 214
 - * Shingby Bathel and Henry Cornish, sheriffs, apply to the lords for their direction as to the execution, who declare the king's writ ought to be obeyed iii. 215
 - * The sheriffs also apply to the commons iii. 215
 - * Who concur in opinion with the lords iii. 215
 - * Lord Stafford's speech at execution iii. 215
 - * He is beheaded iii. 215
- STAGE-PLAYERS. See HISTRIOMASTIX.
- STAMFORD, Lord.
- In lord Stamford's case, in king James the second's reign, A.D. 1685, where there was one positive and a strong circumstantial evidence, yet the lords thought that not sufficient to find him guilty vi. 427. See DELAMERE Lord.
- STAMFORD, Sir WILLIAM.
- This judge's book mislaid lord Coke vii. 150
- A judge of great authority vii. 182
- * STANDSFIELD, PHILIP, Son of Sir James Standfield, of New Mills, near Edinburgh, vii. 283
- * His trial, as well for high-treason, as the murder of his father, Feb. 6, 1688, 4 Jac. II. vi. 283
- * The indictment, in which are crimes of different natures vi. 283
- * The prisoner's counsel answer the charge iv. 285
- * His majesty's advocate replies to the defence, and opens the evidence iv. 287
- * The prisoner's counsel rejoin iv. 290
- * The jury, consisting of fifteen persons, are sworn, and the evidence is given iv. 292
- * Proof of the prisoner's drinking confusion to the king; which in Scotland is high-treason iv. 293
 - * Of his cursing his father; which is there punished with death iv. 293
 - * Circumstantial evidence admitted, of his being the author of his father's murder iv. 295
 - * The surgeons who inspected the corpse give their reasons why they believe James was not drowned, but strangled iv. 297
 - * The college of physicians of the same opinion iv. 297
 - * Two infants permitted to declare what they knew of the murder, before the jury, without oath iv. 300
 - * Sir George Mackenzie's speech to the inquest iv. 301
 - * The prisoner is convicted, and receives sentence iv. 304
- STANLEY, Sir WILLIAM,
- His trial for high-treason, 1494-5, 10 Hen. VII. xi. 1
- Sir Robert Clifford was his accuser xi. 1, 2
- His offence xi. 1, 2
- He is examined xi. 2
- Reckoned the richest subject in the kingdom xi. 2
- Arraigned, condemned, and beheaded xi. 2
- * STAPLETON, Sir MILES, Bart.
- * His trial for high-treason, at the assizes for the county of York, June 18, 1681, 33 Car. II. iii. 317
 - * The indictment removed to the King's-Bench; but the prisoner sent back to Yorkshire to be tried iii. 317
 - * The indictment for conspiring the king's death, and the subversion of the established religion and government iii. 317
 - * A challenge offered by the king's counsel against a juror, because he gave his dogs the names of Oates and Bedloe, the king's witnesses; but not allowed, which would have been allowed had there been proof iii. 317
 - * The trial put off till next assizes, for want of jurors iii. 318
 - * The trial comes on at the summer assizes iii. 318
 - * Sir Thomas Stringer's speech before evidence iii. 318
 - * The king's witnesses called iii. 319
 - * They gave evidence, first of the plot in general iii. 319
 - * Bolton's evidence against Sir Miles in particular iii. 320, 321
 - * Sir Miles's defence iii. 322
 - * Mr. justice Dolben directs the jury, and tells them, there being no records of conviction produced against the king's witnesses, they ought to be deemed competent witnesses iii. 323
 - * Mr. baron Gregory's direction to the jury iii. 328
 - * Sir Miles is acquitted iii. 328
- * STAR-CHAMBER.
- The court of Star-chamber was by common law, confirmed by stat. 3 Hen. VII. chap. 1. and dissolved by stat. 16 Car. I. chap. 10. Em. Pref. xii.
- Prisoner laid in irons by command from the Star-chamber vii. 271
- * Difference among the commissioners as to a sentence in this court, and their speeches i. 408, &c.
- Judgments given in the court of Star-chamber, especially in cases of libels, are good law at this day ix. 310
- Lord chief justice Holt declared, that B. R. possessed all the lawful power the Star-chamber had ix. 310
- Sir Edward Coke says, that the Star-chamber is a most ancient and honourable court ix. 310
- Mr. West, lord chancellor of Ireland, author of "A Discourse concerning Treasons and Bills of Attainder;" and also of "An Enquiry into the Manner of creating Peers," speaks much in commendation of this court ix. 310
- Sir Thomas Mallet, one of the justices of B. R. wrote a treatise on this court, and observes therein, that it was the most ancient of any court of justice, and the mother court of the kingdom ix. 312, 313
- There is an original manuscript treatise concerning the Star-chamber in the British Museum xi. 329
- Stat. 3 Hen. VII. chap. 1. was the foundation of the court of Star-chamber xi. 337. See BASTWICK JOHN.
- BEDFORD Earl of.
- CHAMBERS RICHARD.
- DAVISON.
- FOWLIS Sir DAVID.
- LEIGHTON D.D.
- PRIEST WILLIAM.
- PRYNNE WILLIAM.
- SHERFIELD HENRY.
- SAINT JOHN OLIVER.
- TALBOT WILLIAM.
- WHITELOCKE JAMES.
- STARKEY, HENRY ii. 1010. See ANDERSON, & al.
- STATE T E.
- In ancient times, more especially in the reign of Henry VIII. to be accused of a crime against the state, and to be convicted, were almost the same thing xi. 10
- STATE LAW.
- The ship-money judges were impeached for holding, that state-necessity would justify the raising money without consent of parliament, and that the king was judge of that necessity i. 711. xi. 323. See BERKLEY Sir ROBERT.
- The king himself has no more prerogative, than the judges have authority, to declare that the law may be violated for reason of state xi. 323
- Lord chancellor Bacon, when attorney-general on earl Somerset's trial, told the noble prisoner, on his wishing a witness was present, whom he named, as he could clear up many things that appeared obscure, that if he was present he could not be sworn for reasons of state i. 354
- The lord chief justice, Sir Nicholas Hyde, is said to have delivered in effect this judgment from the bench, that for several reasons of state the king may do or act contrary to law ii. 202
- Lord chief justice Camden observed, that with respect to the argument of state necessity, or a distinction that has been aimed at between state offences ferences and others, the common law does not understand that kind of reasoning, nor do our books take notice of any such distinctions xi. 322

That serjeant Ashley was committed to the Tower by the lords, only for asserting in argument that there was a law of state different from the common law xi. 323
That the constitution does not allow of reasons of state to influence the judges xi. 330

STATE PRISONERS.

Much humanity and relief is shewn and used towards state prisoners in distress in France, under an absolute and arbitrary government; and much oppression is suffered to be practised against them in England, a free and christian nation x. 76. Ap.

Whether it be lawful to commit state prisoners to the custody of messengers iv. 556, 557

Lord chancellor Parker was against setting state prisoners in the pillory x. 92. Ap. See BASTILE. NEWGATE. TREASON.

STATUTE LAW.

Criminal cases very much depend on statute law Em. Pref. i.
The best expositor of statutes is the constant received practice, ever since they were made Em. Pref. i.

The judges are the interpreters of the statute law Em. Pref. i, vi.
Statute law wants reducing into a less number of acts Em. Pref. xv.

The intent of the law-makers in the preface of the statute, is always to be considered in construing the act i. 174

Statutes to be construed according to the true intent of the legislature i. 650

By stat. 1 Hen. VI. chap. 10. proviso as to declaratory treasons in stat. 25 Edw. III. stat. 5, chap. 2, is repealed i. 761

Reason for making stat. 6 Edw. VI. concerning outlawry in treason iv. 198, 199

The preamble of an act is as the key to open the mind and meaning of the law-makers ii. 348, 465. v. 517

No crime of what nature or magnitude soever, can fall within the purview of a penal statute, but such as is identically the same in every circumstance with that described by the words of the statute itself vi. 223, 224

Several instances given of the nicety in the construction of penal statutes vi. 224

Statutes in restraint of trade to be construed literally vi. 417

A private act of parliament, though printed in an authentic collection of statutes, disallowed, if not examined with the record vi. 417

All penal laws are to be construed favourably for the benefit of the subject, and not to be extended beyond the letter vi. 622

When a statute appoints a penalty for doing a thing, which was no offence before, and appoints how to be recovered, it shall be punished by that means, and no other vi. 622, 741

The parliament roll is the original and warrant for the statute roll, and therefore of greater authority vi. 735

Statutes of jeofails extend not to criminal or other cause, where the king is party viii. 58

Statutes that prescribe new forms of trial, to be punctually complied with viii. 349

Statutes that take away clergy, are to be taken by equity x. 436

If a statute is made suppletory to the common law, in a similar case, and takes away clergy, it must be construed liberally x. 436

The preamble of an act is supposed to contain the whole substance, extent, and meaning of the act xi. 251

All statutes in pari materia are to be construed alike xi. 260

Statutes to be construed according to their meaning, and the intent of the makers xi. 320. See LEGISLATURE. STATUTES.

Stat. de attinendis vi. 708

Stat. Gloucester, chap. 9 ii. 200

Statute of Marlebridge. A mistake in chap. 26 of that statute rectified, and its true meaning explained by lord chief justice Holt ix. 61, 62

Stat. Merton, chap. 7 iv. 188. n.

Stat. de Scandal. Magnat. Writ of inquiry on this statute iii. 987. See SCANDAL. MAGNAT.

Stat. of stabbing. All the judges were of opinion, that stat. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, of stabbing, was only a declaration of the common law, and made to prevent the inconveniences of juries, who were apt to believe that to be a provocation to extenuate murder, which in law was not vii. 421, 422. ix. 533. n.

Stat. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, was enacted, when many animosities arose between the English and Scotch, who using daggers were accustomed to stab many of the English ex improviso, which could not have been done by a flat sword, the usual weapon of the English; therefore this statute was designed to secure defenceless people from surprise, supposing that whoever struck would be prepared ix. 534. n. 535. n.

Stabbing with a tobacco pipe, and with an halberd, hath been adjudged to be a stabbing within the statute, by Glynne, ch. j. ix. 535. n.

So hath with a candlestick, that being adjudged a weapon drawn by Moynard, serjeant ix. 535. n.

This is a good law, and to be interpreted strictly, by Glynne, ch. j. ix. 535. n. See CHETWYND WILLIAM.

Stat. de attinendis vi. 708

Stat. Gloucester, chap. 9 ii. 200

Statute of Marlebridge. A mistake in chap. 26 of that statute rectified, and its true meaning explained by lord chief justice Holt ix. 61, 62

Stat. Merton, chap. 7 iv. 188. n.

Stat. de Scandal. Magnat. Writ of inquiry on this statute iii. 987. See SCANDAL. MAGNAT.

Stat. of stabbing. All the judges were of opinion, that stat. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, of stabbing, was only a declaration of the common law, and made to prevent the inconveniences of juries, who were apt to believe that to be a provocation to extenuate murder, which in law was not vii. 421, 422. ix. 533. n.

Stat. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8, was enacted, when many animosities arose between the English and Scotch, who using daggers were accustomed to stab many of the English ex improviso, which could not have been done by a flat sword, the usual weapon of the English; therefore this statute was designed to secure defenceless people from surprise, supposing that whoever struck would be prepared ix. 534. n. 535. n.

Stabbing with a tobacco pipe, and with an halberd, hath been adjudged to be a stabbing within the statute, by Glynne, ch. j. ix. 535. n.

So hath with a candlestick, that being adjudged a weapon drawn by Moynard, serjeant ix. 535. n.

This is a good law, and to be interpreted strictly, by Glynne, ch. j. ix. 535. n. See CHETWYND WILLIAM.

COWLAND JOHN.

LEGISLATURE.

Stat. 1 Jac. I. chap. 8.

Stat. Woff. 1. chap. 9.

chap. 15.

Other principal Statutes cited, construed, commented on, and explained, arranged in a chronological series.

1 John, chap. 7.

9 Hen. III. chap. 19.

chap. 26.

chap. 29.

ii. 199, 201, 207. vii. 121, 130, 146. xi. 260.

See MAGNA CHARTA.

20 Hen. III. chap. 7.

52 Hen. III.

EDWARD the FIRST.

3 Edw. I. chap. 26.

6 Edw. I. chap. 9.

13 Edw. I. chap. 24.

stat. 4.

20 Edw. I. chap. 1.

27 Edw. I. chap. 3.

EDWARD the SECOND.

1 Edw. II.

9 Edw. II. stat. 2.

EDWARD the THIRD.

1 Edw. III. chap. 9.

2 Edw. III. chap. 2.

chap. 9.

5 Edw. III. chap. 8.

chap. 9.

14 Edw. III. chap. 1.

chap. 7.

20 Edw. III. chap. 1.

chap. 12.

23 Edw. III. chap. 17.

25 Edw. III. chap. 2.

chap. 3.

chap. 4.

25 Edw. III. stat. 2.

stat. 3, chap. 5.

stat. 4, chap. 1.

stat. 5, chap. 2.

i. 739, 758, 759, 761. ii. 11. iii. 419, 755, 757, 758. iv. 171, 173, 181, 184, 203, 206. v. 89, 97, 124, 125, 131. vii. 488.

27 Edw. III. stat. 2, chap. 8.

28 Edw. III. chap. 3.

See Articuli super Chartas.

28 Edw. III. chap. 9.

chap. 13.

37 Edw. III. chap. 10.

chap. 18.

38 Edw. III. chap. 1.

chap. 9.

42 Edw. III. chap. 3.

chap. 10.

chap. 13.

43 Edw. III. chap. 1.

ii. 212. See TREASON.

RICHARD the SECOND.

1 Rich. II. chap. 11.

chap. 12.

5 Rich. II. chap. 2.

chap. 6.

11 Rich. II. chap. 3.

chap. 5.

12 Rich. II. chap. 2.

FIELD, Earl of.

16 Rich. II. chap. 5.

17 Rich. II. chap. 8.

chap. 31.

21 Rich. II. chap. 11.

chap. 12.

chap. 16.

HENRY the FOURTH.

1 Hen. IV. chap. 3.

chap. 6.

chap. 10.

chap. 14.

2 Hen. IV. chap. 15.

5 Hen. IV. chap. 1.

7 Hen. IV. chap. 14.

11 Hen. IV. chap. 9.

HENRY the FIFTH.

1 Hen. V. chap. 1.

2 Hen. V. chap. 9.

stat. 2, chap. 3.

HENRY the SIXTH.

2 Hen. VI. chap. 10.

3 Hen. VI. chap. 55.

8 Hen. VI. chap. 14.

9 Hen. VI. chap. 11.

11 Hen. VI. chap. 11.

20 Hen. VI. chap. 9.

chap. 11.

23 Hen. VI. chap. 10.

chap. 15.

EDWARD the FOURTH.

4 Edw. IV. chap. 3.

7 Edw. IV. chap. 27.

9 Edw. IV. chap. 7.

HENRY the SEVENTH.

3 Hen. VII. chap. 1.

chap. 2.

4 Hen. VII. chap. 12.

chap. 13.

chap. 20.

7 Hen. VII. chap. 1.

chap. 5.

See STAR-CHAMBER.

v. 449. See SIMPSON HAAGEN.

ii. 201.

xi. 257, 259, 263, 264.

xi. 94, 233.

iv. 167.

10 Hen.

See MAGNA CHARTA.

20 Hen. III. chap. 7.

52 Hen. III.

EDWARD the FIRST.

3 Edw. I. chap. 26.

6 Edw. I. chap. 9.

13 Edw. I. chap. 24.

stat. 4.

20 Edw. I. chap. 1.

27 Edw. I. chap. 3.

EDWARD the SECOND.

1 Edw. II.

9 Edw. II. stat. 2.

EDWARD the THIRD.

1 Edw. III. chap. 9.

2 Edw. III. chap. 2.

chap. 9.

5 Edw. III. chap. 8.

chap. 9.

14 Edw. III. chap. 1.

chap. 7.

20 Edw. III. chap. 1.

chap. 12.

23 Edw. III. chap. 17.

25 Edw. III. chap. 2.

chap. 3.

chap. 4.

25 Edw. III. stat. 2.

stat. 3, chap. 5.

stat. 4, chap. 1.

stat. 5, chap. 2.

i. 739, 758, 759, 761. ii. 11. iii. 419, 755, 757, 758. iv. 171, 173, 181, 184, 203, 206. v. 89, 97, 124, 125, 131. vii. 488.

27 Edw. III. stat. 2, chap. 8.

28 Edw. III. chap. 3.

See Articuli super Chartas.

28 Edw. III. chap. 9.

chap. 13.

37 Edw. III. chap. 10.

chap. 18.

38 Edw. III. chap. 1.

chap. 9.

42 Edw. III. chap. 3.

chap. 10.

chap. 13.

43 Edw. III. chap. 1.

ii. 212. See TREASON.

RICHARD the SECOND.

1 Rich. II. chap. 11.

chap. 12.

5 Rich. II. chap. 2.

chap. 6.

11 Rich. II. chap. 3.

chap. 5.

12 Rich. II. chap. 2.

FIELD, Earl of.

16 Rich. II. chap. 5.

17 Rich. II. chap. 8.

chap. 31.

21 Rich. II. chap. 11.

chap. 12.

chap. 16.

HENRY the FOURTH.

1 Hen. IV.</

- 10 Hen. VII. chap. 12 i. 745, 749
 11 Hen. VII. chap. 7 vii. 227, 232
- HENRY the EIGHTH.
 4 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 vii. 217, 244, 247, 249, 252, 253
 ——— chap. 3 iv. 187
 ——— chap. 8 vii. 217, 244, 247, 249, 252, 253
 22 Hen. VIII. chap. 9 i. 335, v. 51
 23 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 iv. 436
 ——— chap. 3 iv. 187
 25 Hen. VIII. chap. 19 xi. 213, 261
 27 Hen. VIII. chap. 4 xi. 229
 ——— chap. 10 vii. 245
 ——— chap. 11 xi. 316, 317
 ——— chap. 24 ii. 14
 28 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 xi. 259
 ——— chap. 15 vii. 245
 31 Hen. VIII. chap. 10 xi. 316
 32 Hen. VIII. chap. 3 xi. 259
 ——— chap. 4 v. 114
 33 Hen. VIII. chap. 1 ix. 76
 ——— chap. 20 ii. 7, iv. 206
 35 Hen. VIII. chap. 2 v. 114, viii. 342, 344, 345, 346, xi. 126
 ——— chap. 6 iv. 190
- EDWARD the SIXTH.
 1 Edw. VI. chap. 11 xi. 263, 264
 1 Edw. VI. chap. 12 i. 749, ii. 40, 173, iv. 181, v. 82, 90, 131, 133, vii. 220, xi. 257, 258, 259, 263, 264
 3 and 4 Edw. VI. chap. 5 vii. 220, 227
 ——— chap. 16 xi. 264
 5 and 6 Edw. VI. chap. 11 ii. 40, 173, iv. 181, 198, v. 82, 102
 ——— chap. 16 vi. 622, 631, 709, 710, 712, 740
 ——— chap. 26 iv. 198, 199
 7 Edw. VI. chap. 11 vii. 233
- PHILIP and MARY.
 1 Mar. fef. 1. chap. 1 i. 760, viii. 346
 ——— chap. 10 xi. 126
 ——— set. 2, chap. 12 vii. 227, 233
 1 and 2 P. and M. chap. 3 vii. 220
 ——— chap. 10 ii. 7, iv. 169, 206, viii. 346
 ——— chap. 11 v. 135
 ——— chap. 13 v. 66
 2 and 3 P. and M. chap. 12 vi. 66
 ——— chap. 17 iv. 173
 4 and 5 P. and M. chap. 4 xi. 264
- QUEEN ELIZABETH.
 1 El. chap. 1 vii. 232
 ——— chap. 2 vii. 231
 ——— chap. 6 vii. 231, 232
 ——— chap. 7 vii. 238
 ——— chap. 16 vii. 227, 233
 10 El. chap. 6 ii. 199
 13 El. chap. 1 ii. 200, vii. 220
 ——— chap. 2 i. 759, vii. 220, 238
 ——— chap. 10 vii. 154
 14 El. chap. 1 vii. 227, 233
 ——— chap. 2 vii. 228, 235
 18 El. chap. 7 xi. 257, 258, 259, 264
 23 El. chap. 2 vii. 220, 231, 232, 238
 27 El. chap. 2 ii. 11, 1018, vii. 238
 28 El. chap. 8 iv. 190
 35 El. chap. 1 vii. 226, 238
- JAMES the FIRST.
 1 Jac. 1. chap. 1 ii. 9, 10
 ——— chap. 2 ii. 10
 ——— chap. 8 ix. 533. See
- CHETWYND WILLIAM.
DUELS.
MURDER.
STABBING.
 ——— chap. 11 xi. 34, 89, 99, 101, 209, 222, 223, 230. See
- BIGAMY.
FIELDING.
MARRIAGE.
MODERS.
KINGSTON, Ducheſs of.
PEERS.
POLYGAMY.
SENTENCES.
 ——— chap. 13 xi. 337
 ——— chap. 33 vii. 238
 3 Jac. I. chap. 3 ii. 10
 4 Jac. I. chap. 1 ii. 9, 10, 11
 7 Jac. I. chap. 1 ii. 11
 ——— chap. 5 xi. 315, 319
 21 Jac. I. chap. 3 vii. 518
 ——— chap. 6 xi. 258, 259, 264
- CHARLES the FIRST.
 16 Car. I. chap. 10 See STAR-CHAMBER.
- CHARLES the SECOND.
 13 Car. II. chap. 1 viii. 68
 22 and 23 Car. II. chap. 1 vi. 217. See
- COVENTRY ACT.
MATIMING.
WOODBURNE JOHN.
 25 Car. II. chap. 2 vii. 612. See HALES Sir EDWARD.
 30 Car. II. stat. 2, chap. 1 xi. 263
- WILLIAM and MARY.
 3 and 4 W. and M. chap. 9 xi. 257, 258, 259, 264
 4 and 5 W. and M. chap. 18 xi. 374. See WILKES JOHN.
 7 Will. III. chap. 3 iv. 662, 670, 671, 741, v. 18, vi. 74, 76. See
- CRANBURN CHARLES.
ROOKWOOD AMBROSE.
 ——— chap. 7 iv. 667, 677
 9 and 10 Will. III. chap. 15 xi. 338
 ——— chap. 32 xi. 261
 11 and 12 Will. III. chap. 2 xi. 137, 337
 12 and 1 Will. III. chap. 3 xi. 35, 337
 ——— chap. 12 xi. 137
 ——— chap. 15 xi. 137
- QUEEN ANNE.
 2 and 3 Anne. chap. 18 xi. 305
 6 Anne. chap. 7 ix. 7-8
- GEORGE the FIRST.
 9 Geo. I. chap. 22 viii. 313. See
- ARNOLD EDWARD.
BLACK ACT.
BARNARD WILLIAM.
GEORGE the SECOND.
 19 Geo. II. chap. 34 See MURRAY JOHN. SURRENDER.
 24 Geo. II. chap. 44 xi. 314, 315, 316, 319
 25 Geo. II. chap. 37 x. 518, x. 208, 216, Ap.
 26 Geo. II. chap. 33 xi. 68, 95, 102, 224, 234
- GEORGE the THIRD.
 12 Geo. III. chap. 11 xi. 295. See ROYAL FAMILY.
 * STAYLEY, WILLIAM.
 * His trial at the King's-Bench bar for treasonable words, 30 Car. II. 1678
 ii. 656
 * The substance of the indictment, being for treasonable words spoke in French ii. 656. See vi. 330
 * Sir William Jones, attorney general, his speech ii. 656
 * The evidence ii. 66
 * The prisoner's defence ii. 658
 * The chief justice sums up the evidence, and shews the danger of popery ii. 659
 * Directs the jury to make the prisoner an example ii. 659
 * The prisoner is convicted, and sentence passed ii. 659
 * This proceeding afterwards censured as violent and precipitate, to pass sentence on the day of conviction in the court of King's-Bench iv. 779
 An account of the digging up his quarters, because his relations abused the king's mercy viii. 439
- STEDMAN, MARY. See GERMAN PRINCESS.
STEEL, WILLIAM.
 His argument for the commonwealth, on the trial of James duke of Hamilton for high-treason ii. 7
STEEL, Mr.
 Opens indictment against smugglers for murder ix. 720
STEPHEN.
 In the time of king Stephen, the pope gained appeals to the court of Rome xi. 72
- * STEPHENS, ELLIS. See COWPER SPENCER, & al.
STERLING. See MONEY.
 * STERNE, JOHN. ii. 466. See BOROSKI.
STEVENSON, JOHN.
 His trial at Chester affizes for murder, 27 April, 1759, 32 Geo. II.
 x. 462
 The indictment x. 462
 Prisoner challenged Abraham Darlington as he came to be sworn; but no cause was assigned for such challenge x. 463
 The attorney-general (Mr. Hall) challenged Edward Hammett as he came to be sworn, as he owned he was related to the prisoner, and allowed x. 463
 Attorney-general opens the case and evidence x. 463
 Evidence to prove the facts x. 464
 Prisoner called no witnesses, nor said any thing in his defence x. 471
 Mr. recorder Townsend's speech, of counsel for the prisoner x. 472
Perry, also counsel for the prisoner x. 472
 Mr. Maddocks, on same side x. 473
 Pleads for a special verdict, and not to be left to the determination of the jury, on account of the illegality of the process x. 473
 Mr. justice Swinnerton asked, if they could shew any case to the court, where an arrest under a blank warrant had been superſeded x. 474
 Answered, at present they could not x. 474
 Mr. Hall, counsel for the crown, in reply, cites the case of Haris against Abley, where a sheriff's clerk filled up the assignment of a bail-bond, and it was held good x. 474, 476
 Mr. Falconer on the same side x. 475
 Mr. Townsend, for the prisoner x. 476
 Mr. justice White, no instrument or writing is a deed until it is delivered, but a warrant is a warrant as soon as it is sealed x. 476
 What a dangerous confusion would be created in the country, were the proceedings upon arrests made by blank warrants to be now set aside x. 476
 Mr. justice Far's opinion upon arrests and processes x. 476
 If a process be defective, or a mistake in the name or addition, or if the name of the officer be inserted without authority, and after issuing of the process, or the officer exceeds the limits of his authority, and is killed, it will amount to no more than manslaughter x. 476
 Counsel declaring no delay was intended, court consented to have a special verdict found x. 477
 Special verdict x. 477
 Mr.

Mr. justice Noel's opinion, that the prisoner's crime was only manslaughter; he was burnt in the hand and discharged x. 478

STEWART, Lady ARABELLA. See

RALEIGH Sir WALTER.

ROYAL FAMILY.

SHREWSBURY Countess of.

See xi. 297, 299

STEWART, ARCHIBALD, Esq.

Tried for neglect of duty, and misbehaviour in his office, as lord provost of Edinburgh, at the time the rebels got possession of that city, June 8, 1747, 20 Geo. II. ix. 589

Bailed by the duke of Newcastle ix. 589

Lords of justiciary continue the diet ix. 589

Debates against his discharge ix. 590

Indictment against him ix. 591

Information for his majesty's advocate ix. 594

Information for him against his majesty's advocate ix. 610

The lords of justiciary remit the pannel, with the libel found as relevant, to the knowledge of an assize ix. 629

Debate about citing a witness ix. 629

Dismiss the pannel ix. 630

Second trial ix. 630

List of assize or jury ix. 631

Papers and list of witnesses against him ix. 632

The evidence against him ix. 633, &c.

List of witnesses for him ix. 667

Proofs for his exculpation ix. 668

Found not guilty, nem. con. ix. 679

His jury having sat 94 hours, and undergone great fatigue, the court ordered, none of them should be summoned on any assize for five years ix. 679

STEWART, JAMES,

His trial for murder in Scotland, September 1752, 25 Geo. II. x. 40

The indictment against him x. 40

List of persons names that are to pass on the assize, or jury x. 44

Proceedings at the first diet of court x. 44

Advocates for and against him x. 45

Prisoner pleads not guilty x. 45

Mr. Walter Stewart's speech for him, on the relevancy x. 45

Mr. Mackintosh on the same side x. 51

Mr. Fraser's speech against the prisoner x. 56

Mr. James Erskine against the pannel x. 62

Lord advocate against the pannel x. 64

Mr. Thomas Miller, for the prisoner x. 68

The interlocutor upon the relevancy x. 72

Proceedings at the second diet of court x. 72, 73

The assize or jury x. 72, 73

The whole proof brought on the part of the prosecutors, and on the part of the pannel x. 73, &c.

The several letters produced at the trial x. 105

Lord advocate's speech to the jury after closing the evidence x. 106

Mr. Brown's speech for the pannel, after closing the evidence x. 125

Verdict of the jury unanimous, that he was guilty x. 137

Sentence and interlocutor of the judges x. 137

Lord justice-general's speech at pronouncing sentence x. 138

The prisoner's speech x. 138

He is executed x. 138

* STIRLING, ARCHIBALD v. 630. See

STIRLING JAMES, & al.

* STIRLING, CHARLES v. 630. See

STIRLING JAMES, & al.

* STIRLING, JAMES.

* Archibald Seaton, Archibald Stirling, Charles Stirling, and Patrick Edmondson, their trial for high-treason, at Edinburgh, Nov. 15, 1708, 7 Anne, before George earl of Cromartie, lord justice-general, and the rest of the lords of justiciary there v. 630

* The indictment for taking up arms, adhering to and corresponding with the French king and the Pretender, and favouring their intended invasion of Scotland, in 1707 v. 630

* Her majesty's letter to the lord advocate, directing him to prosecute the prisoners v. 631

* The prisoners' petition for counsel, which is granted v. 631

* The prisoners' information or plea to the charge v. 632

* The lord advocate's replication v. 635

* The court adjudge the charge to be sufficient v. 639

* The jury sworn, being 15 in number v. 639

* The evidence produced against the prisoners v. 639

* The verdict brought in in writing, and subscribed by the foreman; the prisoners acquitted v. 640

* They are assized (or discharged)

STOCKS.

Nicholas Brambre, mayor of London, caused great and monstrous stocks to be made in his mayoralty, to imprison men in i. 14. n.

STORY'S CASE.

There are above forty places in our printed law-books where this case is cited, and agreed to be law iii. 775

STOUGHTON, Sir NICHOLAS,

Ordered into custody, for prosecuting an appeal in the house of lords against Mr. Onslow, during the time of parliament. See Fagg

Sir JOHN.

STOUT, SARAH. See viii. 488, 490, 497, 506. COWPER

SPENCER.

STOWE, JOHN,

Extracts from his Chronicle xi. 5

Extracts from his Annals xi. 10

STRACEY, Recorder of London,

Passed sentence of treason on Matthews ix. 716

Vol. XI.

* STRAFFORD, THOMAS Earl of,

* His trial before the house of lords, on an impeachment for high-treason, March 22, 1640, 16 Car. I. i. 723

* Nine general articles exhibited against him i. 723

* Twenty-eight special articles i. 723

* The earl of Strafford's answer to the 28 special articles i. 730

* The trial comes on i. 736

* The place of trial described, and the manner of bringing the prisoner to the bar, &c. i. 736

* No ax to be carried before a prisoner impeached i. 736

* The king, queen and prince at the trial i. 736

* Earl of Arundel, lord high steward i. 736

* The articles and answer read i. 736

* Mr. Pym opens the charge; the earl permitted to reply to him i. 736

* Three additional articles, framed against him after the commencement of the trial i. 737

* He is compelled to answer them presently i. 737

* The managers names i. 738

* He is charged with accumulative treason i. 738

* He shews he is misrepresented in that expression he was charged with, "that the king's little finger should be heavier to them than the loins of the law" i. 738. See xi. 131

* From his words they proceed to his actions; and first against the lives of the subjects, as against the lord Mountnorris and another, who were condemned by martial law i. 739. See viii. 350

* Charge, that he had not only exercised a tyrannical government over the lives, but the lands and goods of the subject i. 740

* That he granted a commission for the apprehending such as refused to submit to the ecclesiastical ordinances i. 741

* His procuring a lease of the customs, and then raising the book of rates, whereby he had gained 26,000l. yearly i. 741

* His monopolizing tobacco i. 742

* The charge concerning flax i. 743

* Charged with sending troops of soldiers to execute his decrees against the subjects lands and goods i. 744

* That he restrained the subjects from coming over to England, to offer their complaints against him i. 745

* His imposing an oath upon the Scots in Ireland i. 746

* His design of reducing the kingdoms of England and Scotland by force of arms, and bringing them under the same arbitrary government he had introduced in Ireland i. 747

* Endeavoured to be proved from several speeches the earl let fall i. 748

* That he advised the king to exact ship-money i. 750

* And threatened the lord mayor, &c. for not giving in a list of those who were able to lend money i. 750

* The earl shews that accumulative treason was never heard of before; and where none of the particular articles amounted to treason, neither could any number of them i. 750

* Charged with advising the king to imbase the coin, and seize upon the bullion in the Mint i. 751

* With imposing 8d. a day on the county of York, for maintaining the trained-bands, and levying it by force i. 752

* With a design of landing the Irish army in England i. 753

* The lords and commons break up abruptly, upon the commons insisting to offer further proofs after the close of the process, and refusing the same liberty to the earl i. 754

* Agreed, at a conference between the two houses, that no further proof shall be offered on either side i. 754

* The earl sums up the evidence, and makes his observations on it i. 754

* Speaks particularly to the 28th article, and suggests some reasons why it was dropped by the commons i. 756

* Mr. Glynn replies upon him i. 757

* Mr. Pym seconds him i. 757

* Debates in the house of commons, upon bringing in a bill of attainder against the earl i. 758

* The commons threaten the lords, if they refuse to concur in a bill of attainder i. 758

* The lords hear my lord Strafford's counsel, as to matter of law; but the commons refuse to attend at their bar, or reply any more in public, having passed the bill of attainder in their own house i. 759

* The names of the earl's counsel, and the substance of their arguments i. 759

* 1. That the 25 Edw. III. is a declarative law, and cannot be interpreted by equity i. 759

* 2. A penal law will admit of no constructions or inferences beyond the letter of it i. 759

* The doing one or more acts of injustice cannot be termed the subversion of the fundamental laws i. 759

* The case of John de la Pole, duke of Suffolk, cited; where the same offences the earl was charged with were adjudged but felony i. 759

* That the earl was not charged with having subverted, but only with an intention to subvert, &c. i. 760

* And the intention was only treasonable, where it was against the king's life, &c. by the 25 Edw. III. i. 760

* The rest of the offences there enumerated, do not become treasonable, unless the party proceeds to action i. 760

* No treason at common law at this day; and the parliament cannot declare any thing to be treason which is not so already by some statute in being i. 760

* That by the 1 Hen. VI. 10, the proviso as to declaratory treasons, in the 25 Edw. III. is repealed, and no man hath been declared a traitor, either by king or parliament, since that statute, except he had offended against the letter of some statute i. 761

* The earl's counsel desire their lordships, that a state of the question may be made for them to argue upon i. 761

6 H

* Upon

- * Upon this the house adjourned, and never met again upon this occasion, the commons insisting on their bill of attainder i. 761
- * The lords and commons meet at a conference in the hall, where the king, queen, and prince, were present, incog. but nothing is spoken by any one but by Mr. St. John, whose speech tended to furnish the houses with arguments for the bill of attainder i. 761
- * The king's speech to the house of commons against passing a bill of attainder i. 761
- * It passes the lords i. 762
- * The earl's letter to the king i. 762
- * The royal assent given i. 762
- * The earl's behaviour at his execution i. 762
- * His dying speech i. 763
- * The act for reversing his attainder i. 764. See vi. 408
- * The names of the Straffordians i. 765
- STRANGE, JOHN.
- His argument for earl Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), impeached by the commons for high crimes and misdemeanours, in selling the places of masters in chancery vi. 669, 678
- Opens indictment against Hales for forgery ix. 67, 77
- Of counsel against Kinnerley for forgery ix. 93, 94
- Cross-examines the witnesses for Bambridge and Corbet, on appeal of murder ix. 155
- States a point of law for them ix. 176
- His motion for Atton's discharge ix. 226
- His motion to admit Atton to bail ix. 226
- Opens defence for Franklin, for a libel ix. 270
- His opinion respecting murder, and whether an appeal proper in case of a pardon ix. 538, 539
- His report of Chetwynd's case for murder ix. 539
- Of counsel against Townley for treason ix. 545
- Against the Kinlocks for treason ix. 571
- Opens nature of Bradshaw's crime ix. 576
- His observations on his defence ix. 578
- Argues that civil process against Macdonald, committed for treason, should be discharged ix. 586
- His argument against the objection, that an attainted person is not a competent witness in treason ix. 658, 664
- His recapitulation of the evidence on lord Loval's trial for treason ix. 726
- Opens the indictment against William Hales x. 96. Ap.
- His speech for Henry Moore, against mayor, &c. of Hastings x. 138. Ap.
- States the case, and observes on the fine x. 139. Ap.
- His Reports cited xi. 206
- Condemned xi. 221
- Defended xi. 233, 235
- * STREATER, JOHN.
- * His case on a writ of habeas corpus, at the Upper-Bench, in Westminster-Hall, in Mich. and Hil. Terms, 1653, 5 Car. II. ii. 195
- * The habeas corpus ii. 195
- * The act of state, prohibiting the lieutenant of the Tower to obey a habeas corpus, in the case of John Lilburne ii. 196
- * Captain Streater's argument to the first part of the return ii. 197
- * His argument to the second part ii. 200
- * The long parliament dissolved by Oliver ii. 204
- * An alias habeas corpus, in the name of Oliver the Protector ii. 204
- * The return thereof ii. 205
- * All persons prohibited to say the long parliament was in being ii. 206
- * The Protector swears to govern according to law ii. 207
- * The argument which Streater had prepared, if there was occasion for it ii. 207
- * A commitment for publishing seditious pamphlets, too general ii. 210
- * Orders of parliament determine with the sessions ii. 210
- * The court discharges the prisoner ii. 211
- STREET, Sir THOMAS, Baron of Exchequer.
- His charge to the jury on Bulby's trial for treason iii. 338
- Tells them, that officiating as a priest sufficient evidence of being in orders iii. 339
- He was of opinion (contrary to the other eleven judges) that the king could not dispense with the law vii. 616
- STRICKLAND, MARY. See BUTLER MARY.
- STRIKING in the KING'S PALACE.
- Ceremony of inflicting punishment for that offence xi. 16. See
- DEVONSHIRE Earl of. KNEVETT Sir EDMUND.
- STRINGER, Sir THOMAS.
- His speech before evidence, on the trial of Sir Miles Stapleton, baronet, for treason, in conspiring the death of the king, and subversion of religion and government iii. 318
- * STRINGMAN, DANIEL v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
- STRODE, RICHARD.
- Resolved by all the judges, met at Serjeants-Inn, that the act, 4 Hen. VIII. chap. 8. concerning him, was a particular act of parliament vii. 217
- Urged to be a general act vii. 244, 437
- E contra* vii. 247
- STRODE, THOMAS, Serjeant at Law.
- Concerned for the crown on the prosecution of Anderson for treason ii. 995
- Of counsel for Benjamin Harris for a libel ii. 1038
- STROUD, WILLIAM, Esq.
- Walter Long*, and John Selden, squires, proceedings against them vii. 217
- The speaker of the house of commons held in the chair, till some protests were made vii. 217
- The parliament dissolved, and some members summoned before the council vii. 217
- Some refusing to answer out of parliament, committed to the Tower, and the studies of others sealed up vii. 217

- Some questions put to the judges concerning offences committed by members of parliament in parliament, and their answers vii. 218
- The return of the habeas corpus for Mr. Stroud, and others vii. 219
- Mr. Stk and Mr. Mason argue against the return vii. 219
- Serjeant Berkley for the return vii. 221
- Serjeant Davenport on the same side vii. 223
- Mr. Littleton's argument against it vii. 224
- Mr. Selden's argument against it vii. 229
- Sir Robert Heath's argument for it vii. 236
- The prisoners, who were in the marshal's custody, removed to the Tower the evening before the court were to give their judgment vii. 239
- Two letters from the king to the judges of the King's-Bench vii. 239
- The king sends for the judges to London vii. 240
- The prisoners remanded, because they would not find sureties for their good behaviour vii. 241
- Mr. Stroud, and Sir Miles Hobart, charged in informations with escaping out of the Gatehouse vii. 241
- Brought in not guilty vii. 241
- The judges resolve, that a prisoner departing from prison, though with the keeper's licence, is punishable, as well as the keeper vii. 241
- STRYPE.
- Extracts from his Memorials xi. 15
- STUART FAMILY.
- The reasons for the disaffection of the nation to the government, during the reigns of the Stuart family iv. 165
- * STUBBS, FRANCIS ii. 478. See TONGE, & al.
- SUBORNATION.
- Indictment for subornation of perjury vi. 12. Ap. See ii. *306. iv. *47.
- PRICE ANNE. TASBOROUGH JOHN.
- SUBMISSION.
- Lord chancellor Bacon's submission i. 383. See vi. 597.
- Submission of the duke of Somerset vii. 13, 14
- The submission of the marquis of Argyle was not accepted by the parliament vii. 392
- The duke of Norfolk's submission xi. 19, 20
- SUBSCRIPTIONS.
- Lord chancellor Harwich's, in his speech as lord high steward, on passing sentence on the rebel lords, in the year 1745, observed, that the several county meetings, for subscribing money to raise men, &c. for the defence of the king and his government; and at which men of property of all ranks and orders crowded in with liberal subscriptions; of their own motion, without authority of parliament, or the king's licence, beyond the example of former times, and uncompelled by law; was most legal and warrantable, notwithstanding what had been ignorantly and presumptuously suggested to the contrary ix. 614. x. 90. Ap. n.
- SUDLEY, Lord.
- Some passages in Hugh Latimer's sermons, touching this nobleman's death vii. 10. 11. See SEYMOUR Lord SUDLEY.
- SUFFOLK, Earl of.
- Michael de la Pole*, earl of Suffolk, and chancellor of England, was dismissed from his chancellorship, and immediately after impeached of high crimes and misdemeanours by the commons i. 1
- Copy of the articles of impeachment i. 1. See POLE MICHAEL DE LA.
- Charged at the bar of the house of lords with speaking scandalous words of Mr. Selden, member of the house of commons, and one of the managers of the conference, 4 Car. I. vii. 182
- SUITS.
- The excellency of the English laws does not consist in civil suits Em. Pref. iii.
- SUPREMACY.
- The words in the oath of supremacy, "that the king is the only supreme governor in these realms," excludes any coordinate power ii. 368
- See CROOK JOHN, and others.
- FISHER JOHN, Bishop of Rochester.
- HALES Sir EDWARD.
- MOORE Sir THOMAS.
- i. 59, 62.
- SURGEON. See WITNESSES.
- SURRENDER.
- The manner of surrendering, in order to avoid an attainder by act of parliament ix. 652
- Copy of the record ix. 664
- What military men mean by surrender at discretion x. 550
- SURREY.
- Henry* earl of Surrey, his trial for treason, Oct. 13, 1546, 37 Hen. VIII. xi. 18
- Accused xi. 20
- He is committed xi. 18, 20
- Arraigned xi. 18
- His defence xi. 18
- Condemned xi. 19, 20
- Judgment xi. 19
- Beheaded xi. 19, 20
- SUSPENSION. See
- COMPTON HENRY.
- FOGG CHRISTOPHER.
- PEACHEL JOHN.
- SHARP JOHN.
- SHAW, JOHN.
- His case for petit treason, for the murder of his master x. 36
- His confession x. 37
- Is executed x. 39. See JEFFERIES ELIZABETH.
- SWENDSEN, HAGEN.
- His trial for forcibly marrying Phosant Rawlins; and of Sarah Baynton, John

- John Hartwell*, and John Spurr, who abetted and assisted him, Nov. 25, 1702, 1 Anna v. 449
- * A motion to put off the trial, for want of a material witness, denied, unless some person would make oath, that such witness could not attend v. 449
 - * The defendant Swendsen being a foreigner, he had a party jury v. 449
 - * And is tried by himself v. 449
 - * Sir Simon Harcourt, solicitor-general, and Mr. serjeant Darnell, open the evidence v. 450
 - * Evidence for the king v. 451
 - * Mrs. Busby gives evidence of all the circumstances of the fact v. 452
 - * Mrs. Rawlins herself examined as an evidence against him v. 455
 - * Counsel denied the prisoner v. 456
 - * Mrs. Rawlins cross-examined by the prisoner, whether she did not encourage his addresses to her, which she denies v. 457
 - * The prisoner's witnesses examined v. 458
 - * Lord chief justice Holt sums up the evidence v. 463
 - * Resolutions of the judges, on the statute of forcible marriages v. 464
 - * Sarah Baynton is tried with Hartwell and Spurr v. 465
 - * Sir Simon Harcourt, solicitor-general, opens the evidence v. 465
 - * The king's evidence v. 466
 - * Mrs. Baynton cross-examines Mrs. Rawlins v. 471
 - * Mrs. Rawlins does not deny but she had said, she wished herself Mr. Swendsen's wife v. 472
 - * Marrying a woman while she is under a force is capital, though the party marrying her was not the author of the force v. 473
 - * Swendsen convicted v. 474
 - * Hartwell's defence v. 475
 - * A woman cannot be evidence for, or against her husband v. 476
 - * Lord chief justice sums up the evidence v. 477
 - * One may be adjudged guilty of aiding and assisting in a forcible marriage, though not present at the ceremony v. 478
 - * Mrs. Baynton convicted v. 478
 - * Hartwell and Spurr acquitted v. 478
 - * Mr. justice Powell's speech, before judgment, on Swendsen and Baynton v. 479
 - * Mrs. Baynton's execution respited, she being found quick with child v. 480
 - * Mr. Swendsen's execution, and dying speech v. 481
 - * SWINOCK, SAMUEL iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.
 - * SYMPSON, JAMES v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.

T.

- TALBOT*, Honourable CHARLES, Solicitor-General, Of counsel against Franklin for a libel ix. 260
- TALBOT, WILLIAM*, His case on information ex tenus in Star-chamber, for maintaining a power in pope to depose and kill kings xi. 116
- Speech of Sir Francis Bacon, attorney-general xi. 116
- * TALLES, Where a precept is awarded, and there is a default of jurors, there can be no tales, but a new pannel will be awarded iv. 741
- A tales cannot be awarded by commissioners of eyer and terminer, and gaol delivery iv. 742
- A tales may be awarded for default of jurors, on appeals and indictments removed into B. R. iv. 744. See JURY.
- TANFIELD*, Sir LAWRENCE, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, His speech on passing sentence on Wraynham, for slandering lord chancellor Bacon vii. 109
- TANKRED, Mr.* His case in parliament, ordered to pay the charge of attendance to a person falsely complained of viii. 111
- TAPNER, BENJAMIN*. See JACKSON WILLIAM.
- * TASBOROUGH, JOHN, and ANNE PRICE, * Their trial for subornation of perjury, 32 Car. II. 1679 ii. 1017.
- iii. 220. vii. 483
 - * The indictment ii. 1018
 - * Mr. serjeant Maynard's speech before evidence ii. 1019
 - * Sir Creswell Lewin, attorney-general, his speech ii. 1019
 - * Records of the jesuits and Langborn's convictions, produced in evidence ii. 1020
 - * Dugdale's evidence of Mrs. Price's soliciting him to retract his evidence ii. 1020
 - * Dugdale's evidence of Tasborough's tampering with him ii. 1021
 - * Mr. Sanders's defence for Mrs. Price ii. 1027
 - * Witnesses for Mrs. Price ii. 1028
 - * Mr. Pollaxfen's defence for Tasborough ii. 1030
 - * Whether justifiable to offer a witness a reward, though to speak truth ii. 1031
 - * Mr. serjeant Maynard sums up the evidence ii. 1034
 - * Mr. justice Jones sums up the evidence, and directs the jury ii. 1035
 - * Offering a witness a reward to give his evidence, criminal ii. 1035
 - * The defendants are found guilty ii. 1036
 - * Their sentence ii. 1037

TAXES.

- Mr. Hargrave gives the public hopes that he will favour them with the history of contest about taxes out of parliament, from the accession of the Stuart family, till finally decided against the crown, in 1641 xi. 29. See iv. 165.
- * TAYLOR, ALEXANDER v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al.
- * TEMPLE, JAMES ii. 399. See REGICIDES.
 - * TEMPLE, PETER ii. 399. See REGICIDES.
 - * TESTE. See WRITS.

T H E F T.

- Of the punishment of that crime Em. Pref. x.
- * THOMPSON, NATHANIEL, * William Pain, and John Farwell, tried for a misdemeanour, in framing and publishing a libel or letter to scandalize the justice of the nation, 1682, 34 Car. II. iii. 220, 505. vii. 483
- * The information iii. 505
 - * A copy of the record of the attainder of Green, &c. and a copy of the inquisition taken by the coroner concerning the murder of Sir Edmund-bury Godfrey, produced, and sworn to be true copies iii. 508
 - * Evidence that the defendants had acknowledged the printing and writing of these libels before the council iii. 509
 - * Evidence of the manner in which Sir Edmund-bury Godfrey's body was found iii. 514
 - * They are all three found guilty iii. 518
 - * Three affidavits relating to the death of Sir Edmund-bury Godfrey iii. 518
 - * Thompson and Farwell sent to stand on the pillory, and each of them to pay a fine of 100l. and be imprisoned till they have paid it iii. 518
 - * Pain only fined 100l. and to be imprisoned till he pay it iii. 518
- THOMPSON, RICHARD*, Report of the committee appointed to examine complaints against him, 32 Car. II. viii. 491
- Witnesses examined concerning his sermons on the 30th of January, and other occasions viii. 492
- Resolved, that the said Thompson had preached sedition, vilified the Reformation, and promoted popery viii. 493
- Committee appointed to prepare an impeachment viii. 493
- THOMPSON, Mr.* Of counsel for John Tasborough iii. 1032
- Of counsel for the king on the trial of Giles, for an assault iii. 66
- His speech for Bethel, tried for an assault and battery iii. 415
- Sums up for him iii. 417
- THOMPSON, WILLIAM*, Signs a frivolous plea x. 32. Ap.
- THOMPSON, Sir WILLIAM*, Serjeant at Law, His speech before evidence on the trial of John Ashton iv. 456
- Sums up the evidence iv. 479
- His argument in maintenance of the second article in the impeachment exhibited by the commons before the lords against doctor Saunders, for preaching seditiously v. 693
- His reply to the defence thereof v. 815
- His reply to objection, whether it be a high crime and misdemeanour to dissent in opinion from a resolution of both houses of parliament v. 819
- Sums up the evidence before the house of peers on the trial of Earl Wintown, on his impeachment for treason, in being in rebellion against King George I. vii. 45, 54
- His speech against Thomas Earl Macclesfield, late chancellor, impeached by the commons before the lords, of selling the places of masters in Chancery vi. 567
- Opens the indictment against Dammarer, for treason viii. 221
- His reply viii. 242
- Opens indictment against Purchase, for like offence, 1710 viii. 268
- His reply viii. 282
- Opens indictment against Willis, for like offence viii. 251
- His reply viii. 264
- THOMPSON, Sir WILLIAM*, Recorder of London, Not for extending punishment to torture, there being no precedent, and he would not begin one ix. 106
- Bambridge* objected to him as an improper person to try him on a charge at the instance of the commons, he being a member of the house, and would therefore be both prosecutor and judge; Sir William refused trying him ix. 227
- His speech at his execution viii. 459
- Acknowledges himself a priest viii. 460
- * THORPE, WILLIAM, * Accused of heresy, 1407, 8 Hen. IV. before Thomas Arundel, archbishop of Canterbury, and chancellor of England i. 16
- * His confession of faith i. 16
 - * He scrupled to take an oath i. 18
 - * The charge against him was, that in a sermon at Shrewsbury, he had delivered himself as follows:
 - 1. That the sacrament of the altar after consecration was material bread.
 - 2. That images ought not to be worshipped.
 - 3. That men should not go on pilgrimages.
 - 4. That priests have no title to tythes.
 - 5. That it is not lawful to swear in any wife i. 20
 - * A certification of the doctrines he preached sent from Shrewsbury to the archbishop, and read to him i. 20
 - * His defence for preaching without a licence i. 22
 - * His defence upon the first article i. 23
 - * On the second article i. 25
 - * On the third article i. 26
 - * On the fourth article i. 28
 - * On the fifth article i. 30
 - * He is examined touching auricular confession i. 32
 - * Refusing to make a submission and recantation, he is committed to prison, and never more heard of i. 36
- THORPE, Sir WILLIAM*, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench, Was adjudged to be hanged for bribery i. 704, 705. vii. 306
- * THROCKMORTON, Sir NICHOLAS, * Tried for high-treason, prime Maria, 1554 i. 63. See xi. 10.
- * Names of his judges i. 63
 - * The court would not permit him to speak, till he had pleaded guilty, or not guilty i. 64
 - * Two

- * Two of the jury challenged peremptorily for the queen, without shewing cause i. 64
- * He applies himself to the queen's counsel not to misrepresent him, but to do him justice i. 64
- * The prisoner admitted to answer every matter as it was urged against him, before the whole evidence for the crown was gone through i. 65
- * Winter's examination read, to prove that Throckmorton sent him to Wyat, who proposed a treasonable design to him, and the prisoner's answer i. 65
- * Croft's examination set aside, because he might appear and give evidence viva voce i. 66
- * Vaughan, who was condemned for the same fact, allowed a witness for the queen i. 67
- * Swears the prisoner was privy to the conspiracy i. 67
- * The prisoner's answer i. 67
- * His confession read in part against him; he desires it may be read through i. 69, 70
- * The duke of Suffolk's confession read against him, who had been executed for the same fact, importing, that sir Nicholas was privy to the conspiracy i. 70
- * He insists, that the lord Thomas Grey (who is said to have given the duke of Suffolk that information) be produced personally against him i. 70
- * Fitzwilliams, one of his witnesses, the court would not suffer to be examined, and gave no reason for refusing him i. 70
- * The court refused to let an act of parliament be read, which he desired; and said, they were not to find books for him; that the judges were to resolve all doubts in law i. 71
- * He acknowledges it had been a custom, that witnesses were not admitted against the crown i. 72
- * He argues notably, that no open deed or overt-act is proved against him i. 72
- * Whether words spoken can be deemed overt-acts i. 74
- * Prisoner permitted to reply, after the evidence summed up, and the jury directed i. 76
- * The prisoner remanded into custody, notwithstanding his being acquitted i. 77
- * The jury imprisoned and fined for their verdict i. 78
- THROCKMORTON, MICHAEL xi. 25. See POLE Cardinal.
- THURLOW, EDWARD, Attorney-General, Defends himself against charge of acting improperly in his office xi. 287. See KINGSION Duchess Dowager of. WILKES JOHN.
- * THWYNG, THOMAS, and MARY PRESSICKS, Their trial at York assizes for high-treason, July 24, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 79
- * The indictment for conspiring the death of the king, and the subversion of the established religion and government iii. 79
- * Bohan's evidence of the prisoner's concern in the plot iii. 80. See iii. 390. n.
- * Mowbray's evidence as to Thwyng iii. 81
- * Further evidence against Mrs. Pressicks iii. 82
- * Thwyng calls his witnesses, to prove it a malicious prosecution iii. 83
- * Mr. Justice Dolben's directions to the jury iii. 87
- * Words, unless they discover an intention to do some act, not treasonable iii. 87
- * Mr. baron Athyns's directions to the jury iii. 87
- * Thwyng convicted, and Pressicks acquitted iii. 88
- * Sentence passed iii. 89
- * Thwyng is executed iii. 89. See viii. 459
- THYNNE, THOMAS. The murder of Mr. Thynne was one of the most barbarous and impudent murders ever committed iv. 199. See BOROSKI.
- TICKLEFOOT, THOMAS. His observations on the trial of sir George Wakeman viii. 453
- * TILNEY, CHARLES i. 134. See ABINGTON, & al.
- * TITCHBURNE, CHIDDOCK i. 128. See ABINGTON, & al.
- * TITCHBURNE, ROBERT ii. 394. See REGICIDES.
- TITL E. The titles of king Henry VIII. xi. 19
- A title derived to the queen of Scots above the Conquest i. 106. See PHILIP and MARY.
- * TOLERATION v. 683. See the arguments concerning it in doctor Sacheverell's trial.
- TOMLINS, Mr. Of counsel for Prynne, on prosecution in Star-chamber, for several libels i. 483, 501
- Doctor Bostwick prays he may be of counsel for him i. 502
- Burton prays he may be of counsel for him i. 503
- * TONGE, THOMAS. George Phillips, Francis Stubbs, James Hind, John Sellers, and Nathaniel Gibbs, their trial for high-treason at the Old-Bailey, December 15, 1662, 14 Car. II. ii. 478
- * Hind pleads guilty, and the rest not guilty ii. 479
- * Mr. serjeant Maynard opens the evidence ii. 479
- * Evidence of Hill, Riggs, Bradley, and Tyler, their fellow-conspirators, of a conspiracy among the sectaries against his majesty ii. 480, &c.
- * A letter, of which about 5000 copies were dispersed, suggesting there was to be a massacre by the papists, as a colour for arming themselves ii. 482
- * The examination of Phillips read in evidence ii. 489
- * Evidence of rumours of a massacre by the papists about that time ii. 490
- * Phillips owns he was privy to the design ii. 491
- * Stubbs owns that he knew of it ii. 490
- * Gibbs denies it, and affirms that he was always loyal to the king ii. 490
- * Tonge says he was drawn into the plot by Tyler ii. 492
- * Sellers endeavours to excuse himself ii. 492
- * They except to the witnesses, that they have owned themselves guilty of the same offence; which exception is over-ruled ii. 492
- * Tonge affirms he was threatened in the Tower with the rack ii. 492
- * Mr. solicitor fums up the evidence for the king ii. 492
- * The chief justice directs the jury ii. 493
- * The prisoners are convicted ii. 494
- * Judgment of high-treason passed upon them ii. 495
- * Phillips, Tonge, Gibbs, and Stubbs, their behaviour at execution ii. 495
- T O P H A M. See J A K.
- T O R T U R E. The attorney-general Coke extolled the great clemency of queen Elizabeth, that conspirators against her life were not put to the rack or torture; and acknowledged the goodness of God towards her, and his just judgment upon the prisoners, that the truth had been revealed by the witnesses without the rack or torture of any of them i. 199. See xi. 109. n.
- Sir Richard Weston, baron of the Exchequer, in his charge to a jury, observed, that to torture criminals was illegal, and never used in England since Campion, the Jesuit, was put upon the rack, 20 Eliz. iii. 98
- Sir William Thompson was not for extending punishment to torture, there being no precedent, and he would not begin one ix. 106
- Englishmen are happily unacquainted with the practice of racks and instruments of torture Em. Pref. iii.
- Even the ancients, among whom torture was in use, had no good opinion of it Em. Pref. iii. n.
- Montaigne and Grotius approve of the abolition of torture in England Em. Pref. iii. n.
- A prisoner put to the torture in Scotland, in Charles II.'s reign ii. 625
- There is no worse torture than the torture of laws x. 56. n.
- Earl of Exeter introduced rack into the Tower v. 131
- T O W N L E Y, F R A N C I S, Esq. His trial for high-treason, July 15, 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 543
- The indictment against him ix. 543
- Mr. attorney-general opens the evidence ix. 545
- Mr. Strange on the same side ix. 545
- Evidence against him ix. 545
- Serjeant Wynne, counsel for him, asks the witnesses, if they had no promise of pardon ix. 546
- Mr. Clayton, another of his counsel, asks, if they were promised mercy ix. 547
- The capitulation at Carlisle ix. 547
- Prisoner's defence, and evidence for him ix. 548
- Mr. solicitor-general's reply ix. 549
- His case, as stated by Mr. Justice Foster ix. 550
- Warrant for his execution ix. 551
- Executed at Kennington-Common ix. 551
- Some account of him ix. 552
- T O W N S E N D, Mr. Recorder of Chester, His speech for Stevenson charged with murder x. 472, 476
- T R A C Y, the Honourable R O B E R T, Justice of the Common-Pleas, Delivers the opinion of all the judges, on the trial of Edward Arnold viii. 313
- Sums up the evidence viii. 317
- His argument in the Prince's case xi. 299
- His opinion xi. 300, 302
- T R A D E. See EAST-INDIA COMPANY, and Sir THOMAS SANDYS. MONOPOLIES. vii. 494, 501, 502, 505, 508, 521, 530, 538, 557, 563.
- * TRANTER, ROBERT vi. 195. See REASON HUGH.
- * TRAVERS, JOHN i. 134. See ABINGTON, & al.
- T R E A S O N. The excellency of the English laws consists particularly in cases of treason Em. Pref. iii.
- Of the progressive legal improvements in cases of treason Em. Pref. v.
- If prisoner committed for treason be not indicted next term or sessions after commitment, having duly entered his prayer, he shall on last day of term or sessions be admitted to bail, unless it appear to court on oath that the king's witnesses could not then be produced; and then, if not indicted and tried second term or sessions after commitment, he shall be quite discharged Em. Pref. v.
- Party accused of treason may demand copy of indictment, names of jurors and witnesses, and assistance of counsel in points of law, as well as in matters of fact, process for witnesses, and every species of treason must be proved by some overt-act, and that by two witnesses Em. Pref. vi.
- No attainder for treason works disinheritance of heir, or affects any other right than only offender's during his life Em. Pref. vi.
- Being privy and consenting to treason, or procuring another to commit treason, is being a traitor i. 73. viii. 468
- Bare hearing treason not treason i. 138
- What shall be deemed assent to treason i. 138. ii. 594
- Crimen læsæ majestatis* defined i. 236
- The intent is treason i. 190, 198. v. 634. vii. 59
- But it must be proved by an overt-act iv. 184
- The reason for every part of punishment in treason i. 243
- If a man commit treason May 20, and sell his lands May 5, and after is indicted that he did commit the treason May 1, which goes before the jury, and after is found guilty of this indictment, he who is to lose the land cannot deny this verdict, and say, the treason was committed May 20, though it concern him for all he hath. By lord chief justice Coke i. 338
- Earl Strafford was charged with accumulative treason i. 738. See i. 723, 750
- Ambassador may be tried for treason ii. 8
- Aiding

- Aiding traitor knowingly, treason ii. 151
- * Words tending to personal hurt of prince, will amount to overt-act of treason ii. 304, 349, 354. iii. 1055. (See Id. 87.) iv. 593, 656
- The Spencers treason was, holding, that the king might be imprisoned, or compelled by sharp imprisonment, to submit to the people's demands ii. 305, 404. viii. 467
- To doubt or hesitate in a point of allegiance, is direct treason ii. 314
- Treason cannot be pardoned by implication ii. 350
- Encouraging traitor treason ii. 365, 594
- Said, that had the Protector Cromwell taken upon himself the name of king, it seems that no treason could have been committed against the king de jure, not in possession ii. 455
- To write or print, that if the king abuses his power, the people may resist and take up arms against him, is treason ii. 544
- Judges of opinion, that charge against earl Clarendon was not treason; with their reasons ii. 556
- Impeachment for treason generally not cause for committing a peer ii. 568.
- See IMPEACHMENTS.
- Prisoner tried at bar for treason, illegally receives sentence the same day ii. 659. iv. 779
- Judgment in treason must be in usual form, else the king loses his forfeitures, &c. iii. 213
- To endeavour to introduce absolute dominion, is the worst of treason iii. 223. vii. 481
- A person standing mute for high-treason shall have judgment as a traitor iii. 345. viii. 346
- One indicted of high-treason, for soliciting for one who was accused of high-treason iii. 347. iv. 174. See Id. 175, 178, 205
- What is misprision of treason iii. 755. iv. 193. viii. 418, 468
- Freehold not held a necessary qualification of juryman in treason iii. 820.
- See iii. 708.
- The judges differed in their reasons why want of freehold was no challenge to jurors in London in treason iv. 189, 206
- Court may make prisoner offer of trial, tho' outlawed for treason iii. 943
- Writ of error for reversal of a judgment in treason is the right of the subject, and ought to be granted at his desire, and is not an act of grace or favour to be denied or granted at pleasure iii. 986
- Sentence of burning altered to beheading, on precedent iv. 129
- Unless principal traitor be convicted, illegal to try receiver or comforter of him; for though convicted, if he had his clergy, receiver or comforter of him, being in nature of an accessory, is discharged thereby iv. 147. n. See iv. 130.
- A pamphlet written and dispersed with intention to excite and prevail on the people to take up arms, is high-treason iv. 171
- It is not treason in lawyers to advise the king, that he may legally pursue arbitrary measures iv. 172
- Comforting a traitor, unless it be to prevent his being amenable to justice, is not treason iv. 175
- More perjuries committed in prosecutions for treason by accusers, than by witnesses for prisoner iv. 177
- Treason is not confined to place or time, as all other crimes are iv. 177. See Id. 185.
- But one person justly convicted of perjury in treason concerning the popish plot, in the reign of Car. II. iv. 177
- But one person escaped in a trial for treason, where there was a design against his life, in Jac. II.'s reign iv. 177
- Non compos mentis* cannot be guilty of some species of treason iv. 181
- By stat. 33 Hen. VIII. chap. 20. if a man fell mad after he had committed treason, he was to be tried in his absence; and if after being attainted of treason, he was to be executed; but this law was repealed on account of its cruelty and inhumanity iv. 206
- Erroneous opinions may make an heretic, but not a traitor iv. 182. See ii. 346, 354
- Trial in treason may be put off without the consent of the attorney-general iv. 190
- Prisoner ought not to be denied a note of the fact to be given in evidence against him, proving treason iv. 191
- In treason, for designing to kill the king, there have been so many interpretations of facts tending that way, that it was almost impossible for an innocent man to defend himself, unless he had notice of the fact intended to be insisted on at the trial iv. 191
- No words charging the king with any personal vice, is treason iv. 197
- Many judges of opinion, that treasonable passages in a sermon never preached, nor intended, but found in writing in the party's study, not treason iv. 197
- Outlawry in treason not to be reversed, because party was beyond sea at time of its being pronounced iv. 198
- Breaking the person executed for treason, and exposing his quarters, is done rather to deter the living, than to punish the dead iv. 205
- One may be tried for high-treason on same misdemeanour for which he hath been already convicted iv. 207
- Drinking confusion to the king is treason by the laws of Scotland iv. 203
- When a tales and not a new pannel should be awarded in treason, on stat. 7 Will. III. chap. 3. iv. 741
- Cruizing upon coast with armed vessel, an actual levying war v. 37
- What shall be construed adhering to the king's enemies? v. 34. See x. 77. n.
- It does not appear by the precedent of John Hampden's case for treason, whether his judgment was reversed or affirmed, nor is the report of the case to be found in any of the Reports of that time vi. 54
- Writing treasonable letters is an overt-act of high-treason vi. 77. See iii. 817
- Where some intended treason, and others accompanied and assisted them in any action, not knowing of the treason intended, yet they are all offenders in treason. So affirmed by the judges vii. 49. See viii. 266
- Vol. XI.
- The law charges actors and abettors in intended treason with direct treason against the person of the prince. So affirmed by the judges vii. 49
- Compassing and imagining the king's death extends to civil as well as natural death vii. 467. viii. 467
- All meetings and agreements to rise and seize the king's guard are overt-acts vii. 467. viii. 467
- Fact may be declared treason in parliament, which was not felony before vii. 488
- Judges assuming to themselves a legislative power, formerly held treason vii. 489
- Said to be high-treason for judges to grant warrants for seizing books, or dismissing grand juries, contrary to law vii. 489
- Proceedings against doctor Oldys for refusing to prosecute traitors viii. 75
- Conspiring the death of the chief magistrate, by what name soever called, declared treason vii. 373
- What shall be deemed levying war, so as to make it treason viii. 247
- Argument of lord chief justice Parker in a case of treason, wrote with great clearness of style and strength of reason viii. 289
- Foreign treasons, and treasons committed in Ireland, to be tried in England by a jury, though the party accused be an Irish peer viii. 341
- That the terms of a capitulation on the surrender of a place were not complied with; no sort of defence in a court of law ix. 550. See Id. 547. n.
- Address to the king ordered by the peers for appointing a lord high steward to continue during the trial of a Scots nobleman, upon an impeachment of treason by the commons ix. *618. See COURT of the LORD HIGH STEWARD. HIGH STEWARD.
- Counsel not permitted to examine witnesses on behalf of the prisoner in cases of treason ix. *638
- Instance of prisoner not being asked why judgment of treason should not pass against him, till he reminded the judge of the omission. See AUDLEY THOMAS Lord.
- Instance of prisoner being asked that question three several times ix. *747, *749, *750
- Sending intelligence to rebels or enemies will make a man a traitor (except what is done by means of superior force), though the intelligence should happen to be intercepted. So resolved by the judges x. 77. n.
- Writing and sending letters of intelligence, stopped at the Post-office, was laid as an overt-act of compassing the death of the queen, and also of adhering to her enemies x. 77. n.
- Quare*, if the above was an overt-act of adhering? x. 77. n.
- Quare*, whether the particular judgment of treason should be given against an outlaw for treason, or only execution generally awarded x. 204. n.
- Writs of error go from the King's-Bench to the house of lords, even in cases of treason x. 520. n.
- Queen consort of England, by an unheard-of precedent, indicted of treason xi. 12
- Proceedings against various persons in the reign of Hen. VIII. for treason, in denying supremacy, and other capital crimes relating to religion xi. 22
- Act tho' done by warrant of great seal, is treason, if not the great seal of a lawful sovereign, but of an usurper xi. 26
- Persons equally guilty as traitor himself may yet be his judges, if not attainted xi. 26
- Proceedings in the court of Chivalry on appeal of treason xi. 124
- The occasion of making 25 Edu. III. stat. 5. chap. 2. Em. Pref. iv. n. vi. 74
- Before this statute, lying with the nurses of the king's children, or killing a man sent on an errand by the king, were adjudged treason Em. Pref. iv. n. i. 760
- The word provisablement in the statute, explained by sir Edward Coke iii. 757. See iii. 755. iv. 203.
- The judges have no power to punish any other treasons than those mentioned in this statute iii. 758, 764. iv. 172, 173
- The word mort in the statute explained by sir Edward Coke iii. 763, 764
- Before this statute no man, as that statute says, knew what was not treason; and the exposition on this statute has been so extravagant and various, that people in the reign of Car. II. were as much at a loss to know what was not treason, as before the said statute iv. 184
- This statute is only declaratory of the common law vii. 373
- Traitorously so material a word in an indictment for treason, that if it be omitted, the indictment is void Em. Pref. viii.
- * Indictment for treasonable words spoken in French ii. 656
- No conviction of treason on indictment where crime is not formally laid, tho' facts charged do amount to treason ii. 808
- Indictment containing treason and misdemeanour to be quashed iv. 176
- Innuendo* indictment of treason iv. 197. Em. Pref. iv.
- Indictment must express that party published writing, in order to give it in evidence in treason iv. 197. viii. 472
- Sidney's* was the first indictment of treason, upon which any man lost his life, for writing any thing without publishing it iv. 197
- Same overt-acts may be laid to prove adhesion, as to prove compassing of king's death iv. 413
- Indictment for high-treason ought to be drawn with great accuracy vi. 233
- A species of treason not laid in indictment cannot be given in evidence to prove a new overt-act, but may to corroborate evidence already given vi. 286, 289
- Adjudged by court, that if one overt-act is made out, the indictment is proved vi. 329
- In indictments for levying war, it is not necessary to lay the day with precision ix. 550, 551. n.
- It is not necessary to prove overt-act to be committed on particular day laid in the indictment; but as evidence may be given of an overt-act before the day, so it may after the day specified in the indictment. So resolved by all the judges ix. *607. See Id. 550, 551. n.

Impressu a proper word to denote printing in indictment for treason ix. 711

How the charge, when the overt-act of treason is intercepted letters, should be laid in the indictment x. 77. n.

Accomplices in treason legal witnesses till convicted i. 113; ii. 339. iii. 883. iv. 149, 572, 594. xi. 26

Two witnesses not necessary at common law in treason i. 137

One witness, with concurring circumstances, said to be sufficient in treason ii. 78

Jeffries, on colonel Sidney's trial, said, it was resolved by all the judges of England, that if I buy a knife of J. S. to kill the king, and one witness proves I bought a knife, and another proves that I bought it for that purpose, they are two witnesses of an overt-act within statute of Edw. VI. iii. 818

Sir John Howles says, it is fit to know who the judges were who gave the above resolution, if it were but for the authority of the case, for he doubts the reason of it would convince no man; they might as well have resolved, that eating or drinking, or the most ordinary acts of a man's life, were an overt-act of treason iv. 198

Two witnesses to any one species of treason sufficient, for so many are not necessary to every overt-act iii. 204, 419, 729

One witness giving evidence of treason in county where criminal indicted, and another witness giving evidence of another overt-act of same treason in another county, are two sufficient witnesses ii. 714, 443. iii. 204, 407.

Whether the law of God requires two witnesses in treason v. 117, 123

Two witnesses are not required to same fact of treason, tho' one would think at first sight of stat. Edw. VI. they were iv. 198

One witness swearing directly to the treason, and another to a circumstance, are two witnesses in law iv. 246

A confession after the fact proved by two witnesses, sufficient to convict ix. 559. See WITNESSES.

Plea in treason iii. 228. vi. 45. Ap.

Indictments for treason iii. 565. iv. 211. vi. 56, 57, 60. Ap. See INDICTMENTS.

Record of outlawry for treason vi. 4. Ap.

Writ of error in treason vi. 42. Ap.

Records in treason vi. 48, 50, 51, 55, 57. Ap. See RECORDS.

Copy of warrant for suspending execution in treason, all wrote by the king's own hand vii. 66

Copy of a special verdict on treason drawn up for the consideration of all the judges viii. 285. See SPECIAL VERDICTS.

The king's special warrant for beheading sir Walter Raleigh for treason viii. 340

Constructive conspiracy against the king, is not an overt-act of compassing his death iii. 722

Conspiring to levy war, or to seize the guards, is not conspiring against the king's life iii. 756. iv. 85

There is no such thing as constructive treason iii. 756. iv. 85

The contrary held iii. 722, 764, 765, 768, 769, 770, 817. iv. 206, 619, 622. viii. 467, 468. See

BROOKE GEORGE.

COBHAM Lord.

CONSTABLE.

GREY Lord.

PLUNKET.

RALEIGH Sir WALTER.

VANE Sir HENRY.

Consulting and agreeing an overt-act of compassing the king's death iv. 689. vi. 312. viii. 467

Printing is an overt-act viii. 64. See OVERT ACTS.

The strongest suspicion cannot be given, in evidence as proof of treason iii. 755

General account of treasonable plot may be given in evidence, though it does not immediately affect prisoner iii. 798. ix. 671

Record of conviction of one for treason, shall not be read in evidence against another for misdemeanour, for the same fact ii. 834

No authority to reject that for evidence in treason, which is permitted to be given in evidence in trials on civil matters iv. 194

Stricter proof is required in treason than in any civil matter, or in any other crime iv. 194

Writing being an overt-act of treason, it must be evidence of a design to kill or depose the king, or the like iv. 197

Similitude of hands never admitted in evidence to prove a treasonable writing till Sidney's case iv. 198

It is most dangerous and unwarrantable for a jury, in capital cases, especially in treason, to convict a person upon the evidence of probability iv. 204

Prefumption shall never take place in treason vi. 418

Confession of persons attainted of treason, read i. 126. See viii. 247

Other words permitted to be proved than those laid in the indictment iii. 1000. See WORDS.

Any thing may be given in evidence tending to prove overt-act laid in indictment, though thing itself that is testified be an overt-act not laid in indictment iv. 697. ix. 558. See iv. 691

Evidence may be given of overt-acts in a county different from that where the fact was laid, an overt-act having been first proved in the proper county ix. 559, 581. See LATER CHRISTOPHER.

PERKINS Sir WILLIAM.

Papers found in Lord Prat's custody; those found where Lacy had lodged them; the intercepted letters of doctor Henry, were all read in evidence as overt-acts of treason respectively charged on them x. 77. n.

William Grey's intercepted letters might in like manner have been read in evidence, if he had put himself upon his trial x. 77. n.

But persons not capable of such connection, while they remain in the hands of the author unpublished, as Sidney did, will not make a man a traitor x. 77. n. See EVIDENCE.

The irregularities, illegalities, and hardships state prisoners suffered, who were prosecuted for treason, concerning the popish plot in Car. II.'s reign iv. 176, 177, 178

The manner of usage of state prisoners for treason concerning the popish plot, in the reign of Car. II. was worse than the practice of the inquisition iv. 177

If a libel be the cause of a rebellion, yet, if it was not designed by the contriver to that purpose, it is not treason iv. 171

The subject that rebelleth, or riseth in forcible manner to over-rule the royal will and power of the king, intendeth to deprive the king both of crown and life. The judges delivered this as a rule of law vii. 48. n.

There is not, nor ever was, a tenure which obligeth tenants to follow their lords into rebellion ix. 567

The fear of having houses burnt, or goods spoiled, is no excuse, in the eye of the law, for joining and marching with rebels ix. 567

The only force that doth excuse, is a force upon the person, and present fear of death; and this force and fear must continue all the time the party remains with the rebels ix. 568

It is incumbent on every man who makes force his defence, to shew an actual force; and that he quitted the service as soon as he could ix. 568

To raise a rebellion, or make an insurrection, be the design or intent thereof never so speciously good, is high-treason. viii. 467. See

REBELLION. KING (The). PRECEDENTS. WORDS.

* Made treason by a statute to read the Bible; and thirty-six attainted and executed on that statute i. 49

* Sir Thomas More attainted of high-treason, in denying the king's supremacy i. 62

* He is guilty of treason who is privy and consenting to it; and so is he who endeavours to persuade or procure another to commit treason i. 73

* The duke of Norfolk attainted of treason against a particular act of parliament, for attempting to marry the queen of Scots without queen Elizabeth's knowledge i. 116

* Earl of Arundel attainted of high-treason, for corresponding with a traitor beyond sea, and saying mass for the success of the Spanish invasion i. 168

* Persons attainted of treason committed against a king before his coronation i. 214

* Poisoning heretofore made treason by a statute i. 324, 353

* The intention is only treasonable (or punishable) where the design is against the Prince's life i. 759. See ii. 304.

* If the actions themselves are not treasonable, the result of them cannot be treason i. 937

* A number of misdemeanours or felonies cannot alter their nature so as to make them amount to high-treason i. 941

* Whether a peer of Ireland can be tried here for treason committed there? i. 950

* Several tried for high-treason against the commonwealth and the Protector during the Usurpation ii. 1, 19, 83, 183, 259, 277

* The aiding, assisting, relieving, harbouring, or encouraging a traitor (knowing him to be such), high-treason i. 139, 140. ii. 151, 365. iv. 105, 131, 132

* It is the imagination that is the treason; the overt-acts are but the evidence of it ii. 314

* Whether the writing or printing treasonable words, dictated by others, can be said to be an overt-act of the writer's treasonable imaginations ii. 316, 528

* Treason may be committed against a prince when he is out of his dominions, and out of the possession of the government ii. 435

* Though it may be no offence in law to assist a king de facto against a king de jure, yet it is adjudged high-treason to assist other usurpers (who have not taken upon them the title of king) against a king de jure, out of possession of the government ii. 444

* A riotous assembly pulling down houses, breaking open prisons, &c. adjudged to come within that branch of the 25 Edw. III. which makes it high-treason to levy war against the king ii. 585, 593

* The parliament could not declare any thing to be treason that was not felony at common law ii. 558. See TRESILIAN.

* The accepting popish orders high-treason ii. 693

* Soliciting foreign aid high-treason ii. 878. iv. 600

* Whether a native of Scotland be within the statute which makes it high-treason to accept popish orders, found special ii. 1013

* A solemn resolution, that in a case of treason there must be two witnesses believed by the jury iii. 56. See v. 127

* Whoever imagines to compel the king by durels to yield to their demands, is in law guilty of imagining his death ii. 305. iii. 406, 817. iv. 625. vii. 46. viii. 667

* Consulting to levy war against the king, and to seize his guards, or promote an invasion, held to be overt-acts of compassing the king's death, within the first branch of the statute of the 25 Edw. III. iii. 730. iv. 772

* Treason to write treasonable positions, tho' they be not published iii. 815. See Id. 824. x. 77. n.

* No petit-treason in Ireland iv. 403

* Murder made high-treason in Ireland iv. 103

The lawfulness of assisting the powers de facto against all others urged in defence of treason ii. 436. See RESISTANCE.

Attainder of treason reversed on account of an omission in the entry of the judgment iii. 752

TREBET, Sir G. E. O. R. G. E. one of the Committee for the Commons.

His speech on the impeachment against viscount Stafford, tried for treason, before the lords, in being concerned in the popish plot iii. 109

TREBET, Sir G. E. O. R. G. E. Recorder of London.

His argument for the city in the quo warranto cause iii. 554

Sir George Treby, having been removed from the recordership of the city of of London, was restored iii. 628

 His speech for sir Patience Ward informed against for perjury iii. 667
 His observations on the evidence iii. 676
 His argument for sir Thomas Sandys, at the suit of the East India Company vii. 497
 Sir George Treby was examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41
TREBY, Sir GEORGE, Lord Chief Justice C. P.
 His directions to the jury on the trial of Cook for treason iv. 772
 Sums up the evidence on Anderton's trial for treason viii. 64
 His argument in the Bankers case xi. 141
 * TRELAWNY, Sir JONATHAN, Baronet,
 Lord Bishop of Bristol,
 Tried for publishing a libel iv. 304
TRESILIAN, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's-Bench,
 Proceedings in parliament on his attainder for treason i. 12. vii. 229
 His treason was, that he had given it under his hand, that the king might create unto himself, at his pleasure, another rule to walk by than the law of the land prescribes him vii. 306
 Takes lodgings at Westminster in disguise i. 12 Discovered lying under a table covered with baize, and brought before the lords i. 12
 Is drawn to execution i. 13
 Refuses to confess i. 13
 Will not climb the ladder till beaten with staves i. 13
 Is stripped, and names and images of devils found under his clothes i. 13
 Is hanged i. 13
 His throat afterwards cut i. 13. vii. 306
 Is buried at Grey-Friars i. 13
 His learning gave him honour, but his villany made his exit by a rope
 vii. 223, 481
 Though the crime for which he was impeached, was not felony, yet he was condemned in parliament vii. 488. * See BRAMBRE.
TRESPASS.
 By the laws of England every invasion of private property, be it ever so minute, as bruising the grass, or treading upon the soil without leave, is a trespass xi. 321. See ENTICK.
TREVOR, Sir THOMAS, Baron of the Exchequer,
 His arguments, reasons, and opinions, for the king, in the cause of shipmoney i. 637
TREVOR, Sir THOMAS, Solicitor-General,
 Sums up the evidence on the trial of lord Mobun for murder, before the lords iv. 535
TREVOR, Sir THOMAS, Attorney-General,
 His speech before evidence, on the trial of Charnock, for treason iv. 567
 His speech before evidence, on the trial of sir John Freind, for treason
 iv. 604
 Opens the evidence against sir William Parkyns, in promoting invasion and rebellion, and the assassination-plot iv. 633
 His speech before evidence, on the trial of Rookwood, for treason, in conspiring death of the king iv. 677
 His speech before evidence, on Cranburne's trial for treason iv. 706 Opens the evidence against major Lewis, on his trial for treason, in being concerned in the assassination plot iv. 725
 His reply iv. 733
 Opens the evidence against Cook for treason iv. 754
 Demands judgment, same day prisoner pleaded guilty, on trial of Knightley, for treason iv. 779
 Held on the bill of attainder against sir John Fenwick, that an examination before a justice of peace, may be read where the witness cannot be had
 v. 68
 Opens the evidence on the trial of earl Warwick before the house of lords, for murder v. 144. See v. 165
 His speech on lord Mobun's trial before the house of lords, for murder
 v. 182
 * TRIAL.
 * Sir John Perrot and the lord Grey tried in England, for treason committed in Ireland i. 188, 951
 * A peer cannot be brought to trial on a charge exhibited against him by another peer in the house of lords ii. 558
 * The prisoner admitted to answer to what each witness charged him with as they came, before the whole evidence for the king was gone through i. 65
 * A prisoner not permitted to take notes at his trial i. 135
 * The punishment for standing mute i. 325
 * A woman not permitted to wear her hat at her trial i. 339
 * A peer shall not be tried by a jury of commons in a capital case, though he desire it i. 388
 * The lord high steward consulted by the lords tryers in the absence of the prisoner i. 394
 * Formalities previous to a trial before the house of peers i. 736
 * A trial before a council of war i. 745
 * Treason committed in one reign may be tried in another ii. 9
 * Scots tried in England for treason committed in Scotland, before the union of the kingdoms ii. 10
 * A jury discharged of a prisoner without giving a verdict ii. 715, 831
 * A peer may be tried by a jury as a commoner, for offences not capital
 ii. 560
 * Prisoners fined forty marks a-piece, for coming into court at their trial with their hats on ii. 611
 * The commons deny that a high-steward is necessary upon a trial by impeachment ii. 740
 * The lords resolve, that the lords spiritual may vote in all matters previous to the trial, in capital cases ii. 752
 * A prisoner tried at bar for treason receives sentence the same day
 ii. 659

* The prisoners receive sentence the day after their conviction, though tried at bar ii. 789
 * These proceedings censured iv. 779
 * Where any point of law arises at the trial of a peer, it ought to be put in the prisoner's presence ii. 729. v. 169
 * A jury are to take no notice of what was done at a former trial ii. 863
 * The prisoner may give evidence, that a witness produced against him gave contrary testimony at a former trial ii. 900
 * A peer need not hold up his hand at his arraignment iv. 211, 512
 * The King's-Bench try a commoner impeached by the commons iii. 263
 * An Irishman tried at the King's-Bench bar for treason committed in Ireland, and for which he had been before arraigned there iii. 293
 * A prisoner may cross-examine a witness, after the king's counsel have done with him; but must not make any observations on the evidence till it is gone through iii. 481
 * The lord Ruffel allowed two clerks to take notes at his trial iii. 343.
 708. iv. 143
 * No time or notice can be insisted on to prepare for trial, in capital cases
 iii. 732
 * The king's counsel shall have the last word iii. 816. iv. 40, 102
 * Where one outlawed shall be admitted to a trial, and where not
 iii. 983
 * Nothing ought to be given in evidence that was said or done at another trial, till the record of that trial be proved iv. 41
 * The prisoner being thick of hearing, has one to assist her iv. 106
 * One tried for harbouring a traitor, before the traitor was convicted
 iv. 122
 * One tried for a misdemeanour, and convicted; and afterwards tried for high-treason, for the same fact iv. 207
 * A peer may be tried by commission during a prorogation of parliament
 iv. 212
 * The lord high steward sole judge, on a trial by commission; and need not consult the other peers concerning the methods and order of the trial iv. 215
 * The lords tryers cannot adjourn, or separate, any more than a jury of commons, till they have given a verdict iv. 232. But it is otherwise where the trial is in full parliament iv. 233
 * It is not usual for a high steward to sum up or make any observations on the evidence iv. 246
 * Where one pleads his peerage to the jurisdiction of an inferior court, he must produce his patent iv. 414
 * Where an indictment is removed into the King's-Bench, judgment ought not to be given till four days after conviction, if there be so many days remaining in the term iv. 779
 * Where the trial is at bar, venire issues, as in civil cases; and fifteen days between the teste and return iv. 778
 * No evidence can be given against a man in a trial for his life, but in his presence v. 85, 118
 * A prisoner cannot insist on the witnesses being examined apart as his right v. 20
 * In a trial of a peer before the lords for a misdemeanour, he shall not stand without the bar v. 364
 The bill for regulating trials in cases of treason, ascribed to sir William Whitelocke viii. 64. n.
 Usefulness of this collection of Trials to the study of the law Em. Pref. i.
 Of trials for felony Em. Pref. viii.
 Trial put off for want of jurors iii. 318. iv. 741
 Place of trial of a peer on impeachment described i. 736
 Where prisoners sever in their challenges to the jury, and yet are tried together by the same jury, it is a mis-trial ix. 11 Suffering a jury to go at large in the midst of a trial, is a mis-trial
 x. 407. n.
 Upon affidavit of the jurymen, that they did not give such a verdict as was entered up, the court set aside the trial, and granted a new one in a criminal case x. 407. n. See x. 411. n.
 No freehold a good cause of challenge on Fitzbarri's, but not on lord
Ruffel's or colonel Sidney's trial iv. 169
 Lord chief justice North published Collidge's trial iv. 185
 Trials published for the benefit of the publisher, rather than for common good iv. 189
 Putting off a trial a favour, not a right iv. 200
 Passage in a printed trial is no evidence iv. 201
 The reason that all trials are public iv. 202
 On trials in the house of lords, a king's counsel always opens. See KING's COUNSEL, unless upon an impeachment from the commons. See
IMPEACHMENTS.
 Trials published more for the benefit of the judge, than for the common good iv. 186. vii. 478
 The trials in this collection are mostly published by authority Em. Pref. i.
 The method of practice in trials for crimes is governed by common-law rules Em. Pref. i.
 Not regularly put off before plea iv. 418
 It is totally in the discretion of the judges to put off a trial iv. 190
 Trial never put off for want of witnesses without affidavit iv. 421, 631
 v. 449
 Prisoners refusing to join in their challenges, ordered to be tried separately
 iv. 423
 No habeas corpus issues on trial for capital offences iv. 667
 A peer by letters patents, if he be arraigned before the parliament sits, shall be tried by his peers viii. 59
 Cannot waive his trial by his peers viii. 60
 The king by his prerogative tries his cause in what court he pleases, except where the common law makes a prohibition vii. 226
 One pretended to be a lunatic allowed a solicitor to stand by him to call his witnesses, and ask questions for him, on his trial for felony viii. 291
 One

- One standing mute, and refusing his trial, condemned upon the statute of 35 Hen. VIII. chap. 2, for foreign treasons viii. 346
- Court refused to postpone trial upon special circumstances ix. 582
- Trial on identity of the person upon an attainder cannot be put off by the common affidavit ix. 584
- Trial of lady Ivy's cause for great part of Shadwell, held as long as any in Westminster-Hall of that nature, except one, for many years, which was the famous cause of Colt in B. R. vii. 604
- The trial in ejectment in Ireland between Craig and earl Anglesea, the longest trial ever known ix. 379. n.
- The jury on the above trial consisted almost entirely of members of parliament ix. 379. n.
- The judge told the jury they must take notes, for he could not pretend to undertake to sum up the length of evidence, as appeared from the opening would arise in the cause ix. 383
- The trial of Mary Heath, for perjury in Ireland, lasted 22 hours ix. 525
- Trial allowed to be taken down in short-hand after debate x. 132. Ap.
- Court ordered four indicted jointly, to be tried separately iv. 199, 663
- Court refused three indicted jointly, to be tried separately, though one of the prisoners made such a motion ix. 2, 3, 10
- Court told several prisoners against whom a single indictment had been found, that if they agreed to join in their challenges, they might be tried together; if not, that they would be tried separately x. 720. See v. 195
- Trial may be in England for crimes committed in Ireland i. 188, 951. iii. 293, 313. viii. 341.
- For trials of peers before the king in parliament, see IMPEACHMENT. PARLIAMENT.
- For trials of peers in the court of the lord high steward, see COURT of the HIGH STEWARD. HIGH STEWARD.
- TRIAL at BAR.
- Private prosecutor cannot have a trial at bar without making out the usual requisites ix. 68. n.
- * TRIGGE, THOMAS ii. 949, 978. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
- T U L L Y.
- His Offices cited and commended iv. 172
- Tully* thought it would be a reproach to his son, if he did not abound with philosophy, having heard Cratippus for the space of a whole year, and that at Athens too iv. 206. See ROMAN HISTORY.
- * TURNER, ANNE,
- * Her trial as accessory before the fact, to the murder of sir Thomas Overbury i. 339
- * Her hat ordered to be taken off at the arraignment i. 339
- * She and the countess of Essex resort to a conjurer i. 339
- * Several devils invoked, that the prisoner and the countess might obtain the love of their gallants i. 340
- * The prisoner convicted, and judgment given against her i. 341
- TURNER, Sir CHRISTOPHER,
- Would not try a prisoner for murder, because the body of the deceased was not found x. 30. Ap. n. iv. 204
- TURNER, Sir EDWARD,
- His speech on the trial of Harrison the regicide ii. 315
- His reply on Cook the regicide's trial ii. 350
- * TURNER, Doctor FRANCIS, Bishop of Ely, iv. 304
- * TURNER, Colonel JAMES,
- * John Turner, William Turner, Mary Turner, and Ely Turner, their trial for burglary, at the Old Bailey, the 15th, 16th, and 19th of Jan. 1663, 15 Car. II. ii. 502
- * The indictment for breaking open the house of Francis Tryon, and robbing him of jewels and money to the value of several thousand pounds ii. 502
- * Colonel Turner complains his goods were seized on by the sheriffs, and they had taken possession of his house: the sheriffs answer, they have only left a servant in the house for security of the goods, till they see whether he is convicted or acquitted ii. 503
- * The chief justice holds, that it is the duty of the sheriff, where one is accused of felony, to secure his goods; but the prisoner may have what he has occasion for to subsist him ii. 504
- * If the prisoner can find security, that the goods be forth-coming, the sheriff shall take his hands off ii. 504
- * The chief justice tells him, they cannot grant him process to bring in his witnesses ii. 505
- * If the principals are all acquitted, the accessories shall be discharged without trial ii. 506. iii. 470
- * The evidence against the prisoners iii. 470
- * Proof, that the jewels were produced by James Turner ii. 507
- * And part of the money, which he owned to be Mr. Tryon's ii. 508
- * The circumstances of the robbery testified by Mr. Tryon ii. 508
- * Evidence, that Mary and Ely Turner brought some of the money to a neighbour's house ii. 510
- * A particular seal to one of the bags given in evidence ii. 511
- * A stool brought for him to sit on in the court ii. 512
- * Mr. Tryon swears he believes William Turner was one of the men that robbed him ii. 515, 516
- * Colonel Turner's defence ii. 516
- * He says he found the thieves, and persuaded them to deliver up the goods and money, upon promise that their lives should be saved ii. 517
- * He calls his witnesses, who say little or nothing to the purpose ii. 521
- * The other prisoners defence ii. 523
- * The lord chief justice directs the jury ii. 524
- * He tells them, that Mary Turner, the wife, cannot be convicted as accessory to a felony committed by her husband ii. 524
- * That all the accomplices in burglary are guilty of burglary, though they do not all enter the house ii. 524
- * That if one comes in by day, and opens the door to others in the night, and they come in and rob the house, they are all guilty of burglary ii. 526
- * James Turner is convicted ii. 526
- * The rest are acquitted ii. 526
- * After his conviction, he confesses the whole matter to five justices of the peace ii. 526
- * Judgment against James Turner to be hanged ii. 527
- * His execution ii. 527. viii. 381
- T U R N O U R,
- His account of the Bankers case xi. 137
- * TURPIN, JOSEPH iii. 949, 978. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
- TURTON, Sir JOHN,
- One of the justices of the court of King's-Bench, informs the several juries on Kidd's prosecution, for murder and piracy v. 327, 335
- * TUTCHIN, JOHN,
- * His trial on an information for a libel, at Guildhall, Nov. 4, 1704, 3 Annæ v. 528
- * A jurymen owns he had always condemned Mr. Tutchin's writings; and desires to be excused v. 530
- * The king's counsel, after some debate, consent to it v. 530
- * Howe the printer's evidence, of his agreement with Tutchin for the copy, &c. v. 532
- * Debates between the counsel, whether the proof be sufficient to read the papers v. 533
- * The papers read v. 535, 539
- * Tutchin holds, people may call their princes to account, and depose them v. 536
- * Mr. Montague's speech for the defendant v. 538
- * Mr. attorney's observation on the evidence for the queen v. 540
- * It may be a libel, though no particular person be reflected on v. 540
- * Mr. attorney charges Mr. Montague with justifying Tutchin's principles, as to the power of the people v. 540
- * And says, he shall prosecute any man who maintains such doctrine v. 540
- * The chief justice Holt directs the jury v. 541
- * The defendant is found guilty of publishing, but not of writing, The Observator v. 542
- * The defendant's counsel move in arrest of judgment; for that the disfringas was test'd the day after the return of the venire, and so a discontinuance of process v. 543
- * And for that the venire and disfringas were returnable at a day certain v. 545
- * The last exception is over-ruled v. 545
- * As to the first exception, the queen's counsel argue, that it was but a misprision of the clerk, and ought to be amended v. 545
- * Sir Thomas Powys's argument v. 545
- * Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general v. 547
- * Books cited, where amendments are allowed in cases of the crown v. 547
- * Arguments by the defendant's counsel, that it could not be amended v. 552
- * For that there was no instance of an amendment in a criminal prosecution v. 553
- * Mr. Broderick for the defendant v. 554
- * Mr. Montague's argument v. 557
- * Mr. Parker's argument v. 562
- * Mr. Whitaker on the same side v. 563
- * Sir Thomas Powys and Mr. attorney-general, their reply v. 564
- * Mr. justice Gould held it was amendable by the common law; but not by the statute v. 568
- * Mr. justice Powys is of opinion, it might be amended v. 569
- * Lord chief justice, and Mr. justice Powell, contra v. 569
- * Writs must be test'd the day they are awarded v. 570
- * An error in point of skill not amendable, though misprisions or mistakes were v. 570
- * Where the court is divided, judgment may be entered v. 570
- * Mr. justice Powys agrees there should be a new trial v. 570
- * The trial being set aside, whether a new venire could be taken out, unless the court award it v. 571
- * No judgment entered v. 571
- * TWYN, JOHN, Printer,
- * His trial for high-treason, and the trials of Thomas Brewster, Simon Dover, and Nathan Brooks, for a misdemeanour, the 20th and 22d of February, 1663-4, 15 Car. II. ii. 528
- * The indictment against Twyn, for printing a seditious and treasonable libel, entitled, A Treatise of the Execution of Justice, &c. ii. 528. See vi. 330
- * The indictment against Dover, for printing a libel, called, The Speeches and Prayers of some of the late King's Judges, &c. ii. 529
- * The indictment against Brewster, for printing and uttering the said libel, called, The Speeches and Prayers, &c. ii. 530
- * Another indictment against Brewster, for printing and uttering another libel, called, The Phoenix; or, The solemn League and Covenant, &c. ii. 530
- * The indictment against Nathan Brooks, for selling and uttering the said book, called, The Speeches and Prayers, &c. ii. 530
- * Dover, Brewster, and Brooks are allowed a copy of their indictment, and counsel; their offence being but a misdemeanour ii. 530
- * John Twyn first brought upon his trial ii. 530
- * Half the jury booksellers, or printers ii. 530
- * Speeches of the king's counsel ii. 531
- * The evidence against Twyn ii. 532
- * Of his servant, that some sheets of the book were printed at his house; and that Mr. Twyn composed part of them himself ii. 532
- * OF

I N D E X.

- * Of several, that the sheets and part of the forms were seized in his printing-house ii. 533
- * The treasonable passages of the pamphlets read in court ii. 536
- * In his defence he denies that he knows who was the author ii. 537
- * The chief justice directs the jury, and tells them, the expressions in the book are high-treason by the old statute ii. 537
- * John Twyn convicted ii. 537. See viii. 386
- * Judgment for high-treason pronounced against Twyn ii. 538
- * The jury sworn a-new the Monday following, and Brewster brought upon his trial ii. 538
- * The evidence against Brewster, that he put the book to be printed, and paid the printer for printing, and the bookbinder for stitching them ii. 538
- * His defence, that he did it only in the way of his trade, and did not read the book ii. 540
- * That the supposed offence was committed three years and a quarter before ii. 541
- * The lord chief justice Hyde directs the jury ii. 541
- * He tells them, the law implies a malicious and seditious intent, where one publishes a seditious libel ii. 542
- * And it is no excuse for the printer, to say, they were dying speeches, or the words of a dying man; the printer and publisher are liable to be punished, if the words are not justifiable ii. 542
- * Thomas Brewster tried upon the second indictment ii. 542
- * The evidence against him upon the second indictment, much the same as upon the first ii. 542
- * Brewster urges in his defence, that the last book he is indicted for, was printed formerly with licence ii. 544
- * The lord chief justice directs the jury, and takes notice of this expression in the last-mentioned libel, That, the king abusing his power, the people may resist, and take up arms against him; and this, he tells the jury, is express treason ii. 544
- * He observes, as to the book being licensed, one part was licensed at Edinburgh, and the other during the rebellion here ii. 544
- * Simon Dover brought upon his trial ii. 545
- * The evidence against him ii. 545
- * His defence, that none of the witnesses are positive; but that all the evidence is by hearsay ii. 546
- * The chief justice directs the jury, and tells them, it was no excuse to say, when he had printed a piece of sedition, that printing was his trade ii. 547
- * And that pregnant circumstances are good evidence, as well as full proof ii. 547
- * Nathan Brooks brought upon his trial ii. 547
- * The evidence against him, that he carried some of the books tied up to a bookfeller; and that one was seized upon him ii. 547
- * The chief justice directs the jury ii. 549
- * Thomas Brewster, Simon Dover, and Nathan Brooks, convicted ii. 549
- * The chief justice tells them, they might have been indicted for high-treason for this fact, if the government had not been favourable ii. 549
- * Judgment against these three ii. 549
- * Twyn's behaviour at his execution viii. 386
- * TWYSDEN, Sir THOMAS, Baronet, Justice B. R. Of opinion, on earl Shaftesbury's motion in B. R. to be bailed or discharged on a commitment by the lords for contempt during the sitting of parliament; that though he was illegally committed, the commitment could not be examined in B. R. nor could that court either bail or discharge the noble prisoner; but did not declare how his opinion would have been in case there had been a prorogation ii. 622
- * T T B U R N.
- * Whence so called i. 49
- T Y R A N N Y.
- Tyranny, bad as it is, is better than anarchy xi. 323

U.

- UCHILTRIE*, JAMES Lord of, His trial at Edinburgh, for calumnies against the marquis of Hamilton, lords Haddington, Roxburgh, and Buccleugh, and sowing sedition between his majesty and the said noblemen, 6 Car. I. vii. 283
- Lord Uchiltrie's examination, June 20, 1631, and depositions concerning the Hamiltons vii. 284
- Lord Rea's examination vii. 285
- The king's letters to the lords of the council in Scotland, to try the lord Uchiltrie vii. 287
- The lord Uchiltrie's list of the plotters vii. 288
- The indictment against the lord Uchiltrie vii. 288
- His defence vii. 290
- The lord Rea's deposition of the 18th of May, 1631, read vii. 292
- Sentenced to perpetual imprisonment vii. 308
- * U D A L L, JOHN.
- * His trial, on the statute 23 Eliz. cap. 2. for feloniously writing and publishing a seditious and scandalous libel, called, The Demonstration of Discipline, 1589 and 1590 i. 168
- * He is examined before a committee of council i. 168
- * Alledges, no man is bound to answer and accuse himself i. 169
- * Refuses to answer upon oath i. 170
- * He is tried at Surry assizes i. 171
- * Charged with puritanical tenets i. 171
- * Depositions of absent persons read against him i. 172
- * He insists, they ought to give evidence viva voce; which the court denied i. 172, 173, 182
- * The court refuse to hear the prisoner's witnesses, because it was against the queen i. 173, 183

- * The court offer to acquit him, if he would say he did not write the libel he was charged with i. 173, 183
- * The court direct the jury to consider only, whether he writ the book, and leave the nature of the offence to them i. 173, 176
- * Udall's defence; he urges the statute he is indicted upon was designed only against the papists i. 174
- * The court rule, that impugning the bishops authority, is impugning the queen's authority within the meaning of the act; and it is felony to impugn the queen's authority in causes ecclesiastical i. 175
- * The prisoner is convicted i. 176
- * He affirms the cause of presbytery to be God's cause i. 177, 178
- * Upon his submission his judgment is respited i. 179
- * Being called to judgment, he assigns the same causes in arrest of judgment he had mentioned in his defence i. 180
- * His objections answered by the court i. 181
- * Circumstantial evidence sufficient to convict a man, where there is no direct proof i. 182
- * Retracting his submission, sentence of death passed upon him i. 184
- * His principles i. 185
- * Condemns the separation of the Brownists i. 185
- * King James interposes in behalf of him and the other puritanical ministers under prosecution i. 187
- * He petitions for banishment i. 188
- UNION OF ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND. See POSTNAIL.
- * U N I V E R S I T I E S. See CAMBRIDGE. MAGDALEN COLLEGE.
- * URLINESS, SAMUEL v. 572. See GREEN THOMAS, & al. U S A G E.

Usage in former cases necessary to be known in order to understand the method and practice of trials for crimes Em. Pref. i.
No degree of antiquity can give sanction to an usage bad in itself xi. 312
A general immemorial usage, not inconsistent with any statute, especially if the result of evident necessity, and tending to public safety, seems part of the common law of England, in contradistinction to statute law xi. 350, 351

U S U R P A T I O N.

If a practice be fit and right, it matters not its being introduced in the time of Usurpation Em. Pref. viii.
The distinction between acts concurring with the usurper, transferring de facto in his person the power he usurps, and acts, whereby the oppressed subjects make use of the power usurped, wherein the utility, not of the usurper, but of the subjects, is respected vii. 413. See ARGYLE Marquis of.
CROMWELL OLIVER.
REGICIDES.
TREASON.

USURPATIONS OF THE CHURCH OF ROME. See POPE.

V.

V A C A T I O N.

- Defendant's imprisonment expiring in the vacation, court made a special rule to prevent his lying in gaol longer than the time ordered by the sentence xi. 334
- VALENTINE*, BENJAMIN. See ELIOT Sir JOHN.
- * V A N E, Sir H E N R Y, Knight.
- * His trial at the King's Bench bar, for high-treason, the 6th of June, in Trinity-term, 1662 ii. 435
- * Arguments he had prepared to offer before his arraignment ii. 435
- * His arraignment ii. 438
- * The indictment for compassing the death of king Charles II. holding him out of the possession of the government, raising forces and levying war against him ii. 438
- * His memorandums for his defence ii. 439
- * A jury sworn, and charged with the prisoner ii. 441
- * The evidence produced against him ii. 441
- * Sir Henry Vane's defence ii. 442
- * He insists that a king out of possession of the government, was not such a king against whom treason could be committed ii. 442
- * That he could not be called to account for what he transacted by authority of parliament, the parliament being co-ordinate with the king ii. 443
- * And that, being indicted in Middlesex, evidence could not be given of treason committed in Surry ii. 443
- * He is answered, that the parliament, under which he pretended to act, was dissolved by the death of the late king ii. 444
- * As to the king's being out of possession, this had been urged by Walsby the jesuit, who was indicted for treason against king James, before his entering into England, but was over-ruled ii. 444
- * And as to the parliament being co-ordinate with the king, this parliament had not a greater power than other parliaments, by 17 Car. though they had a longer duration ii. 444
- * And that the parliament being under a force, and most of the members excluded, their acts were of no authority ii. 444
- * Privilege of parliament no shelter for breach of the peace, much less for treason ii. 444
- * Sir Henry Vane convicted ii. 444
- * His papers that he had prepared for his defence ii. 444
- * He is called to judgment, and offers a bill of exceptions ii. 450, 451
- * He urges the same points in arrest of judgment that he had insisted on at his trial ii. 453
- * He insists much on the 11 Hen. VII. and says, it ought to be taken largely for any sovereign power, be it a Protector or other; and that had the late Protector taken the name of king, no treason could have been committed against the king de jure out of possession ii. 453
- * The

- * The petition of both houses to his majesty, in behalf of sir Henry Vane ii. 459
- * Sentence pronounced upon him ii. 459
- * His behaviour and dying speech ii. 459. See viii. 64. n.
- * VAUGHAN, Captain THOMAS,
- * His trial for high-treason before the Admiralty, November 6, 1696, 8 Wil. III. v. 17
- * Six days notice of trial, after issue joined v. 17
- * The indictment for adhering to, and assisting the king's enemies, and levying war v. 18. vi. 57. Ap.
- * The prisoner's irons ordered to be taken off v. 18
- * Exceptions to the indictment must be taken before plea pleaded, notwithstanding stat. 7 Wil. III. chap. 3, says before the jury are sworn v. 18
- * Dr. Littleton, and Sir John Hawles solicitor-general, their speeches before evidence v. 19
- * The prisoner cannot insist on the witnesses being examined apart, as his right, but it is generally granted v. 20
- * Evidence that he acted under a French commission, and fought against the king's ships, and was taken v. 20
- * Evidence offered of his running away with another ship; but rejected, because not laid in the indictment v. 20—22
- * A general indictment for levying war, or adhering to the king's enemies, not good; unless it be shewn wherein they adhered, &c. v. 21
- * Evidence to prove that he owned himself an Irishman v. 25
- * The prisoner's defence by Mr. Phipps and Dr. Oldys his counsel v. 26
- * They endeavour to prove him a Frenchman v. 26. &c.
- * The king's counsel call witnesses to shew the prisoner was a native of Ireland v. 29
- * The prisoner's counsel call witnesses against the king's witnesses v. 30
- * No evidence ought to be given of the contents of a letter, unless the letter be produced v. 31
- * The prisoner's examination read v. 33
- * The chief justice directs the jury v. 34
- * Adhering to the king's enemies, what shall be construed such v. 34
- * Foreigners who are in the service of an enemy (though their state be in amity with ours) deemed subjects to the enemy, and not pirates, while in the enemy's service v. 34
- * The prisoner is convicted v. 36
- * His counsel move in arrest of judgment v. 36
- * 1. That the indictment does not say, he adhered to the king's enemies against the king v. 36
- * Over-ruled v. 36
- * 2. That no act of hostility was alledged v. 37
- * Over-ruled, and held, that cruising upon the coast with an armed vessel was an act of hostility, and was an actual levying war v. 37
- * 3. That the trial should have been before the Admiralty v. 37
- * Over-ruled v. 38
- * A confession may be retracted by the civil law v. 38
- * Whether two witnesses are required by the laws of God in capital cases v. 38
- * Our juries looked upon as witnesses coming out of the neighbourhood where the fact is committed v. 38
- * Sentence pronounced v. 38
- * Captain Vaughan's commission v. 39

V E N I C E.

The senate of Venice executed conspirators against the state, after promise of pardon v. 108

V E N I R E.

- In what a venire differs from a precept iv. 745
- Venire* always issues after issue joined between particular parties, and is a record and ground for hab. corp. with a return returnable at a certain future day iv. 745
- Venire* issues as in civil causes, on appeals and indictments removed into B. R. iv. 744. See DISTRINGAS.
- Whether, on trial being set aside, a new venire can be taken out, unless court award it v. 71. See WRITS.

V E R D I C T.

- Jury may bring in a special verdict, or guilty as to part, and not guilty as to part xi. 407. n.
- Upon affidavit of the jurymen, that they did not give the verdict entered up, the court set aside the trial, and granted a new trial in a criminal case x. 407. n. See v. 411. n.
- Caution to jurymen against finding a general verdict Em. Pref. viii.
- * See JURY.
- * VERE, ROBERT, Duke of Ireland. See BRAMBRE.
- * VERNON, Sir GEORGE, Baron of the Exchequer,
- His opinion for the king against John Hampden, esq. in the cause of ship money, with his reasons i. 637

V E R N O N, Mr.

- Opens the evidence on the trial of Gooden, and others, for murder vi. 797
- Opens the evidence against White for the same offence vi. 829

V E R U L A M, Lord. See BACON Sir FRANCIS.* VICE-CHANCELLOR. See CAMBRIDGE.

V I L L E N A G E.

- Manner of making title to a villein xi. 341, 343
- The condition of a villein xi. 341
- The origin of villeins xi. 342
- The decline of villenage xi. 342
- When villenage expired xi. 342
- The rules of law concerning villenage exclude a new slavery xi. 344
- No slavery but villenage ever existed xi. 344
- Examination of the cases on the subject of slavery, just before the extinction of villenage xi. 344

See NEGRO. SLAVERY. SOMMERSETT JAMES.

- * VINCENT, SAMUEL v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.
- VINER*, CHARLES,

Stiled a laborious compiler of the law
His Abridgment commended xi. 206
xi. 235

V O I R E D I R E.

Court refused to suffer a witness to be examined on a voire dire, whether he had a pardon or other reward for giving his evidence, because the same question having been asked after he had given his evidence and denied it; and because the pardon or reward would not be sufficient to affect the competency, but only the credibility of his testimony vi. 257

Jurymen examined on a voire dire, whether he was a freeholder vi. 59.

Witness sworn upon a voire dire v. 426. ix. 403. ix. *639, *689, *704, *705

Form of oath to be administered to a witness upon a voire dire ix. *639

See WITNESSES.

V O T E. See ASHBY and WHITE viii. 89. PARLIAMENT.VOWELL, PETER,

His speech at execution viii. 365. See ii. 212. * See FOX SOMERSET.

VOX POPULI.

A person executed for printing a seditious libel of that title ix. 682, 715.

See MATTHEWS.

Common fame by credible persons, which is vox populi, ought to prejudice a grand jury against a witness, so as to disbelieve him iv. 184

* VRATZ, CHRISTOPHER iii. 462. See BOROSKI, & al.

W.

* WADE, COOPER v. 445. See KIRKBY, & al.* WAITE, THOMAS ii. 399. See REGICIDES.* WAKEMAN, Sir GEORGE, Bart.

* William Marshal, William Rumley, and James Coker, their trial for high-treason, July 18, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 917. See iii. 221. vii. 484.

* The indictment against the three first, for conspiring the king's death ii. 917

* Indictment against Coker, for the same ii. 919

* They are all tried by the same jury ii. 918

* Sir Robert Sawyer's speech before evidence ii. 920

* The king's witnesses called, to prove the plot in general ii. 921

* Sir Edmondbury Godfrey's death ii. 923

* The papists opinion of the powder-plot ii. 927, 928

* Oates deposes, that the queen was to assist Sir George Wakeman to poison the king ii. 930

* That Sir George Wakeman refused to accept 10,000l. for poisoning the king ii. 930

* That Coker was president of the Benedictines ii. 933

* Bedloe's evidence ii. 935

* Objection to Bedloe's evidence ii. 937

* Marshal charges Bedloe that he did not know him in the Gate-house ii. 938

* Sir George calls his witnesses ii. 941

* Oates's evidence suspected ii. 945

* He reflects on the privy-council ii. 945

* Coker's defence ii. 948

* Witnesses are not to be scandalized by the prisoner, without proof ii. 948

* The improbability of the plot in general ii. 949

* Objections to Oates's testimony ii. 949

* A jury discharged without giving a verdict ii. 953

* Coker proves by several witnesses, that Mr. Stapleton, and not he, was president of the Benedictines ii. 954, 955

* The prisoners urge the protestations of the five Jesuits of their innocence, at their execution, as an argument against the plot ii. 956

* The chief justice answers that objection ii. 957

* They disclaim the king-killing and deposing doctrine, &c. ii. 958

* The chief justice directs the jury ii. 958

* All the prisoners are acquitted ii. 961. See viii. 456.

Some observations on Sir George's trial, by Thomas Ticklefoot viii. 453.

See ii. 1036

* WALCOT, Captain,

* His trial for high-treason, 1683. 35 Car. II. iii. 684

* The indictment for conspiring the death of the king, and to raise a rebellion in the Rye-house plot iii. 684

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech before evidence iii. 685

* Mr. serjeant J. J. J.'s speech iii. 686

* Evidence, that he agreed to command a party that should charge the king's guards iii. 687

* And persuaded Killing to kill the king iii. 689

* Mr. West's evidence iii. 693

* Walcot's letter to the secretary of state produced and read iii. 698

* His defence iii. 699

* Mr. Fitch, solicitor-general, sums up the evidence iii. 700

* Lord chief justice Saunders, his directions to the jury iii. 701

* The prisoner convicted iii. 702

* The sentence, and his behaviour at execution iii. 745

Writ of error for him vi. 42. Ap. See iii. 752.

WALCOT, Sir THOMAS.

The executors of Sir Thomas Walcot, one of the justices of B. R. were ordered to attend the house of commons, respecting the making reparation to Sir Thomas Armstrong's family, for that judge having refused admitting his plea, and attainting him by outlawry iii. 986, 987

* WALKER, Doctor. See GOLDING.

WALLAGE.

WALLACE, JAMES. See KINGSTON Dukes of.
WALLER, Mr.

Of counsel for Christopher Love, impeached of treason for corresponding with, and conspiring to bring in, king Charles II. 3 Car. II. rejected for refusing to take the engagement ii. 159

* WALLER, Sir HARDRESS ii. 308. See REGICIDES.

WALLOP, RICHARD,

His argument for Fitzharris, on his plea to the jurisdiction of the court iii. 251

Defends Braddon and another on their trial for a misdemeanour iii. 872

His argument in arrest of Roswell's judgment, who stood convicted of speaking treasonable words iii. 1053

Reprimanded by the earl of Nottingham, lord high steward on viscount Stafford's trial, for not being ready to argue a point of law on the instant it was stated iii. 204

Ill treated by chief justice Jefferies x. 39. Ap.

WALPOLE, ROBERT,

His speech in the case of Abby and White viii. 122

WALSINGHAM, FRANCIS,

His letter to sir Amias Pawlet, in relation to the death of Mary queen of Scots vii. 29

WALTER, Sir JOHN,

A grave and learned judge, falling into the king's displeasure, was discharged of his service by message, yet kept his place of chief baron, and would not leave it but by legal proceeding, because his patent of it was quandiu se bene gesserit; though he never sat in court after the king forbade him, yet he held his place till he died, which was in the year 1631 vii. 243. n.

W A R.

Crown entering into war with another nation, sufficient notification of being enemies, without formal declaration i. 115

Tempus belli described i. 561

Prosecution for offences against articles of war v. 445

War is a great evil; but is chosen to avoid a greater xi. 315

WARD, EDWARD,

His argument on challenge for want of freehold in jury on behalf of lord Ruffel, tried for treason iii. 710

His speech in the cause between sir William Pritchard and Papillon, for causing sir William to be arrested during his mayoralty, without cause iii. 1077

WARD, Sir EDWARD, Lord Chief Baron,

Inform the jury on the trial of William Kidd, for murder and piracy v. 294

Inform the jury on the prosecution of Churchill, for piracy and murder v. 312

WARD, Mr.

His speech for Francia, for treason vi. 88

Of counsel against William Alton ix. 183, 204

* WARD, Sir PATIENCE.

* His trial at the King's Bench, for perjury, 1683, 35 Car. II. iii. 661

* The information opened, charging the defendant with perjury, in a cause between the duke of York and mr. Pilkington iii. 661

* Sir Robert Sawyer, attorney-general, his speech iii. 662

* Mr. serjeant Jefferies his speech iii. 662

* Evidence to prove he swore the matters laid in the information iii. 663

* Evidence, that what sir Patience testified was false iii. 665

* Sir George Treby, recorder, his speech for the defendant iii. 667

* Mr. Williams, on the same side iii. 669

* Evidence, to prove that sir Patience did not swear positively, but to the best of his memory, and with caution iii. 670

* Witnesses called to the defendant's reputation iii. 674

* Sir George Treby's observations for the defendant iii. 676

* Mr. Williams's observations iii. 677

* Sir Francis Winnington's speech iii. 678

* Mr. Pollexfen, on the same side iii. 678

* Mr. attorney-general's reply iii. 679

* Mr. solicitor-general, and sir George Jefferies's reply iii. 680, 681

* Lord chief justice Saunders sums up the evidence iii. 682

* The defendant convicted iii. 684

* But withdraws before sentence iii. 684

WARRANT.

The description of a lawful warrant Em. Pref. iv.

Warrant to suspend an execution, all written with the king's own hand vii. 66

Special warrant for beheading viii. 340

Warrant for the seizure of papers cannot be justified in the case of a seditious libel xi. 307, 312, 320, 323

A general warrant, neither naming offender nor otherwise describing him; except by relation to offence committed, cannot be maintained at common law xi. 312, 321, 323

Warrant of commitment for felony must contain species of the felonious charge, briefly xi. 304

Lord Coke denied the legality of a warrant to search for stolen goods xi. 321

The method to be pursued in the legal execution of such a warrant xi. 321

The legality of a warrant will never depend on the truth of the information whereon the justice of peace granted it ix. 6

Blank warrant will not justify arrest x. 478

Warrant though sealed need not be delivered x. 476

Secretary of state's warrant for apprehending a libeller xi. 302. See

ENTICK JOHN, Clerk.

Form of warrant to the lord chancellor for issuing the writ de hæreticis comburendo vi. 1. Ap.

* WARWICK and HOLLAND, EDWARD Earl of,

* His trial before the house of peers, for the murder of Richard Coote, esq. the 28th of March, 1699, 12 Will. III. v. 137

* The indictment v. 140, &c.

* Lord Somers, lord high steward, his speech v. 142

* Sir Thomas Trevor, attorney-general, opens the evidence v. 144

* Evidence of the quarrel v. 144

* Evidence of the chairmen that carried them into Leicester-Fields; and of Mr. Coote's being killed v. 149, &c.

* Evidence of the servants at the Bagnio v. 155

* Evidence of the surgeons v. 160

* The earl's defence v. 162

* The earl's witnesses are called v. 163

* Mr. French having had his clergy, but not being burnt in the hand, it is debated whether he is a legal witness v. 166

* Mr. attorney's argument, that Mr. French was no legal witness v. 166

* Sir Thomas Powis's argument, in behalf of the prisoner, contra v. 167

* Peers shall not be burnt in the hand v. 167

* The king may pardon the burning, even in an appeal v. 168

* The judges opinions must be asked in presence of the prisoner v. 169

* Serjeant Wright's reply to the prisoner's counsel, as to Mr. French's testimony v. 169

* Burning, as well as the allowance of clergy, necessary to restore a man to his credit v. 170

* Ruled, that French was not a legal witness v. 173

* The prisoner shall not suppose a fact, and his counsel argue the law arising upon it, till the lords have settled what the fact really is v. 173

* Mr. solicitor, sir John Hawles, sums up the evidence for the king v. 176

* The earl of Warwick found guilty of man-slaughter v. 180

* The earl demands his clergy v. 180

* Receives a caution how he offends again v. 180

WARWICK, Earl of,

His speech concerning the liberty of the subject vii. 186. See

NORTHUMBERLAND Duke of.

WATSON, JAMES. See LEACH DRYDEN.

WATSON, WILLIAM. See MARKHAM Sir

GRIFFIN.

WAYLAND, Sir THOMAS. Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, Edw. I.

Was attainted of felony, for taking bribes, and his lands and goods forfeited, and he banished the kingdom i. 704

WEARG, CLEMENT,

Opens the indictment against Laver for treason vi. 249

His reply on the parliamentary proceedings against Atterbury, bishop of Rochester vi. 453

WEARG, Sir CLEMENT, Solicitor-General,

Opens the charge on the trial of earl Macclesfield (late lord chancellor), on his impeachment for high crimes and misdemeanours, before the house of lords vi. 497

WEBB, THOMAS, Serjeant at Law. See x. 69. Ap.

WEDDERBURN, ALEXANDER, Solicitor-General. See KINGSTON Dukes Dowager of.

WEDDERBURN, Sir JOHN,

Tried for treason, 4 Nov. 1746, 19 Geo. II. ix. 580

His defence ix. 580

Pleads he was forced into the rebellion ix. 581

His case, as reported by mr. justice Foster ix. 581

Sir John is executed at Kennington Common ix. 581

Some account of his family ix. 581, 582

* WELLING, THOMAS and ELIZABETH

v. 504. See HATHAWAY, & al.

WELLS, Mr.

Counsel for Nathaniel Denew and others viii. 189

WELLS, SUSANNAH,

Her trial for robbing Elizabeth Canning, at the Old-Bailey, Feb. 1753, 26 Geo. II. x. 223

The evidence against her x. 223

Prisoner owns she has a bad character x. 234

Found guilty x. 234

* WENTWORTH, Sir JOHN i. 333. See

Sir JOHN HOLLIS.

WENTWORTH, THOMAS. See STRAFFORD

Earl of.

WEST.

The cruelties of Jefferies in the West enraged above a third part of the nation iv. 172. See Id. 204

Many men were hanged in the West for having old Jewish names, as Onan, Shib, or the like, with a jest, that their godfathers hanged them iv. 175

All the indictments in the West upon Monmouth's rebellion, were drawn by very good advice iii. 769, 770

WEST, Lord Chancellor of Ireland. See STAR-CHAMBER.

WESTON, Sir FRANCIS,

His trial for treason, in May 1536, 28 Hen. VIII. xi. 10

WESTON, Sir RICHARD, Baron of the Exchequer.

His opinion for the king against Hampden, in the cause of ship-money i. 609 with his reasons

Directed the jury, on the trial of Eliz. Callier, for a libel; he tells them to torture criminals was illegal, and never used in England since Camden the jesuit was put upon the rack, 20 Eliz. A. D. 1578. iii. 98

The charge given by him at Kingston assizes, voted scandalous by parliament.

ment, to reformation, and in derogation of rights and privileges of parliament iii. 221, 223, 224. vii. 484

Parliamentary resolution to impeach him iii. 224. vii. 486

* WESTON, RICHARD,

* His trial for the murder of Mr. Thomas Overbury, Oct. 19, 1615, 13 Jac. I. i. 324

* By the 22 Hen. VIII. chap. 9. a wilful poisoner was to be boiled to death i. 324

* The indictment i. 325

* The prisoner refuses to put himself upon his country: whereupon Mr. Lawrence Hyde, attorney-general, gives a particular account of the whole intrigue i. 326

* Several examinations of others read against the prisoner i. 328

* The prisoner's own examination read as evidence against him i. 328

* The court being set again, he submits to a trial i. 329

* Held sufficient to find the party poisoned; and not necessary to find it done in the manner laid in the indictment i. 330

* The examinations read again at his trial i. 330, 331

* The earl of Somerset and countess of Essex, the contrivers of the murder i. 331, 332

* The prisoner pretends he did not know the things administered were poison i. 332

* He is convicted, and sentence passed on him by the lord chief justice, and his speech i. 332

WHARTON, Lord. See BATHURST CHARLES.

WHARTON, JOHN. See LILBURNE JOHN.

WHIPPIN G.

Observations on that mode of punishment Em. Pref. xii. See vii. 302.

WHISPERING. See iii. 390, 797. iv. 324, 369. x. 68. Ap.

The king's counsel whispering with judge, indecent and unjust iv. 176.

A juryman suffered to whisper the judge in open court ii. 33, 43, 44

WHITAKER, Mr.

His argument on motion in arrest of judgment, given against Tutchin for a libel v. 563

WHITAKER, Mr.

Of counsel for Dammaree viii. 227

His speech for him viii. 237, 239

WHITAKER, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,

His speech against Hales for forgery ix. 82, 103

His observations on the evidence ix. 85

Moves for corporal punishment ix. 106

* WHITE, CHARLES,

* His trial vi. 829. See GOODERE.

* WHITE, Doctor THOMAS, Bishop of Peterborough,

* Tried for publishing a libel iv. 304

* WHITE alias WHITEBREAD, THOMAS,

* William Harcourt, John Fenwick, John Gavan, alias Gaven, and Anthony Turner, their trial for high-treason, June 13, 1679, 31 Car. II. ii. 829

* All the twelve judges in the commission of Oyer and Terminer ii. 829

* The indictment, for compassing the death of the king, the subversion of the government, religion, &c. ii. 830

* Whitebread objects, that he had been tried before for the same offence, and the jury were dismissed without giving their verdict ii. 831

* The chief justice holds, that it was in the discretion of the court to discharge the jury without taking a verdict; and that he might be tried again ii. 832

* This proceeding censured iv. 673. ix. 572

* Carter's trial put off ii. 833

* Sir Creswell Levinz, his speech before evidence ii. 834

* Oates's evidence of the consult of the Jesuits at the White Horse, April 24, 1678. ii. 835

* And of Whitebread's offering Mr. George Wakeman 10,000*l.* to poison the king ii. 835

* His evidence against Gavan ii. 836

* Oates's evidence against Fenwick and Harcourt, of their paying 80*l.* to four ruffians, who were to murder the king at Windfor ii. 837

* Deposes, that the duke of Ormond was to have been killed in Ireland ii. 837

* That Whitebread beat him for discovering the plot ii. 837

* That Turner was at the consult ii. 838

* Dugdale's evidence against Whitebread and Gavan ii. 840

* His evidence against Harcourt ii. 841

* His evidence against Turner ii. 844

* Prance's evidence against Harcourt and Fenwick ii. 844

* Bedloe's evidence against Whitebread, Fenwick, and Harcourt; with his reasons why he suppressed his evidence at a former trial ii. 845

* Pickering and Grove employed to kill the king; and their reward ii. 845

* A design to kill the king at Newmarket ii. 845

* Bedloe's evidence of Mr. George Wakeman's receiving 5000*l.* in part of 15,000*l.* for poisoning the king ii. 846

* Whitebread's defence ii. 848

* Mr. Fenwick's defence ii. 851

* Eleven witnesses depose, that Oates was at St. Omers at the time he swore he was at the consult ii. 852, &c.

* Evidence that Mr. John Warner and Mr. Thomas Preston were in Flanders, when Oates swore he came to England with them ii. 858

* The chief justice falls upon the principles of the papists, and the people about ii. 861

* Gavan's defence ii. 861

* He calls witnesses to prove he was in Staffordshire at the time of the consult ii. 862

* Offers to put himself on the trial ordal ii. 862

* But is told, we have no such law, and that he did it to amuse the people ii. 862

* The prisoners urge, that the witnesses against them are men of infamous characters ii. 863

* Call several witnesses to prove that Ireland was not in London, when Oates swore he was at Mr. Harcourt's chamber there ii. 864

* Whitebread shews that Bedloe must be perjured at one of the trials ii. 866

* Sir Creswell Levinz's reply for the king ii. 867

* A witness called to contradict the evidence about Ireland ii. 868

* Witnesses to contradict the St. Omers witnesses ii. 868

* The prisoners observations on these evidences ii. 872

* The chief justice directs the jury ii. 875

* And tells them, that papists would say or swear any thing to promote their cause; and therefore the testimony of the prisoners witnesses, how numerous soever, was not to be regarded ii. 876

* And that a mistake of seven or eight days in Oates's evidence ought not to influence them ii. 876

* He opposes the verdict against Ireland to the testimony of the prisoners witnesses ii. 877

* The prisoners are convicted ii. 878

* The recorder approves the verdict ii. 878

WHITELOCKE, Sir BULSTRODE, Lord Commissioner for the Custody of the Great Seal of the Commonwealth,

His speech on delivering his opinion in the house of commons, whether Naylor, convicted of blasphemy, should be punished with death i. 273. See vi. i. Ap.

Some passages from his Memorials respecting Lilburne vii. 370

His account of colonel Morris's treason vii. 322

WHITELOCKE, JAMES,

Proceedings against James Whitelocke in Star-chamber, in June, 1613, 10 Jac. I. for a contempt of the king's prerogative xi. 106. See vii. 250. n.

Speech of the attorney-general, Mr. Francis Bacon xi. 106

WHITELOCKE, Sir JAMES, Justice B. R.

Set down in writing a memorial of the questions proposed to the judges on the trial of lord Audley, for buggery and rape i. 387

His speech as judge B. R. in the house of lords in defence of his remanding four gentlemen on their habeas corpus, who were committed for refusing to pay the loan to king Charles I. vii. 184, 185

A memorial made by Mr. Justice Whitelocke concerning the lord Red's discovery of the marquis of Hamilton's conspiracy xi. 126

WHITELOCKE, Sir WILLIAM.

The bill for regulating trials in cases of treason ascribed to him viii. 64. n.

WHITFIELD, Sir RALPH, Serjeant at Law. See BURTON

HENRY i. 483.

WHITFORD, Sir PAUL.

Tho' Mr. Paul Whitford's murdering Dorislaus, Oliver Cromwell's ambassador at the Hague, might tend to the service of king Charles II. in his exile; yet his majesty, after the Restoration, never suffered Whitford to appear in his presence, though he had been a favourite before; and if the king allowed him any thing, it was done so privately that nobody knew it, and Mr. Paul lived and died in a remote part of the kingdom x. 74. Ap.

WIAT, Sir THOMAS,

His arraignment, 1 Mary viii. 325

Found guilty and executed viii. 326

* WICKHAM, JOHN iii. 630. See PILKINGTON, & al.

WICKSTON, ———, and his Wife. See KNIGHTLEY

Sir RICHARD

* WIDDINGTON, WILLIAM Lord. See DER-

WENTWATER Earl of.

* WIFE

* In criminal cases, where she is aggrieved, may be a witness against her husband i. 37, 388, 393. v. 456.

A man fined 500 marks for obeying his wife vii. 32. See HUSBAND and WIFE.

* WILCOCKS, SAMUEL v. 572. See GREEN THO-

MAS, & al.

WILDE, WILLIAM, Serjeant at Law,

His speech at opening the charge against archbishop Laud on his trial for treason i. 840

WILDE, Sir WILLIAM, Knight and Baronet, Judge B. R.

Was of opinion, on earl Shaftsbury's motion, upon a commitment by the lords, for contempt, during the sitting of parliament, that though the commitment was illegal, it could not be examined in B. R. and that the noble prisoner could neither be bailed nor discharged by that court; but said, in case the parliament had stood prorogued, that the earl ought to have been discharged i. 840

WILKES, JOHN, Esq.

His case on habeas corpus, C. P. E. Term, 3 Geo. III. 1763. xi. 302

Tenor of the secretary of state's warrant for apprehending defendant Glyn, serjeant at law, moved for habeas corpus, which was granted xi. 302

Chief justice Pratt censured the warrant xi. 302

Defendant removed out of custody of messengers, and sent to the Tower, in contempt of the court xi. 302

His counsel, solicitor, peers of the realm, and relations, denied access to him, by the particular orders of the secretary of state xi. 302

Copy of warrant of commitment xi. 302

Messengers return habeas corpus xi. 303

Their counsel pray same may be filed xi. 303

Defendant's counsel object to the return xi. 303

The court, with reluctance, on what was observed by Mr. Justice Gould, refused filing return, and ordered it to be debated another day, but never was xi. 303

Another habeas corpus granted to the constable of the Tower xi. 303

Defendant brought to the bar xi. 303

Return

Return to second habeas corpus read xi. 303
 Defendant's counsel move that he may be discharged without bail, on several objections, but principally that he was a member of parliament xi. 303
 Objections answered by the king's counsel xi. 303
 The defendant's speech to the court xi. 303
 He is remanded, the judges requiring a few days to deliver their opinions xi. 304
 Lord chief justice Pratt's argument on delivering the opinion of the court, as reported by mr. serjeant Wilson xi. 304
 The same as reported in "A Digest of the Law of Libels" xi. 304
 Defendant was discharged xi. 304, 305
 Proceedings in his case on two informations, for libels, B. R. M. Term 1764, to H. Term 1770, inclusive xi. 324
 Informations exhibited by solicitor-general xi. 324
 Defendant pleads not guilty xi. 324
 Counsel for the crown obtain summons to amend the record of nisi prius xi. 324
 The proceedings thereon xi. 324
 The order xi. 324
 Defendant in France xi. 324
 Verdicts found against him xi. 324
 Judgments signed xi. 324
 Writs of capias issue xi. 324
 Defendant outlawed xi. 324
 He voluntarily appears xi. 324
 Makes a speech xi. 324
 Attorney-general (De Grey) prays he may stand committed xi. 324
 Mr. serjeant Glynn, of counsel for defendant, opposes this xi. 324
 Mr. recorder Eyre enforces what the serjeant had urged xi. 324
 Argument of mr. Mansfield on same side xi. 324
 Mr. Davenport's speech to same effect xi. 324
 Mr. attorney-general's reply xi. 324
 Lord chief justice Mansfield's argument on giving his opinion against the defendant xi. 325
 The argument of mr. justice Yates xi. 325
 Mr. justice Aston's xi. 325
 And of mr. justice Willes xi. 325
 Defendant, by unanimous opinion of court, was neither committed nor bailed xi. 325
 Defendant brought into court upon habeas corpus xi. 325
 Return thereof xi. 325
 Substance of outlawry xi. 325
 Writ of error xi. 325
 Argument of serjeant Glynn on motion that defendant might be admitted to bail xi. 326
 Arguments of the counsel for the crown who opposed it xi. 326
 Argument of lord Mansfield, on delivering his opinion that defendant could not be bailed xi. 326, 327
 Mr. justice Yates's xi. 326, 328
 Mr. justice Aston's xi. 327, 328
 Mr. justice Willes's xi. 327, 328
 Court unanimously refused to bail defendant, or at their discretion, without the attorney-general's consent xi. 327
 Arguments of counsel on assignment of errors xi. 327
 Lord Mansfield's argument on delivering his opinion thereon xi. 328
 Mr. justice Yates, his argument xi. 333
 Mr. justice Aston's xi. 333
 Mr. justice Willes's xi. 333
 Court unanimously of opinion, that the outlawry was erroneous xi. 333
 Sentences of the court on the two judgments xi. 333, 334
 Writ of error to the lords xi. 334
 Both judgments affirmed in parliament xi. 334
 Rule of court to prevent defendant lying in prison, his imprisonment ordered by the sentence, expiring in the vacation xi. 334
 * WILKS, WILLIAM ii. 585. See MESSINGER, & al.
 A person must be of sane memory to make a will iv. 194
WILLES, EDWARD, Justice B. R. See WILKES JOHN.
WILLES, EDWARD, Justice B. R. See WILKES JOHN.
WILLES, Sir JOHN, Attorney-General, said copies of corporation books could not be read, party offering them having originals x. 142. Ap.
 Objects to the reading of an ancient book x. 142. Ap.
 States the case for the town and port of Hastings, at the suit of Henry Moore x. 158. Ap.
WILLES, Sir JOHN, Lord Chief Justice C. P. Was of opinion a new trial could not be granted for Elizabeth Canning x. 407
WILLIAM the Conqueror. The first usurpation of the pope upon the liberties of the crown of England, began in the time of king William the conqueror xi. 71
WILLIAM RUFUS. In the time of William Rufus, the pope attempted to draw appeals to Rome, but prevailed not xi. 71
WILLIAM III. King of England, &c. The declaration published by him when he came into England at the Revolution v. 747
 The expedient of a voluntary register for seamen, which was attempted in this reign, had no effect xi. 350. See PRESSING.
WILLIAMS, WILLIAM. Of counsel for Harris, on prosecution for a libel ii. 1038
 His argument for Fitzbarris, on his plea to the jurisdiction of the court iii. 241

His speech for Ford lord Grey, tried for seducing, carrying away, and adulterously soliciting a young lady of quality iii. 520, 521
 His speech for sir Patience Ward, informed against for perjury in B. R. iii. 669
 His observations on the evidence iii. 677
 His argument for Thomas Sandys, at the suit of the East-India Company, concerning the validity of their patent, and monopolies vii. 545
 His speech for sir Samuel Barnardiston, for a libel iii. 938
 His speech in the cause between sir William Pritchard and Papillon, for causing sir William to be arrested in his mayoralty, without cause iii. 1077. See ii. 1041.
 He was brow-beaten and ill treated by lord chief justice Jeffries x. 39. Ap.
WILLIAMS, Sir WILLIAM, Speaker of the House of Commons. An information ex officio was filed against him as such, for a libel, in publishing "Dangerfield's Narrative" in the journals of the house xi. 274
 He was heavily fined x. 33. Ap. n.
 Remarks on this extraordinary prosecution x. 33. Ap. n.
 His defence of Lindsay for treason, in returning from France without licence v. 512
WILLIAMS, WILLIAM PEERE. His speech on behalf of George earl Wintoun, in arrest of judgment, on impeachment of treason, before his peers, for being concerned in rebellion vi. 50
WILLIAMS. Hanged for a robbery in Staffordshire, though five witnesses swore he was at Issington in Middlesex, at the time of the robbery x. 299
WILLIAMSON, ROBERT xi. 160. See BANKERS CASE.
WILLIS, FRANCIS. His trial for high treason, under pretence of pulling down meeting-houses, 9 An. 1710 viii. 250
 Mr. Thompson opens the indictment viii. 251
 Mr. attorney-general's speech viii. 251
Tolboy's evidence of the intention of pulling down the meeting houses viii. 251
Grove's evidence, that he saw the prisoner (as he believes, but not positive as to the man) carry a curtain, as a standard, and halloo viii. 252
 Believes the person he saw in Newgate was the man who flourished the curtain, but not certain the prisoner was the person he saw in Newgate viii. 253
 The keeper's evidence, that he saw nobody but the prisoner when he came to Newgate viii. 253
Victor's evidence, that he saw him throw some wood into the fire viii. 254
Lunt's evidence, that the prisoner said to him, They have made me a captain to-night viii. 255
 Counsel object to what he said being made evidence against him, to convict him, without two witnesses to the overt-acts viii. 255
 Mr. Orrel's evidence of a footman's being there viii. 255
 Mr. Darnell for the prisoner viii. 256
 Evidence for the prisoner viii. 257
 That he was sent out by his mistress, to know where the fire was viii. 257
 Evidence, that Grove declared, after seeing him in Newgate, that he was not the man who flourished the curtain viii. 260
 That there was a footman in a green livery, very busy viii. 260
 Mr. Darnell's speech viii. 261
 Mr. attorney-general's reply viii. 262
 Mr. solicitor's reply viii. 263
 Mr. Thompson's viii. 264
 Lord chief justice Parker sums up the evidence viii. 265
 That all that were aiding were guilty, though not privy to the first design viii. 266
 Jury find him not guilty viii. 267
 * WILLOUGHBY, ELIZABETH v. 504. See HATHAWAY, & al.
WILMER. He was obliged to fly his country for returning the bill against Colledge, ignorant, as foreman of the grand jury iv. 173
 Sir John Hawles's remarks on his homine replegiando iv. 186. See HOMINE REPLEGIANDO.
 * WILSON, WILLIAM, Clerk. iii. 949. See SACHEVERELL WILLIAM.
WINDHAM, WADHAM. His reply to the defence of Cook, one of the regicides i. 352
 Was the second best judge who sat in Westminster-hall, from the Restoration to the Revolution iv. 197. vi. 418
WINCHESTER. William Paulet, marquis of Winchester, lord treasurer, lord high steward on duke Somerfet's trial vii. 16
WINNINGTON, Sir FRANCIS, Solicitor-General. Sums up the evidence on the trial of earl Pembroke for murder ii. 653
 Sums up the evidence against Coleman for treason ii. 687
 Speech on the trial of lord Cornwallis, for murder ii. 728
 His speech on the question, whether a pardon may be pleaded to an impeachment? ii. 735
 Of counsel for Carr, observes from evidence, that the individual paper let out in information as libellous, is not proved to be defendant's iii. 61
 That admitting it to be his, it is not proved to be wrote maliciously iii. 61
 His speech as one of the committee for the commons, on the trial of the impeachment of William viscount Stafford, before the lords, for high-treason, in being concerned in the popish plot, Nov. 30, 1680, 32 Car. II. iii. 106
 His argument for Fitz-barris, on his plea to the jurisdiction of the court iii. 248
 Sums

I N D E X.

- Sums up the evidence for the king, on the trial of Colledge for treason iii. 399
- His speech on the trial of Patience Ward, for perjury iii. 678
- Subpœnaed, but did not appear, on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 41
- * W I N T E R, R O B E R T,
- * Thomas Winter, Guy Fawks, John Grant, Ambrose Rookwood, Robert Keyes, and Thomas Bates, their indictment for high-treason, in contriving the gunpowder-plot, January 27th, 1605, 3 Jac. I. i. 232
- * Serjeant Phillips's speech i. 234
- * Sir Edward Coke's speech on opening the charge i. 235
- * The quality of the conspirators i. 237
- * The principles of the jesuits i. 237
- * The reasonableness of the laws against recusants i. 240
- * The prisoners confession before the council, read as evidence against them i. 243
- * They are convicted i. 243
- * Sir Everard Digby arraigned for the same conspiracy; and pleads guilty i. 244
- * Sentence pronounced against them. Four of them executed at the West-end of St. Paul's, and four in the Old Palace-yard i. 247
- * W I N T E R, T H O M A S i. 232. See W I N T E R R O B E R T, & al.
- * W I N T O U N, G E O R G E Earl of,
- * His trial before the house of peers, on an impeachment for high-treason, 1715, 2 George I. vi. 17
- * Orders previous to the trial vi. 18
- * The king's commission, appointing William lord Cowper lord high steward vi. 28
- * Lord high steward's speech to the prisoner vi. 28
- * The articles read, charging him with having been in open rebellion against the king vi. 22
- * His answer vi. 24
- * The replication of the house of commons vi. 25
- * Mr. Hampden's speech vi. 25
- * Sir Joseph Jekyll's speech vi. 28
- * Sir Edward Northey, attorney-general, his speech vi. 29
- * Evidence that the earl of Wintoun was with the rebels from the 11th of October, till the rebellion was suppressed vi. 31, &c.
- * That he was present at several places where the Pretender was proclaimed vi. 33
- * Evidence of the king's officers concerning his surrender, and the terms of it vi. 38
- * Lord Wintoun desires time to make his defence vi. 41
- * Which is refused vi. 42
- * Mr. Cowper sums up the evidence vi. 44
- * Is seconded by sir William Thompson vi. 45
- * Lord Wintoun convicted vi. 48
- * He moves, in arrest of judgment, that no particular day is assigned in the articles vi. 49
- * Sir Constantine Phipps, his counsel, his speech to that point vi. 49
- * Mr. Peere-Williams on the same side vi. 50
- * Mr. Walpole's reply vi. 52
- * Sir Edward Northey and Mr. Cowper's speeches vi. 53
- * Sir William Thompson's argument vi. 54
- * The prisoner's counsel reply vi. 55
- * The objection over-ruled vi. 56
- * The lord high steward's speech before judgment vi. 56
- * Judgment for high-treason pronounced upon him vi. 58
- * He escapes from the Tower vi. 58
- * W I T C H C R A F T v. 482.
- W I T H E R I N G T O N, S I R T H O M A S,
- His reply to Lou's defence, impeached of treason for corresponding with, and conspiring to bring in, king Charles the second ii. 143
- * W I T N E S S E S.
- * Anciently, witnesses were not permitted to be heard against the crown i. 72, 173, 182. iv. 178. vi. 22. vii. 851
- * Aliens, villeins, and accomplices before indicted, may be witnesses i. 113. iii. 178
- * Whether the wife may be a witness for, or against, her husband in criminal matters? i. 393
- * A popish recusant a good witness, till he is convicted, and the record of his conviction is produced i. 392. iv. 45
- * A witness threatened to be hanged if he would not be ingenuous ii. 113
- * A witness sworn on his buttons instead of the Bible ii. 114
- * A witness fined and imprisoned for refusing to be sworn ii. 124
- * Whether the prisoner shall not have the process of the court to bring in his witnesses? ii. 505
- * Whether a witness charging a person criminally before the house of commons, be not subject to damages, they being no court of record? ii. 561
- * Exception to a witness, that he was never baptized, over-ruled ii. 598
- * A witness shall not be aspersed without proof ii. 710, 821, 948
- * Persons indicted and acquitted, good witnesses against others accused of the same crime ii. 728
- * A jurymen who can give evidence in the cause, shall do it in open court ii. 809
- * A witness need not answer any questions that tend to make him accuse himself, and subject him to a penalty ii. 822, 1035. iii. 540. iv. 9, 606. See ACCUSATION. MAXIMS.
- * The witnesses against the king formerly not sworn in capital cases ii. 850. vii. 424, 426
- * Witnesses being allowed a subsistence, no objection to their testimony ii. 891
- * A witness need not answer any question that does not concern the point in issue ii. 900. iii. 42. 540. ix. 640*, 645*
- * A prisoner may shew, that a witness contradicts what he swore concerning him at the trial of another ii. 900
- * Persons indicted for disparaging the king's witnesses ii. 979
- * Whether it be criminal to offer a witness any reward to give his evidence, when to testify the truth? ii. 1031, 1035
- * A pardon will not restore one convicted of perjury to his credit; but if he be upbraided with it after a pardon, he may have an action iii. 44, 46
- * Whether one disabled to be of a jury, is not disabled to be a witness? iii. 45
- * A general pardon will not restore one outlawed for felony to his credit; but clergy restores one convicted of felony iii. 46
- * A witness's credit is not impaired by a jury giving their verdict contrary to it iii. 49
- * There must be two witnesses believed by the jury, to convict a prisoner of high-treason iii. 56
- * When a witness is in execution for debt, he cannot be brought out of the rules of the prison without a habeas corpus, because it is an escape iii. 97. iv. 2, 599
- * Witnesses sworn twice in the same trial iii. 123
- * A peer may be sworn as a witness, and give evidence, though he is judge in the case iii. 141
- * Members of either house may be witnesses on an impeachment; but both peers and commoners must be sworn iii. 183, 189
- * A prisoner shall not call evidence to discredit his own witnesses iii. 374
- * Two witnesses to one overt-act are not necessary in treason iii. 419, 722, 729, 817
- * Though witnesses shall not read their evidence, they have been sometimes allowed to look upon their notes, to refresh their memories iii. 474. iv. 607, 612
- * A prisoner may not cross-examine the king's witnesses, till the counsel for the king have done with them iii. 690
- * One witness who speaks directly to the treason, and another who speaks but to a circumstance, deemed two witnesses in law iii. 818. iv. 246
- * One witness sufficient to convict a person of any other treason, but that of compassing the prince's death iii. 819. v. 89
- * Not permitted to charge a witness with any crime in particular, without producing the record of his conviction iii. 845
- * The court refuse to examine a witness, who came to swear he had sworn himself; though the counsel urged that such evidence was usually admitted to detect a subornation iv. 47
- * Whether a witness for the king may be indicted for perjury on the statute? iv. 52, 102
- * The deposition of a person absent ought not to be admitted as evidence at a trial in criminal cases iv. 91
- * A person outlawed and pardoned, permitted to give evidence iv. 104
- * A prisoner permitted to charge the king's evidence with particular crimes, without producing any record against him iv. 234
- * A trial never put off on the prisoner's suggestions that his witnesses are out of the way, without oath made by a third person, to satisfy the court of the truth of it iv. 421. v. 449
- * The witnesses shall not be examined as to any other crimes the prisoner is guilty of, but those he stands charged with iv. 500
- * Witnesses shall not give evidence of any particular crimes to discredit a witness; but only to his general character iv. 693
- * Where a witness is a prisoner, he must be brought up to the trial by habeas corpus iv. 599
- * The witness being the king's servant, no cause of challenge, when the crown prosecutes iv. 632
- * One convicted of felony may be a witness if pardoned either by the king, or by statute: but one attainted, and pardoned, either by the king, or a statute-pardon, is not restored either to blood or credit, unless there be special words in the pardon, or his attainder be reversed iv. 682, x. 75. Ap. See v. 166, 170
- * Though the witnesses are sometimes examined apart, at the instance of the prisoner; this is a favour, and the court may refuse it iv. 756. v. 20
- * The judge shall come off the bench, and give evidence, when his testimony may tend to convict or acquit the prisoner v. 98
- * Whether the divine law, and the law of nations, require two witnesses in capital cases? v. 38, 118, 124, 126
- * One admitted to his clergy, but not burnt in the hand, or pardoned, is not restored to his credit, so as to be a legal witness v. 165, 170
- * Persons indicted for piracy, held legal witnesses v. 289, 292
- * The person forcibly married, admitted a witness of the force against her husband de facto v. 456
- * A wife de jure shall not be a witness for, or against, her husband v. 476
- A lord chief justice of England examined on a trial. See P O P H A M
- Sir JOHN* i. 200
- A lord keeper of the great seal gave his evidence on the same trial. See E S S E X and S O U T H A M P T O N, Earls of i. 200
- A lord chief baron of the Exchequer deposed on a trial. See M O N T A G U E W I L L I A M.
- Court denied to let witnesses be examined videlicet i. 95, 98, 173, 182, 183, 220
- Scotsmen* received to give evidence in England, even before the Union ii. 11
- Witness refusing to swear, fined 500l. and committed during pleasure ii. 124
- Justice permitted to give in evidence what witness who had withdrawn himself deposed before him on his examination ii. 296
- King's witnesses ought not to be debarred from hearing what prisoner's witnesses depose iii. 141
- Witness examined for prisoner, after king's counsel had made observations iii. 311
- Witness whose evidence tended to excuse the witness, permitted to be sworn iii. 539
- Con-

Convicts competent witnesses, unless records produced iii. 328
Oates asked lord chief justice Jefferies, who presided at his trial for perjury, to be sworn as a witness in the cause iv. 29
Oates subpoenaed two speakers of the house of commons, two barons of the Exchequer, two lord chief justices, a solicitor-general, and all the judges of the Common Pleas on his trial for perjury iv. 29, 41, 42, 70
Several of the judges examined on Oates's trial for perjury iv. 40, 41
Speaker of the house of commons examined as a witness on Oates's trial for perjury, on his behalf iv. 41
The witnesses on alderman Cornish's trial were put in remote prisons at the Revolution iv. 160
Where a witness contradicts, or says more or less than a witness that went before him, by the hearsay of that witness, the first witness is always asked what he says to it? iv. 170
The conviction of sir Patience Ward for perjury, deterred all honest men from appearing as witnesses to truth iv. 172
Of the credibility of witnesses iv. 178, 181
If a judge knows any thing material of the matter tried before him and others, he may and ought to be a witness iv. 185, 202. See ii. 384. n.
Witnesses kept out of the hearing of each other, when they give their evidence iv. 191
A dancing witness and an amazed witness described iv. 194
Principals cannot be good witnesses against accessory, on indictment and trial of accessory with principals iv. 199
A person indicted is a good witness against another for the same crime iv. 200
Person convicted of felony cannot be a witness till pardoned iv. 200
One prisoner's story is no evidence against another indicted with him vi. 218
Examination of witnesses by coroner, they being since dead, or unable to travel, upon oath thereof, and of the coroner, that it is the same examination, without addition or alteration, may be read vii. 421
Examination of witnesses by coroner, the former being absent by means or procurement of prisoner, upon proof that witness was so detained, same may be read; but oath that all endavours to find out such witnesses were vain, is not sufficient to authorize the reading such examination vii. 421
The witnesses examined for lord Morley on his trial for murder, were not sworn vii. 424. See ld. 426
Quare the competency of witnesses who have not received their pardon viii. 213
Prisoner pleading guilty on an arraignment for piracy, admitted evidence against his accomplices viii. 213
Quaker cannot be a witness in appeal ix. 122. n.
Form of oath to be administered to a witness upon a voire dire ix. *639
A witness being sworn in chief instead of upon a voire dire, occasioned great altercation ix. *645
Lord chancellor Hardwicke, as lord high steward on lord Levat's trial for treason, said, that at common law, where a witness is produced by the plaintiff to be sworn, the oath to give evidence in chief is administered to him, unless defendant objects to his competency, and then he may be examined touching that objection, upon a voire dire; but after the witness has been sworn in chief, if any objection is then made to him, he may be asked the same question by virtue of his oath in chief, as he might have been asked upon a voire dire; but, after the witness has been examined by defendant respecting the objection, and denied it upon oath, it is not usual to permit defendant to call a witness to prove it, in order to prevent his being a witness, unless agreed to by the other side ix. 645, 646
If several objections are had to a witness, they cannot be all made at once ix. *651
An attainted person is not a good witness, unless he has been pardoned ix. 652*
Where a witness is produced, he is to be sworn in chief, unless there be some objection to his competency, and then he is to be sworn upon a voire dire; after he is sworn in chief, the party who produces him ask him such questions as he thinks proper, after which the other party is at liberty to cross-examine him, either to the matter of fact concerning which he has been examined, or any other matter whatsoever, that shall tend to impeach his credit, or weaken his testimony, provided the questions be legal ix. 676. *See VOIRE DIRE
To call witnesses after the reply, is irregular ix. *743
A witness is to give his evidence, and not his opinion x. *523, *539
Standing in the pillory no exception to the competency of a witness x. 42. Ap.
Member of corporation, though he votes, is a legal witness in the election of mayor x. 150. Ap.
Counsel permitted to examine witnesses on behalf of prisoner in a case of felony xi. 239
But not allowed to examine them in cases of treason ix. 638*
If a surgeon was voluntarily to reveal secrets come to his knowledge in the way of his profession, to be sure, he would be guilty of a breach of honour, and of great indiscretion; but to give information of them in a court of justice, which by the law of the land he is bound to do, will never be imputed to him as any indiscretion whatever xi. 243
Surgeon hath no privilege to avoid giving evidence in a court of justice xi. 243
Surgeon has no privilege where it is a material question, in a civil or criminal cause, to say that his introduction to the parties was in the course of his profession xi. 243
A witness objects to disclosing any thing communicated to him in confidential trust in his profession xi. 243
A peer of the realm makes a like objection xi. 246
Witness bound by law to answer all questions, though such answers arise from confidential communication, or private conversation xi. 247
Witness permitted to have what he deposed read over to him xi. 247

Deposition of witness read to him, at his request xi. 247
Witness not permitted to withdraw, though at the request of the party's counsel against whom he was produced xi. 248
No instance of a witness not attending at the bar to be examined voire dire, has been permitted in any manner whatever to give his evidence out of court, so as to be reported into the court, and stand as evidence on the trial. By lord Camden, and so resolved unanimously by the house of lords xi. 253
The legal protection of attorneys from giving evidence against their clients, is as to what is revealed to them by their clients, in order to take their advice or instructions, with regard to their defence. By lord Mansfield xi. 253
It has often been determined, that as to fact, an attorney or counsel has no privilege to withhold his evidence if there is a doubt; even if he swears to an answer in chancery, he cannot protect himself from swearing whether that is his client's hand or not, or to his having sworn it, or the execution of a deed; it does not come within the objection to an attorney's revealing the secrets of his client. By lord Mansfield xi. 253

One positive witness sufficient by the civil law. See MAXIMS.
So by the law of Scotland. See SCOTLAND.
But not by the law of England. See DELAMERE Lord.
EVIDENCE. STAMFORD Lord.

W O M E N.

Women formerly could not have benefit of clergy ii. 502
A woman not permitted to wear her hat at her trial i. 339

* W O O D B U R N E, J O H N,

* His trial with Arundel Coke, Esq. on the 22 and 23 Car. II. commonly called The Coventry Act, for Felony, at Suffolk assizes, 13 Mar. 1721, 8 Geo. I. vi. 212
* The indictment charging him as principal, and Coke as accessory, in disfiguring Mr. Edward Crispe vi. 22. vi. 60. Ap.
* Mr. Serjeant Selby and Mr. Serjeant Brantwayte, their speeches before evidence vi. 213
* Mr. Crispe's evidence of his being assaulted vi. 214
* The surgeon's evidence of the nature of the wounds vi. 215
* Evidence of Woodburne's confession that he did the fact vi. 215
* Evidence of Moon and Carter, that Mr. Coke endeavoured to persuade them to murder a man vi. 216
* Mr. Raby's application of the king's evidence vi. 217
* Woodburne owns the fact; but says he was drawn in by Coke vi. 218
* The jury are told, that Woodburne's story is not evidence against Coke vi. 218
* Mr. Coke urges in his defence, that his intent was not to maim, but to kill vi. 219
* He desires counsel may be assigned him vi. 219
* Which is refused, it being a question of fact, and not of law vi. 219
* Lord chief justice King's directions to the jury v. 220
* The prisoners convicted v. 223
* Being called to judgment, Mr. Coke insists on the same things as in his defence vi. 223
* The king's counsel reply vi. 224
* The prisoner's exception disallowed vi. 228
* Lord chief justice pronounces sentence of death upon them vi. 228
* They are executed vi. 228

W O O L S E Y, T H O M A S, Cardinal, Lord Chancellor, For endeavouring to subvert the ancient laws of the kingdom, and to introduce new and arbitrary laws, indicted only for a præmunire, not treason i. 941

Woolsey's seems to be the first case of a chancellor prosecuted for corruption i. 377. and n.

He was convicted of foul corruption vi. 566. vii. 109. See xi. 46, 53

* W O O D W A R D, R I C H A R D ii. 585. See MESSENGER, & al.

W O R C E S T E R, Bishop of,

A complaint in the house of commons against him, and his son Mr. Lloyd, by sir John Packington viii. 82
Evidence of the bishop's persuading and threatening several, to engage them to vote against Sir John viii. 83
Several letters produced, and proved to be the bishop's and his secretary's hands viii. 84
Evidence of the bishop's and his son Mr. Lloyd's defaming sir John viii. 86
The queen, upon the commons address, removes him from being Lord Almoner viii. 88

* W O R D S.

* Words held to amount to an overt-act of treason i. 74. iv. 593, 658
* Any words or actions discovering a treasonable intention against the prince's life, held to be overt-acts of treason i. 101. iii. 207, 1056
* Whether writing the treasonable words another dictates may be deemed an overt-act of the writer's treasonable imagination? ii. 350
* Treasonable words spoken in French ii. 356
* Where one is indicted for words, whether the very words that are charged to be criminal, ought not to be inserted in the indictment? iii. 1006
* In an action for words, the colloquium and averments ought to be proved, to maintain the action iii. 1009
* If from the tenor of a man's discourse he discovers a treasonable imagination, such a discourse is an overt-act of treason, sufficient for a jury to convict him iv. 735
* All words or writings alleged to be criminal, ought to be specified in the indictment, or information; but this is not necessary in an impeachment by parliament v. 828
* This

- * This opinion, as to indictments, afterwards censured as erroneous vi. 331
- * Words not such a provocation in law as will reduce the offence of killing a man to man-slaughter. So resolved by all the judges of England v. 296. vii. 422
- The words ipso vivente, or in ejus conspectu being omitted, cause for reversal of attainder of treason, and same confirmed by parliament iii. 752
- Of words of course in indictments Em. Pref. vii.
- The meaning of the word contumement in magna charta Em. Pref. xii. iii. 854
- Uncertainty of the word endeavour i. 940
- The words to go about, or attempt to do any thing, adjudged void in a conveyance, for uncertainty i. 940
- Fine and surety for good behaviour for speaking words iii. 219. vii. 483
- Words will not amount to treason within 25 Edw. III. stat. 5. chap. 2. any more than a design to imprison the king, but that by stat. 13 Car. II. stat. 1. chap. 1. words tending to such design were treasonable iii. 419
- Meaning of words forfeiting and seizing iii. 621
- Other words than laid in the indictment permitted to be proved iii. 1010
- Traitorously* is an adverb of great use and sense iv. 171
- The words for the king, and for the truth, synonymous iv. 176
- Essoined*, its meaning iv. 185
- Render* and taken synonymous, except in one case iv. 199
- Meaning of word "probably" in the statute of treasons iv. 203
- Proceedings in parliament for words spoken by a peer at a conference between the two houses v. 366, 378
- As the crime of a libel consists only in the words, they therefore must be laid in the indictment vi. 77
- In an action upon the case for words, the words must be expressly laid, and proved as laid vi. 77
- If a man sets out a libel verbatim, he is tied up to the very words, and by a letter or syllable mistaken he may be gone; therefore the best way is to set out the substance only vi. 77
- The words with force and arms, though usually inserted in indictments for libels, are not necessary vi. 13, 46. Ap. Em. Pref. vii.
- Meaning of the words by the law of the land vii. 122
- By special command*, how to be expounded vii. 125
- Difference between repleviable and bailable vii. 153
- To whom the word person and man extends vii. 345
- If upon ill words both parties suddenly fight, and one kill the other, this is but manslaughter. So resolved by all the judges vii. 421
- If upon words two men grow to anger, and afterwards suppress that anger, and then fall into other discourses for such a space of time as in reasonable intendment their heat might be cooled, and some time after they draw upon one another and fight, and one is killed, this is murder. So ruled by all the judges of England vii. 422. See Id. 425.
- ix. 23. Statute of stabbing, and 1 Jac. I. chap. 8. under STATUTE LAW.
- The words falsely and maliciously considered vii. 450
- The word late construed in an act of parliament to have the sense of before viii. 356
- Præceptum* defined x. 435
- Fortia* defined x. 435
- Auxilium* defined x. 435
- Meaning of the word realm ix. 570
- Meaning of the expressions, partial counsel, and purged of partial counsel, by the law of Scotland ix. 594. n.
- Legal import of the word impressit in indictment ix. 711
- Derivation of the words toll, malevolis, imposition, and vestigal xi. 47
- The words custom, custuma, and consuetudo magna et parva, expounded xi. 48, 55
- The words tallage, aydes, and subsidies, explained xi. 48
- Implication of rectum xi. 55
- Tenor* imports a literal copy xi. 333
- WORK AND LABOUR.
- Nothing more proper to reclaim and deter inferior offenders, than to confine them to hard work and labour Em. Pref. x.
- WRAY, Sir CHRISTOPHER, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
- His speech before judgment on the trial of Perry, L. L. D. for treason, in conspiring the death of queen Elizabeth i. 127
- Sat as lord privy seal in Star-chamber, on arraignment of Devison vii. 19, 21
- His speech on that occasion Mr. Wray vii. 23, 27, 28. See vii. 109
- WRAYNHAM, Mr.
- Proceedings against him in the Star-chamber, for slandering Lord Bacon, 1618, in a book delivered to his majesty vii. 102
- The commissioners names 2 Q. R. D. W. vii. 102
- The attorney-general opens the case, for which Mr. Wraynham accused lord Bacon of injustice vii. 103
- Wraynham's* examination read vii. 104
- Mr. Wraynham's defence vii. 105
- Sir Edward Coke's speech vii. 108
- Precedents of persons censured for charging the judges with injustice, in petitions to the king vii. 108
- Sir Faul Grenville's speech vii. 109
- Lord chief baron Tasfield's vii. 109
- Lord Chief Justice's, chief justice of the Common Pleas vii. 110
- Lord chief justice Montague's vii. 110
- Precedents of persons punished for speaking slanderous words of judges vii. 111
- Several other speeches vii. 112, 113
- Sentences according to Faulth's case, Mish. 7 Jac. I. vii. 114
- See DE BRUCE
- HARRISON THOMAS, Clerk.

- WRIGHT, Sir MARTIN. Judge B. R.
- Felt a generous and distinguished warmth for the liberty of the subject xi. 338
- WRIGHT, NATHAN, Serjeant-at-Law,
- His reply to the arguments of counsel, as to the competency of a witness, on the trial of the earl of Warwick, before the house of lords, for murder v. 169
- Opens the evidence on mrs. Butler's trial for forgery v. 233
- * His speech in the house of commons for the duke of Norfolk, on second reading of bill for a divorce between his grace and his duchess v. 279
- WRIGHT, Sir NATHAN, Lord Keeper,
- Encouraged charitable collections x. 88. Ap.
- WRIGHT, RICHARD. See PRIEST WILLIAM.
- WRIGHT, Sir ROBERT, Justice B. R.
- The commons resolve, that the judgment given in Trinity-term, 1686, against Samuel Johnson, in the King's-Bench, at which time sir Robert was one of the justices thereof, was cruel and illegal vii. 647
- WRIGHT, Sir ROBERT, Lord Chief Justice B. R.
- Held it lawful to petition iv. 391
- Directs the jury that the petition of the seven bishops was a libel iv. 393, 394
- The house of lords ordered sir Robert Wright to attend at their bar in custody for over-ruling the earl of Devonshire's plea of privilege, and declared it a breach of privilege of parliament xi. 136
- WRITING.
- If subject matter of writing be evidence of treason, indictment must express that party published it iv. 197
- Writing being an overt-act of treason, it must be evidence of a design to kill or depose the king, or the like iv. 197. See DEED.
- EVIDENCE.
- SIDNEY ALGERNON.
- * W R I T S.
- * A distingas made returnable the day after the teste i. 952
- * Writ of mandamus rogantes, what it is i. 568
- * A return of a habeas corpus, not signed by the gaoler, held a void return ii. 201
- * Persons accused of capital crimes, discharged by the king's writs, declaring them innocent ii. 750
- * The king may by his writ command that the execution shall vary from the judgment iii. 214
- * A writ to the lieutenant of the Tower, to deliver his prisoner to the sheriff, to be executed pursuant to the sentence iii. 214, 290.
- x. 214. Ap.
- * A writ of enquiry executed in the King's-Bench, between his royal highness the duke of York and Titus Oates iii. 987
- * Wherein a precept differs from a venire iv. 744, 745
- * The distingas being teste'd the day after the return of the venire, is held to be a discontinuance of the process v. 543, 570
- * Whether such a misprison be amendable in a criminal case v. 552, &c.
- The writ de odio et atia is now quite disused; what the nature of it was Em. Pref. v. n.
- The king's writ against John Hampden, in the case of ship money i. 510
- vi. 5. Ap.
- Quare*, whether peer may be committed on an hom. repleg. iii. 544
- Withernam* defined iv. 185
- Writs must be teste'd the day whereon they are awarded v. 570
- The writ de hæretico comburendo vi. 1. 4. Ap.
- Writ of error in treason vi. 42. Ap.
- Writ of error lies not from the King's-Bench to parliament, for error in fact, though it does for error in law viii. 62
- Writs on the trials of peers. See
- BALMERINO, ARTHUR Lord ix. 596
- BYRON, WILLIAM Lord x. 517
- CROMARTIE, GEORGE Earl of ix. 590
- FERRERS, LAWRENCE Earl of x. 478
- KILMARNOCK, WILLIAM Earl of ix. 590
- KINGSTON, ELIZABETH Duchess Dowager of xi. 198
- MOHUN, CHARLES Lord iv. 512. v. 137
- MORLEY, THOMAS Lord vii. 222
- WARWICK, EDWARD Earl of v. 137
- WYNNE, Doctor. See KINGSTON Duchess Dowager of.
- WYNNE, WILLIAM, Serjeant-at-Law,
- His speech for Francis Atterbury, Bishop of Rockester vi. 406
- His recapitulation of the evidence vi. 430
- His defence of the rebels in the year 1746 ix. 546, 553. See x. 121. Ap.
- WYTHENS, Sir FRANCIS,
- Was expelled the house of commons, for promoting and presenting to his majesty, an address expressing an abhorrence to petition his majesty for the calling and sitting of parliaments iii. 224
- His argument for the crown on Fitzbarrus's plea to the jurisdiction of the court iii. 259
- His speech before evidence on Borah's trial for murder iii. 471
- His speech before judgment, on the trial of Braddon iii. 899
- Elizabeth Gaunt* censures this judge, for the part he took in her condemnation iv. 161
- He is excepted by name out of the act of grace and indemnity which passed in the year 1690, 2 W. and M. chap. 10 iii. 662. x. 41. Ap.
- Sir Francis Wythens was ordered to attend the house of commons, touching his proceedings against sir Thomas Armstrong, and a bill was brought in, that his estate should be liable to make reparation to sir Thomas's family, but the same never passed into a law iii. 986, 987
- The commons resolve, that the judgment given against Samuel Johnson in the King's-Bench, in Trin. Term, 1686, at which time sir Francis was one of the justices there, was cruel and illegal vii. 647
- YATES,

I N D E X.

Y.

YATES, Sir JOSEPH, Justice B. R. See WILKES JOHN.
YEAR BOOKS.

The year books contain a relation of what is said by counsel and judges in giving judgment, with the reason thereof iv. 168
A mistake in a reference to them rectified ii. 12

YELVERTON, CHRISTOPHER, Serjeant at Law,
His speech on the trial of the earls of Essex and Southampton for treason i. 198

Christopher Yelverton, an obliged servant to the house of the Howards, advised Weston charged with the murder of sir Thomas Overbury to stand mute; and though solicitor-general, he had no share in any of the trials for that murder i. 326. n.

Opens indictment on the trial of sir Christopher Blunt for treason vii. 48
His speech on passing sentence on Robert lord Sanquhar vii. 90

YELVERTON, Sir HENRY, Attorney-General,
Demands execution of the judgment given against sir WALTER RA-LEIGH 15 years before viii. 339

Opens the case for which Wraynham accused lord chancellor Bacon of injustice vii. 102

His learned and able argument against the crown's prerogative to impositions without consent of parliament xi. 29, 52

* YORK, JAMES Duke of iii. 662, 987. See viii. 460.
YORKE, CHARLES,

His observations as solicitor-general upon the evidence offered, in reply to the defence made by earl Ferrers, on his trial for murder x. 509.
See INSANITY.

Of counsel for the crown on the prosecution of Owen for publishing "Murray's Case" x. 204. Ap.

YORKE, Sir PHILIP, Solicitor-General,
His reply to the defence of Christopher Layer for treason vi. 306

His speech as attorney-general against Francklin for a libel ix. 263. See
Id. 256, 260, 270, 271

His reply YORKE, Sir PHILIP, Attorney-General, ix. 272
Sir Philip Yorke, though a young man, soon became attorney-general, by the favour and countenance of the lord chief justice Parker, and his own merit x. 70. Ap.

His speech against Hales for forgery ix. 77. See x. 70. Ap.
YOUNG, ROBERT,

And Blackhead, convicted of forgery against the bishop of Rochester v. 123.
See SPRATT, Bishop of ROCHESTER.

YOUNG, Sir WILLIAM,

His speech on opening lord Lovat's treasons, on behalf of the commons ix. 625*

Z.

ZENGER, JOHN PETER,

His trial at New-York, 4 Aug. 1735, 8 Geo. II. for publishing a libel ix. 276

Several orders relating to him ix. 277, &c.
Warrant to apprehend him ix. 279

Exceptions to the illegality of the warrant ix. 279, &c.
Attorney-general opens the information against him ix. 283

Mr. Hamilton for the defendant ix. 285
Mr. Chambers on the same side ix. 285

Lord chief justice's opinion, that a libel cannot be justified, or the truth given in evidence ix. 287

Mr. Hamilton's opinion that it may be done ix. 287
Mr. attorney-general and mr. Hamilton's different opinions concerning libels ix. 289

Lord chief justice sums up the whole ix. 297
Found not guilty ix. 297

The court of common-council at New-York ordered Andrew Hamilton of Pennsylvania, esq; barrister at law, his freedom of the city of New York, in a gold box, for his defence of the liberty of the press ix. 298

Remarks on Zenger's trial ix. 299

T H E E N D.

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

THE END

E R R A T A.

VOLUME I.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
14. n.	running-title	common	uncommon
33		Lord Cobham	dele
127. n.		p. 568 and 569	340
198	32	poteſtate	poteſtatem
309	33	referred	deferred
388	73	indictment	intendment
441	65	queritur	queritur
525	76	ſalutem	ſaltum
533	67	adparantur	adaptantur
609		Sir Francis	Sir Richard
615		Sir Edward	Sir Francis
653	19	iniquum	iniquum
707	86	a peſſimo ad pejus peſſimo	a peſſimo ad pejus
722	66	diſtinctus	diſcinctus
749	22	vi. 5.	vi. 12.
759	77	21 Edw. III.	25 Edw. III.
950. n.		vol. viii. p. 335.	vol. viii. p. 341.

VOLUME II.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
31	38	but	is miſplaced
200	43	Brook's 9 Rep.	Cook's 9 Rep.
204	47	Sir Humphry	Sir Edmund
206	65	appeach'd	impeach'd
207	36	17th of the late king	16th of the late king
288	70	1548	1648
395	7	ſecond report	ſeventh report
404	70	pure	per
459	laſt line	ſled	ſledge
502	27	gave her	gave her away
538. n.		381	386
863	running-title	for a treſpaſs and a miſdemeanour	Gavan & Turner for high-treaſon

VOLUME III.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
207	83	curiouſly	cuſorily
630	No. CXV.	Ford Grey	Ford Lord Grey
707. n.		736	820
756	11	517	471
757	88	and fulfil	and to fulfil
in notes		448	464
785	29	received	revived
820. n.		718	708
985. n.		454, 455	469, 470

VOLUME IV.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
106	21	455	474
128	laſt line	reſprieved	reſpited
160. n.		518	474
175	62	guilty	gelt
176	15	dictment	different
	16	indifferent	indictment
190	4	1	dele
203. n.		Lib. 39	Lib. 29
292	39	Firmat, regulat	Firmat regulam
401	4	1 W. and M.	4 Jac. II.
717	59	juſtice	juſtices

VOLUME V.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
86	78	1439	1539
96	41	nota	notat
162	65	propenſe	prepenſe
365	running title	lora	lord
482	90	indictment	information
594	9	teſtis	teſtes
625	89	for a capital offence	dele
626	79	in naked bed	naked in bed
731	laſt line but one	Memo-	Memorial of the
739	27	Singulus	Singulis

VOLUME VI.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
15	laſt line	I	dele
75	6	thought	though
76		o G.	3 G.
232	60	reprieve	reſpite
415	65	print	point
426. n.		Saw. Rep.	Salk. Rep.
623		adjusted	adjudged
45. Ap. n.	76	974	794

VOLUME VII.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
85	No. XII.	Balmerino	Balmerinotb
n. †		407	429
125	4	Staſ.	Staſf.
171	87	Preſcot	Prifot
228. n.		684	765
240. n.		content	conſent
598	62	Sicities	Sicilies
613	40	ſbins	bonis
615	65	we	he
619	52	legally	illegally

VOLUME VIII.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
177	78	record	indictment
339. n.		219	226, 227
341. n.		929	950
440	42	delivered	deliver
462. n.		Vol. IV. 851	Vol. III. 627
470. n.		897	983

VOLUME IX.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
The trial of Matthews is miſplaced in the Table of Contents; and No. I. ſhould be LX.
292	76	Sir Edward Atkins	Sir Robert Atkins
432	26	daughter	ſon
	27	He	ſhe
535. n.	74	Aſh	Aſk
	76	Aſh	Aſk

VOLUME X.

PAGE.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
38	3	mercy	merely
436	23	27 Edw. III.	25 Edw. III.
439	38	felony	ſelon
440	36	acted	actuated
*508	85	mora	moral
*509	3	guilty	guilty
94. Ap. n.		digest of law	digest of the law concerning libels

VOLUME XI.

PAGE.	COLUMN.	LINE.	MISTAKES.	CORRECTIONS.
4		2	Virgil	Vergil
		10	Bolloigne	Boleyn
		30	Bolloyne	Boleyn
		47	oil	to
12	2	37	was	dele
		58	he	the
13	2	43	accuſed	excused
29		3	4 James I.	3 James I.
31	running-title		Richard	John
69	No. XV.		4 James	5 James
126	1	26	ſummoned	ſummed
162	1. n.	2	as	for the
207	2	55	cape	rape
226	2	61	offence	office
229	1	31	28 Hen. VIII.	27 Hen. VIII.
262	2	58	20 Hen. VIII.	20 Hen. VI.
295	title	laſt line	his	this
307	running-title		after three inſert	of the
324	1	68	nor	and
338	1	73	reversed	reverend

RE R R A T A.

[illegible]

1. The first part of the book is a history of the city of London, from its foundation to the present time. It is written by a learned and judicious author, and is one of the most valuable works on the subject of the history of the city of London. It is divided into three parts: the first part contains a history of the city of London from its foundation to the year 1666; the second part contains a history of the city of London from the year 1666 to the year 1703; and the third part contains a history of the city of London from the year 1703 to the present time.

Page	Subject	Author
10	Subject	Author
25	Author	Subject
60	Subject	Author
115	Author	Subject
120	Subject	Author

704
reprinted
S. A. K. P.
Point
3 G. through
C. J.

Page	Subject
1	General
2	General
3	General
4	General
5	General
6	General
7	General
8	General
9	General
10	General
11	General
12	General
13	General
14	General
15	General
16	General
17	General
18	General
19	General
20	General
21	General
22	General
23	General
24	General
25	General
26	General
27	General
28	General
29	General
30	General
31	General
32	General
33	General
34	General
35	General
36	General
37	General
38	General
39	General
40	General
41	General
42	General
43	General
44	General
45	General
46	General
47	General
48	General
49	General
50	General
51	General
52	General
53	General
54	General
55	General
56	General
57	General
58	General
59	General
60	General
61	General
62	General
63	General
64	General
65	General
66	General
67	General
68	General
69	General
70	General
71	General
72	General
73	General
74	General
75	General
76	General
77	General
78	General
79	General
80	General
81	General
82	General
83	General
84	General
85	General
86	General
87	General
88	General
89	General
90	General
91	General
92	General
93	General
94	General
95	General
96	General
97	General
98	General
99	General
100	General

Z

[illegible][illegible][illegible]

1950
1951
1952
1953
1954
1955
1956
1957
1958
1959
1960

LINE	NO. CRY.	WEEK	DATE	AMOUNT	REMARKS
11	736	1918	10/10	448	received
12	737	1918	10/10	718	received
13	738	1918	10/10	454.452	received

409, 410
208 revised 404 and to fall
411
800
Ford Land Co.
California
Copyright

DATE	DESCRIPTION	AMOUNT
1890	to balance	100.00
1891	to balance	100.00
1892	to balance	100.00
1893	to balance	100.00
1894	to balance	100.00
1895	to balance	100.00
1896	to balance	100.00
1897	to balance	100.00
1898	to balance	100.00
1899	to balance	100.00
1900	to balance	100.00
1901	to balance	100.00
1902	to balance	100.00
1903	to balance	100.00
1904	to balance	100.00
1905	to balance	100.00
1906	to balance	100.00
1907	to balance	100.00
1908	to balance	100.00
1909	to balance	100.00
1910	to balance	100.00
1911	to balance	100.00
1912	to balance	100.00
1913	to balance	100.00
1914	to balance	100.00
1915	to balance	100.00
1916	to balance	100.00
1917	to balance	100.00
1918	to balance	100.00
1919	to balance	100.00
1920	to balance	100.00
1921	to balance	100.00
1922	to balance	100.00
1923	to balance	100.00
1924	to balance	100.00
1925	to balance	100.00
1926	to balance	100.00
1927	to balance	100.00
1928	to balance	100.00
1929	to balance	100.00
1930	to balance	100.00
1931	to balance	100.00
1932	to balance	100.00
1933	to balance	100.00
1934	to balance	100.00
1935	to balance	100.00
1936	to balance	100.00
1937	to balance	100.00
1938	to balance	100.00
1939	to balance	100.00
1940	to balance	100.00
1941	to balance	100.00
1942	to balance	100.00
1943	to balance	100.00
1944	to balance	100.00
1945	to balance	100.00
1946	to balance	100.00
1947	to balance	100.00
1948	to balance	100.00
1949	to balance	100.00
1950	to balance	100.00
1951	to balance	100.00
1952	to balance	100.00
1953	to balance	100.00
1954	to balance	100.00
1955	to balance	100.00
1956	to balance	100.00
1957	to balance	100.00
1958	to balance	100.00
1959	to balance	100.00
1960	to balance	100.00
1961	to balance	100.00
1962	to balance	100.00
1963	to balance	100.00
1964	to balance	100.00
1965	to balance	100.00
1966	to balance	100.00
1967	to balance	100.00
1968	to balance	100.00
1969	to balance	100.00
1970	to balance	100.00
1971	to balance	100.00
1972	to balance	100.00
1973	to balance	100.00
1974	to balance	100.00
1975	to balance	100.00
1976	to balance	100.00
1977	to balance	100.00
1978	to balance	100.00
1979	to balance	100.00
1980	to balance	100.00
1981	to balance	100.00
1982	to balance	100.00
1983	to balance	100.00
1984	to balance	100.00
1985	to balance	100.00
1986	to balance	100.00
1987	to balance	100.00
1988	to balance	100.00
1989	to balance	100.00
1990	to balance	100.00
1991	to balance	100.00
1992	to balance	100.00
1993	to balance	100.00
1994	to balance	100.00
1995	to balance	100.00
1996	to balance	100.00
1997	to balance	100.00
1998	to balance	100.00
1999	to balance	100.00

[illegible]

LINE.	MISTAKES.
21	4558
last line	repeated
	218 early
65	different
15	indifferent
10
4	1
	Lib. 30
39	Printed, revised
4	1 W. and M.
50	justice

Correction
 474 assigned 474 sold different indictment
 476
 Lib. 90
 Turnout regular
 A Feb. 11.
 Justice

LINE.	MISTAKES.
2	Null
10	Politeness
30	Politeness
47	on
57	was
58	he
43	second
3	* * * * *
26	* * * * *
3	as
52	case
61	officers
51	as the M
58	to the M
141	this
62	not
73	to the

10
 11
 12
 13
 14
 15
 16
 17
 18
 19 20
 21
 22
 23
 24
 25
 26
 27
 28
 29
 30
 31
 32
 33
 34
 35
 36
 37
 38
 39
 40
 41
 42
 43
 44
 45
 46
 47
 48
 49
 50
 51
 52
 53
 54
 55
 56
 57
 58
 59
 60
 61
 62
 63
 64
 65
 66
 67
 68
 69
 70
 71
 72
 73
 74
 75
 76
 77
 78
 79
 80
 81
 82
 83
 84
 85
 86
 87
 88
 89
 90
 91
 92
 93
 94
 95
 96
 97
 98
 99
 100

LINE.	MISTAKES.
27	single
28	atoms-
29	in naked bed-
30	for a capital of-
31	type
32	indissemment
33	love
34	propens
35	with
36	1430

Singuila
 M. mortal of naked in bed male information
 1968 property note
 1230
 Correction

